Dear Dr. Molner: I am a married woman with an embarrassing problem. Once in a while I wet the bed. Could it be that I have bad kidney trouble? To consult a doctor who would tell me that I am telling the truth would be most embarrassing. Can you help me? — S.M.

Some kidney or bladder infection (not necessarily a bad one now) could be the answer. Perhaps if you told him you were having occasional loss of control," you might find it less embarrassing. You aren't the only adult who has had this trouble, and if some infection is involved, the quicker you get it diagnosed and treated, the better, because if not treated these things tend to get steadily worse.

NOTE TO F.V.: Cancer cannot be transmitted by towels, sheets, etc. In fact, no means has yet been found by which cancer can be transmitted from person to person.

However, when an open cancer is drying, it usually is — or at least may be — infected with ordinary germs, just as any open wound is likely to become infected.

Thorough laundering is all that you need to make towels or bed linen of such a patient completely safe for handling. Boiling, naturally, is done with sufficient heat so that all such germs are killed. Bleach is a form of commercial laundering, too.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer is in booklet No. 9, which I have in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., for a copy of the leaflet, "How To Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains," enclosing a long self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10c in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

From the French-Canadian Viewpoint

This is a selection of editorials on current topics, translated from the French-language press of Canada.

Granby La Voix de l'Est—Would it be appropriate for Queen Elizabeth to refrain from visiting Quebec during her next trip to this country? One certainly has the impression that it would. Not that the security measures would be insufficient to protect her but unkind remarks and insults are often the privilege of those who wish to express their discontent and, in this case, the visit of the Queen to our province would in no way be pleasant.

Also the violent incidents that have taken place recently in Quebec and in view of the difficult task the Canadian separatist elements take, one cannot answer for the conduct of these persons, even if their number is rather limited. It only takes a few individuals to make a mess of a reception.

Demonstrations during a royal visit, even if they were suppressed by the police and condemned by the vast majority, would arouse the ire of English-Canada. The least trick could be exploited and magnified by English-speaking extremists. . . .

The people of Quebec in general have no objection to this royal visit. They know that it is not the Queen that is in no way responsible for the attitude of the majority (in Canada) toward them and that she can do absolutely nothing to change it.

In the present circumstances, however, they do not think it wise to expose her to the insults of a few individuals with closed minds. Because of the risks that she would run, it would be preferable to cancel the royal visit. (March 18)

Montreal La Presse—Some English-speaking circles are sincerely trying to get to know the real face of Quebec. But there are other elements who are mainly interested in entertaining themselves at our expense.

When young Toronto businessmen invite Marcel Chaput to address them, they are not seriously trying to find out the Quebec point of view. They are not three people in 100 in Quebec who take them to put seriously. Even the exhibitions of this man, which were interesting to us in the beginning, have ended up being so unhappily for the rabid anti-man and his kind accordingly the country is to take him seriously than we take the Ku Klux Klan in Quebec.

There is a tendency in English-Canadian opinion to play up the most extreme views that are expressed among us.

When a loyalist senator or a militant separatist expresses views about the Queen according to their conviction or the other, the opinions of his compatriots, he immediately grabs the headlines in English-language newspapers from one temperate and reasonable viewpoint on the subject. They are automatically classified as dull, lacking in interest and their opinions, when they are lucky enough to be reported, are usually relegated to the bottom of the page. . . .(Canadian Observer, 19).

Montreal-Matin — The case of the northern Quebec Eskimos risks having political repercussions far out of proportion to the simple problem involved. Two major questions remain to be solved: Will the Eskimos be able to make up their own minds? Will Federal officials be entrusted upon to ratify a possible agreement between Ottawa and Quebec?

On the first point, Prime Minister Pearson went as far as he could in promising consultation with the Eskimos before any agreement is signed. But this does not settle the basic problem, namely, will the Eskimos have a right to vote? They do not like the transfer of administrative responsibilities to Quebec? Mr. Rene Levesque is opposed to this, declaring it would be dangerous and incapable of making a decision in full knowledge of the issue. The state, he says, must decide for the Eskimos in the federal side. Mr. Guy Favreau is leaning towards Mr. Levesque's view, while Mr. Arthur Laing still does not go along with it.

One can easily understand the wish of the two governments to steer clear of any popularity contest among northern Quebec's 2,500 Eskimos. They are being instead of a kind of campaign of persuasion but the fact remains that the Eskimos are human beings and Canadian citizens and they ought to have the say in the matter.

Mr. Levesque, whose sincerity is not questioned in this matter, would be better to follow his own democratic instincts instead of listening to certain hotheads who are advising him. The Eskimos must agree to the transfer of responsibilities. Otherwise we shall be getting into perpetual conflicts.

As for a parliamentary study of the conditions of transfer, it is essential and it is indeed the privilege of parliament to scrutinize all actions of the government. . . .(Clement Brown - (March 12)

The U.S. - British - Soviet nuclear test-ban talks resumed in Geneva three years ago today—in 1961—after a recess of 5½ months. Before the Western powers had an opportunity to present what they considered to be major concessions, the Soviet delegate withdrew the U.S.S.R.'s previous agreement to establish a test-control organization under a single administrator. He insisted on a three-member council representing the West, the Communists and neutralists. A test-ban treaty finally was concluded in July, 1963.

DOWN THE ICE with the grace of a polished skater comes young Belleville solo performer, Peggy Foley.

Quinte Figure Skating Club Extravaganza "Peter Pan" Is Colorful Presentation

"Peter Pan" and "Wendy" the wonderful young hero and heroine of Sir James Barrie's colorful fantasy brought a colorful company to Memorial Arena last night — and a large crowd loved what it saw.

David Beattie in the title role and sister Susan as attractive "Wendy" led a silver-bladed galaxy of figure-skating artists from three-years of age up, through the delightful story made famous on stage and screen by Mary Martin.

Youths individual stars aided and abetted by the club veterans in more sedate roles and topped by the brilliant performances of Canada's junior pair skating champions Susan and Paul Huenergard, rounded out one of the most entertaining revues given in the Quinte Figure Skating Club's long sequence of presentations.

The production left little to be desired. Against the silver-boarded lining of the ice surface, evergreen trees tinselled with brilliance made a perfect setting for the gaily-apparelled cast.

"Peter Pan" was well presented, the famous story running through its colorful sequences in fine continuity from the "sleepy" Darling family to Peter Pan's ultimate defeat of the villainous Captain Hook and his pirates.

The music was par excellence, carefully arranged with special efforts in timing, thanks to Dr. W. B. Beattie, the club president.

STEAL SHOW

For sheer beauty of performance, a colorful presentation of "poetry in motion," the Huenergard youngsters stole the show. They gave three performances in brilliant displays of various phases of pair skating that left little doubt to their claim of Canadian Championships.

In lesser brilliance perhaps but with an ability that bespoke the training, coaching and attention to rehearsal were the individual stars of the show.

Lynanne Rowe made a vivacious "Tinker Bell"; Roxanne Rowe and Sandra Scott were the pick of the "Fairies"; Marylin Duminie as "Forest Flower"; Anne Cronk as "Lady Bug"; Rebecca Holway as "Rabbit"; Patsy Jean Allore and Janet Hume as "Blue-birds"; Bobbie Cronk as "Squirrel"; Christine Scott as "Butterfly"; Peggy Foley as "Clown"; Cathy MacDonald as "Tiger Lily" and Penny Weymark as the "Indian Princess" rounded out the featured skaters.

Outstanding in novel performances and costuming was Brian Williamson as the "Crocodile" and Marylin Duminie and Penny Weymark who "roamed" in the role of "Nanna" the Darling family dog.

The "Crocodile" from a costume point of view was a thing of sheer original art and design. Electric "eyes" that twinkled brilliantly and it seemed balefully when jovelled at pirates added a fine touch. It was one of the highlights of the performance and well carried out by Master Williamson.

COSTUMING EXCELLENT

Mrs. Charles Duesberry and Mrs. Olivia Weese, long noted for their brilliancy in the costume department scored a new hit in last night's presentation.

Long hours of work were criminazed in the beauty and originality of the costumes.

There were the gay hues of the Fairies, Toadstools, Rabbits, Bluebirds, Squirrels, Butterflies, Clouds, Lost Children with the equally colorful individual costumes of the stars.

The colorful finale when all members of the cast assembled on the ice in a salute to champions and stars is picturesque, to say the least.

Senior members of the club in black tie and evening gown drift through the graceful gliding phases of the waltz.

The performance of the younger members was excellent showing the training and coaching efforts of the club pros Paul Tetley and Mrs. Bonnie Boundy.

Mr. Tatton was unable to appear in his pro capacity at last night's performance and his place was excellently taken by the well-known veteran comedy and skating star of the club, Mr. Jack Dickens.

"Peter Pan" will be presented again tonight at Memorial Arena, curtain time eight o'clock.

The cast follows:

Woman Walks From Behind Truck Into Car

PICTON (Staff) — Mrs. Ruth Kleinsteuber, 45, of R. R. 1, Picton, is in Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital suffering from bruises after being struck by a slowly moving car on Schobaric Road on Friday afternoon.

The woman suffered no apparent fractures but was detained in hospital to undergo x-rays.

Provincial police said that Mrs. Kleinsteuber walked from behind a loaded truck into the path of a slowly moving car driven by John G. Fox, 20, of R. R. 1, Bloomfield.

Court Reporter Resigns After Increase Refused

PICTON (Staff) — On the last day of the Prince Edward County Council's March meeting, the mill rate was established, and several other matters dealt with.

Mr. Fred Hope was appointed Weed Inspector for the year.

The salaries of Miss Edna Anderson, secretary, and Mrs. Joan Brown were increased, and the resignation of Miss Barbara Higginson court reporter, was regretfully accepted. Miss Higginson asked for a raise, was turned down, so she resigned.

In future when any member of the county goes to see an official of the government, he or she, shall be accompanied by the chairman of the committee involved, and the warden, or two people so delegated by them.

Two supplementary borrowing by-laws of a routine nature were given third reading and passed.

Precise Terms Of Reference Now Existing

OTTAWA (CP) — Precise directions for Canadian troops operating in Cyprus will remain private as in The Congo situation. External Affairs Minister Martin said Friday.

He told the Commons that Secretary - General U Thant of the United Nations took that decision with Mr. Martin Thursday. The minister said he agreed with it.

He hopes to meet U Thant in Geneva Monday to discuss the situation further. Canada has made several suggestions on the topics of a mediator.

Answering a question by Walter Nesbitt (PC — Oxford), Mr. Martin said precise terms of reference for the Canadian Cyprus force exist.

Daily duties for the men are being sent from Canada pending other arrangements, he said.

Jesus performed this humble service in connection with His thoughts of His Divine origin and His Divine destiny. He had come from God; He was going to God; and in the meantime (foreshadowing His contemplation sanctified His modest chore, so that never again would His disciples think of foot - washing in the same light as before that night in Jerusalem. The menial work expressed Christ's inner life, making His love and care visible to His children in spend one time on land. However, body thinks of a frog swap- ds rapidly through the e's skin that the creature ost quickly. The fluids fre- ently by re-entering the wa- or it perishes. A frog can into the world for a t time and survive, but it ust return again and again water. It is amphibious. We are all amphibious crea- res, inhabitants of two orlds.

WO REALMS

I am thinking now of the reasons for contemplation of action. Does anyone live ntirely in one realm or the ther? Dare we try to live clusively as thinkers or as tors? If we attempt to meet the upon life's meaning with- t acting, how will the world's ork get done? But if we try act without considering the eaning of our behavior we re likely to discover that all our busyness was futile, hav- g no high purpose and no enduring value.

Not long ago a prominent merican executive died, pla- ed by disillusionment, al- ough he was widely known s a person of power and ach- evement. As a lad of fourteen worked as a bobbin boy in ston mills. Later he engaged the fishing business, and this venture succeeded he ded his profits to buy into h company. IS DEMONSTRATED ht the night before His cru- ion Jesus demonstrated to discipling the necessity of anding both worlds, the med- itative and the active. John's ke, it tells of His dining with His disciples in an upper room e Jerusalem. He was disturbed er their inevitable behavior toward one another. Earlier, while the little band of men were on their way to this meet- ing place Jesus had heard them arguing over matters of pre- ference and making claim to the most prominent places in Christ's coming kingdom. They were annoyed by each other and suspicious of one another's ambitions. When they reach- ed the upper room where they were to dine together no one offered to perform the customa- ary courtesy of washing the road - dust off another's feet. Irritation, jealousy and pride stood in the way of so humble a service. So Jesus washed their feet. As the Gospel of John puts it, "Jesus, knowing that the Father had given all things into His hands, and that Questions: Several years back I used to be able to buy a Chocolate Log Box Pie mix which was very delicious. Then for some reason the company discontinued this product. Wondering if it would be possible to make this at home and if you would have the recipe. The log shape was put into a bowl, then a cup of boiling water/added and beaten for 12 minutes. Then poured into 2 graham cracker crust and chilled one hour. Here are the ingredients that went on the box: sugar, dry skim milk, gelatine, starch, vegetable protein, cocoa, salt, artificial flavoring and pure food color. If you have anything that would come close to this chiffon filling I would appreciate it. . . Mrs. R. S.

with Salad Dressing; Citrus Fruit Cup; Tea.

Answer: You challenged us! But we came up with a satisfactory facsimile:

CHOCOLATE CHIFFON DESSERT
4 teaspoons plain gelatine
½ cup cold water
3 tablespoons cocoa
2/3 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup instant skim milk powder (be sure box is fresh)
1 cup cold water
Graham cracker crumbs (or wafer - thin strips sponge or angel food cake or split lady fingers)

Into your large beater bowl put the gelatine and ¼ cup cold water, and let soak for 5 minutes. Meanwhile in a small bowl mix together the cocoa, sugar and salt. Add this to the soaked gelatine and pour over the boiling water and stir to dissolve all. Add vanilla, skim milk powder and cold water and stir to dissolve milk powder. Let cool to room temperature. Meanwhile, line a buttered pie plate or a medium - sized buttered mould with graham cracker crumbs (or thin strips of cake or split lady fingers in unbuttered mould). Then beat the chocolate mixture until foamy and beginning to hold shape. (It lightens in color with the air being beaten into it. While it will still pour turn into prepared pie plate or mould. Chill until set. I chilled mine in a cake - lined mould and it turned out perfectly onto a dessert plate.

NOTES:

1) If you would like a richer mixture add 2 tablespoons butter before you stir in the boiling water.

2) Or if desired whipped cream or beaten egg white may be folded in. Beat ¾ cup heavy cream until stiff or 2 egg whites until stiff and fold in before mixture sets.

THE CAPRICES AND CONTRADICTIONS OF FASHION

The parade of fashion ranging from hats, like fruit salad, to shoes, like Mother Hubbard, is seen in most country photographs. It usually provokes gales of laughter.

But are present-day fashions so ludicrous? Not for this same laughter twenty years from now? Consider the pencil - slim skirts, by lady's aid. We have just completed a winter season, which saw every female form encased in a sheath of some sort or other. Some of these hats, such as the raccoon or lynx high-crowned fedoras, looked quite charming, when worn with an understated costume. But what about the odd mat- matched fur hat with a coat of a completely different fur? What about a cloth coat with fox collar worn with a hat made of another breed of fur? Funny? Usually yes, because the hat is often out of proportion to the coat or the total effect is "too much fur."

What about high boots? At the beginning of the season, some of them were chic, when worn on a pretty leg provided by boots themselves. Fresh and in good condition. But look at some of them now that are down-at-the-heel and soil-stained. The higher you shoe seems to have a lower height habit of sagging down over the ankles rather than a thick pair of wollens which are too big for the wearer.

The subject of humour in fashion was recently dealt with by Eve Trill and Doreen Day of Fashion Academy in a speech before a women's club in Montreal. Several incidents were cited, including some of the more memorable fashion mistakes made by a few misguided followers of fashion. Mention was made of one women who wore so many red Question — Last night a guest accidentally spilled coffee all over the table cloth. It was a pity, since I had the table set with my family silver. It's a new pink cloth. I sopped up the liquid and scraped up the biscuits, then spread the area with a matching pink napkin. The dampness still came through, and I'm afraid the table didn't look pretty during the rest of the meal. It was unfortunate, and I thought last or perhaps I should have delayed things and reset the whole table with a fresh cloth. What should one do when this happens? — Mrs. G. G., Miami, Fla.

Answer — When guests have already started on their first course, there's little else you can do but doctor up the area with napkins and carry on with dinner.

Question — One of my brides made her own cut of linen and will stay at my house over the wedding. There's one hitch, though. She asked if her fiancee, whom I've never met, can come to the wedding, too. I see him as invitation - card he's accepted, but we don't have room to put him up, too. If he has to be put up in a hotel, are we obligated to take care of his expenses during his stay? What is correct in this instance? — C. A., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Answer — If you can't arrange for a friend or relative to put the young man up during the wedding and he has to stay at a hotel, then he should be prepared to take care of his own expenses. Since he's a guest and not a member of the wedding party, you have no obligation to pay his way.

Wants to Give Special Welcome to Adopted Boy

DEAR DORIS — My niece recently adopted a lovely little boy. I should like to send a gift and also a letter welcoming him into the family.

I want to write something to let them know how wonderful a thing I think they are doing, also something so when he gets older he can read and understand how welcome he is. Would you have any suggestions as to the wording and to whom should it be addressed? — FOND AUNT.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR AUNT — For the little fellow, just: "To Johnnie, with my love — Auntie." For your niece and nephew-in-law, congratulations; and I hope that the love they offer will mean continuing joy to them and to their Chosen Child.

Later on, Johnnie will thrill to the knowledge that he was not only much wanted by his new mother and father, but he was also heartily welcomed by his aunt.

DEAR DORIS — Calling folks we have just met by name isn't easy. Did you know that there is a little booklet on the subject? I am sending you one to pass on to Theolog. — SPONSOR.

DEAR SPONSOR — It's a dandy. Knowing people's names, and using them, is a happy start for social relations; and the little book describes some useful techniques for getting good at this. (To Readers: Write in if you want to know how to get a copy.)

Confidential to PUZZLED, HALIFAX — Orchids to your self-control! A better understanding of his anger and the physical urge which prompts it could open your eyes to the poor kind of self-indulging love he has for you. There's no future for you here.

(Doris can help you understand what lies behind the behavior which puzzles you. Write to her.)

LADY FROM BUENOS AIRES

"The sense of the beautiful is God's best gift to the human soul!" — W. H. Hudson (1841-1923) an Argentine universally renowned and beloved naturalist and writer.

Visitors from South America, since January, in Belleville!

'Tis true. From the Argentine are Senor Victor Baron and Senora with their two small daughters, Maria Carina Patricia, seven years old, and Maria Cristina Gabriele, age three and a half, while Senor Baron, comanager of Buenos Aires' only distillery, is on business here.

A visit this morning with Senora Baron leaves us with a happy resolution to save all our pennies for a trip to the Argentine and — Buenos Aires.

"It's a wonderful city, really," declares Senora Baron, known already by a host of Belleville friends as Magdalena. Apply such adjectives as vivacious, beautiful, loveable and you've got a fair picture of this young Spanish - Italian, Buenos Aires - born wife and mother who thinks Canada is both warm" winter's not a bit cold like you read about . . . and friendly, and wishes more Canadians would visit her city.

While Buenos Aires is the largest city of the continent, still it's a city for strollers: bench-filled plazas, convenient by placed near sidewalk cafes ("confiterias) where you may sit and sit over a cup or glass; wide boulevards, fine shops and boutiques, spacious parks, quiet sanctuaries of exquisite old churches.

It's a modern city, too, with great portions built and rebuilt since its origin back in 1580. It's people, (as in all Argentina) are drawn from Spain, Portugal, England, France, Switzerland, Germany, Italy and the United States. Education, the press, art, music and theatre, taste and style are greatly respected.

Visitors in B.A. averages 54 degrees, summers 77, with autumn and spring in the 70's. 60's. There's about 83 pesos to the dollar. While Spanish is the official language, much English is spoken, for Anglo-Argentines have kept an amazing identity with Britain.

The English, as you know, are largely responsible for making the Argentine the beef belt of the hemisphere. Even today, steaks are usually served at noon — the biggest meal of the day — since they are less time consuming, when people are mostly in a rush and have little time to linger. T-bone steaks are especially popular, served with potatoes and vegetables. Breakfast is light: coffee, toast or croissants. At five o'clock we have tea — English influence here, — tea, sandwiches, or toast, small cakes. The evening meal is usually served at nine: soup, an omelette perhaps, dessert, much fruit and coffee: a light meal. I like to cook, and when we entertain (B.A. parties always include relatives and friends, regardless of age, which is wonderfully stimulating and broadening, I think) I enjoy preparing the food.

While most girls marry around the age of twenty, many may become engaged several times before then. An aunt of mine, who has several daughters, having seen them through this period of their lives" says, claimed: "I am quite exhausted bringing up fiances!" While engagements may offer more protection, still I feel they often times, if too long, are limiting.

Inherent in all Argentines is the tango rhythm, faithfully listened to on the radio in B.A. But in the provinces there's a love for folk-music and folk-dancing which is not unlike your folk-music and dancing here.

Music has always interested me. I love it," avers Mrs. Baron, who for the last several years along with her daughters have modelled for B.A. TV and mag azine commercials, "a work we seem to do easily, enjoy and which fits into our daily routine . . ." She recalls how before her marriage she enrolled as a medical student in the University of Buenos Aires" course, though I soon realized I could never become a doctor . . . I couldn't bear surgery! . . . in an effort to quell a burning desire for a musical career, not acceptable to her parents, Dr. Luis Maria Pecastaing and Senora.

Now, recently after seeing "My Fair Lady" (brought down to B.A. from New York) which so inspired me, I was given the part of understudy of the leading lady in a musical comedy, produced later in B.A., which gave me wonderful experience, Apply such adjectives as vivacious, beautiful, loveable and you've got a fair picture of this young Spanish - Italian, Buenos Aires - born wife and mother who thinks Canada is both warm" . . . winter's not a bit cold like you read about . . . and friendly, and wishes more Canadians would visit her city.

New School Of Nursing Will Open

TORONTO (CP)—A school of nursing for women aged 30 to 50 will open here in September and already 200 women from all parts of Ontario have written to ask about the course.

A new approach to the problem of getting enough nurses, the Queen Yaffa School of Nursing will admit 30 women to its first class.

The two-year course leading to a registered nurse's degree will be specially planned to suit the needs of mature students.

The first class will be picked on the results of a 4½-hour exam to be written in Toronto April 18 and a follow-up interview. Applicants must have the equivalent of Ontario Grade 12 education or better and must be personally suitable for the nursing profession.

The idea of training women in the 30-to-50 category arose from a study begun in 1962 by the Catholic Hospital Conference of Ontario. It has the support of various nursing and hospital groups.

The Ontario Hospital Services Commission will finance the school, as it does other schools of nursing, but students will pay tuition fees of $100 the first year and $50 the second. They will provide their own uniforms, textbooks and living accommodations.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerr A. Lowry, John Street, Stirling will be at home to their friends on Wednesday, March 25th, 1964 from 2.30 - 5.30 and 7.30 - 9.30 on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

The second meeting in March of the Alpha Lambda Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi was held Monday evening at the home of Joan Manley. The president, Joan Thompson conducted the business meeting which included the election of officers for the coming year.

The preliminal tea for new pledges will be held this Sunday at the home of Eva Ketchen.

The guest speaker, Mr. Eugene Lang was introduced by Clara Davenport and presented a most interesting talk with corrected examples on descriptive topic. His use of memorandings to demonstrate some of the vivid pictures one can see while hearing this type of article added to the interest in the topic.

Mr. Lang was thanked by Mary Simonds and presented with a gift of thanks from Alpha Lamba.

The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served by the hostess and co-hostess Barbara Lumbers.

Mad Rush Takes You Through Neapolitan Area in One Day

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

NAPLES, Italy — "See Naples and die!"

So the classic saying goes, and it always has been a sight to see, with its classic line curve of a harbor and the symmetrical backdrop of Mt. Vesuvius.

These days, however, the average tourist comes to Naples apparently bent on seeing Naples and drop dead. Never was so much offered to so many in so small an area. And many were there to dump a hold full of machine parts and take on a modern mozzarella.

The mozzarella is about the only Neapolitan attraction not shoved down the throat of the visitor the moment he steps on the pier. The neon signs of sightseeing companies beckon him both. Even more bold are the guides, self - styled and otherwise, who all but run up the gangplank to offer spik-good - inglis tours of Sorrento, Amalfi, Ravello, Positano, Salerno, Vesuvius, Pompeii, Ischia, Capri and — so help us — all in one day.

WHIRLIN' TRIP

For example, within 15 minutes after our ship docked, a helicopter service — brand new — took off from the roof of the pier building for a whirlwind (no pun intended) 15-minute trip to the songed - and - stored Isle of Capri, once an idyllic 2½-hour boat trip away.

Bingo! A quick turn around the island from Capri to Anacapri; a dash through the Blue Lagoon, and whammo — if the helicopter schedule doesn't suit but you haven't got time for the classic boat trip, there's a one hour hydrofoil crossing (like being in an airplane, only lower). It gets you back to town by noon, past, past, in time for a peek at Pompeii, a visit to Vesuvius, a-shay to Sorrento, and collapse on the S.S. Constitution.

On this particular trip I attended until the helicopter was gone (no maniacs attitudes in this location) and then I was a landslide on the colorful cliff - hanging stretch of road to Sorrento known as the Amalfi Drive. So we settled for a visit to Vesuvius, a poke at Pompeii, and a nibble at Naples.

The trip to the very maw of Vesuvius is, if we may say so, mainly so you may so. They sell colored rocks from the last eruption at the local souvenir stand, the views of the harbor on the way up are spectacular, and a five - minute cable car ride takes you the last few feet into the mouth of the volcano. A guide (at this point you don't have much choice) hustles you inside to show you how to light a cigarette from the glowing walls. For the past several generations, Vesuvius has erupted every 20 years, and the last time was 1944. Caveat emptor.

HOME OF CAMEOS

At the foot of the Vesuvius road, all visitors are hurried (there's that Neapolitan first again) into the establishment of Giovanni Apa, the home of cameos.

Cameos are an ancient Neapolitan art, more honored even than bauble - in - the - throat of the world's finest come from Apa. A cameo, in case you didn't know, is nothing but a carved hunk of seashell, the cheapest in the world because it is literally free. All shells in layers with different colors on either side. Those used for cameos are sardonix (brown and white), cornolo (red and orange), and rose (pink and white).

Ann Landers

TV Program Becomes Weekly Battleground for Couple

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Please settle this man and wife argument before somebody gets a split lip.

My husband's favorite TV show appears every Saturday night. He insists on watching this show whether we are guests or not.

We live in a tiny one-room apartment and there is no place to go when he turns on the set. I have told him time and time again this is rude. I say I am wrong — that a man has the right to look at his favorite show in his own home.

Help please before we see some real Gun-smoke in our own apartment. — MRS. MAD.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MRS. — There are six other nights in the week. Entertain another night and let your vidiot watch Matt Dillon in peace.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a high school junior, 17, with a serious girl problem. Jill is 17 also. We have been going together for six months. We were getting along great till Christmas vacation when a couple of guys came home from college. Jill dated two college men and now that's all she talks about. She has been invited to one of the campuses for spring weekend and I'm sick of hearing about it.

Two of my buddies are having the same trouble with their girls. What gets into these chicks anyway? The minute a college guy gives them a tumble they drop the old faithful regular right on his head.

Please tell me what to do and I'll pass the word. — THIRD FIDDLE.

DEAR FIDDLE — Often when a girl gets to be 17 she becomes interested in "older men."

Why don't you take a good look at the cute crop of 16-year-olds. They will be flattered by your attention because to them, you are the "older men."

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband and I will probably sound like a couple of mixed up nuts after you are through reading this letter.

We have a nice home, two cars, a good income and three children. But there is no love, no excitement. We are both bored to death.

I am 42 and he is 45. So far as I know he has never stepped out on me. I have been faithful to him. We never argue or fight. But neither of us wants to spend the rest of our lives with the other.

We believe many married couples are in the same boat and if they weren't afraid of public opinion (we aren't) and if they could afford it (we can) they'd split up. Don't you feel civilized people ought to be honest enough to call it quits when they are tired of living together? — HIS AND HERS.

DEAR HIS AND HERS — Do you know what Mr. Dooley said to Mr. Hennessey about a problem exactly like yours? "When the people on 'Archie' Avenue get tired of livin' together they go right on livin' together."

To you hooks I offer the same advice. A couple with three children should go right on livin' together.

Married people wouldn't be so bored if-they exerted half the energy inventing up their home situations that they later expend trying to attract someone new.

Confidential to VALLEY OF INDECISION — I can think of no better advice than the words of the late President Kennedy:

"A man does what he must, in spite of personal consequences, in spite of obstacles and dangers and pressures — and that is the basis of all human morality."

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Sex" ($3.95) is now available at your book store.

IMPOSE CENSORSHIP

COLOMBO (CP) — Censorship over all news referring to cabinet documents, proceedings or decisions was announced Friday by the Ceylonese government. Under emergency regulations, the government may restrict transmission of news abroad.

WILL KEEP LATIN

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul VI said Friday the Roman Catholic Church will keep Latin for its official acts while promoting the value of modern languages in other church matters. He spoke at an audience for students of Rome's Centre for Applied Linguistics.

by the wayside as reporters hit upon the controversial police commission measure, buried in the 90-page bill.

Mr. Case at a press conference following introduction of the bill was asked whether the police bill had been approved by the Conservative government caucus. He refused to answer, other than to say "the methodology of the bill have been discussed with my colleagues of the house."

The next day, when condemnation of the measure reached its peak, the question at Queen's Park was whether Premier Robarts himself had been entirely familiar with the contents. Mr. Roberts said only that the bill had proceeded through cabinet in the same way all legislation is dealt with by cabinet.

The impression was left, nevertheless, that Mr. Robarts was not aware of the implications of the bill regarding civil liberties.

RACKED BY REPORT

This was the day of a report in The Globe and Mail that Mr. Case presented his bill to the party caucus with no more than 10 members of the 77 Conservatives present. Some members said they were quickly no one really realized what was in the Police Act.

The newspaper says the bill, in completed form, was in Mr. Case's hands at least by March 5.

It says Mr. Case brought the bill to caucus for discussion this week but did not get a chance to discuss it.

"It is certain the bill went through the cabinet either Tuesday or Thursday," the newspaper report says.

"Perhaps when this legislation was brought forward," Premier Roberts said in the legislature Friday "it was directed at control of crime and if it has these side effects, of course as I have said, they are completely repugnant to all of us and we have to attempt to find another way of dealing with the problem of crime."

CASS ABSENT

Attorney - General Cass was not in his seat when Premier Roberts made his statement.

A demand for Mr. Cass's resignation was made in the house by Andrew Thompson (L—Toronto Dovercourt).

However, when Mr. Robarts was asked by a reporter whether Attorney-General Cass would resign, the premier said: "No such thing has been considered."

Liberal Leader Farquhar Oliver demanded that the premier withdraw the legislation or dissolve the house for an election. He was shouted down by Conservative members and ruled out of order by Speaker Donald M. Morrow.

Judge Bruce J. S. Macdonald, chairman of the police commission until early this year and whose crime report apparently spawned the bill, said Friday the expanded powers for the commission were necessary.

ASKED FOR POWERS

He said in an interview the commission had requested powers to question persons in private similar to powers it has to question them publicly under part of the Public Inquiries Act which, in his interpretation, empowers the commission to impose sentence without limit for contempt of court.

He said the commission wanted its authority for private hearings clearly stated.

If the commission expected to achieve progress in questioning suspected criminals it would have to hold private hearings and have the right to punish for contempt, he said.

Judge Macdonald said he basically agreed with the proposed legislation although he might have drafted it a little differently.

Percy Milligan, who took over as commission chairman when Judge Macdonald returned to judicial duties, said the bill was designed to protect the individual giving evidence.

He said people who attack the bill as a threat to civil liberties are "people who have gone off half-cocked without examining it closely."

The Golden Years

Retired Father Pens a Plea To His Thoughtless Offspring

By THOMAS COLLINS

To a Retired Man's Son, Whatever-You-Are,
Dear Son:

It is two years now since I retired from the company and settled down to my leisure with mom. And it's time I told you some things.

I've told you things before, as you may recall, the awkward things when you were 14. The dangerous things when you got out on your hand at 19. The significant things just before you married.

You will take what I say now pr. ly much as you took those things — with your guard up. But you will reflect for a while. And now, as then, you will come to understand.

The things I want to tell you concern primarily the quiet arrogance you and the men of your generation hold for your retired parents. It's not a vicious thing, and mostly it's passive. But you have it. You feel a genius superiority over those of us who pass beyond 65, and though we know you love us and are not intentionally malicious with us you deal with us patronizingly and regard us as insignificant cogs in your machine of life. In so many ways you are better . . . or so you think. And you make more money.

HAS MORE CAUSE

I can admit that a retired father is entitled to a batch of insignificant facts in a son's career, and can matter little in the management of the millions he wants. But I would remind you that my generation of retired fathers has come to be arrogant toward their self-centered sons than it ever has been to be arrogant toward them.

You didn't discover sex, you know. My generation did. We thought we should have a copyright on it. Every generation does.

Your first baby wasn't really the first - baby ever born. Ours was — for us. The exhilaration we both thought exclusively ours was here a long time ago.

A. I these awful income taxes that have come to plague you. You didn't discover them either. Your grand-daddy did. And they hurt him worse than they do you, not because the rate was high but because he saw an omen in them. And while on the subject of money I will tell you that your big salary is relatively small in bigger than mine was) is not entirely a function of your brilliance. It is a function of how my generation to yours because it was my generation that managed the building of America to the point where it could pay your kind of salary. Do as well by your kids in this regard as we did by ours . . .

THE DEPRESSION

I understand that you may have cold shivers on occasion when you watch the unemployment rate rising 5 per cent . . . when the company next door is merged and your bridge-playing friends are thrown out of jobs . . . when your stock drops $1.50 a share. But do you understand our Depression? You were 11 years old then, and your sisters were younger. I managed to feed clothe the family, and hold it together. Naturally this is small stuff to you, but in the hinds of your condescension toward your old parents it is. Old Man," I think, is the term you use — I wish you would do a bit of research on The-Year-That-Was in 32-39.

Mom and I had to see our flesh and blood go off to a war in 1942 — you again. I think you haven't had to go through this (war) yet.

What I'm trying to say with all these examples is that you aren't the most important generation that ever lived. And to ask you to stop practicing, and stop perpetuating, the proposition that retired parents are old fulks who never did, never could, and weren't. And couldn't m.. r k.r; now.

I'm not looking for a moment to me and mom, I'm not looc'.. r anything d but like for you to stop regarding retired parents as done-for. I'd like you to ask occasionally for me to pass on to you some of the wisdom I've gained in 67 years. I'd like you to write me a letter once in a while. I'd like you to come to see us sometime.

Devotedly,
Dad.

Canadian Major Seriously Hurt By Explosion

NEW DELHI (AP) — A Canadian Army major and a New Zealand captain acting as United Nations observers in strife-torn Kashmir were seriously injured by an accidental grenade explosion, it was learned today.

A UN spokesman identified them as Maj. E. C. Brunwell of Calgary, who suffered a fractured thigh and shoulder, and Capt. R. G. B. Coulan of New Zealand, who was peppered with grenade fragments.

Both men were "doing well and will be fit when they recover," the UN spokesman said. The officers were taken to a military hospital in the town of Jammu in the Himalayan state.

The spokesman said the two officers, the first United Nations casualties in Kashmir in recent years, were visiting a tent Friday when a grenade lying on the ground went off. It has been thrown in a clash between Pakistani and Indian troops on the international border some days previously.

"There has been no suggestion the grenade was thrown at them," the spokesman said.

A Pakistani major who had been talking with the two observers was also injured.

The observers, technically assigned to police the Indian-Pakistani cease - fire line farther north in Kashmir, had moved into the Rannagar area in the southwest part of the state in an effort to halt sporadic fighting between Indian and Pakistani troops.

TO DISCUSS OFFER

Directors of Burns and Co. Ltd. are to hold a meeting early next week to consider a takeover bid from a group of anonymous Canadian investors, President J. H. Kelly said Friday. The move follows a public offer to Burns shareholders published in Canadian daily newspapers Wednesday.

REPORT RELEASED

The semi-monthly report of short positions of the Toronto Stock Exchange as of March 13 showed 1,804,034 shares of 206 issues compared with 1,753,283 shares of 205 issues on Feb. 28.

ORDER REINSTATED

The West German Federal Bank has reinstated an order barring German banks from paying interest on foreign time deposits in West Germany, effective April 1. Time deposits are those placed with banks for fixed periods of more than 30 days. The move was taken to cut down in influx of foreign capital into West Germany.

TAX REVENUE SLUMPS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)— California cigarette tax revenue slumped by 22 per cent in February, the month following the U.S. surgeon-general's report warning of lung cancer danger from cigarettes. State Controller Alan Cranston reported Friday cigarette tax produced $4,398,736 last month, down $1,238,872 from February revenue a year ago.

Long Voyage Into Far-Out Nearly Over

SEATTLE (AP) — A five-man crew has passed the mid-way mark on a 30-day make-believe journey in space to test life - support systems, special food and themselves.

They're trying to learn whether a shipload of explorers actually can survive a long voyage into the far-out.

Their spacecraft is anchored to the ground in Seattle, and their quarters consist of two large chambers built to simulate those in a space station or a base on the moon.

The men breathe air manufactured on board by chemicals which absorb carbon dioxide and turn out life-giving oxygen.

The crew uses the same water for drinking and washing repeatedly. The supply system collects and process water from body wastes, drainings from sinks and condensation from their quarters.

Boeing Company scientists figure man on earth uses more than 400 pounds of water each day. Hauling enough for five men for a 30-day stay on the moon would be out of the question.

The men use the usual spaceage food-in-tubes for some of their food. The remainder consists of freeze - dried foods restored to about old shape and looks with water and heat.

The crew sleeps four hours and works eight at housekeeping, mental and physical tests, navigation and maintaining equipment.

Fled Hitler, Live in Past

NORFOLK, Conn. (AP)—The of Brothers—one of three in the setting is northwestern Connecticut, but in a way it is not. Plainly dressed people—the women wearing no makeup—sit on a courtyard formed by stone buildings. Nearby is a strange looking stone mansion.

The courtyard scene looks as if a group of European peasants had taken over a nobleman's castle.

In actuality, this is a communal living group of the Society United States. The others are at Rifton, N.Y., and Farmington, Pa.

The society, founded by persons seeking respite from war and strife, was formed in Germany after the First World War. Its members fled Germany when Hitler came to power, then first to Britain, then South America and then the United States. They bought the estate here five years ago.

No Plans For Pooling Gold

Hull, Mikita Race For Points Glory

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chums and linemates, Gordie Howe and Ted Lindsay used to employ a 30-30 formula for driving into the bonus money the National Hockey League issues for point-gathering proficiency.

Three times they finished one-two in the competition, scaled the award money for the two positions and shared it down the middle.

There is no suggestion of any animosity between Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull, the dual crewsome of the Chicago Black Hawks. But it was learned reliably that they have no such plans for pooling the money they earn, no matter how things wind up.

Going into the schedule's wrapup weekend, no one is even close to Stan and Bobby. Mikita carries in an 89-point total and Hull is three points back.

You have to go all the way down to 75 points to find the third man, Montreal's Jean Beliveau.

Hull is a two-time winner of the Art Ross Trophy tie point-collecting. Mikita has never won it. The fact that they function in different lines with the Hawks—and consequently are less dependent on each other in the normal scheme of things than Howe and Lindsay used to be as linemates—is apparently a factor regarding the bonus loot.

WINNER GETS $1,000

The NHL incidentally prefers $1,000 for the first-place man and $500 for the runnerup, apart from other cash awards for the No. 1 and 2 men in each half of the schedule independently.

The Hawks plunge into the weekend protecting a one-point lead atop the standings in a bid for Chicago's initial championship season in an NHL association going back to 1926.

But things are really out of their hands. Even if they win their Sunday night game in Boston against the Bruins, they could be overhauled by Montreal Canadiens. The Habs play soon at 2 o'clock.

Tonight they take on the Bruins in Montreal and tomorrow night they go against the Rangers in New York.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings meanwhile hook up a home-and-home set that will affect only their play-off positions. The Leafs carry a three-point cushion going in. The teams go at it tonight in Toronto and Sunday night in Detroit.

Too Blake, coach of the Canadiens, said Friday left-winger Gilles Tremblay is an uncertain starter for the weekend shuffling. Tremblay was hit on the ankle Wednesday night in Montreal by a slapshot pilfled by Toronto's Tim Horton.

BLAKE CAUTIOUS

Although the schedule throws the Canadiens against the two also-ran teams, Blake was his regular reserved self in outlook.

"They will be going all out to knock us out of the championship and that's the way it should be," he said.

He was obviously under some anxiety concerning the New York game, where the Habs will be facing their longtime goalie Jacques Plante who has made no secret of his feelings about his former employers..

Plante has been heavily bombarded by Montreal this year, peppered by a couple of 30-shot games.

Now comes a dandy chance to get even.

"He'll be waiting for us," said Blake.

Milt Schmidt, whose Bruins are pitted against both title aspirants, meanwhile remarked:

"Whether Montreal or Chicago finishes first is immaterial to us. All they represent is a potential two points which would be a fine way for the Bruins to finish the season."

It's Boston's fourth consecutive one as the drag-end team.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

There won't be any "playoffs" in the playoffs.

Tomorrow night tells the story of the hectic battle between the Montreal Canadiens and the Chicago Black Hawks for the top spot, with Detroit having an outside chance of copping third place. All the Wings have to do is win both remaining games.

In case they have to involve the tie-breaking machinery to resolve the posting for playoff positions at the close of play, it works this way:

The premium is on wins. Then goals scored count. And if there is still a deadlock it goes to the club that has allowed the fewest number of goals. After that "there'll be a consultation," says a prominent NHL official.

Performance over the full 70-game schedule is considered as the basis for all figuring and not just the fourteen games between the two stalemated clubs.

The procedure would be employed should a Chicago-Montreal tie develop for first place or a Toronto-Detroit tie develop for third spot.

Not only do the positions determine who plays who in the Stanley Cup semi-finals—first and third meet in one best-of-seven series, while the second and fourth are pitted in another—but a considerable difference in bonus money is involved.

The Number One club gets 18 units of $1,500, while for second its $750; third, $500, and fourth, $250.

In the playoffs the units are $1,500 for semi-finals winners and $750 for losers. The cup winners get 18 units of $2,000 and the losers 18 units of $1,000.

The four clubs round the turn tonight and head down the stretch for the wire run tomorrow. Detroit has the only home game—"Hockey Night" on the third slot at stake. Canadiens entertain the pesky Bruins tonight and are guests of the Rangers tomorrow evening. The Hawks wrap it up tomorrow night in Boston.

The pressure is on all four clubs with the top clubs showing no signs of wilting.

The ding-dong battles for positions has kept the teams struggling mightily. Coach Toe Blake of the Canadiens, says this kind of competitive pressure in the late stages of the schedule is the best preparation a team has for being "up" for the important playoff rounds.

"You always found," says Blake, "that when a team has a hot battle on its hands towards the end of a regular schedule, they step hot for the playoffs. There's neither a let-up or a let-down when the playoffs round begins."

"But," he adds, "if they've managed to lock up a certain position like first place by a wide margin before the schedule ends, then they can. They get complacent and tit's a big job to get them up again when the playoffs start. A team like that can sometimes blow the first couple of games because they're not ready, mentally, for the fresh competition that the playoffs bring. After that, they may recover, but, sometimes, they don't."

Blake may have been thinking of the situation that faced him in every season ago when his Habs finished first by 13 points in the regular schedule and then got bumped out of the playoffs in six games.

That was in 1961-62 when Canadiens finished with 98 points against 85 for the second-place Toronto Maple Leafs. Everything seemed to be rolling for them and the club eased complacency. Plante won his sixth Vezina Trophy and also got the Hart award. Bobby Rousseau was the rookie of the year.

The Canadiens stacked up against the Black Hawks in the semi-final round (seven games) in seven games and then blew the next four to end up as spectators for the cup final between the Hawks and Leafs.

The "limb" looms but after picking Liston once and Patterson twice there'll be no columnar crawling.

However my ad-alley swami penned his intestained lips to murmur, "If Detroit can't by the Leafs for that third spot, bet your income tax rebate that the Stanley Cup' will rest in the lair of the Wings."

Canadians Balk At Tax Bite

Win $77,040-Won't Cash Ticket!

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Three Canadians picked the winners of four races at Gulfstream Park Friday and won a $77,040.60 twin double. But they refused to cash the ticket because tax laws take an immediate 30 per cent bite.

It was the third - highest pari-mutuel payoff in U.S. horse racing history.

The men, all in their middle 40s, locked their winning ticket in the track's vaults and took the tax form to their lawyer.

They refused to identify themselves.

One man said he invested 50 per cent in the twin double. The other two said they had 25 per cent each.

After the first half of the twin double, which is based on the fifth, sixth, eighth and ninth races here, there were 1,040 ticket. The Canadians wouldn't say how many of these they owned.

Balkan Prince won the fifth and paid $9.60. Amaloft won the sixth, paying $10.80.

But the horses that came in the last two races were long shots. Canal paying $20.60 in the eighth and Belfast $67.40 in the ninth. Belfast was bred in Bristol and Canal finished in the money in six races in this country.

The winners wouldn't talk about the details of their betting schemes or any money they invested. But there was only one winning $2 ticket.

When they stepped up to the cashier's window, they were told that U.S. tax laws require an immediate 30 per cent cut in the winnings. That would amount to about $23,000. They were given the tax form to fill out. But the men balked, left the ticket in the vault and said they would see their lawyer.

Just 15 days ago at Gulfstream Park, two Miami Beach cooks cashed the biggest $2 mutuel payoff in racing history when they invested just $2 in the twin double and took home $84,114.20. The second largest payoff was $70,000.30 last fall at Roosevelt Raceway.

Harness Body Meets Sunday At Club Canara

The Belleville Raceway, a new harness racing organization operating from the Quinte Driving and Riding Club, is holding a special meeting at Club Canara tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

A Raceway spokesman says all interested parties are urged to attend.

Important business is on the agenda and a good turnout of racing fans is expected.

St. Lambert Track At Fault

Won't Approve Trials Records

MONTREAL (CP) — Lieut.-Col. Jack Davies, Canada's representative on the International Amateur Athletic Federation, said Friday no world or national records set at the 1964 Olympic trials in suburban St. Lambert will be recognized.

The reason, he said, is that the new $100,000 St. Lambert track will use an asphalt mixture (armitex) not approved by the IAAF, governing body of world track and field.

"I don't understand what they're doing in St. Lambert," Davies said in an interview. "I've been to Detroit and tried to warn them against it."

He said the national body, the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, recently sent questionnaires to each meet seeking to determine its attitude towards composite-type tracks.

Davies said he received notice Friday from N. A. (Pete) Beach of Toronto, AAU chairman, that a survey of all the branches had replied and the majority were in favor of following the IAAF stand against non-traditional tracks.

"I cannot see where this will change the times in trials or future," he said. "You've got to remember the huge European track on the ground level, which is against this kind of track."

RECORDS TABLED

He said records submitted to the IAAF that are equalled or set on other than traditional tracks are merely tabled, not recognized.

At the last Canadian Olympic trials, in 1960, sprinter Harry Jerome of Vancouver tied the world record of 10 seconds flat, for the 100 meters set by Armin Hary of Germany. He ran on a traditional track but his performance was recognized.

This year Bill Crothers of Toronto could be a potential record man over the 800 metres distance but not in St. Lambert, where the Olympic trials are scheduled Aug. 7-8.

Composite tracks are becoming popular in the United States, where there are about 60. But records set on them go unrecognized. John Pennel's 17-foot pole vault hasn't been accepted as a record because the run-way involved had an asphalt mixture similar to St. Lambert's new track.

Chairman Jim Stewart, St. Lambert's representative on the track committees, said the asphalt plan was approved because of a drainage problem on the site. But he said, the committee had been "assured that this kind of track would be recognized eventually."

"It may be slow in catching on," he said. "But we are certain that it will and it could even be this year."

Cold Lake Rink Wins RCAF Curling Title

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Rick Cust rink from Cold Lake, Alta., Friday captured the RCAF curling championship with a final 10-6 victory over Mel Sjostrom's entry from Trenton, Ont.

The 23-year-old skip led a field of 11 rinks with a final standing of nine wins and one defeat in the round-robin competition.

Second in the standings was the Gerry McLaughlin rink from No. 4 Wing in Gimli with an 8-2 record followed by Les Scribner's crew from Sioux Lookout, Ont., 7-3.

Red MacPherson's Summerside, P.E.I., rink along with Stoney Lake, Ont., Moose Greenwood, N.S., crew were tied with six victories and four losses. A rink from North Bay had a 1-9 record.

SPARKS SCORES TKO

WINNIPEG (CP)—Al Sparks, the 176-pound southpaw from Edmonton, Alta., scored a round technical knockout over Jackie McCracken, 171, of St. Louis Friday in the first professional boxing bout held here in 10 years. Sparks, Western Canada light heavyweight champion, had McCracken in trouble twice before referee Steve Trojack called a halt with 15 seconds remaining in the third round.

Marlies Wallop Flyers

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Toronto Marlboros walloped the Niagara Falls Flyers 9-0 Friday to take a 3-0 stranglehold of their Ontario Hockey Association Junior A best-of-seven semi-final series.

The nine goals were the most scored in one game this year against Bernie Parent, top goalie in the league.

Rod Seiling, now the property of the National Hockey League New York Rangers, was the only player to count two goals.

Fourth and what could be last game of the series will be played in Toronto Sunday.

Ottawa Loses To Morrisburg, Protest Game

OTTAWA (CP) — Morrisburg Combines beat Ottawa Montagnards 5-3 to win the third game of the best-of-seven finals of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Senior Hockey League, but Ottawa played the game under protest.

The protest was laid before the game started when the injury-ridden Combines turned up with two former Kingston Aces players and one ex-Brockville man in their lineup.

Goalie Got An Extra Headache

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Not all Les Binkley's headaches come from the puck that hit him on the forehead Friday.

Cleveland Barons' goaltender came to Pitts burgh with a seven-game margin on the Hornets' Roger Crozier in their battle for the Hap Holmes Trophy, which goes to the leading netminder in the American Hockey League. Only one goal had passed him when the puck felled him midway through the first period.

Later, in his hospital bed, where he was pronounced in good condition, he got the news that his stand-in, trainer George Pollnuk, had a lively evening. The Hornets won the game 9-1 and Crozier was five goals ahead with two fewer games to play.

The Barons had additional cause for gloom. The defeat stretched the Hornets' lead over Cleveland to five points in the Western Division standings with only five games left. Unless they make up the deficit and Binkley's fates in doubt.

Providence Reds, fighting to preserve their hold on the third and last playoff spot in the AHL's Eastern Division, posted a three-point gain over Baltimore Clippers by romping to a 6-3 victory over the fall - end Springfield Indians. Both Providence and Baltimore have five games to go.

White Loses Squeaker To Manitoba

Fifth One-Pointer

TORONTO (CP) — Ernie Scoutty's Manitoba rink has polished off the toughest opposition in the National Mixed Curling Championships. All the winners have to do today to win the title is take care of a couple of lesser rinks.

It sounds easy. But the Manitobans, who have won seven of their eight starts to date in the 11-rink round-robin tournament, have had more than their share of close calls this week.

They were impressive in Friday's eighth round as they hammered British Columbia 17-7, dropping Gil LaMoel's Trail entry into a second-place tie with Quebec. Both finished the day with 6-2 records. But Manitoba needed two key misses by skip Mac White of Belleville to edge Ontario 8-6 Friday night.

WINS CLUTCH GAMES

It was the fifth one-point decision of the week for the 30-year-old Winnipeg skip and he has won four of them, beating 7-6 to Saskatchewan Thursday night.

Behind the three leaders after Friday's play was Saskatchewan with five wins in nine starts. Alberta and the Northern Ontario, Alberta and Prince Edward Island with 4-4 records. Ontario and New Brunswick were next at 3-5, Newfoundland had lost six out of eight while Nova Scotia trailed with one victory in nine tries.

Manitoba tackled New Brunswick in the 10th round this morning today while B.C. faced Prince Alberta and Saskatchewan against Northern Ontario.

The final round in the afternoon pitted Manitoba against Alberta, B.C. against Ontario, Quebec against Northern Ontario, Newfoundland a visitor to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia against Prince Edward Island.

Athree in the ninth and provided Scoutty with his slim one-point win in his victory over B.C., but a series of Manitoba misses made it close to the final rock until the Manitoba skip produced a killing double takeout with his first rock and sewed it really counted one.

White missed his best chance in the 10th when Ontario's Ontario game when he failed to take out an unguarded stone in the 6th end to give a steal of two and giving Manitoba a 3-2 edge.

LaMoel kept his B.C. rink in th . running with a 9-6 victory over Northern Ontario in the afternoon's last match while Quebec zoomed back into contention by a 10-5 victory over Saskatchewan and New Brunswick 10-4.

Ontario downed Newfoundland 10-5 and Quebec crushed winless Alberta 9-1. 10-6 in other eighth-round games. The remainder of the field battled to draw as Alberta defeat Saskatchewan 9-4 while P.E.I. topped Nova Scotia 9-6.

Beating Cancer

Hutch Making Big Fight

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The best story of the spring training season is Fred Hutchinson, who is battling cancer in the Cincinnati Reds.

Fighting a courageous battle against cancer, Hutch is back in the dugout, talking optimistically of the Reds' pennant chances.

Massive x-ray treatments in a Seattle hospital in January and February reduced a malignancy in his upper right chest. The doctors said the treatment has ended and the outlook is "encouraging." Hutch was on the job when the Reds reported for the workouts.

"They tell me to stay out of the sun, take it easy and avoid fatigue for the next two or three years," he said.

"Fortunately, the thing is regressing. I have to cut down on yelling. A lot of people will be pleased about that."

It was typical of Hutchinson that he could laugh at himself and his hollering to get on the umpires. There was a new hoarseness in his voice and he pushed his right chest to show where the treatment had left his skin tender.

The "old" Hutch flared up be the other day when the Reds were playing Los Angeles Dodgers against Minnesota Twins. Before he knew it, he was out of the game.

"So far, I am pleased with our club. It six of our pitchers, Joe Nuxhall, Bob Purkey, Hal Jeffcoat, Jim Maloney, Jim O'Toole and John Tsitouris, each win 15 games, I'll pick up 90 more on relief. We're in business."

Cassius C. To Fight Then Tour

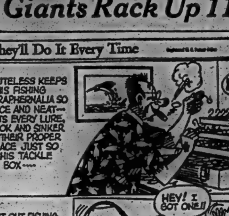
NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay, rejected Friday by the army, said he hopes to fight again within three months and then make a world tour.

He added that he is agreeable to a return bout with Sonny Liston "if he is in shape" but is ready and willing to face any qualified challenger. He listed a possibilities: Floyd Patterson, Doug Jones and Eddie Machen.

"I want to fight again this summer and we're working on it," the 22-year-old titleholder said after receiving word in Washington that he is unfit for military service. "If we can't arrange it, then I want to take a trip overseas especially to the African and Asian nations."

The army reported that Clay failed his second pre-induction examination and was "not qualified for induction into the army under. applicable standards."

No mention was made of the specific test Clay flunked but it was presumed to be that involving mental aptitude.



"I just said I'm the greatest. I never said I was the smartest," the champion said.

Badminton Championships

Canadian Champion Defeated

TORONTO (CP)—A 23-year-old Japanese hotel clerk and a typewriter salesman from Thailand meet today for the Canadian Open men's singles badminton championship.

Yoshio Komiya, the slightly-built star of Japan's Thomas Cup team, advanced to the finals by upsetting Wayne Macdonald of Vancouver, Canada's top player, in semi-final action Friday.

His opponent today is Channarong Ratanasesangung, 22, second - ranked badminton player in the world who has lived in San Diego, Calif., for the last year.

Channarong, top seeded in this tournament, defeated Yoshinori Iguchi of Japan in the other semi-final set Friday.

Finals will also be played today in the junior men's and women's divisions, the senior men's singles, the men's and women's doubles and the mixed doubles.

The men's doubles as an all-Japanese affair, with Koyima and Nagaki combined against Eiichi Nagai and Eiichi Sato.

Miss Miller is also in the women's singles final and meets Sharon Whittaker of Toronto.

Miss Shedd and Jim Carswath of Toronto defeated Miss Tinline and Nagai in the mixed doubles competition.

Koyima displayed brilliantly in eliminating Macdonnel from men's singles play. A fleet-footed competitor with amazing wrist action, he recovered after losing the first game to Macdonnell 15-7 to trounce the Vancouver player 15-4, 15-1 in the next two games.

Macdonnell, 23, was declared Canadian close champion Thursday after winning the quarter-finals of open competition. He was the only Canadian left in the division and had been seeded second to Channarong and ahead of Koyima.

In the mixed doubles, Miss Tinline and Nagai defeated Koyima and Edith Marshall of Toronto 15-7, 15-7 and Carswath and Miss Shedd dumped Vancouver's Ed Peterson and Mimi Nilsson 18-13, 15-10.

Athletics, Hornets Even Series

WOODSTOCK (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association senior finals is shaping up into a homer's series.

The Athletics, on the strength of four goals in the second period and two unanswered marks in the third, Friday scored a 6-4 win over Galt Hornets to even their best-of-seven series at a game each.

Playing coach Ted Power put the game out of reach with just five seconds remaining when he fired into an open net after the Hornets had removed goalie Dave Fyfe in favor of an extra forward.

Bobby Robinson tallied twice for the Athletics while linemates Goose Lane and Art Sullivan along with defenceman Rio Caron, also tallied for Woodstock.

Galt scorers were Jim Dahmer, Pete Kowalchuk, Ron Hargott and Bob McKnight.

OBA Will Stress Expansion

CHATHAM (CP) — Jim Waldie of Milton, president of the Ontario Baseball Association, said Friday the association will stress expansion into Northern Ontario and further development of minor baseball this year.

He told a press conference during the opening day of a two-day OBA convention that at present a majority of the associations 396 affiliated teams are in the southern areas.

PICKENS RETIRING

TORONTO (CP) — Hillsr Ryan Pickens, president of the Canadian Badminton Association for the last seven years, announced his retirement at the annual meeting here Thursday. Pickens, 49-year-old publisher of a sports magazine in Montreal, told delegates at the meeting he was quitting because "I think I've done my bit for the association. But I'll still be available in an advisory capacity."

Nicklaus Tops Pack At Doral

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, Bert Yancey and Bob Shave led the way into today's third round of the $50,000 Doral golf tournament with a spectacular assault on one of the tougher courses on the circuit.

Nicklaus and Baxter each knocked one stroke off the course record with a six-under-par 66. All three had eight-under-par 136.

George Knudson of Toronto, who was two over par in his first round, came back with a 69 Friday for a halfway total of 143. Al Balding of Toronto was still in the tournament at 146.

The Trots

TORONTO (CP)—Jim Holmes of Milton came up with three wins Friday at Greenwood Raceway, but it was his back-to-back triumphs in the second and third races that had 6,086 fans nodding.

The 38 - year - old reinsman started his skein with Bryan H. Direct a three-year-old gelding paster that left the starting gate at 25-1 odds in search of its first win.

Holmes didn't give the crowd much chance to get settled down, coming right back in the third race to win with a 25-1 shot Thomas M. as a lyre-shod gelded trotter, owned by Beatrice M. Oswald of London. The third win was with the Happy Wanderer, also owned by Mrs. Oswald.

..TWO SIGNED

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference announced Friday veteran Canadians Dick Miller and Cornel Piper have signed contracts for the 1964 season. Miller, a defensive halfback, has been with the club 11 years. Lineman Piper is heading into his eight season.

Espanola won the title last year.

SPORT BRIEFS

METS LOSE HURLER

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — New York Mets have lost pitcher Craig Anderson for at least a month with a fractured pitching hand. The 24-year - old right - hander was struck on the hand by a pitch in camp Tuesday. The Mets play Tigers in an exhibition game Thursday.

PABST WINNER

KEBRING, Fla. (AP)—Angie Pabst, member of the brewing family, wheeled a Ford Galaxie to victory Friday in a 155-mile race for stock cars, main preliminary to the 125-mile Daytona 500 race. Pabst completed the 30 laps in 1 hour, 48 minutes and 58.3 seconds for an average speed of 85.888 miles an hour.

ENTERED IN DERBY

TORONTO (CP) — Another Canadian-bred colt entered for a last-minute entry in the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs May 2 Friday when he was nominated by Frank A. Sherman of Hilton, Grand Garcon, who captured the Canadian Derby at Northern Dancer, by three-quarters of a length in the Blue Grass Stakes Saturday at Woodbine Race Track last September, was a former stable mate of the Dancer's.

BAVASI PLEASED

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — General manager Buzzie Bavasi of Los Angeles Dodgers said Friday he is delighted by reports that outfielder Frank Howard may not retire from baseball after all. "This is wonderful news — we need Frank and want him on the club," Bavasi said. Howard, who has talked of quitting the game for personal reasons, said Friday: "I'd like very much to get back in there if I can get things straightened out here."

Defenceman Scores 3 For Braves

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defenceman Jack Hendrickson of the Los Angeles Angels' ace cuts Friday and spent a good time in front of the Cincinnati Reds' net.

Hendrickson broke loose for three goals to tie his previous total for 67 games this season, as St. Louis downed an 8-6 win over the last-place Wings in the Central Professional Hockey League action.

In other leagues play St. Paul Rangers edged Omaha Knights 4-3, Minneapolis was idle.

Hendrickson's effort was accompanied by two goals by John Brenneman ; while Al Carow, Granger Evans and Duke Harris got the others. Carow, the league's leading scorer, scored his 75th goal of the season.

Rodriguez Drubs Holly Mims

Rodriguez, of Miami, weighed 151, Mims 154.

It was Rodriguez' eighth victory in as many fights with members of the 160-pound division.

The Cuban exile took the fight on short notice as a substitute for Jose Stable who suffered a cut over his left eye in training and was forced out.

"I'm glad I'm ready," said Rodriguez when asked to substitute. He was in training for a Feb. 28 fight with 1956 welterweight champion Emile Griffith.

The 26 - year - old Cuban proved he was ready by setting a terrific pace against the 32-year-old Mims in the televised fight.

Rodriguez, a 4 - to - 1 favorite, was just too fast and agile for the game Washington, who is in his 17th year of fighting for cash. The decision was unanimous.

Airman Carves Out Flights of Fancy

WINNIPEG (CP) — While other airmen engage in spare-time flying talk, RCAF Cpl. Russ Anderson2 soars in the imaginative world of sculpture.

Since first becoming interested in wood carving less than three years ago, at the RCAF station in St. John's, Que., he has progressed from small animals through Indian figurines to serious works such as his recently - completed Weeping Angel.

Weeping Angel, a three-quarter size head and shoulders of a cowled figure expressing grief, took almost 300 hours of work. It is part of a Canadian Handicrafts Guild exhibition here.

Like the airman's other works, it is in mahogany. Cpl. Anderson, posted at RCAF Station Winnipeg, uses a variety of tools that include wood chisels, a pocket knife and surgical instruments.

He favors the style of the 15th century German sculptor Riemenschneider, which is reflected in his later works, and is "cool to abstract art.

"I am not inclined toward it," he says, "and feel that the whole purpose of art at its best is for a person to create an image that is satisfying both to his and to other people's imagination.

"Art, like everything else, can be progressive as long as it maintains identity and beauty."

Cpl. Anderson, a native of Winnipeg, has served with the merchant marine and army in a widely travelled career and also spent six years in the Manitoba government service.

Though basically interested in creating small sculptures, he says he hopes eventually to undertake larger work, perhaps working with granite since evenly grained wood in large sizes is difficult to obtain.

AT THE PARK — Sammy Davis, Jr. in the role of a gambler, is threatened by a hood, Johnny Cool, Henry Silva's role. "Johnny Cool," a United Artists release which stars Silva with Elizabeth Montgomery, Jim Backus and Joey Bishop, will open Monday at the Park Theatre for a two day showing. On the same program "Incident In An Alley", a second thriller starring Chris Warfield and Erin O'Donnell. Complete shows 7.00 and 8.40 p.m.

AT THE BELLE — Last Day — Jammy Jill St. John dances with Jerry Lewis in his new Technicolor comedy "What's Minding The Store?", showing Today for the last times at the Belle Theatre.

AT THE PARK — Rock Hudson is the hero of "Tarnished Angels" the film of the famous novel by William Faulkner, showing Monday and Tuesday. Also on the same program "Incident In An Alley", a second thriller starring Chris Warfield and Erin O'Donnell. Complete shows 7.00 and 8.40 p.m.

Dennis Weaver Limps Down Dusty Road For Last Time

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—For the third and last (?) time, Dennis Weaver has limped down the dusty road that leads out of Dodge City.

Dennis, who plays the handicapped deputy sheriff Chester of the long - running Gunsmoke, says cautiously:

"Nothing is irrevocable, but I do believe that this time my departure is final."

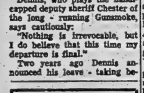
Two years ago Dennis announced his leave - taking because CBS was hot for him to head up an hour-long variety show. It didn't materialize, and he returned to Gunsmoke for 15 of the Saturday night hours.

Then CBS put him in an hour show about a high school vice-principal. The pilot aroused a lot of interest but no sales. Again, back to Gunsmoke for another 12.

SLITTED FOR 2:30

This time NBC has signed, piloted and slotted him for Saturday night at 8:30 in a half-hour tentatively called Kentucky's Kid.

"I play a former horse racing man and veterinarian who is a free soul," Dennis said. "My wife, who has conveniently died a couple of weeks before the series starts, had adopted a little Chinese boy from the mainland.



"The relationship is like Wally Beery and Jackie Cooper in The Champ. He tries to get me to settle down while I want to go off for the wild life. There is plenty of room for drama, pathos and comedy."

Any regrets about leaving Gunsmoke after nine season?

"None whatsoever," he said. "Oh, I miss the old gang. I especially miss Jim Arness' humor, and Milburn Stone and Amanda Blake were wonderful to work with.

"But I don't miss the show in terms of going back. It got to be pretty routine and unstimulating."

Your Car

Gas Appetite Often Key to Car's Health

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

The car that's slow to start and slow on the road is often so because the owner is slow about basic maintenance. And invariably, the car's gas appetite is abnormal.

An occasional tune-up can really work wonders for performance and running costs. However, it should not be limited to spark plugs, points and carburetor adjustments. Six out of ten cars on the road are penalized, to some degree, by other minor flaws which can be corrected. Too often, unfortunately, there are no truly revealing symptoms until such minor conditions have existed for weeks or months.

Thus, your maintenance list should also cover such possibilities as — a dirty air cleaner, sticking manifold heat valve, binding or maladjusted choke, clogged thermostat, weak fuel pump, late ignition timing, faulty cables and connections. And, of course, engine oil and filter should always be regularly checked.

From R.W.: "Does a high-temperature thermostat mean quicker starting, quicker engine warm-up and quicker heat inside the car?" The thermostat doesn't really affect engine starting, but engine warm-up and car heat definitely benefit from a high temperature thermostat.

S. G. asks: "What can be done about a new car that starts easy, idles roughly and lacks real pep on acceleration? The dealer has tried plugs, points, a replacement carburetor plus a complete test of the fuel line, pump, distributor and ignition timing."

Insist that the dealer keep searching for the trouble. It could be as simpe as a defective manifold gasket which permits enough air leakage to upset the fuel mixture. Many such troubles must be traced via the process of elimination.

M.T. writes: "The red warning light on my dash always seems to be flickering and the battery is constantly running down even though it's just two months old. Would this indicate generator trouble?"

Either a faulty generator or regulator . . . although a slipping fan belt might be the only trouble.

From J. R.: "My engine has a high speed miss, and I'm told this is usually due to sticking valves. Are there other causes?"

Many. Troublesome points, plugs, condenser, fuel pump, coil, distributor — virtually any phase of the ignition or fuel system operation might cause such engine miss.

Garden Notes
Starting Your Seeds in Pots

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

For a long time nurserymen believed that plants made better roots if they were transplanted several times before setting out in the garden. Opinion have changed and it is the custom in many nurseries to start the seed in flats then to transplant to pots and allowed to grow on from there until moved to the garden beds. This pot is apt to be pest or compost that can be buried with the roots intact.

The home gardener, where space allows, can start the seeds in the pots with good results. Put three seeds in each pot and pull out the two weakest ones after the second pair has developed.

Everything should be as sanitary as possible to avoid loss from fungi. Dumping off can be avoided if you use sterile sand soil and containers. Pest being slightly acid does not encourage the growth of fungi. Perlite and vermiculite being non-organic will not support the growth of fungi. Those using old clay pots they should be soaked in very hot water and scrubbed to remove last year's soil as well as the salt deposits that have collected on them. Wooden boxes (flats) are sterilized by soaking in a two per cent chlorine solution. Use one quart chlorine bleach to three and a quarter gallons of water. Stack wet and cover with plastic or tarpaulin for 24 hours.

The potting soil can be one part leaf, sterile soil, fine sand, (also sterile) and peat, or equal parts sand and peat. The seeds are started without added fertilizers but when the seedlings have developed their pair of leaves they will need liquid fertilizer. Use half strength hyponex powder or other powdered food that can be readily dissolved and that has a balanced formula, 20-20-20 is ok.

When the seedlings have their second pair of leaves they are ready to move into larger space. Fill pots with potting mix settle by a few taps on the table, make a hole with a pencil or big knitting needle deep enough to take the threadlike root without doubling it up. Firm soil around root gently, place on tray, or in box. Water with weak fertilizer.

Governor-General's Awards Bring

Literary Accolades for Canadians

OTTAWA (CP)—The authors of a biography of a famous Canadian newspaper man, a collection of short stories, a history of Canada and a book of poems have been awarded Governor - General's Literary Awards for 1963.

Winners of the $1000 prizes, announced Friday by the Canada Council, are J. M. S. Careless, chairman of the University of Toronto history department; Toronto writer Hugh Garner; Ottawa historian Gustave Lanctot, and Gatien Lapointe, lecturer at College Militaire Royal de Saint-Jean, Que.

Careless, 44, won the English-language non-fiction award for Brown of the Globe, a biography of George Brown, founder of the Toronto Globe. The biography is in two volumes, the first having been published in 1952, the second in 1963. Publisher is Macmillan of Canada.

Garner, 50, won the English-language fiction award for the book Hugh Garner's Best Stories, published by Ryerson Press.

Lanctot, 80 - year - old former Dominion archivist, was awarded the French-language non-fiction prize for the Histoire du Canada, published by Librairie Beauchemin.

Lapointe, 33, won the French-language poetry prize for his collection of poems, Ode au Saint-Laurent, published by Les Editions du Jour.

No awards were made for poetry in English or for fiction in French.

Of the four winners, the only one previously awarded a Governor-General's Literary Award is Careless, a native of Toronto, who won in the academic non-fiction category in 1953 with Canada, a Story of Challenge.

The author of several school textbooks, Careless has studied at Harvard and Cambridge universities and was with the external affairs department before joining the University of Toronto staff in 1945.

Garner, a native of England who came to Canada at the age of six, is a prolific writer of articles, essays, short stories and novels. He has been a copy boy for the Toronto Star, machine-gunner in the Spanish Civil War, sailor with the Royal Canadian Navy and associate editor of Saturday Night and Liberty magazines.

AIDED BY GRANTS

Lanctot, whose work on the history of Canada was aided by the Social Science Research Council of Canada with Canada Council money, is a native of St. Constant, Que. An authority on Canada during the French regime, he is professor emeritus of history at the University of Ottawa. He retired as Dominion archivist in 1948.

A prolific writer, he won the 1959 Paris Montcalm Prize and Quebec Champion Prize for the first volume of Histoire du Canada. A third volume is to be published shortly.

Lapointe, whose prize-winning poems were also published with Canada Council assistance, is a native of Sainte-Justine de Dorchester, Que. He has published several volumes of poems and holds a doctor of letters degree from the University of Paris.

The awards were chosen by an autonomous committee. Its members were: Dr. Northrop Frye, principal of Victoria College, Toronto; Dr. Roy Daniells, head of the English department, University of British Columbia; Dr. F. W. Watt, University College, Toronto; Mary Winspear, Weston School, Westmount, Que.; Roger Duhamel, Queen's Printer, Ottawa; Rev. Clement Lockquell and Leopold Lamontagne, both of the faculty of letters, Laval University.

The Canada Council, carrying on work previously supported by the Canadian Authors' Association, is providing financial assistance for the prizes and for administrative expenses. It also acts as host at a presentation dinner, for which arrangements will be announced later.

Open House Held at School For Retarded

CAMPBELLFORD — An interesting afternoon was spent at Merrywale School for Retarded Children on Tuesday afternoon when they held their "Open House." About 70 guests were welcomed by the teacher, Mrs. James Hoey.

The work done by the children was on display and the guests were pleased to see what had been accomplished. Woodworking projects made by the children with the assistance of their teacher and the caretaker, William Nicholas, as well as an afghan, a life size peacock and flower window boxes with spring flowers in bloom were samples of some of their handiwork.

Afternoon tea was served to the guests by the children; also cookies they had made themselves. They put on an interesting program, consisting of a number of songs.

Mrs. Hoey explained their daily program and the educational curriculum carried out at the school.

Pouring tea during the afternoon were Mrs. Owen Barrow and Mrs. Ward Ellis. Voluntary assistants were: Mrs. Connie Owens, Mrs. Pieter Wilmink and Mrs. M. Austin. Mrs. Gordon Odor was the convener of the affair, assisted by Mrs. D. Grant.

Mrs. Hoey paid tribute to the members of the Retarded Association of Campbellford and District, her faithful volunteer workers and the parents and the caretaker for their co-operation.

She also expressed her appreciation for a cheque in the amount of $20 presented to her by Miss Rosemary Hoey on behalf of the student body of Campbellford and District High School Student Council.

Ivanhoe

IVANHOE — Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lovibond attended the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Redcliffe, Thomasburg on Monday evening.

Miss Shirley Fleming, Miss Audrey Tanner, Toronto were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Fleming and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Fleming.

A number from this district attended the funeral of Mrs. Cecil Lockhart, held at the MacKenzie Funeral Home, Madoc on March 12th.

Mr. Charles Irvine had the misfortune to be injured. A gash in his thigh required eight stitches to close.

Mrs. J. Bittner, Mrs. Clarence Bittrage, Jr., Brighton visited Mrs. Estella Reid on Friday.

R IS FOR ROLLINS

R is for the "Rollins Home" which has become a synonym for fine workmanship and better value. R is for reasonable prices, which are also associated with the "Rollins Home". Actually, the price you pay for a house built by Maurice Rollins Construction Ltd. is considerably less than you would pay elsewhere. This is the predominant reason why Rollins sell more homes in the Quinte area than all other builders combined.

There are other reasons too. The "Rollins Home" is always of the latest design both interior and exterior. Our homebuyers know they are investing in a product that was built to keep up with the times. Only the best materials (carefully chosen at Maurice Rollins own lumber company) are used, and installed by workmen who know their business. RCAF Airlift Of Canadians To Cyprus Ended

No Operational Role Yet Given Van Doos

By DAVE McINTOSH

NICOSIA (CP) — RCAF airlift of Canadian soldiers to strategic Cyprus was completed Sunday one week after it began in the March snows of Canada.

The airlift has gone very, very well and we are grateful to the air force," said Lt.-Col. Andrew Wood cock, billingual commander of the 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment.

The Van Doos held a muster parade — with band — at their camp west of Nicosia. The parade, Woodcock said, was not to determine whether anyone was missing but whether some body had sneaked over with the battalion who wasn't supposed to come.

The Canadians are becoming a bit restless because they have not been assigned an operational role though they expect to take over patrol of the most troublesome area from Nicosia to Kyrenia 16 miles north on the Mediterranean coast.

Canadian officers and officials had not word on when an operational role would be assigned or when the British troops or those of any other nation joining United Nations forces.

FORM PART

British troops which will form part of the 7,000-man force have been loaned their UN blue berets but are not yet wearing them.

Some 50 RCAF personnel who helped with the airlift at this end will return home this week leaving the Canadian force at strength of approximately 1,050 when the aircraft carrier Bonaventure arrives at Famagusta March 27 with about 100 soldiers. The Van Doos number slightly more than 700.

While at work here RCAF personnel were guarded by members of the RAF Regiment which is not part of the UN force. This is only one of the precautions being taken to see that RCAF will continue to operate one or two supply flights weekly into Nicosia in support of Canadian contingents.

Armed with rifles, cameras and binoculars, officers conducted a 30-mile patrol Sunday to Kyrenia and west to Myrtou, a Turkish Cypriot village in a mixed-closed passes in the Kyrenia mountain range and it

To Delete Sections Of Bill

TORONTO (CP) — Some sections of Ontario's controversial new police legislation will be withdrawn, it was announced Sunday.

"A statement from Premier Robarts was issued by his press aide, William Kimmond. It said:

"I have had an opportunity to examine in minute detail the offending sections of the bill to amend the Police Act. It is my opinion that these sections will have to be deleted and they are being withdrawn."

It is not known whether deletions will include the section giving the Ontario Police Commission power to summon persons for questioning in secret without legal counsel and to jail them indefinitely if they refuse to answer questions.

The statement was read over the CBC network by Mr. Kimmond.

ADD PROTESTS

Meanwhile, the Voice of Women, a Unitarian congregation and two prominent Toronto lawyers added their indignant protests to the chorus of angry reaction against Attorney - General Cass's proposed amendments.

Mrs. C. B. MacPherson, national president of VoW, protested the measure in an open letter to Mr. Robarts.

"You do not believe that we no longer care very much about our safeguarding (our basic) rights?" she said.

"The sure fact that such a drastic and dangerous bill could be proposed glaringly underlines the precarious structure of our liberties."

IS TOO DRASTIC

Toronto lawyer Joseph Sedgwick said that the proposed legislation would be drastic even if the Mafia and Cosa Nostra were entrenched and a minor traffic collision with a police car. The British nicked in the ear but the Canadian was not injured.

Although the first Canadians arrived here more than a week ago, they still are the only men under UN command and the force has not yet been declared operational.

Officials hope for some clarification of the situation of the force after its commander, Lt.-Gen. Prem Singh Gyani of India, returns from a meeting in Geneva today with Secretary-General U Thant.

UN sources said they still do not know when the contingent from Brazil is due to arrive, and that the arrival of contingents from Sweden, Finland, and Ireland is still a week or more away.

Meanwhile, British troops continued the struggle to prevent a Cypriot civil war and the chaos this would produce both on Cyprus and within the NATO

Nothing Like Punch-up Brawl For Zulu and Swazi Warriors

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—For descendants of the great Zulu and Swazi warriors of old, a weekend of recreation like football or hockey may be all right in their way but for really lifting off steam there's nothing like a good punch-up (brawl).

Every Sunday afternoon, hundreds of Africans make their way to one of this South African community's gold mine dumps and proceed to lambaste each other—or watch others do it.

To whites who might stumble on the scene, it would seem the epitome of savagery. Dozens of burly, broad - shouldered men stand toe to toe, their black skins glistening in the sun, and with fists while spectators jeer or chant encouragement.

Blood flows and men some-

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A storm centre moving north eastward out of Nebraska is linking with a disturbance which has been moving across the Prairies. Upper Lakes region will be subjected to snowfalls and heavy winds tonight and Tuesday. Lower Lakes will be sunny and mild today, cloudy to partly cloudy with risk of showers Tuesday.

times fall, but every "fight" is over in 60 seconds, or less if one of the combatants cries "enough."

It's all good clean fun. Every fight is a challenge and an acceptance. Members of the various tribes jump into the ring made by the onlookers and they are soon joined by other tribesmen. They dance and prance and hurl taunts until an appointed referee is satisfied combatants have decided the cock o' the walk off his feet.

Before the fight begins, the two men square up and go in for histrionic gestures of what they are about to do to their opponent. Then they lay on. In a minute the fight is over, and one of the contestants given in there is no loss of face. There's no vengeance asking for quarter in these fights.

Though the men often fight barefisted, not much damage is done and any blood that flows is from superficial wounds. Police, who keep a close watch on the fights, say the Africans disperse after their afternoon's sport in the friendliest and the best of friends.

The fist fight tournament seems to be a natural successor to Johannesburg's old "Amabola" fights, which were banned a few years back. The "Amalelia" tournaments were also a way for Africans to let off steam, but they used clubs and sticks. Police stopped them after too many skulls had been broken.

Wants Inquiry Broadened to Ensure Airing

SUDBURY (CP) — Naldo Bracci said Sunday he will ask for an inquiry into the affairs of Improvement District of White River be broadened to ensure that all sides of charges made against him by former Liberal leader John Wintermeyer.

Mr. Bracci, chairman of the board of trustees for the district, said in a statement he would call Mr. Wintermeyer as a witness if he thought it necessary.

He said the investigation, scheduled to open at White River April 15 before Judge James F. Ross of Port Arthur, came about as a result of a speech made by Mr. Wintermeyer in Sudbury last August in which it was alleged Mr. Bracci held a favored position.

Mr. Wintermeyer made the charges during an election campaign.

Canadians Only Members Of UN Force Yet on Cyprus

NICOSIA (CP)—The status of the United Nations Cyprus force remained vague today after completion of the airlift of Canadian troops to the Mediterranean island.

The transport of some 1,000 Canadians was completed Sunday and Lt.-Col. Andrew Woodcock, commander of the 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd regiment, said the operation had gone "very, very well."

One of the Canadians got a preliminary taste of what the force may face in attempting to keep peace between the Turkish and Greek factions in Cyprus.

Greek - Cypriots fired three bullets at the Canadian and a British soldier late Sunday shortly after their British military vehicle was involved in a minor traffic collision with a police car. The British nicked in the ear but the Canadian was

4 Ontario Ticket Holders Strike It Rich in Sweeps

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Four ticket holders in Ontario and one in Edmonton struck it rich Saturday to the tune of $150,000 each in sweepstakes w'nings on the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, England.

Five more Canadians held ticket winners but lesser amounts, bringing the total Canadian winnings to $1,020,000.

Five lucky winners held tickets on the first-place horse, Team Spirit.

They are Edward Goeglein, Brockville, Steve Vukmanich Stoney Creek, Ont., Joseph Rubacheck, Kitchener, Ont., Ray land, Toronto, and Patricia Arkinstall, Edmonton.

Of four Canadians winning $60,000 with tickets on second-place Purple Silk, three were also from Ontario — James Brown and A. N. Ridgewell, Toronto, and Mrs. M. Niles, Belleville. The fourth was W. A. Flemming of Calgary.

And another Ontario resident, David Livingston of Stouffville, near Toronto, won $30,000 on a ticket on third - place Peacetown.

Many Canadian ticket holders had hopes dashed in the two days before the race as the slate of 80 horses originally heading for the Grand National was cut to 33.

Other prizes of about $1,200 each for Canadians who drew horses which finished below

Certain Sectors of Soviet Medical Program Not Free

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities keep saying Soviet medical care is the world's best, and that it is free for everyone. The fact is that some sectors of the Soviet medical program are not free.

Premier Khrushchev's new Communist party program, issued in 1961, said the party must provide — by 1981 — free medical services for all citizens, including the supply of medicines and the treatment of sick persons at sanatoria."

To learn precisely what is free, and what is not free, an interview was requested with top Soviet medical officials.

Permission was granted for an interview with Alexei Sofonov, chief of the Soviet Medical Services Board.

The first question was: "Could you please tell us what Soviet medical services are free, and which must be paid for?"

Replying with a boomingself-assured voice, Sofonov began: "As you know, medical services in the Soviet Union are free."

Then he spoke for approximately 30 minutes, listing in detail precisely what medical

Russians Refuse To Pay Costs

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union stressed Saturday it would never help pay for the United Nations Congo and Middle East forces but insisted that any challenge to its General Assembly vote on that account might break up the United Nations.

A government statement issued by the Soviet delegation added that if any effort was made to withdraw the vote, "we may be obliged to reconsider our attitude toward United Nations activities".

The International Court of Justice has already ruled against the Soviet Union, saying these are legitimate expenses which must be borne by all members.

The Soviet statement said that any "groundless charges" pressed by Moscow's position would be regarded as "an unfriendly act towards the U.S.S.R."

The government said it would like to make "absolutely clear" it would not pay action to take away the Soviet vote "as the actions of those who do not care for the United Nations and who do not take into account the prospect of its breakup as the result of such actions."

IS ARE TARDY

The Soviet Union is one of 18 countries that failed to pay their votes in the 113-nation assembly next fall if a controversial financial provision of the charter is applied. This provision, Article 19, says any UN member two years behind in its dues "shall have no vote" unless the assembly finds the non-payment arises from conditions beyond its control.

Diplomatic sources said the United States and Britain sought to head off a showdown over this article in a private talk with the Soviet delegation March 6.

They said the two proposed that the Soviet Union pay part of its Congo and Middle East

Nehru Requests Pakistan's Aid To Halt Rioting

Some 200 Are Slain In East India Unrest

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Nehru has urged Pakistan to join with India in measures to halt Moslem-Hindu rioting which has already resulted in some 200 deaths in eastern India.

Nehru made the proposal in a private letter to Pakistani President Mohammed Ayub Khan on Friday, informed sources disclosed today. Nehru was described as gravely concerned that the religious disorders might turn into massacres and provoke new trouble between India and Pakistan.

The 74-year-old Indian leader, still recuperating from a mild stroke in January, urged immediate talks between the home ministers of both countries as a first step in a joint effort to prevent further bloodshed.

Ayub Khan has not yet replied to Nehru's overture, the sources said.

Nehru described the rampages of Hindu mobs as a reaction to anti-Hindu riots in East Pakistan last December and January and the flood of Hindu refugees into India from the predominantly Moslem area, the sources said.

REFUGEES ENTER

The Indian government says 150,000 refugees from East Pakistan entered India in the first 11 weeks of 1964. Most of them Christians were in the exodus.

Although Nehru did not propose a personal meeting with Ayub Khan, he was said to be willing to come eventually to a formal agreement with the Pakistani president on joint efforts to decrease the tension.

Home Minister Gulzari Lal Nanda revealed in Parliament that 200 persons had been arrested in about 200. He refused to answer questions, explaining that details of the rioting could only incite further violence.

"We did say, however, that Moslem and police participated on some separate occasions, killing seven persons and injuring 27. He said the disorders were occurring in a belt along the East Pakistan border while Hindu refugees from East Pakistan are being moved to resettlement areas.

Nanda also said the government was doing everything possible to protect the Moslems and that "a considerable number" of Moslem men, women and children had been removed to "safe areas." He called the disorders a continuation of large-scale killings that began in January.

(Reuters news agency quoted an official report received at Bhubaneswar, Orissa, as saying the stressed situation there one day night when police opened fire on a crowd trying to set fire to a house in the predominantly Orissan industrial town of Rajgangpur.)

Seventy-four Americans were evacuated from Rourkela to Calcutta during the weekend. They are employed in the construction of a new steel mill by West German companies.

Burtons Mobbed, Liz Hurt

BOSTON (AP)—A press agent for Elizabeth Taylor complained today that the actress was injured by an unruly mob of youths who stormed Logan International Airport and a Boston hotel Sunday for a look at her and her actor husband, Richard Burton.

Discussing a jam at the Sheraton Plaza Hotel upon the starring arrival Tuesday, in which the Burtons were jostled as they pushed their way through the lobby, John Springer said Mrs. Burton required the attentions of a doctor after the incident.

"She wrenched her back and arm and was almost in a state of collapse," he said.

"I've never seen such an uncontrolled reception," he complained. "The Burtons wanted to say hello to their fans, but under these conditions it was impossible."

Hotel Manager Daniel Nyboe, who was interference for the famous couple to get them inside the hotel, described the experience as "the worst thing I've been through in my life."

WERE SHOVED

The cofdpe stepped into the fray after pressure agents were shoved and pulled. By the time they reached the elevator, Burton was in a rage and his wife near hysterics.

An estimated 3,500 persons waited at the airport for a glimpse of the Burtons but were disappointed when the Trans-Canada Airlines jet was instead towed off the airport apron to a locked hanger.

The throng at the airport was on of the most unruly within memory at the field. Many were young girls. They first pushed through doors, trampled police ropes and raced out to the field, following the plane all the way to a Trans World Airlines hanger. Some even got into the hangar before they were heaved out.

Miss Taylor and Burton, who were married in Montreal a week earlier, remained out of sight all the way. A bus wheeled into the hangar to carry the Hamlet company into the city and the Burtons presumably drove off in a limousine.

TORONTO—The four-week preBroadway showing of Sir John Gielgud's modern-dress production of Hamlet closed at the O'Keefe Centre Saturday after the final curtain had fallen. Mrs Burton called Miss

Trade Battle Is Shaping Up

GENEVA (AP)—For years, the slogan of men who want to help the poor nations has been: "Trade, not aid." Starting today, the have-not nations are putting that slogan to the test —and the West is divided on how to meet it.

The arena for this confrontation between the haves and the have-nots is a marathon meeting of 122 countries organized by the United Nations as the conference on trade and development.

UN Secretary - General U Thant starts it off with an address to the 1,500 delegates crystallizing the demands of them for a larger share of world trade. Delegates have already agreed to elect as president a representative of the underdeveloped countries, Abdel Moneim al Kaissouni of the United Arab Republic.

The key conference document is a report by Raul Prebisch of Argentina, chief economist and the conference's secretary-general. His recommendations are regarded as moderate by many in the industrialized nations — include special preferences for manufactured products of the underdeveloped countries, agreements to stabilize commodity prices which account for 80 per cent of the have-nots' trade, lowering tariff barriers and a new system of finance under which the rich nations which gain from the raw material prices would pay them extra to finance development.

African delegates may try to oust South Africa from the conference because of its white supremacy policies. Communists are pressing for the seating of Communist China, East Germany, North Korea and North Viet Nam. These moves are expected to be settled later this week with the Communist - backed states excluded as usual, and South Africa seated after bitter verbal exchanges.

The one break in the Western front against seating Communist China has been made by France, in accordance with President de Gaulle's recognition of the Peking government. The split underscores the lack of a unified approach by major Western trading nations in meeting the demands for larger markets and more stable prices to put forth by the underdeveloped two-thirds of the world.

The United States, British and Canadians have made their separate ways. The have-nots say none of their solutions is sufficient.

LONDON (CP)—Canada appears to be taking a cautious

Must Control Market Forces Or Have Plans Ruined - Thant

GENEVA (Reuters)—Secretary-General U Thant said today the United Nations must make a determined effort to solve international economic problems or risk seeing its work for peace frustrated.

Adverse trends on the terms of trade nullified "to a marked extent" multilateral and bilateral assistance programs to the developing countries, creating a need for more aid, he said.

Opening the UN conference on trade and development here, Thant said it should lay the foundation for and pave the way toward a new trade policy for development and define the "necessary instrumentality for its implementation."

He told trade ministers and other leading delegates from more than 120 countries:

"You can hardly do less than your utmost, both in the underdeveloped and in the developed countries, with a framework of consistent and active policy to make trade a real vehicle of progress toward economic development and they help to secure universal prosperity and peace for this and succeeding generations."

Thant flew here from New York to open the conference, biggest of its kind ever held.

He said a "unique atmosphere of agreement" prevailed over the conference as a whole.

"A long chain of events has contributed over many years to the growing conviction that the United Nations must make a concerted effort to deal jointly with problems of trade and problems of development or run the risk of frustrating the efforts of the organization to maintain world peace."

The Sir MacKenzie Bowell Will Be Name of New School

The name of a former Canadian Prime Minister and one-time newspaper publisher is like to stay, will be commemorated by Belleville's newest public school when it is completed.

The name of the proposed new school to be built on Leland Drive in the west end of the city will be The Sir MacKenzie Bowell Public School. These words school board chose the name at its regular meeting last week.

Sir MacKenzie Bowell was not only an active member of the business life of this city and former Prime Minister of Canada, but also took an active interest in education. He served as the chairman of the Board of Common School Trustees from 1856 to 1876. The Board of Common School Trustees was the forerunner of the present public school board.

Picnic Areas In Three Parks To Be Improved

In preparation for another picnic season now just around the corner, a work program to improve the picnic area at the Price Conservation Area at Actinolite commenced this morning by the Metro River Conservation Authority.

The project at the Price Area is part of an overall program to improve facilities at all three of the Authority's areas — at Actinolite, at the Col. Vanderwater Area at Thomasburg and at the Old's Mill area northwest of Madoc.

Improvement of the picnic facilities at the Price Area includes initial development of the picnic area on the west side of the Skootamatta River, and extension of the roadway further into the area.

At the Vanderwater Area an additional 40 camping sites will be developed while the south road of the boat landing ramp and swimming beach will be further developed and gravelled.

Plans also are to plant another 10,000 pine and spruce trees, and 1,800 Lombardy poplars.

Over at the O'Hara's Mill Area, work to be done includes the general clean-up, further development of the new parking area at the Hillcrest and improvement of the nature trail.

St. Michael's School Entered

Damage today led to the discovery of a week-end break-in at St. Michael's Academy in Belleville this morning.

Doors were scarred as would-be thieves sought loot in offices and classrooms and the principal's quarters were ransacked.

It was not immediately known if any articles had been stolen.

Y's Men's Club Holds Annual Presidents' Night

Another Y's Men's fiscal year is drawing to a close as evidenced by the President's Night, held at the YMCA on Saturday evening. The annual event honoring the retiring and incoming presidents took place in the auditorium, beautifully decorated by Y's Men Ken Meadmore.

Guests from out-of-town included Y's Men and their wives from Kingston, Oshawa and Peterborough. Mr. and Mrs. Merril Gordon were presented with gifts as a token of their support and assistance in the work of Y's Men.

AWARDS PRESENTED

Awards were then presented by President Doug Trumble. Gifts were given to Y's Men for 2 to 14 years of perfect club attendance:

Don Clarke (14), Bert Fllies (13), Di Diacantides (11); Jim Pesson (10), Hugh Wilson (9), John Haymen (8), Bill Prentice (5), Vern Weir (5), Gerry Sherman (3), Colin Wilcox (2). Special mention for one year attendance was made to Y's Men Ron Poste and Doug Trumble.

Retiring president, Doug Trumble, then gave his "year's soup of "The Year in Retrospect." The theme of his talk was a deep sense of gratitude and humility. Doug paid tribute to all those around him. He prized the initiative and faithfulness of each and every club member. The assistance club member. The executive and committee members were given special thanks for their assistance. A resume of the highlights of the past year followed. Doug noted with pleasure appreciation the contributions of several other groups and individuals who helped to make the year and this event successful. He concluded by extending congratulations and good wishes to the new executive for the year ahead.

BRINGS GREETINGS

Mr. Bill Wills, the president of the YMCA Board of Directors, brought greetings and spoke briefly to the Board members. In his remarks he cited the 6th club objective which is "To serve by diligent, active, personal and united effort in carrying forward every phase of the program of the Young Men's Christian Association".

Mr. Claude Atkinson, Ontario District Governor of Eastern Ontario, brought greetings from International. He challenged the club to share Ysdom with others, to give more help to the Y as it moves into a new era, and to continue to use the present international motto "Forward with Faith".

At this point in the program, the entertainment arranged by Y's Bill Prentice, was turned over to Merril and Val Gordon. With three sets of "Swingin S's" a very comprehensive, interesting and enjoyable demonstration of square dancing was performed.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

The officers for the next term were then installed by the District Governor. In the Y's Men's movement, since the beginning, there has been an unwritten rule that the office seeks the man rather than the man the office. Many qualities are demanded and expected of officers of the club, of which four were enumerated: ideal ism, interest, initiative and industry These are some of the qualities of leadership required of Y's Men, who have the responsibility of guiding the club during the coming term. The men were asked to conscientiously discharge the sacred trust reposed in them by their fellow Y's men.

The gavel, emblematic of the president's office, was then handed over to president-elect Garry Sherman, by retiring president Doug Trumble, and with it go the responsibilities of the position. Garry presented Doug with a past president's pin in recognition of his service to the club and to the movement. Gerry then gave his prophecy and expectations of the year ahead. Looking to the future he visualized five goals for 1964-65 and he hopes to see all of them reached.

(1) An increase in club membership. (2) A new fund raising project. (3) A contribution to the new Y's Men's International office in Chicago. (4) Co-operation with the YMCA in meeting its many needs. (5) Raising of club standards to make it possible for more children to attend Camp Quinte and overprivileged homes.

The meeting was adjourned and congratulations and thanks were extended to the incoming executive by all Y's Men and friends. The officers consist of: president Garry Sherman; past president, Doug Trumble; vice-president, Colin Wilcox; secretary, Bob Young; treasurer, Jim Barton; directors, Bert Fllies, Ron Poste, Vern Weir, Dave Wadley, Bill Hutchinson, YMCA related secretary, Graham Geldart.

550 Pupils Will Visit Old Village

Grade 8 students of Belleville public schools, numbering close to 550, will take a trip back into history early in June.

They will visit the geography project the pupils will visit Upper Canada Village on the shores of the St. Lawrence River where for the day they will be able to relive life as it was close to a century ago.

In fact it will be really memorable day for the children. They will make the trip to Upper Canada Village by train on what for many will in all probability be a first journey by railway.

view of proposals that Commonwealth tariff preferences be placed by a so-called blanket system.

The issue will be discussed at the United Nations conference on trade and development opening at Geneva today and was also considered at a Commonwealth meeting that closed here Friday.

Britain's trade minister Edward Heath, chairman of the London talks, said the Canadian delegation did not discuss the blanket proposal in detail.

"I don't think anybody was against it," he added, reviewing the attitudes of the 18 Commonwealth countries who attended.

The unofficial view was that the Canadians wanted to examine on the spot in Geneva proposals for preferences changes before committing themselves.

United Counties Honor Warden, Reeve Douglas McMaster of Murray Twp., at Banquet

TRENTON — Close to 400 residents of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham gathered at the Recreation Hall in Batawa Friday night to pay honor to their 1966 warden, Reeve Douglas McMaster of Murray Township. Reeve McMaster was chosen this spring from among six contestants for the job, after a day and a half of voting at Cobourg, the county seat, and after 43 ballots had been cast. Mr. McMaster, who lost out in a bid for the wardenship in 1963, was visibly moved by the tributes paid him Friday night by the various municipal and provincial government representatives at the testimonial dinner.

The jury's remarks of the United Counties was in the air as the guests sat down to dine on the banquet, prepared and served by the UCW of Wooler United Church. One hundred and eighty pounds of Northumberland prime sirloin beef were consumed. The dinner was topped off by home-made pie with cheese, manufactured in the counties, on the side.

Unable to attend the dinner were Dr. Pauline Jewett, M.P. for Northumberland, who sent regrets; Russell Honey, M.P. for Durham, who was ill; Karel Vytopil, general manager of Bata Shoe, also through illness; Warden Thomas Burnside of Hastings County, Ill, but represented by senior county councillor, Frederick Beckett.

Among the special guests at the dinner were: Mayor James MacDonald and Mrs. MacDonald of Trenton; Warden Kenneth Hicks of Prince Edward County; Dr. C. K. Herr, president of Trent University; Mayor Peters of Cobourg; Russell Rowe, M.L.A. for Northumberland and Mrs. Rowe; Alex Carruthers, M.L.A. for Durham and Mrs. Carruthers; Robert Carlaw, reeve of Brighton Township and Mrs. Carlaw; Ben Thompson, former M.P. for Northumberland and Mrs. Thompson; John Stone, deputy reeve for Clark Township; Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Irwin of King Street United Church in Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Duncan of Batawa and Mr. and Mrs. Angus Gunter. Mr. Gunter is township clerk in Murray.

FAMILY INTRODUCED

Among the head table guests were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bruyea. Mr. Bruyea is deputy reeve for Murray Township and acted as master of ceremonies for the evening.

Introduced from the floor were the members of township council and the members of county council.

Warden McMaster also introduced the members of his immediate family, Mrs. McMaster; Susan, "the youngest, as usual"; Beatie fan,"; Reginald, "nothing surprises him,"; Margaret, "Mother's little helper,"; George, "my right hand man,"; and Donald, the first born of the family," Also present and introduced were Donald's wife, Joan; Mr. and Mrs. George Holsworth of Palmerston, (Mrs. Holsworth is the warden's sister); and McMaster's 92-year old father, Arthur Bush of Glen Miller, "attending his first warden's banquet." Little Miss Bonnie McMaster, the ten-months' old granddaughter of Warden and Mrs. McMaster was "too young to attend."

Throughout the dinner, the ladies present sported corsages, the gift of the warden, and made up by the Lottie Jones Flower Shop. Guests, one and all were asked to sign a commemorative guest book, which the warden assured them he would treasure in the years to come.

Dr. Herr started off the program by saying, "Ladies and gentlemen, you are welcome to Batawa," and deputy reeve Bruyea assured the audience that the affairs of the county were in safe hands for 1966."

"Give this man a big hand," said Mr. Bruyea.

Councillor Gerald Ross of Murray introduced the head table guests and the visiting councillors, Leo McAuley and Ronald Webb presented the warden with a silver tray from the township. Mrs. McMaster received a bouquet of red roses.

TOASTS PROPOSED

A toast to the Dominion of Canada was proposed by Mr. Thompson and responded to by Mr. Thompson in the absence of Dr. Jewett, who was detained in Ottawa by government business.

A toast to the Province was proposed by Mr. Rowe, who said that Ontario should display great understanding and love towards the province of Quebec, and the toast was responded to by Mr. Rowe, who said that listeners to that Prime Minister John P. Roberts of Ontario "would never let such an inaggreable piece of legislature as proposed by Attorney General Frederick Case, be passed, to infringe on the rights Canadians had fought for in the past."

Mr. John Stone, in proposing the toast to the United Counties, said that "county politics was big business."

In response to this toast, Warden McMaster paid tribute to his predecessors in the post, the late Herman Morrow and the late Reeve Arthur Rowe.

PUSHED INTO POLITICS

Mr. McMaster said that he had first been "pushed" into municipal politics by the late Reeve Arthur Hayes of Murray Township, 13 years ago.

"I didn't think I was interested in politics at that time," said the warden.

Warden McMaster said that he was proud to be called "the head of the United Counties."

"Northumberland and Durham form the second largest municipal body in the province," said the warden, "I like to think of the counties as the Golden Miles between Toronto and Kingston."

Interspersed among the toasts, speeches and presentations were duets by two Murray Township girls, Judith Thompson and Sandy Wickens and a reading by Mrs. Ralph Hill was much enjoyed. Mrs. Hill is a long time neighbor of the McMasters.

Trenton Girl Chosen for N. Y. Trip

TRENTON — Sixteen - year - old Dianne Gillespie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Parr, 73 Division St., Trenton, has been selected from among a number of high school students in this area to take part in the 15th annual United Nations' Youth Pilgrimage this summer. More than 1,000 students from across Canada and the United States will spend two weeks, from July 22 to Aug. 5 in New York City as guests of I.O.O.F. and Rebekah lodges and will attend U.N. sessions as observers. One day of the holiday will be spent at the New York World's Fair.

Dianne was chosen from Trenton High School because of her academic standing. One factor in the selection was her performance in a public speaking contest and this will stand her in good stead because when her return she will be asked to speak at various service club meetings locally.

At the UN, the students will see committees and commissions in action in the five official UN languages and will visit International House where students from 80 countries live under one roof.

Dianne's trip will be specifically financed by I.O.O.F District No. 47 and Rebekah Lodge, No. 5 District.

Dianne will also be presented with a personal certificate by D.D.G.W. E. D. Topping at a date yet to be announced. Dianne was described by her mother as being "in Seventh Heaven" about having been chosen from among so many worthy contestants for the high honor, when she was notified of the decision of the judges this week.

Local AOTS Charter Night

TRENTON — Over 100 men attended the charter night of Avonmore pastoral charge AOTS Men's Club here.

Thelocal club was sponsored by a similar group from Consecon. Approximately 35 members of the Consecon group travelled to Avonmore for the occasion.

Preceded by a turkey dinner served by members of the UCW of St. James' Church, the meeting was attended by representatives of the AOTS Men from Grace Church, Trenton, Belleville, and Wellington and Winchester.

Highlighting the program was an initiation service, conducted by Ross Adams, president of Prince Edward County District Men's Clubs, in which 25 men of the Avonmore local charge became charter members of the new club.

Hazel McLennan, president of the Belleville District Men's Clubs of the Bay of Quinte Conference, installed the eight members of the new executive, headed by Glenn B. McMillan, as president, who received a charter from Mr. McClintock. Don Soulsbro rounded out the ceremony by presenting the president-elect with a gavel.

Glenn McMillan thanked the Consecon Club for sponsoring the local group, and the presentation of the charter and gavel.

Gordon Lloyd, immediate past-president of the Consecon Club, conducted the devotional period.

'Just Like a Big Dream' Says Mrs. Margaret Niles In Discussing Sweeps Win

It was a Sunday like any other Sunday — except for the Niles'.

"It's not as hectic as it was yesterday. Today it seems more like a big dream, said the head of the family, Mrs. Margaret Niles.

It was also a dream which has come true for few — considering the statistics on winners of the Irish Sweepstakes.

Saturday, as everyone now knows, when Purple Silk came second in the Grand National, Mrs. Niles — widow working as a seamstress to support her three children — won $60,000 in Sweepstakes prizes money — to become the magnet for scores of excited handshakes, backslaps and general congratulations.

"Yesterday," in her own words, "was terrible."

Sunday, things had calmed down a little — at least she had time to catch her breath. But the family bungalow at 64 Charlotte Street still was the receiving end of congratulatory stream — this time by telephone.

And when she and her three children went to service at Christ Church well-wishers again clustered round.

"We could hardly get out of church," she laughed.

TAKEN IN STRIDE

Despite the windfall—which brings security after several years of struggle since her husband's death in a drowning tragedy, she still was fretful about everyday things.

She worried lest the constant excitement could affect the studies of her two teen-age offspring—Donald 17, and 16-year-old Susan. Both are BCIVS students.

"They're into their exams and I'm rid of so much distraction," she said.

However, the youngsters, along with nine-year-old brother Ricky appeared taking things in their stride.

What bank now?

Mrs. Niles wants to buy her own home, but she's in no hurry.

Sweepstakes winners, more often than not, are instant targets for salesmen in every branch of business. Has she been counselled by any yet:

"Not yet. And I sure don't want them either. It's going to go in the bank and that's all there is to it."

She also intends keeping her job in the drapery department of McIntosh store.

"I wouldn't know what to do with myself. And anyway it's just like a second family down there."

Board Receives Many Defmitions For Word Clinic

Local citizens have been more than co-operative with the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board in making suggestions as to the definition of the word "clinic".

Two weeks ago the local planning board invited written suggestions from the local legal and professional groups as to the definition of the word as it pertains to local building and zoning by-laws.

The question arose with the application of Doctor R. Hart for a permit to construct a clinic on Dundas Street opposite the Belleville General Hospital.

Thursday evening a public meeting will be held at the city hall at which suggested definitions of a "clinic" will be heard.

The office of City Planning Director P.J. Beavis said today that "numerous" replies from various groups regarding the definition of the word clinic had already been received.

Crippled by Earlier Crash, Cardiff Woman Has Legs Broken in Foxboro Crash

The 26 - year - old mother of two children, crippled from a highway accident four years ago, Sunday had both legs fractured a second time in a two - car crash near Foxboro.

Mrs. Marie Plumb, Cardiff Township, was one of six persons injured in the crack-up at the Madoc County Road junction with old Highway 14.

Also injured were her husband, Brian Plumb, 28-year-old Bancroft high school teacher, with hip and pelvis injuries; her sons, Kirk 2½ and Robin, 4, Mrs. Ron Bailey, 25, Bancroft, and Mrs. Wilbert Scott, Napanee, all with cuts and bruises.

The Plumbs were passengers in an automobile driven by Ronald Bailey, also a Bancroft high school teacher.

Mr. Bailey and his wife, Lois are both well - known in the Belleville district. Mr. Bailey bef..re going to Bancroft, was for several years an employee of the city's assessment department. Mr. Bailey said at the accident scene he and his wife were expecting a baby within two months.

Mrs. Plumb has been confined to a wheel chair since her previous accident.

Police said the Bailey vehicle was southbound on the county road and a car driven by Wilbert Scott was westbound on the old section of Highway 14.

One person has been killed and several others injured since the intersection, created by the new Highway 14 Foxboro bypass, was opened late last fall.

FIVE PEOPLE, including a crippled mother of two, were injured in this automobile in a two-car crash at Highway 14 intersection near Foxboro Sunday.

TRENTON — "What do you do with a quarter of a horse?

That's what four Trenton housewives are asking themselves this weekend.

The four are the wives of the RCAF curling rink which captured high honors . . . and the horse . . . in an open bonspiel at Durham, 70 miles from Camp Borden on Saturday.

After winning fourth place in RCAF national finals at Winnipeg, LAC Mel Sjostrom, Sgt. Ed Walker, S/L Jim Fennell and LAC Vince Gallipeau went to Durham and competed against rinks of no mean standing to come out the winners of the 'spiel. Top prize was a valuable mare, due to foal in May, having been bred with one of Canada's top sires.

At last report, the proud owners were holding hoedown, having decided to leave their prize where she was until after her foaling, but keeping home their individual trophies, the focal points of which are . . . you guessed it . . . horses.

Trenton Juvs. Even Series

TRENTON — Trenton Legion Juveniles bested Orillia Juveniles 5-2 in the fourth game of a five-game series for the Eastern championship, in Trenton Sunday night, squaring the series at two-all. The fifth and sudden death game will be played in Orillia, Tuesday night.

Banks Out—At Last

Harold Chamberlain Banks is no longer president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada. He has been dismissed by the board of trustees appointed by the government for Canada's maritime unions.

We think his dismissal was almost certainly a good move, but we are not at all so sure that it was well-timed. In fact, if it should prove to have been a bad move it can only be because of bad timing.

In this case, though, the trustees were between the horns of a dilemma. If they had acted months ago, they would have been gored by the charge of precipitate action, taken without full study of all facets of the problem. They have chosen to be, like Caesar's wife, above suspicion, but that will not save them from being gored by the opposite horn of charges of procrastination, resulting in stirring up a fuss as the lake-navigation season is about to open.

Charles Turner is the new president of the SIU.

We do not know whether this appointment is a good one, and in this uncertainty we are not disposing any doubts about Mr. Turner's integrity or ability. If the appointment should prove a bad one, it will be because Mr. Turner has not been a member of the SIU. Was there no member of the union the trustees believed both capable and trustworthy? On the other hand, the selection of an outsider with no connection with the union's unsavory past could prove tremendously helpful.

Charles Millard, one of the three trustees, has moved into the SIU headquarters to supervise the administration.

Here we do know that, in our opinion, this was a second move. Paul Hall, the president of the SIU, may be a tough union man, but, in his own and different way, Charles Millard is just as tough. Unless Mr. Millard has changed a lot since the days when he brought the CIO into Ontario—the while Premier Mitch Hepburn was boasting that it had been kept out—Mr. Hall is not likely to pull much wool over his eyes.

As far as the union members are concerned, those of them who know Millard's record are likely to regard him as a union man first and a trustee second and to feel some assurance their interests will be protected. There is nothing in this to which the general public should object. In fact it is the only course to steer if peace is to be restored to the Great Lakes. When all the sailors feel safe without Hal Banks, or the kind of tie he is, the trustees' task will have been accomplished. It is certain that it would be impossible to make all the sailors feel safe while Banks was still on the SIU bridge.

Water, Water Everywhere

"Man marks the earth with ruin, his control stops with the shore." So said Lord Byron. The sentiment was always suspect. Even the seas of the world are not safe from the great predator.

If the seas in their vastness fail to escape unscathed, how much less able is water to protect itself from man's insatiable demands once it becomes separated from its homeland.

While man gobbles up at an alarming pace the metals and oils stored up through time immemorial, some might imagine that the abundance of water, and its indestructibility, would protect it from his ravages.

Not so. There are growing signs that on this continent, splashed all over with lakes as stars dot the night skies, man's demands will eventually outpace the natural supply.

It is the case of there being any overall lack of water, but of it being scarce in certain areas.

To remedy this condition a Los Angeles engineering firm has proposed a hundred-billion-dollar project which, it says, would provide the United States, and parts of Canada and Mexico, with water for the next hundred years.

Water runoff from Alaska, the Yukon Territory and British Columbia would be carried through a system of tunnels, canals and rivers as far south as Chihuahua, Mexico. The water, or power from it, would be used in 33 of the 49 continental states of the U.S. and in three Mexican states. The plan would—and get this—serve seven Canadian provinces, names not given in the news report.

This seems almost unbelievable. But no more so than another feature of the plan—the engineers responsible for this dream maintain it would be self-liquidating and would not require one tax dollar.

Eggs Are Put Into Orbit

Stratford Beacon-Herald

Space travel is getting old-fashioned on a conventional scale as the space agencies continue to cook up new ideas.

The latest, we read, is a plan to launch chicken and duck eggs on fertilized eggs into space. (One of the eggs will be hard-boiled as a control.)

Miniature thermistors attached to the eggs will telemeter data on how weightlessness affects the normal development of embryos.

The opportunities for wise cracking about this are too great that the wise editorialist ignores them and passes on to another space-age item:

Scientists at the School of Aero-space Medicine in Texas have finally decided that Astronaut Gordon Cooper actually saw the things he said he saw in the mirages in the Himalayas, for instance, or ducks on roads—during his 34-orbit flight in the Mercury capsule last year, even though it was impossible.

It was impossible because the human eye simply cannot resolve objects that small that far away. However, there is a difference between seeing and perceiving; the difference is in the human brain.

Many "perceived" vehicles on roads and smoke from locomotives for the same reason that a person can recognize a friend way off down the street but could not describe the face at that distance. Little signs, subtle configurations, clues of movement and background tell us that we are looking at.

Major Cooper knew he was looking at a group of boxes, say, even though he could not "see" them individually. To the camera, however, they do not have been recorded as dots, depending upon lens power and film grain.

What it means is that there is a definite place in space for man.

Speaking of seeing things, Dr. Ingebrigt Hovdenak, Indiana University claims that the famous "freckles" of John Glenn, which he saw instruments were caused by small particles in the liquid part of their eyes. Normally, the particles sink to the bottom of the eyes, but in orbital freefall the fluid around them becomes visible against the proper background.

Well, we all keep on getting a little less ignorant, day by day.

Most Men Shaped Wrong

Ottawa Journal

Tailor and Cutter magazine says that this old country of ours is not built entirely right. Most of us have a lion's skin but in a suit shaped like a wedge with the wide end up.

All this is well enough for the man who happens to be shaped like a wedge, with the wide end up. But what happens to normal people? Not even tailors are omniscient and the magazine admits that,

". . . when a man of comparatively narrow upper proportions and wide lower proportions asks for a sartorial revival, there are some problems for the cutter to solve."

And well, how many of us would really have the face to go to the tailor's and ask to be measured for the "Hercules look"?

One Cannot Teach Another Moral Values

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

At the recent convention of school administrators in Atlantic City, the Pennsylvania superintendent of schools suggested that the schools eliminate "emphasis on facts" and "teach moral values."

His was perturbed because a survey in his state showed that more than 50 per cent of the senior classes condone cheating in tests, and the same number admitted their willingness to submit someone else's composition as their own.

But their frank attitude is not so much evidence of their low ethical standards as it is a judgment on the meaning and merit of most examinations in our present educational system.

It reflects what the students quite accurate belief that nearly all tests are pointless, both in what they ask and in the ways they are scored. The widespread cheating indicates their contempt for the mechanics of our mass education methods.

Quite apart from this, however, is the assumption held by school administrators that "moral values" can be taught in school. Moral values cannot be "taught" anywhere, in the formal sense of the term. They can only be caught.

Even this is difficult. Great men, of high, ethical principles, have so often bred sons with the same approach. What is transmitted from parent to child is not the external conduct, but the internal feeling. If a man is "moral" for the wrong reasons, he will do the wrong reasons and not the moral thing that his children will pick up.

Schools can teach reading, writing, arithmetic and a few other subjects. They cannot teach character, for it cannot be taught. It is not a subject, it is an attitude. It is rooted in unconscious attitude, basic to the feelings.

Our contemporary society, also, has emphasized competition to such an extent that the desire to win, to be first, to out-distance the others, has overpowered ever ethical considerations. We reward success, not excellence, and we judge by standards without how those results were obtained. Morality is whatever happens to work.

The schools cannot teach ethics, in any meaningful way, because the whole social order (on which education is a part) does not rest on an ethical base, but on a pragmatic one. Children imitate what they see about them, not what they are told in classes and commencement addresses. If parents cannot instill morality, how can any teacher, who is generally regarded as a "failure" for not being able to make more money in a society where value is equated with price?

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

March 23rd, 1944.

Illuminating his talk on construction problems and experience on the Alaska Highway, Mr. T. F. Francis, district engineer of the Department of Highways, showed two films made by the Department during Lt.-Col. completion of the military "road" and one - time peace highway to the great north. The films were excellent in description and were in beautiful technicolor.

The history of the "Road" to Alaska is a great many years, said Mr. Francis, probably a century ago. Then we talk of a road to Russia about one hundred years ago, the road to cross the mainland of Canada to Alaska, and the Bering Sea to be either a bridge or tunnelled under. In 1864 the construction of the Alaskan - Siberian Telegraph line was started but the work progressed for about four years until the laying of the cable. It was then abandoned in an unconscious attitude, basking in the sunlight.

Our contemporary society, also, has emphasized competition to such an extent that the desire to win, to be first, to out-distance the others, has overpowered ever ethical considerations. We reward success, not excellence, and we judge by standards without how those results were obtained. Morality is whatever happens to work.

Emphysema a Lung Disease For Which There's No Cure

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I think you discussed emphysema before but I wasn't interested in the subject then.

My husband is bothered with it now. He won't see a doctor. He considers it unimportant. Please discuss symptoms, cause and cure. Mrs. E. M. K.

I've written about emphysema (pronounced em-fi-see-ma) quite frequently with the feeling that sooner or later a great many people will, like you, realize that it is not a trivial problem. The disease is so prevalent that it causes more deaths than bronchial and lung cancer combined. It certainly is not, as your husband thinks, "nothing serious."

Emphysema is a lung disease, and there is no cure for it. Nevertheless, treatment can prevent it from becoming dangerously severe.

For those asking questions on the subject, I've just written a new booklet, "How To Live With Emphysema." Free to receive a copy, send 15c in coin and an unstamped, self-addressed (No. 6) envelope, and ultimately heart disease. There are also X-ray and respiration tests.

In brief, the tiny air sacs in the lungs become stretched out, and lose their elasticity. Gradually the patient cannot exhale as much carbon dioxide as he should. Consequently the lungs where the transfer of fluid as much fresh air. Likewise the active surfaces of the oxygen from the air to the blood takes place are decreased.

Various drugs may be prescribed and also special breathing exercises. Sometimes, every the use of an abdominal binder. It is urgent that the patient stop smoking. Sometimes every bit of smoke he inhales means that less blood is getting oxygen, and oxygen is what he needs. Therefore oxygen sometimes is needed in addition to other treatment for emphysema, and keep it from getting worse, along with a fuller appreciation of the disease, then I can offer is limited space.

Dear Dr. Molner: A friend of mine has some books on faith healing. I'm curious. I'm ready to start a long fast. Is there any danger in this sort of treatment? A. H.

Fasts aren't "treatment" for much of anything except being fat. Chances are that in our wide-fed part of the world, a fast of a day or two isn't going to harm anybody unless he has some serious disease or condition. But some people do. Vitamin deficiency, malnutrition, diabetes (in certain cases) and some other conditions might result in trouble.

I don't think that protracted fasts are good, with the possible exception of their production when they are conducted under the supervision of a doctor who knows, understands the risks and can guard against them. And that's my opinion, no matter how many "books on fasting" your friend has. I hope he doesn't overdo it.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can you furnish information about the "rhythm" method of birth control? — Mrs. A. G.

I've explained the physiological aspects a number of times, but for detailed discussion I suggest that you go to your church library or to a religion bookstore.

Are you bothered with ringing in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Molner for his booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures," enclosing with your request 15c in coin and a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope.

Letter to the Editor

Are Reaping Harvest Of Our Own Neglect

Editor,

Ontario Intelligencer

My first reaction to the legislation proposed by Attorney General Fred Cass, stating in effect that people should be kept in jail without a trial etc. . . . was an immediate "Oh no!". Then a question popped into my mind, "Why does Mr. Cass feel such drastic action necessary?," and I have come to the conclusion that we, as citizens are beginning to reap a harvest springing from a seed labelled "line of least resistance".

For a long time we have been told that we could lose our freedom by default — and now we must consider ourselves defaulters. If this legislation is passed it will mean that we have turned a blind eye to small wrongs; that we have given up our good causes because they didn't seem to be getting any where; that we have chosen the easy way out by saying "What can one person do?". In short we have said "all it needs for evil men to succeed is for good men to do nothing". It is so much easier to avoid trouble than to face it and solve it.

I do not question the integrity of the present members of our Provincial Police Department — but human beings are fallible and if such a law were passed it could become a dreadful weapon in the hands of the wrong people.

We could do worse than read two articles in the March issue of Reader's Digest: "The Thin Grey Line" and "Our Child Molesters". Both articles deal with the need for more people of high personal integrity, who would be willing to be morally right rather than socially correct.

Surely this is a most serious moment in the history of Ontario. May God guide us in our thinking and in our actions.

Sincerely,
Edna Cooper,
(Mrs. J. F. Cooper),
R.R. 3, Belleville,

Montreal La Presse—When the burning and trampling of flags starts, the police must see we got ourselves involved in a very dangerous game.

It was easy to foresee. When you burn a flag, you insult your "adversaries" in what they hold most dear. The flag is the symbol of a people's ideas or aspirations.

It is easy for us, French-Canadians, to say that the Red Ensign or the Union Jack represents nothing dear to us. But it so happens that, to a number of English-speaking Canadians, the Union Jack and the Red Ensign possess a sacred character.

One does not play with such deep feelings without the risk of causing strong disturbances and confrontations liable to degenerate into bitter conflicts, or creating a climate of hatred from which no good can emerge.

We do not wish to exaggerate anything, but the events of recent days remain frankly disquieting. . . . And the climate, meanwhile, is deteriorating. Serious damage is becoming more and more difficult.

The fist-fight in Dominion Square ought to make us reflect. The incident was not very tragic, but it is clear that is no reason to minimize it.

One may well wonder what would have happened if the HNN leaders had not called off their planned protest demonstration against the students of Sir George Williams University.

In fact it is high time to try to stop this slide which slope before it is too late. Once more we should like to see an urgent appeal to all concerned for moderation and common sense. These flag outrages, these insults of all kinds that inflame opinion and settle nothing must cease as quickly as possible. . . .

Vincent Prince. (March 13) . . .

Sherbrooke La Tribune—Apparently the province of Ontario is not about to adopt a system of bilingual highway signs. Recently a member of the legislature in Toronto was advised to go live in Quebec and told that he had probably been in Quebec too long. But because he had proposed the installation of bilingual signs along the Champlain Trail, a historic route that goes from Mattawa to Georgian Bay.

Every time we come across the suggestion, Mr. Leo Troy, deserves our congratulations. We cannot, however, intend say to the member who replied to him in the aforementioned terms that representative of the people spoiled a good chance to advance the cause of understanding and the bonne entente and he showed a narrow-mindedness that we thought was disappearing among our neighbors to the west, but of which traces still remain in certain circles.

It is certainly not with such narrow minds that we shall achieve friendly relations based on mutual respect and recognition of each other's rights. It is regrettable to have to state that there are still people among our English-speaking compatriots who want French on no account to be heard outside the Quebec reservation.

Fortunately persons of this kind are getting rarer and their voices are being heard with less effect among the public (March 14) . . . .

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — M. Loeb, fell 1¼ to 29¾, despite the announcement of a proposed three-for-one stock split, in light morning trading on the stock market today.

The wholesale food distributor had traded 1,070 shares by 11 a.m.

Dominion Foundries and Steel gained ¼ to 74¾, Simpsons ¼ to 42 and Zellers declined ¼ to 39¾. All these companies announced proposed stock splits last week.

A General easing among papers kept the industrial index on the minus side. Price Brothers and Consolidated Paper both slipped ¼ and Abitibi ¼.

Banks and oils were stronger. Nova Scotia up ½ and Montreal ¼ among the former, and Texaco and Pacific Petroleum ¼ each among the latter.

Hudson Bay Mining advanced ¼ and Denison was off ¼ in sector base metals. Calgary and Edmonton Corp. rose ¼ and Hudson Bay Oil and Gas ¼ in senior oils.

Trading was light in the speculative section. O'Leary gained one cent to 20 cents on 85,000 shares and El Sol one cent to 8½ cents.

On index, the Exchange index rose .02 to 123.97, industrials slipped .02 to 143.81, golds were ahead .02 to 135.17, base metals .11 to 69.29 and western oils 1.02 to a 1964 high of 85.59. Volume at 11 a.m. was 921,000 shares compared with 1,209,000 at the same time Friday.

Jewish Children Show How Well They Learned Ritual

The youngest of Belleville's Jewish community yesterday caught the festive spirit of the oldest Jewish holiday - -Passover.

For Jewish brethren throughout the world, the great eight-day festival - - marking their historic freedom from bondage begins Friday with a Sader, the family feast.

The feast, as is the entire holiday, is richly adorned with traditional ritual.

And ritual is something that must be taught - - and diligently learned.

Yesterday, the children gathered at the Sons of Jacob synagogue and showed how well they had learned the rites of the feast.

Seated at a "model" Sader and watched by their parents, they progressed step by step through observance of the ancient customs.

All pupils of the synagogue's Hebrew school they were under the constant eye of their tutor, Rabbi Joseph Berglas.

Houston Property Purchased By Stephens Adamson Firm

The Houston Lumber Company property on St. Paul Street has been sold to the Stephens Adamson Manufacturing Company of Canada Ltd. it was learned today.

Sale of the property was made last week by John Deacon, salesman for local Realtor Donald J. Whalen. The purchase price was not announced.

Mr. G. A. Freeman, general manager of Stephens Adamson, said the Houston property was purchased for future expansion of the Belleville plant although its immediate use would be for storage purposes.

"We will need land for expansion some time in the future," Mr. Freeman said. "The Houston property is relatively close to our main plant and is immediately across St. Paul Street from our foundry."

Mr. Freeman said parts of the property and some buildings on the property were now rented and the leases would be continued.

The property purchased by Stephens-Adamson is that recently offered for sale to the city as a site for its proposed city works barn.

Several members of city council, however, claimed the Houston buildings were unsuitable for use as a public works barn and no action was taken on the offer.

The informants said the Soviet delegation had not yet had Moscow's reply to this proposal. But the statement seemed to herald a rejection.

WANT DUES COUNTED

Most countries contend that Congo and Middle East dues must be counted along with regular budget assessments in figuring whether a country is two years behind.

They say that if the 18-country now two years behind on that basis remain so when the assembly meets, they will automatically be refused a vote unless the assembly forgives them.

Those more than two years in arrears now are the Soviet bloc plus Argentina, Bolivia, Nationalist China, the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Paraguay, the United Arab Republic, Uruguay and Yemen. France is due to join the list next Jan. 1.

Three Charged With Breaking And Entering

PERTH, Ont. (CP) — Provincial police said today they have charged three youths from Hopetown, 25 miles northwest here, with breaking and entering and theft last Thursday of $5,034 from the home of car dealer W. J. Barr.

Police said Chris Kehlin, 19, Keith Perry, 18, and James Mordy, 16, have been charged.

Mr. Barr told police his home two miles north of nearby Lanark had been broken into and the cash taken from a wooden chest. Police said $4,071 was recovered.

The youths will appear in court Tuesday.

Skating Club's "Peter Pan" Was Success

The Quinte Figure Skating Club rang down the curtain on another successful ice revue at Memorial Arena Saturday night.

"Peter Pan" with David Beattie in the title role and sister Susan as "Wendy" was given a fine ovation by another good crowd, slightly down from that of a year ago.

Again the excellence and color of the costuming drew popular plaudits. Much credit goes to Mrs. Charles Duesberry and Mrs. Olivia Weese for their originality and design of the various apparels.

The youngsters gave a polished performance and were accorded a fine ovation.

The entire cast of nearly 100 again excelled itself Saturday night.

Dr. W. B. Beattie, president of the club and his associates are to be congratulated on the excellence of another fine annual ice revue.

They expect next year's presentation will be bigger and better than any previous successes.

Children Resent Criticism Of Parent by an In-Law

DEAR DORIS — Last Christmas my husband and I had a quarrel with his brother and his wife. Prior to this I had made a statement that my husband's mother was not happy. My husband agreed with me on this point.

However, his brother and his wife disagree with this and a fight ensued. It was all very foolish as we had all been drinking.

Now my sister-in-law has told my son we're on the outs, thanks to me.

Should I allow my children to visit these people? They have no children of their own. And will not have any because of a teen-age abortion. My son cried because I wouldn't allow him to visit them.

Am I wrong? If I am I'll apologize to them in front of my children, but I feel I didn't dishonor their parents and I believe as adults we are entitled to our opinions. — DISMAYED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DISMAYED — Is it better to be right or to be friends?

It comes natural to a son or daughter to resent the criticism of an in-law for a parent. The truth of the matter has little to do with it.

If we limit ourselves to the friendship of those we find perfect — guess what? We'll be hermits! Boys need uncles and aunts. You need family companionship. Bury the hatchet!

Kiwanis Ladies' Aux. Sponsors Dessert Bridge

St. Thomas' Parish Hall was the scene recently of the annual Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary St. Patrick's dessert bridge. Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. R. Brain, auxiliary president and Mrs. R. G. Freestone, wife of the Kiwanis Club president.

It would be difficult to decide which was the more attractive — the long attractively decorated table with its abundance of delicious sweets or the beautiful new spring hats worn by the many guests present. Attractive hat trees made by Mrs. W. Genik were greatly admired.

Winners of the bridge game were: high score, Mrs. Chas. Lowrie; second, Mrs. Jim Cowan, and consolation, Mrs. J. Briand. The door prize was won by Mrs. F. T. Seibert. Lucky draws were won by Mesdames G. Lee, A. Gorham, L. Whalen, R. Rose and J. Leamon.

The Kiwanis ladies are grateful to St. Thomas' Church for the use of their Parish Hall as the Kiwanis Centre downstairs hall is not available now that the Sheltered Workshop is in operation there.

Convenors of this successful bridge and their assistants were: Kiwanis Kwenes: Cam Mott, Kate Cook, Ella Trepanier, Shirley Allison, Maureen Coles and Reta Coleman. Thanks also extended to all the members who worked so hard for the success of this project.

U.C.W. Meeting

UNIT 1 U.C.W.

FRANKFORD — The regular monthly meeting of Unit 1 U.C.W. was held in Rose Lowery hall on Tuesday, with Mrs. H. Abbott in charge. Mrs. G. G. Montgomery gave the treasurer's report after which the AOTS Men's Club supper and the fashion show in April were discussed. Mrs. William Blair gave a reading on stewardship.

The program opened with quiet music by Mrs. W. Morrow at the piano. Mrs. R. Howe gave the study book on the topic, "The vital core of the church in South India." A reading was given by Mrs. F. Chase and a solo was rendered by Mrs. W. Morrow with Mrs. C. Judd at the piano. Mrs. J. Beach read an appropriate poem.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS — BY PATRICIA LEWIS

ENTERTAINING ON THE PATIO

Starting to think about moving outdoors?

Everyone we know is busily hunting out lounge chairs and tables stored way in the back of the garage since the fall. Patios are getting spruced up, and loose stones and bricks that have heaved a bit from the frost are being leveled into their former position.

Spring definitely is in the air, and the transition from indoor to outdoor entertaining is gradually taking place. It can be quite painless and enjoyable for family, friends and neighbors alike, if you plan for everyone's comfort and convenience.

For instance, if you like to indulge in frequent back-yard cook-outs, give some thought to the placement of your grill. Besides making sure it's near enough to the house so mother doesn't have to walk miles to bring out the cocktables, be considerate of your neighbors. Make sure it's in a position that smoke doesn't carry over on to their patio or blow across the grassy area where they like to lounge in chairs.

If you and your guests like to smoke, make sure plenty of containers are around for dousing butts and ashes. We have a couple of bird baths that we fill with sand for this purpose and place one at either end of the patio, but you might use a metal or wood planter or some other kind of container that looks decorative despite utilitarian function.

SEATING COMFORT

Since many guests, especially those who live in the city, love to sit on the ground when they visit country cousins, it's helpful to have on hand a number of plastic-covered cushions or pads that make seating more comfortable. These, as well as plastic table cloths, come in such a wide variety of patterns and colors that relaxing and dining out-of-doors is much prettier today and not as make-shift as it used to be.

While planning your outdoor living-dining area, it's also helpful to include a collapsible serving table for drinks and snacks that can be folded up and rushed inside in case of a change in the weather. Other provisions that are fairly essential, depending on the type of entertaining you do, is a supply of attractive paper or plastic plates and napkins and a set of cutting utensils that may be stored in the garage or some other place nearby.

Of course, a container for disposing of trash is another "must." Again, you can use your imagination so its true function is camouflaged. We have a huge copper bin that may have been used once in a coffee shop. I made a liner for it out of heavy plastic film and put a big paper bag inside to empty refuse into. On the surface, though, it looks like an interesting antique "find." If you scout your attic, perhaps you'll find some heirlooms that could be moved outdoors to practical purpose, as well.

FEATURING EGGS
For Breakfast,
Lunch or Supper
by Mary Moore

Egg prices are down and supplies are up.

Make the most of them in this last week of Lent and for your Easter weekend meals.

BAKED (SWISS) EGGS:

In a heavy, medium-sized baking dish melt 2 tablespoons butter. Remove from oven and pour in evenly ½ cup cream or top milk. Break fresh eggs into a saucer and skilfully slide 6 of them into the prepared baking dish. Pour over evenly ½ cup table cream or top milk. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and paprika. Stand baking dish in a large one containing ½" boiling water. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 15 to 20 minutes but before whites are set, sprinkle with 2 to 4 tablespoons grated Swiss or Cheddar cheese. Finish baking, remembering that eggs set a little more after removing from oven. Each casserole retains heat. These would be wonderful served with Hot Cross Buns on Good Friday morning.

Beat eggs well. Add milk; beat to mix. Add remaining ingredients, except butter or margarine. Melt butter or margarine over high heat in large heavy frying pan. When bubbly and slightly golden, pour in omelette mixture. Reduce heat to medium. Let cook 2 minutes. Then with lifter, carefully lift omelette to allow uncooked top portion to flow below. Use discretion with this lifting until omelette is set, but not scrambled. Fold over and turn out on hot platter. Serve with hot French bread and a crisp salad for lunch or supper.

EGGS DIVAN:

Deviled Eggs: 6 hard-cooked eggs, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ½ teaspoon grated onion, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, dash of pepper, 1 to 2 tablespoons light cream.

Sauce: 4 tablespoons butter, 1½ tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, ½ cup milk, ½ cup grated old cheese.

Cook broccoli until just tender. Cut ½" slices from one end of each cooked egg; carefully remove yolk. Mash yolks and end slices; add rest of devilled egg ingredients and beat well; then use to fill egg whites. Melt butter, stir in flour, mustard, salt, pepper, then milk. Stir and cook until thickened. Add cheese; stir until smooth. Arrange broccoli in baking dish. Stand eggs, with stuffed ends up, between and on broccoli. Pour cheese sauce over all. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr for 20 minutes or until bubbly.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Sausages with Buckwheat Cakes or Waffles; Maple Syrup; Generous Tossed Salad Greens with French Dressing and Mayonnaise, Tapioca Cream Ambrosia; Coffee.

Speaker Urges Music Teachers Be up to Date

The Belleville Branch of the Registered Music Teachers' Association held a dinner meeting at the Belmont banquet hall on Wednesday, March 16th with a large number of teachers and guests in attendance.

The guest speaker for the event was Mrs. Thurza Williamson of Peterborough. Mrs. Williamson, who is vice-president of the Provincial Registered Music Teachers' Association, was introduced by Rev. Sister Mary Ethlena, St. Peter's Convent, Trenton.

In her opening remarks, Mrs. Williamson expressed appreciation for the opportunity to visit Belleville branch, and to congratulate for the members the principal functions and objectives of the Council.

The active membership in the Province is now 1300, but the speaker stressed again the need for more members and the importance of being a registered music teacher.

REWARDING PROFESSION

"Music teaching is a most rewarding profession but to be efficient and successful in this field, we as teachers must be alert to the changes, and be up to date in our appreciation and teaching of music."

Other highlights of Mrs. Williamson's address were the various projects offered by the Council for the benefit of teachers and students. Workshops are held in many centres, also short summer courses.

The C.N.E. recitals held each year in Toronto for the encouragement of young musicians is arousing greater interest.

The Council's main project of the year is the annual convention being held this year, at the Prince Edward Hotel, in Windsor, March 31st, April 1st, and 2nd.

Miss M. Woodward, vice-president of the local branch, thanked Mrs. Williamson, on behalf of those present, for her most interesting and informative talk.

Ann Landers

Nagging a Sign of Being Dissatisfied With Oneself

DEAR ANN LANDERS — How can I stop nagging my husband? We have been married three months. I know I am killing his love for me because I continually chew him out.

This morning I really hurt him. After he left for work I sat down and cried. I am disgusted with myself because I can't control my sweet mouth. He is a kind and considerate person but I can't resist picking him to pieces.

I watched my mother wreck her marriage by nagging my dear, sweet father to death. I don't want the same thing to happen to me but I don't know how to help myself. Please, Ann, I need your advice. — TORTURED MARIE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MARIE — You have two strong points in your favor:

(1) You recognize you are a nag.

(2) You have a real desire to cut it out.

First — be aware that most of your nagging is rooted in your own irritability and dissatisfaction with yourself. Your husband is the one who catches the heat because he is the handiest target.

What you need is a constructive outlet for your aggressions and frustrations. Expend your energies doing housework, clubwork, (kids are nice, too.) You must have an outlet that will provide you with satisfaction and self-esteem. When you are at peace with yourself you will not nag your husband.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A relative of whom I am very fond is becoming a source of irritation to me. She has developed a knack of steering every discussion to sex.

I am not a prude, Ann, and I enjoy a spicy story as well as the next person, but I don't care for gutter talk or detailed descriptions of the sex life of movie stars and so on.

Recently a group of us were discussing politics. This woman didn't know anything about the issues but she knew all the "inside" dope on the sex lives of the candidates. She dragged what could have been a high-level discussion right down to a disgusting level.

It seems a shame that she is making herself so unpopular with her sex-centered chatter. She did not used to be this way. What's the matter with her? — A.B.C.

DEAR A.B.C. — The poor woman probably feels her youth slipping away and she is frightened at the prospect of growing old. It's a pathetic sight and not an uncommon one.

When she changes the subject to sex, don't just sit there. Change it back to whatever the group was discussing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a girl 16 with a minor skin problem. It isn't bad enough to go to see a doctor about but I need advice. When my skin gets especially bad I leave off all cosmetics and then my skin clears up.

But I hate to go without make-up because I am very pale and light-complexioned and I look like I am dead without it.

Soap seems to irritate my skin so I stop using for several days. After about a week I can't stand it because my face and neck don't feel clean, so I go back to soap and I break out again.

Please help me if you can. — ELSIE.

DEAR ELSIE — You say your skin problem is not "bad enough to see a doctor" but your letter indicates otherwise. I suggest you go at once.

The doctor will suggest cosmetics and soaps which are manufactured for people with a sensitiv skin. These products will serve not only as beauty aids but many have healing qualities as well.

Women's P.C. Association Guests at Parliament Session

On Thursday, March 19th, the Belleville Women's Progressive Conservative Association, and five ladies from Thurlow and Madoc were guests of the Provincial members from East and West Hastings, Mr. Clarke Rollins and Mr. R. Sandercock on a most enjoyable bus trip to Toronto.

The group were met at Queen's Park by the members, also Mrs. Sandercock and Mrs. Norris Whitney.

The ladies were driven to the Town and Country Restaurant where Mr. Rollins and Mr. Sandercock were hosts at a delicious luncheon.

After lunch the bus returned to the Parliament Buildings where the ladies were privileged to attend a session of the legislature. One of the highlights of the afternoon was the most comprehensive report by the Hon. James Auld, Minister of Travel and Publicity, on the importance of the growing tourist trade in Ontario. It was enlightening to learn the tourist business is of greater importance financially than agriculture in our province.

After the session Mrs. Sandercock kindly conducted the ladies on a tour of the Parliament Buildings. The beautiful marble and intricate carving of the architecture were a pleasure to view.

A few hours to shop and dinner downtown before returning to Belleville ended a day long to be remembered.

St. Mary's P.T.A. Hold Card Party

CAMPBELLFORD — A pleasant time was had on Tuesday evening when St. Mary's P.T.A. celebrated St. Patrick's Day by holding a euchre and bridge party.

The successful affair was convened by Mr. Jim Forrestel and much credit is due to the convener of the party for the pleasant evening provided.

The rooms were gaily decorated with shamrocks. Irish hats and pipes and all the traditional Irish fare. Much appreciation is due to the teachers and students for the amount of work put into this.

Prize winners were as follows: bridge — ladies' high, Mrs. G. Speagle; men's high, George Bibby; low, Marguerite Anderson; euchre — ladies' high, Mrs. Dan Calnan; men's high, Mrs. Emmett Kelleher (playing as man); ladies' low, Pearl McComb; men's low, Pat Bendl. The lucky door prize was won by William Dunlay.

At the conclusion of cards a most delicious lunch was served to the guests by the food convenors, Mesdames Jim Forrestel and Ray McKinnon.

Install Officers At Auxiliary No. 8 L.A.P.M.

At their regular meeting, Belleville Auxiliary, No. 8, L.A.P.M., with Mrs. Grace Abby presiding, extended a warm welcome to Mrs. Lorraine Howat of Oshawa, President of the Department Association of Ontario, also guest of honor was the Grand Master, Brother Earl Fox of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, Oshawa.

Other guests were Mrs. Irene Aman, P.P., Dept. Association; Mrs. Victoria McGee, Oshawa; Mrs. Annie Rose, Belleville; Mrs. Anne Colter, well, Oshawa; Mrs. May Jensen, Belleville; Mrs. Jenny Perry, Oshawa, all Department Association officers for 1964.

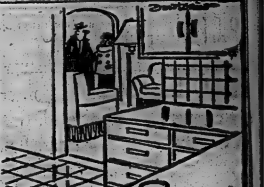
Mrs. Lorraine Howat, president Dept. Assoc., delivered a splendid address to the auxiliary, which was well received. Broth Earl Fox, Grand Master, gave an inspiring talk on Odd Fellowship and his words will be especially remembered by all present. A lovely gift was presented to the Department President, Mrs. Lorraine Howat, by Miss Gena Spry and Mrs. Irene Aman.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge, convened by Mrs. Annie McKee.

The officers for 1966 were installed by the Installing officer, Mrs. Dorothy Harwood, assisted by the adjutant, Mrs. Verna Sumners.

The officers:

Past president, Mrs. Marjory Large; president, Mrs. Grace Abey; vice-president, Miss Gena Spry; secretary, Mrs. Florence Pellitt; treasurer, Mrs. Lillian Summers; chiplain, Mrs. Annie Rose; officer of day, Mrs. Alice Starrat; officer of guard, Mr. Larry Pollitt; color sergt., Miss Carolyn Harwood; color guard, Mrs. Margaret Nelson; RAP, Mrs. May Jensen; LAP, Mrs. Verna Summers; RAVP, Mrs. Annie McKee, LAVP, Mrs. Etta West; RAC, Mrs. Mary Throw; RAC, Mrs. Sadie Sarnes; LAPP, Mrs. Irene Aman; LAPP, Miss Carolyn Harwood; sentinel, Mr. Neil Jensen; musician, Mrs. Dorothy Harwood.



PRESENT GIFTS

Gifts were presented to the installing officer, Mrs. Dorothy Harwood and to Mrs. Marjory Large. Lunch was served in the upper hall by the committees in charge.

At a special meeting the Department Inspection Officer, Miss Bessie Rothwell, PPDA, visited and inspected the Auxiliary. Her instruction to the members was appreciated. A gift was presented to her for which she expressed her thanks and said that her visit to Belleville was always much enjoyed.

While in Belleville Miss Rothwell was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Pollitt.

Emmanuel Baptist Church Holds Tea

On Wednesday afternoon the Emmanuel Baptist Church was the scene of a delightful "Friendship Tea" when the ladies of Victoria Baptist Church and Sidney Baptist Church were special guests. The affair was for the purpose of everyone becoming better acquainted.

Mrs. Blake Kerr was the convener for the event and Mrs. Jerry Low welcomed the ladies at the door to the tea room. A nursery was provided for the children so that the mothers could enjoy their tea and this was in charge of Mrs. J. Pugh and her helpers.

The head tea table was beautifully appointed with lace cloth adorned with golden daffodils and green candles. Guest tables for four were placed throughout the room with a hostess in charge of each.

Those who poured tea during the afternoon were Mrs. Eric Quirk, the pastor's wife, Mrs. Douglas Rowe and Mrs. Paul Whegand.

Owing to the success of this tea it is hoped that this will become an annual event.

Rain Welcomed By Farmers In County

PICTON (Staff) — The widely heralded storm that was supposed to hit Ontario over the weekend did not materialize as far as Prince Edward County was concerned.

True it rained off and on, and there was a small snowfall, all of which will help the farmers obtain more moisture for their lands, but storms, we were spared.

This has been an extremely mild winter, when you use last winter as a yard stick. This is best shown perhaps by the fact that money spent on winter control in the county, and the town has been substantially lower than 1963.

No one has reported seeing any robins yet, but the warmer weather has started some of the people talking about boating, gardening, and other forms of outdoor life — we, hate to throw cold water on their plans, but at a measurement taken earlier this week, there was still about 11 inches of solid ice on the Bay of Quinte.

Last year the ice went out on April 9th and it is anyone's guess as to when it will go this year, but from all the present indications, it should be earlier this year.

One step we know told us the other day that about this time of the year, his wife puts some things on the back porch — the shovel, the rake, and as golf clubs. She then sits with her shotgun, and waits to see which item he will pick up first." One day I am going to pick up the golf clubs first, and see what happens" he said.

Ratepayers Will Decide by Vote On New School

PICTON (Staff) — Over the weekend the Area School Board of Sophisburg Township decided to put a question in the form of a vote to the property owners in regard to a new Central School.

The question the voters will be asked -- "are you in favour of raising $475,000 by a 20-year debenture for the construction and equipping of a new Central School for Sophisburg Township."

The vote will be held on April 6th with votes being taken at Demorestville Hall, North-port Hall, the residence of Mr. Lloyd Bonzes, and the Wooler Hall.

A couple of years ago, the same question was asked, and defeated by a small margin, but with all the talk of Central Schools now, it is figured that a vote will have a much better chance of being decided in the affirmative.

There are about 13 small schools scattered around the Township, which is the largest in Prince Edward County.

BISHOME REFUSED VISA

LONDON (Reuters) — Moise Tshombe, former president of the Congo's Katanga province, has been refused a visa for a private visit to Britain for the second time, a foreign office spokesman said here Monday. He said Tshombe applied for a visa at the British embassy in Madrid March 21 but could not receive a valid passport or travel document.

Cpl. H. Bolster Promoted, Goes To Niagara Falls

PICTON — Corporal Herbert Bolster in charge of the Ontario Provincial Police detachment at Picton, has been promoted to Detective Sergeant, and will leave to take up his new duties at Niagara Falls, on April 1st.

Mr. Bolster has been with the OPP for seventeen years, during which time he has served in Belleville, Napanee and Picton. He has been in Picton for the past seven years.

third place totalled about $182,000. It has not been determined how many consolation and regional prizes will come to this country.

Mr. Rubachuk, the $150,000 winner from Kitchener, celebrated the news By taking Sunday off from his job at a packing house.

"I'm so excited," he said. "But Monday I'll be back on the job."

Usually, the 63-year-old winner said, he purchased one sweepstake ticket, but this year he bought three because it was his last year before retirement.

He said he would stay with his job until normal retirement time, then take his wife on a long holiday trip to his native Czechoslovakia.

WILL BUY CLOTHES

Mr. England, an $8-dollar-a-week postman, said he would use the winnings to buy new clothes for his children.

"They won't have to run around half-naked any more," he said.

But he will keep on delivering because "I'm too dumb to do anything else." He had been given special leave to hear the race broadcast but had to go right back to work.

Mr. Georgiin, 75, a service station operator at Long Beach, five miles west of Brockville, said he had no immediate plans for his winnings.

"I never thought I would win," he said. "I would have been satisfied with the prize for holding a horse."

He is married with no children.

WORKED SUNDAY

Mr. Vukmanich, 42, spent Sunday swinging a pick — size helping his brother build a foundation for a house.

"He was so excited he couldn't sleep so he got his brother up at six this morning and they went digging," said his sister Mary.

A bachelor, he has been buying tickets since 1941.

He works as a waiter in London, Ont., and visits his home in Stoney Creek, near Hamilton on weekends.

Mr. Vukmanich said he plans to invest in a horse and cattle farm with his winnings.

Miss Arkinstall, a pretty 21 year-old brunette, went to work Saturday as usual, but her employer told her to take the day off.

Stunned by the news — "It doesn't seem real" — she said she had no plans other than to travel and hoped to continue working at a department store.

was like a Sunday drive in the country at a Sunday drivers' speed—about 25 miles an hour. GREATNICHE FRIENDLY

The soldiers received friendly greetings from Cypriots gathered in villages ahead.

In Nicosia itself at the start of a patrol a man rushed out of a grocery shop to inform occupants of one Canadian jeep that his station is open 24 hours a day and that Canadian credit cards will be honored.

The occupants were Maj.-Rev. Fernand Forcier of Drummondville, Que., Roman Catholic padre and his driver Pte. Claude Desaulels of Granby, Que.

During a roadside stop in Kyrenia a postcard pedlar tried to sell oranges to the Canadians but the troops were ordered not to buy.

Col. Woodcock explained later that "everything is political." The Canadians wanted to be friendly but could not show more friendliness to Greek than Turkish Cypriots — and vice versa.

The implication was that Canadians would have brought oranges if two pedlars, one Greek and one Turkish, had been selling nares.

TAKES TWO HOURS

The colonel said he spent two hours Saturday negotiating a swill contract. He had to include a cancellation clause so he can shift the contract from the present Turkish holder to a Greek one.

Showing of films began at the Canadian camp Sunday. Most of the Canadians have overcome the seven-hour time difference between Canada and Cyprus—that is they don't wake up at 2 a.m. any more wanting breakfast.

Canadians attended open-air Palm Sunday church services.

Maj. Fernand Forcier, Roman Catholic padre, said in his sermon that he hoped the Canadians' peacekeeping mission with the United Nations force would eventually bring peace to Cyprus.

Maj. Basil Adams, who conducted Protestant services, drew a parallel in his sermon between the Canadians' role and when Jesus entered Jerusalem on Palm Sunday and wept because of his concern for the peace of the city.

TAKES PICTURES

In Kyrenia Sunday Maj.-Gen. Plavi Chaves of Brazil, acting UN commander, was driving by the 27 Canadians parked at the roadside. He stopped, got out of his car and snapped pictures of the soldiers, so far the only members of the UN force.

Today, the Van Doos will operate patrols east to the port of Famagusta and south to the ports of Larnaca and Limassol.

Asked how they liked Cyprus assignment, many of the Van Doos replied delightedly that they're glad they'll miss another summer training at Camp Gagetown, N.B.

Niagara Falls Bank Cleaned Of 100 Safety Deposit Boxes

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Methodical thieves cleaned out more than 100 safety deposit boxes during the weekend after burrowing through three foot-thick walls into a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

A vault containing the bank's own funds was not touched.

An official of the bank at the head office in Toronto said it probably will take three days before an estimate can be made of how much was stolen, but police said a "large amount" was involved.

Police said the thieves may have worked for weeks or months, digging through the wall into the bank from a vacant store adjoining the bank on Bridge Street, one block north of city police headquarters on the fringe of downtown Niagara Falls.

Police said the thieves, working from a washroom in the store, removed bricks individually and carefully stacked them as they worked through the wall. They then used acetylene torches to cut through steel plate three-eighths of an inch thick on the vault.

They opened a hole about two feet square in the vault wall and pushed aside safe-deposit boxes lining the vault at that point to gain entry.

TAKE EVERYTHING

They then opened every safe-deposit box in the vault and cleaned out everything in them.

Bank officials declined to say exactly how many boxes were broken into, but conceded that more than 100 were involved.

The bank spokesman in Toronto said the bank would have great difficulty discovering what clients kept in their boxes. Normally, the boxes are used to hold jewelry, personal valuables, cash, stocks and bonds or other personal papers.

The Toronto spokesman said the bank was considered a fairly small branch.

Police said the adjoining store had last been occupied several months ago by a war pensioners' organization. It had then been rented under the name of a Niagara Falls resident, but police said they have not been able to identify the lessee.

The thieves removed all their instruments and tools after the theft, police said. The only thing left behind was wrapping paper apparently used for food.

BUILDING OLD

The bank building is more than 100 years old, antedating the incorporation of Niagara Falls as a city. It is an imposing stone-fronted structure similar in design to the nearby police headquarters building.

The theft recalled similar break-ins elsewhere in Ontario. An estimated $3,350,000 was stolen from the vaults of Brockville Trust and Savings Company May 3-4, 1953, while nearly $1,000,000 was stolen from vaults and safety-deposit boxes of Premier Trust Company in St. Catharines Feb. 1, 1959.

LIST EXHAUSTED

When he stopped, having apparently exhausted his list, he was asked; "Which Soviet medical services are not free? Is medicine free?"

Yes, he replied, it is free in the hospitals.

Are prescriptions obtained from drug stores free? "No."

Safonov asked:

Are eyeglasses free? "No."

Are false teeth free? "No."

"But," he quickly added, "all these things cost less than their actual value."

He was then asked why Britain, a capitalist country, was able to provide these things as part of its National Health Service while the Soviet Union — the world's first Communist country — did not.

He replied:

"When a person becomes 70 years old he will probably need a walking stick. Must we pay for the stick?"

SAYS STANDARD LOW

"Anyway," he added, "the level of medical care in England is very high — equal to that which we had here in the 19th century—sixty years ago. Most Britons must go to a general practitioner and do not have easy access to specialists, to do all Soviet citizens."

He was then asked: "If what you say about British medical care is true, why did the Bolshoi dancers create such a sensation during their visit to England? British newspapers reported that almost all of them went to London dentists to get their teeth fixed."

Safonov's answer: "This was perhaps due to a change of climate, or perhaps the English food. As you know, climate has a great influence on teeth."

After further discussion, Safonov acknowledged that some Soviet citizens prefer to pay a doctor or dentist in the hope of getting better treatment than at a state clinic.

Fourteen years ago they were trim young bucks full of vim and vigor wearing the hockey colours of the "Belleville Bears," a gaggle of junior hockey players who played the game for the sheer game and the hehvit.

Yesterday they celebrated their 14th reunion with the trimness shorn from their once handsome physiques. The spirit was there but in most cases some hair was missing and there was a noticeable "pottiness" in a lot of the paunches.

They snorted, creaked and wheezed their way over the ice surface at Memorial Arena after their old-time referees, Don Lee, went through the solemn ritual of dropping the puck.

They halfed and puffed up and down the ice dressed in neodescript uniforms of the good old days, while Coach Toots Helwig looked on some skates and marvelled over the changes Time brings.

They handed out the bumps and not a few had sore shins, legs and arms simply because they couldn't get out of the way of a check or flying puck.

Doug Green, general secretary of the Bears, who handled the reunion business, was down from Toronto, while Jim Marsh with a proper regard for George Shrubsole, came all the way from St. Mary's.

Bobby Green and the "Turk," Barclay looked after the net chores, occasionally skating up to helped a fallen gladiator to his feet. Another brother act was Jack and Harry Watchorn. Al Morgan was there with brother Bernie missing. Also absent were Buck Lyle and Porky Yorke.

Doug "The Nobber" Day, who can talk politics, current events, household science, among other topics, was in fine shape but was back at it. Johnny Semark and Bill Holway teamed up with "Moe" Rollins.

Then there was Don "Junior" Barrett, silver-thatched and a trifle overweight, who skated with "Moe" Mober and Bill Gilmour, while Jim Martin and Bruce (Bill Cullen) Bishop looked after one blueline.

After the aging limbs had recovered and the bruises and bumps taken care of the "Bears" retired to the Queen's Hotel for the annual coffee and cakes and a couple of hours of reminiscence.

Members of the executive of years ago, Fred "Musty" Reid and Jack Dorrs, formerly of St. Michael's Academy were there. Missing were Tom Fleury, Bill Dennis and Wally Berry. Tributes were paid to the "Bears" trainer, "Butch" Britton," and ex-players Rance Bush and Bill Gentile.

A remarkable spirit of friendship and camaraderie holds this group of former junior hockey players together. As was noted this was their 14th annual reunion and while the years are taking their toll they still retain the feelings that knitted and held them into a sportsmen's whole years ago.

"They were one of the finest groups of youngsters I was ever associated with, "Toots" Helwig told this reporter. The sentiment was echoed by Fred Reid.

"They played the game for the sheer love of it. They never demanded or received any financial emoiuments and unlike a lot of young fellows of today were exceptionally well behaved on the ice and off it, at home and on the road."

Each year they "chip in" for the costs of the reunion such as ice time and coffee and cakes. A year ago they presented plaques to each other and to members of the executive, press and other officials of the club.

Next year, their "fifteenth," they plan a dinner and might possibly eschew the annual hockey game. After all, each get-together sees them a year older, regrettably, that is.

A fine crew!

HOLD ELECTIONS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dave Fyzat of Vancouver was re-elected president of the Canadian Soccer Football Association Sunday. At the association's two-day annual meeting, nipeg.

Bill Simpson of Toronto was elected first vice-president and Aubrey Sanford of Vancouver second vice-president. Again appointed secretary - treasurer was George Anderson of Winnipeg.

Habs Take Title; Hodge Wins Vezina

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Old men about to hang up their skates, untried youngsters who had just laced them up and a goaltender that they said would never make the grade.

Sounds like a motley crew, but these are the underdog and overlooked performers who carried the Montreal Canadiens to the National Hockey League championship. Even their hockey-wise managing director, Frank Selke Sr., could see them finishing no higher than second place.

Most people said fourth. Some predicted fifth.

But the old men played with pride, the youngsters with determination and that little man in the pets, Charlie Hodge, proved at last that he belonged.

The Canadiens grabbed their eighth pennant in 10 years Sunday night in one of the most dramatic finishes in NHL history. They edged out Chicago by one point, making the Hawks runnersup for the second straight year. Detroit finished fourth.

HABS WIN BIG GAMES

Trailing Chicago by a single point but holding a game in hand, Montreal downed Boston 5-1 Saturday night to climb into first and then held on their position with a 2-1 decision over New York Sunday while the Hawks edged Boston 4-3.

Toronto took third place, whipping Detroit 5-3 and 4-1 in a home-and-home series that left the Wings in fourth place. New York was fifth and Boston last.

The Stanley Cup playoffs open Thursday with Toronto playing in Montreal in series "A" and Detroit at Chicago in series "B".

They are the same pairings that went into last year's postseason duel-for-money when Detroit upset Chicago in their best-of-seven semi-final and Toronto beat Montreal, going on to dispose of Detroit for the cup.

There's no easily-recognizable hero in the Canadiens glory story. No one scored 30 goals and the Habs probably won't place a man on the first all-star team. They won with performances they didn't really expect.

For example:

—Twenty-one goals from Bernie Geoffrion, the old pro who most "experts" thought was unduly prolonging his stay in the league and almost about to quit.

—Seventy - eight points and leadership from Jean Beliveau, another veteran supposedly "stale" and nearing the end.

HODGE WAS A FACTOR

—Consistent, sometimes brilliant, goaltending from Charlie Hodge, who won the Vezina Trophy for the first time after languishing in the minors in the shadow of Jacques Plante.

—Defensive work of a calibre unexpected from rookies Terry Harper and Jacques Laperriere, who started out as unseasoned newcomers and wound up with the respect and confidence of even the Blake.

—Twenty-four goals from Dave Balon, a nondescript left winger who was a hard-picked part of the Worsley-Plante package trade with New York.

—Eighteen goals from Ralph Fergusen, a rookie.

To Billy Reay, it must have been a bitter disappointment. Hired to direct the Hawks into first, he failed by a point.

Beliveau had been the team leader all year and Geoffrion, battling time and two injuries, won an inspiration. It was Elving that these two men were the architects of the final victories.

Beliveau set up one goal and put another in himself as the Canadiens dumped Boston and then got the Worsley goal in New York. Geoffrion banged in his ninth winner this year at 4:48 of the final period, to beat the Rangers.

Billy Hicks, Andre Boudrias, Balon and Fergusen also scored in the Boston rout and Jerry Toppazzini got the lone goal for the losers.

PLANTE AN OBSTACLE

Jacques Plante threatened to ruin Montreal's title chances by overhauling the Leafs Saturday night and then goaded home with 78 points—nine less than Montreal and five more than Wings—with an easy decision in Sunday's "nothing game."

Red Kelly scored on a break away for the winner in the 5-3 win after the Wings had fought back from a 3-1 deficit to tie it. Bob Pulford, Frank Mahovlich, Dave Keon and George Armstrong also scored for Toronto and Marcel Pronovost, Alex Delvecchio and Parker MacDonald tallied for Detroit, two pops "BIG M"

Mahovlich scored twice Sunday night and Bob Baun and Dave Keon got singles as the Wings used rookie goalie Pat Rupp, 21, of the U.S. Olympic hockey team.

Floyd Smith got the Wings lone goal.

Hodge picked up $1,000 for the Vezina Trophy win, edging Hall 187 to 169, and wrote an amazing chapter into NHL history. Called up to replace injured Gump Worsley in the ninth game of the season, his remarkable work kept him on the team long after Worsley had recovered.

Chicago's Stan Mikita won the individual scoring championship and $1,000 with 89 points—two more than runnerup Bobby Hull who collects $500. Beliveau was third with 78, Andy Bathgate fourth with 77 and Howe fifth at 76.

Howe earned $500 as the most proficient scorer during the second half, compiling 44 points in 35 games and Hull again was second with 42 for $250.

Each member of the Canadiens gets $1,500 for finishing first with 85 points and the Hawks—tied on the one point for the second straight year and still looking for their first pennant get $750 a man. The Leafs collect $500 each and the Wings pick up $250 each.

Attendance of the six teams all saw profits climb as the NHL attendance hit a record 2,650,000, by unofficial count. That's 120,000 more than last year.

STAN MIKITA

The Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago didn't win the NHL title but Stan Mikita proved his point: He's worth more to the Black Hawks than they originally thought.

The determined Chicago centre balked at the Hawks contract offer last fall and was a holdout throughout training camp. Only on the day of the All-star game did Chicago raise the ante to a point Mikita agreed to terms.

Then he went to work, leading the individual scoring race almost from the start and winning the Art Ross Trophy Sunday night with a comfortable two-point cushion over runnerup Bobby Hull. Mikita also takes top prize of $1,000 and Hull wins $500.

Mikita finished with 89 points on 39 goals and 50 assists and Hull had 87 on 43 goals—the league high—and 44 assists. Third place, but no bonus, went to Montreal's Jean Beliveau with 78 points, going out Andy Bathgate of Toronto by one point.

Gordie Howe finished fifth with 72 points and picked up $500 as the highest scoring player in the second half of the schedule with 44 points in 35 games. Hull—again was runnerup, earning $250 with a 42-point effort.

Kenny Wharram of the Hawks was sixth with 71 points—39 of them on goals—and Murray Oliver was seventh with 68 points.

It was Mikita's best performance, outshining his previous high by 11 points, and his first scoring title.

The leaders:

	G	A	Pts
Mikita, Chicago	39	50	89
Hull, Chicago	43	44	87
Beliveau, Montreal	28	50	78
Bathgate, Toronto	19	58	77
Howe, Detroit	26	47	73
Wharram, Chicago	39	32	71
Oliver, Boston	24	44	68

Manitoba Mixed Spiel Champions

By ALLAN BAILEY

TORONTO (CP) — There have been only two major boonspiels in Toronto this year and both have been won by Winnipeg rinks. Norm Houck won the Tournament of Champions last January and Saturday the Eaglle Boonspiel rink captured the first national mixed champion ship.

Saturday guided his rink of Mrs. Ina Light, third, Gary De Blonde, second, and Mrs. Bea Mae Gaudet, lead, to nine victories and one setback to win the title and the O'Keefe Cup.

The B.C. Thistle Curling rink skipped by Gil LeMoel was second with seven wins and three defeats.

The Bill Tracy squad from RCAF Station Bagotville, Que., was dumped 12-8 by the Wilf Biron rink from Sudbury in the final round to give Northern Ontario a third-place tie with Quebec, each having six wins and four losses.

Boundy scored a 9-3 triumph over the Alberta rink skipped by Glen Gray of Edmonton in the final - draw clash. The Dean Miller Weyburn, Sask., foursome had a bye to the final round and ended in a deadlock with the Mac White rink from Belleville, each with five victories and five setbacks.

THE FOR SEVENTH

Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and Alberta finished the tournament with four triumphs and six losses each.

Bill Allen led his St. John's quartet to an 11-7 victory over Ken Higgs MacGregor, Manitoba town entry in their final-round battle, scoring three triple-ender.

The other final-round game saw the Karl Stronach rink from Kingston, N.S., trounce Irving Mitton of Moncton, N.B., 14-5.

Nova Scotia finished with two wins and eight defeats, while the New Brunswick crew managed three victories and seven losses.

Move To Strip Clay Of World Title

'Detriment To Boxing'

By TED MEIER

NEW YORK (AP)—The move of the World Boxing Association to strip Cassius Clay of his heavyweight title may lead to a "big, big mess."

Ed Lasman, president of the WBA, said in Miami, Fla., Sunday that Clay's personal actions have made him a "detriment to the boxing world" and that he was polling the WBA's 39 members' executive committee to declare the title vacant.

Lasman said that only 11 votes were needed and that he expected to announce a "favorable vote" Friday.

The champ himself—or Muhammad Ali as he prefers to be called—countered with the assertion that "they're going to cause a big, big mess all around the world."

Lasman's action, virtually on the eve of Tuesday's opening of a Senate boxing investigation in Washington, surprised pugilistic circles almost as much as Clay did in dethroning champion Sonny Liston in their title bout Feb. 25 at Miami Beach. Liston failed to come out for the seventh round, claiming an injured shoulder.

SAYS HE'S 'SAVIOUR'

Clay, who has acknowledged that he is a member of the Black Muslims, a Negro supremacy group, claims he is "the saviour of boxing" and not a "poor example for the youth of the world" as Lasman contends.

"I don't drink, I don't smoke," he said at his New York hotel. "I've never been caught stealing. I don't run around with women and I don't carry pistols.

"I've never been in any kind of trouble. I'm an Olympic gold medal winner for this country and I won the heavyweight title fair and clean.

"Lasman must be thinking about Sonny Liston. I wonder if Lassman has thought about the reaction over the world.

"I'd like to take a nationwide poll to see what people think about me. Lassman would find out then."

Should the WBA declare the heavyweight title vacant, it would be unprecedented. In 1929 the WBA, then known as the National Boxing Association, lifted Sugar Ray Robinson's middleweight title, but that was because Robinson did not defend within a stated time.

IT'S SOMETHING NEW

"Lassman is the business 40 years and never have heard of anything like this. How can you have a man's title when he's not in the ring? In what way could he have hurt the youth of the world?"

Joseph Triner, chairman of the Illinois boxing commission, said "I'm a firm believer in boxing titles being won in the ring and not being taken away in some office".

Frank B. Wildman, Jr., chairman of the Pennsylvania state athletic commission, said he thought Lassman's action was "premature" adding, "I would not vote until we had more evidence."

In London, Teddy Waltham, secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, termed the WBA action "arbitrary" and said it "could lead to the idiotic position of having two-heavyweight champions, each recognized by different organizations."

The Senate hearing in Washington will look into the contract Clay signed with International Promotions Inc., before the Feb. 25 bout.

Clay was paid $30,000 for giving Inter-Continental, in which Liston is reported to hold 47½ per cent, exclusive rights to promote his first title defence in the event he beat Liston.

CAN'T DO IT

Emilio Bruneau of New Orleans, a member of the WBA executive committee, declared:

"I don't believe the WBA can strip a man of his title per se. But the WBA is well within its rights to refuse recognition of Clay as heavyweight champion. And this could bring the result desired if all WBA members held the line."

Bruneau explained that some states, not satisfied with the WBA, might be tempted to a lucrative tax cut from a heavyweight title bout and withdraw from the association. It has been estimated that a return Clay-Liston bout with theatre television, might gross as high as $30,000,000.

Should Clay be dethroned Bruneau, chairman of the WBA world championship committee, said the "No. 1 ranked fighter would meet the fourth ranked boxer and the No. 2 man would meet the No. 3 contender. The winners of these two fights would then meet for the championship."

Caron's 77 Sets New Pro Record

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Omaha Knights, runaway leaders of the Central Professional Hockey League, closed out the season gracefully by losing their last game to the underprivileged Cincinnati Wings. Al Caron, the league's top scorer, was less generous.

While the Knights dropped a 5-4 decision to the Wings, who missed the playoffs by a mere six points, Caron methodically fired a goal in each of St. Louis Braves' weekend outings to run his total to 77, the highest ever compiled by a professional in a single season.

Despite Caron's efforts, the fourth-place Braves had to settle for a split with Minneapolis Bruins, winning 4-3 and losing 6-2. Wings, possibly still dazed by their triumph at Omaha, closed their schedule by losing 9-5 to St. Paul Rangers. The victory enabled St. Paul to beat out Minneapolis for second place by a single point.

Bobcats Suspend Operations

Softball Situation Gloomy

The Belleville and District Softball League, last fits oldest sport, yesterday got a powerful to be moving that much closer to becoming only a fond memory.

A strong league executive, which it appears is bumping the head against a stone wall, threw definite entries and a hope that floodlights can be secured for all their games at the present time.

The Bobcats are the latest casualty. Sponsor Robert Temple announced at yesterday's meeting: "I am sorry to say that the Bobcats will have to suspend operations for this season at least. I will continue to do anything I can for softball but due to a lack of time we cannot operate this season."

He added that "perhaps another year will make a difference and that he "definitely wanted the Bobcats counted in on any possible loop range finder." There has been a fine fast softball team in Bellevitle for the past 11 years according to Mr. Temple.

The lack of an outside entry held up matters again yesterday. For the second meeting in as many weeks, no representatives was present from last year's Trenton RCAF Flyer team. Neither Cobourg nor Picton contacts answered written notification of either of the meetings.

Richard Ellis yesterday told President Harold Bawden that "we are entering a junior team in the Belleville and District League and I will give you the entire fee right now if you like. I don't know or care who will be sponsoring the team but we are entering a team in order to avoid the conflict with our baseball team such as we had last year."

Ellis is connected with the Jones Masonic baseball team, a juvenile club last season, and it is expected that the same players would be on the proposed softball team. Ellis went on to say, "We will be able to have both teams and can change our baseball dates so that the two will be able to play both sports. It will be a team of boys ranging in age from 18 to 25 years. I am willing to work with anyone who wants to sponsor or help out."

Elmer Woods, who voiced intentions of entering a junior team at last week's meeting, felt that he too would be willing to work with anyone "as long as the boys have a team with which to play, or I will just drop right out of it and let Dick (Ellis) handle it on his own."

Ellis and Woods said they would get together to discuss the matter that they were both definitely be a junior entry.

Those in attendance felt that there would be only answer to the problem and made plans to step up their campaign to secure them. The Alemite Field and Zwick's Island were two possible sports discussed.

Harry Rollins will head a committee which hopes to see floodlights installed at Memorial Alderman Joss within the next couple of days. The general feeling was that at least two outside entries would enter the league if night games were available.

Since the league will not be affiliated with the OASA in time for the April 4 convention in Owen Sound, the Belleville Minor Softball Association will accept all those that come to vote there. A number of the B. and D. executives will be there to attend the meeting as well.

Another league meeting has been called for Sunday, April 12, at two o'clock at Club Canara.

It was decided that unless outside entries attend that meeting they would be considered out of league plans for this season. There was some talk of either forming a city senior league of possibly interlocking or combining with the present commercial league of the B. and D. loop is forced to fold.

Boxing Probe Starts Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators announced Saturday they will start hearings Tuesday on pro boxing deals and reports of underworld influence in big time boxing.

Chairman Philip A. Hart (D. Mich.) announced his Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee will investigate the $50,000 promotional pact involving heavyweight champion Cassius Clay and Sonny Liston, whom Clay dethroned by a controversial technical knockout Feb. 25.

In a statement Hart described the inquiry as an effort primarily to determine whether there is a need for legislation to place boxing under a federal commissioner with broad powers to license officials and drive out hoodlums.

Box Office Sets New High

NHL Stars Will Share Record $58,000

By MARVEN MOSS

MONTREAL (CP) — The shares in a bonus pot carrying a whopping $58,000 were settled with the Sunday night wrapup of the National Hockey League's 210-game schedule.

But the immediate money market less of a dent than last season in the take of the promoters in the league's six member cities.

Official attendance figures for the season were not available but immediately after the announcements on the gate made from a game-to-game at each rink showed it was a record season at the box office.

The league drew more than 2,850,000 fans over-all compared with the previous season's record-setting total of some 2,720,000, described as 92 per cent of the rated seating capacity at the six rinks.

Breaking down the bonus money allocation a bit, there is $34,000 for the members of the four top teams and another $4,000 for individual proficiency.

Stan Mikita's 50 points gave the bellicose Chicago centre the Art Ross Trophy and $1,000 as the No. 1 point-collector with a two - point cushion over his teammate Bobby Hull.

No one was even close to the pair in the aggregate but the old campaigner, Detroit's Gordie Howe, was the second-ball leader with a 44-point performance and $500 as such.

HULL SCORED 43

Hull, the most prolific man on the attack with 43 goals, collects $500 for that could compile kits and another $250 as the No. 2 second-ball man behind Howe. He pocketed 47 points in the final 35 games.

Bobby Hodge, the economy-size goalie who beat Gump Worsley out of a job with Montreal Canadiens, meanwhile won the Vezina Trophy and $1,000 it carries, beating out Chicago's Glenn Hall in their final games.

That award goes to the goalie who performs most regularly for the club with the best defensive record. The Canadiens yielded 167 to 169 for Chicago, Hodge making up an 18-goal pull in the second half of the schedule with some superb work.

As the second - half leader Hodge picks up an additional $250 while $500 goes to Hall as the over-all runnerup.

The Canadiens, whom even managing director Frank Selke Sr., rated no better than second in the pre-season prognostication, meanwhile share in 18 units of $1,500 as the first-place club, winners of the Prince of Wales Trophy.

For Chicago's second-place Black Hawks, stifled in their bid for the title as Chicago enjoyed its best season ever since joining the NHL in 1926, the unit figure is $750.

This drops to $500 for Toronto's third-place Maple Leafs and $250 for the fourth-place Detroit Red Wings.

CAN WIN MORE

The post-season Stanley Cup scramble features $135,000 more in bonus money. The best-of seven semi-final sets, pitting the Canadiens and Leafs on one front and the Hawks and Wings on another, get under way Thursday night in Montreal and Sunday night in Chicago before the action swings to the other rinks involved for a pair of games.

Home ice emerged as a contributing factor this season. In the final analysis, that's how the Canadiens won. They were the only club that could compile as much as a .500-record on the road, winning 14, losing the same number and tying seven.

By contrast, the league's aggregate mark for teams away from home was 84 wins. They lost 121 games and tied 35. For comparative purposes, it wasn't nearly so tough to pick up points in the rinks of the opposition the previous season. The road clubs won 71 and tied 47 then.

Americans Move Up To Second

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was not too long ago that Rochester Americans were considered out of the running as first-place material in the Western Division of the American Hockey League. But things have changed.

Over the weekend they parlayed a 5-3 victory over Cleveland Barons and a 7-1 triumph over the slumping Quebec Aces into sole possession of second place—three points back of the idle Pittsburgh Hornets.

The wins were seventh and eighth against one tie and only one defeat in 10 starts for the Americans, who hold a slim one-point lead over Cleveland, which held third place Saturday, to a 6-6 overtime tie Sunday.

Hershey Bears closed within six points of the league-leading Aces in the Eastern Division. The Bears played to a 6-6 overtime tie with Providence Reds and then shaded Baltimore Clippers 3-2, also in overtime, Sunday.

The Aces lost both their games as they dropped a decision Saturday by Baltimore. Other scheduled games saw Buffalo Bisons defeat Springfield 4-2 and Providence shut out the Bisons 3-0.

AMUSED AUDIENCES

At age 11, comedian Phil Silvers appeared in a Brooklyn movie house to amuse audiences by singing whenever the project broke down.

Mae West Shows up in Bit Part Talking to Horse

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Television hath wrought some remarkable situations in its short existence, but none quite as unlikely as Sunday night's.

Miss Mae West, an American institution as enduring, it appears, as Mount Whitney, turned up playing what amounted to a bit part in a comedy series starring Mr. Ed, CBS' talking horse.

It is probable that most of Mr. Ed's fans did not find blonde, buxom and white-fox-swathed Miss West very funny. Most of his admirers are much too young. And it is extremely doubtful that any adult who bowls at jokes tailored to a horse who talks, makes telephone calls and watches TV would recognize a good thing in Miss West's special, old-fashioned brand of comedy.

In any event, she wasn't really given a chance to demonstrate the talents that made her a national rage in the 1930s.

Time has not altered the lady's style or appearance. But she was not even permitted to repeat the lines she made famous.

Van Johnson, after all those heroic military roles seen on the late shows, proved to be a surprisingly attractive singer with clever material on Ed Sullivan's CBS hour Sunday.

Remembering Tonight — The Outer Limits, ABC, 7:30-8:30 EST, a story in the Twilight Zone mood of people trapped by a place where time stands still.

Movie Personalities Still Continue Their Smoking

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — How gives "it" with the American smoker 15 weeks after the U.S. surgeon general's report?

If you judged from a cross section of Hollywood smokers, one much change has been wrought. To a number of movie personalities I put the question: How are you coming along with your anti-smoking resolutions, if any?

Their replies:

David Janssen: "I quit smoking once and gained 25 pounds. I don't want to risk that again. Now if the surgeon general had said smoking causes lung cancer and that's that, I might quit. But the report left a lot of loopholes."

Anne Baxter: "I find I'm smoking more than ever."

Donald O'Connor: "I was going to quit, but then I had a television show to do. I was afraid if I gave up smoking I might flunk me off my timing. I'll quit next Tuesday."

Peter Lorre: "No, I haven't stopped at all. I figure you get as much damage driving behind a bus as you do from smoking."

Anne Baxter: "I haven't quit, and I know I've got to. I realize I don't smoke a cigarette; it smokes me. But so far I haven't figured out a way to stop."

Rock Hudson: "I can't quit smoking when I'm working. Too nervous. But I have cut down to four or five a day when I'm not working, and I try not to inhale. Quit entirely? I don't know. I tried it for a month one time and gained 20 pounds."

James Garner: "Yes, I quit smoking for a month, and I was mean and miserable. My wife made me quit and she suffered for it. I was so miserable that after a week I asked her if I couldn't start smoking again. Now I'm smoking more than ever."

Alfred Hitchcock: "My smoking habits haven't changed in years. I have one cigar after lunch and one after dinner — not as a smoke, but as part of the meal. Cigarettes? Never smoke them. I'll show you why."

He borrowed a cigarette and put it between his lips. He was right. Somehow it didn't look right.

Colts' Rookie Pain In Neck For Mets

By THE ASSOCIATE DPRESS

New York Mets may file child - labor charges against Houston Colts if young John Pacienck continues harassing them.

If that doesn't work, the Mets —whose own youngsters have been unfair to them for two years—probably would contribute to Pacienck's unemployment compensation if the Colts promise to fire him.

The 18-year-old rookie outfielder from Detroit belted a bases-loaded triple Sunday in the first inning, igniting the Colts to a 5-0 victory.

Casey Stengel's pitchers were unable to get him out the first time they saw him. That was last year in the last game of the season.

Pacienck, a six-foot-two 200-pounder socked three singles and was walked twice in five times at bat. He scored four runs and knocked in three as the Colts won 13-4. That performance gave him a rare 1,000 batting average for 1963.

But despite his proficiency against New York, Pacienck if not given much of a chance to stay with Houston. He wasn't even mentioned in one of the Colts' appraisals of its rookies.

HALT GIANTS

Elsewhere in exhibition action Sunday, Los Angeles Angels and Chicago Cubs halted San Francisco's winning ways. The Giants divided their squad and lost an A game to the Angels 3-0 and a B game to the Cubs 14-9.

St. Louis Cardinals won their eighth game in nine starts, beating Chicago White Sox 7-6 on two unearned runs in the ninth inning. Detroit's Hank Aguirre and Dick Egg held New York Yankees to three hits as the Tigers won 6-0.

Cincinnati Reds whipped Kansas City Athletics behind Mart Keough's third home run in as many games and the three-hit pitching of Joey Jay and John Tsitouris. Washington Senators received five innings of hitless pitching from Claude Osteen in a 3-1 triumph against Minnesota Twins.

Cleveland Indians scored two unearned runs on Roman Mejias' three-base error and edged Boston Red Sox 2-1. Jose Mota's inside - the - park home run climaxed a three-run eighth-inning rally which gave Pittsburgh Pirates a 7-4 victory over Philadelphia Phillies.

Los Angeles Dodgers split a pair of games, nipping Baltimore Orioles 4-3 with their A team and dropping a 12-3 decision to Milwaukee with their B squad.

TAYLOR HELPS

Milwaukee outlasted the Twins' varsity 9-8 in another 12-inning game while the Minnesota second-stringers took a 17-1 shellacking from Houston.

The Giants also split two Saturday fixtures, dumping the A squad 10-1 while the B team lost to the Cubs 15-7.

The Yankees routed World Series menesis Sandy Koufax, scoring all their runs off him in a 5-2 victory over the Dodgers. Jim Bunning and Ryrne Duren combined for a two-hitter as the Phillies downed Washington 4-0.

The Mets suddenly developed muscle, whomping the White Sox 8-1 and Pittsburgh shaded Cincinnati 6-5 in 14 innings. The Red Sox overwhelmed Cleveland 10-1.

AT THE PARK — Five - foot - nine brunette Paula Prentiss was chosen by producer-director Howard Hawks to play opposite tough guy Rock Hudson in "Man's Favorite Sport?" which also includes the fact that she looks pigeon enough in shortcuts and sun skin diving suits to make the new comedy's title indeed a ridiculous event of the year. "Man's Favorite Sport?" opens Wednesday at the Park Theatre for its first Belleville showing. Special matinee Friday at 2.15 p.m.

Baby Habs Lead Hawks 1-0

Marlboros Sweep Series

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series could prove to be too strong for their own good.

A 5-3 victory over Niagara Falls Flyers Sunday in their best-of-seven semi-final enabled the powerful Marlboros to sweep the series in four outings.

The rapid whitewash of the Flyers, however, means a possible two - week layoff before they can begin the provincial finals with the winner of the Montreal Canadiens-St. Catharines Black Hawk semi-final.

"The layoff is a major problem," said Marlboros' coach Jim Gregory last week. "I'm afraid two weeks off—it could be more—might be disastrous. We could lose our edge and never regain it. "The solution is to play a game or two in the meantime if we can find an opponent."

Meanwhile, the Canadiens defeated the Hawks 4-3 Sunday to take a 1-0 lead in their best-of-seven series. Saturday the Hawks defeated Oshawa Generals 7-5 to take their quarter-final set 4-2.

GET TWO EACH

Ron Ellis and Grant Moore sparked the Marlboros with two goals each. Mike Walton and Peter Stamkowski added the others. Dave Armstrong fired a pair for the losers with star centre Ron Schock getting one.

Christian Bordeleau counted two goals to highlight Montreal's attack. Bob Charlebois and Jean - Claude Hebert chipped in one apiece. Defenseman Doug Jarrett had a goal and an assist for St. Catharines with a pair from Fred Stanfield adding the other.

Canadiens' attack seemed to suffer from the absence of Andre Boudrias, playing with the parent Canadiens, and Rene Drolet, out with a shoulder injury. St. Catharines' high-scoring Dennis Hull was out with a bruised leg.

Brian McDonald was the big gun for the Hawks against the Generals Saturday, firing three goals. Chuck Kelly counted a pair with Ken Hodge and Ken Laidlaw adding one each.

Kingston Wins East. B. Title

Kingston Frontenacs captured their second consecutive OHA Eastern Junior "B" group championship on Saturday night and prepared for another shot at the provincial title.

Frontenacs nipped Peterborough Monsens 7-6 in overtime in Kingston Saturday. It was their second overtime win in a row and gave them the series four games to one.

Kingston will meet Burlington in the first round of the playdowns. Burlington recently won the Niagara district crown. Kingston lost in the Ontario finals last year to a powerful St. Mary's team.

Nancy McCredie To Undergo Knee Surgery

TORONTO (CP) — Nancy McCredie, 19, of Brampton, holder of the world indoor women's shot put record, will undergo surgery to remove cartilage from her left knee Tuesday.

Lloyd Percival, Miss McCredie's coach at the Don Mills Track Club, says the field star is optimistic about the outcome and is asking the doctor what the record is for the quickest recovery after an operation of this type.

Percival said he didn't know if the operation would be detrimental to her future performances, but hoped she would be in shape for the Canadian Olympic trials at St. Lambert, Que., Aug. 7-8.

Miss McCredie is Canada's main hope for a medal in field events at the 1964 Olympic Games in Tokyo next October.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For March 24

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Excellent for writing, pursuing creative efforts. Day to "loosen up." Time to do what comes naturally — rid yourself of unnecessary pressures. Self-expression most important.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): One who promises much may finally "come through." Be ready for changes, surprises, opportunities for travel. Communication later in day could tell story. Check details early. Keep mind alert!

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Obtain hint from Taurus message. Get house in order, affairs catalogued. Good for future planning. Be ready to pounce on opportunity. Be responsive to suggestions, ideas.

Cancer (June 22 to July 23): Cycle remains high. But time has come for positive decision. Avoid economizing at expense of family member's happiness. Ponder this well; it could represent key to happiness.

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 21): Lunar position corresponds to review of past. Key is also to look to future. Inclination is to be impatient, anxious. Shake off this tendency! Seek ways of perfecting talents.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Cycle at peak. Judgment now accurate. Especially applies to hunches, intuitive feelings. Take initiative. Start projects. Make new contacts. Say yes to challenge, opportunity.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23): Make plans on grand scale. Leave details to others. Concern yourself with overall project. Perceive "forest" rather than endless "trees." Be considerate of one less fortunate.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Former antagonist could become friend. Day to give and earn respect. Strike out in new directions. Push forward toward new subjects. Keep mind open. Satisfy curiosity.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Money and career in spotlight. Give attention to ways, means of publicizing abilities. Don't be satisfied with spotty methods. Be thorough. Applies to personal affairs, too.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Be direct, efficient. Being diplomatic, tactful could actually create needless delays. Gain through written word indicated, including special features in your paper.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Iron out details. Check resources, promises. Be sure you get what you pay for — don't fall for flattery. Be specific, precise. Arrive at understanding with partner.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Accept opportunity to express ideas. Fine for co-operating in community projects. Many will want to hear your views. Come out of emotional shell. Assert yourself. Stress confidence.

If today is your birthday . . . you are sensitive, have great appreciation for musical talent — next month finds you at crossroads which demands definite action.

General Tendencies: Cycle high for Virgo, Scorpio. Special word to Pisces: Be considerate of one who serves you.

She Started Revising the Bible When Only a Tiny Three-Year Tot

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—There is a story in Madge Macbeth's family that she started to revise the Bible when she was three—dictating revisions to her grandmother.

The Ottawa novelist, now 81 and thinking of writing her 21st book, says:

"There wasn't enough romance in the Old Testament and I was determined to add some.

"I changed the stories of my biblical heroes—David, Samson and Daniel — and arranged happy marriages for them with Ruth, Naomi and Snow White."

Although she never finished rewriting the Bible, Madge Macbeth has crowded the years between three and 81 with enough romantic adventures of her own to fill 20 books.

Born in Philadelphia in 1883, the daughter of southerners Henry and Bessie Lyons, she was sent to Hellmuth Ladies' College in London, Ont., when she was 12. At 15, she married Charles Macbeth of London. He died of tuberculosis and she was left to support their two young sons, Charles Jr. and Douglas.

"By then," said Mrs. Macbeth, "I had adopted Canada and loved this country as though it were my own."

Still in her 20s, she settled in Ottawa, which was to become her home throughout her years as a writer. She began by writing magazine articles and newspaper stories, but soon realized that she lacked experience and knowledge.

"I left my two sons with my mother and sailed alone for France, with what I think was the smallest letter of credit ever issued."

So began a series of adventures which led her, in the 1920s and 1930s, from Egypt to Rumador, from the Alps to the Andes, from the Yukon to Madrid.

Out of her experiences came her novels, biographies, two autobiographies, travel books and hundreds of magazine and newspaper articles.

"I've written everything but hymns."

In 1936, she received the Order of St. Sava from King Peter of Yugoslavia for her literary achievements.

SIGHT IMPAIRED

She stayed in Ottawa long enough to become, in 1939, the first woman president of the Canadian Authors Association, was once president of the Ottawa Women's Press Club, and was one of the founders and president of the Ottawa Drama League.

Last fall, after a two-year struggle with cataracts which left her sight badly impaired, the frail but indomitable Mrs. Macbeth published her 20th book, Volcano, a romantic novel set in the Ecuadoran Andes.

Interviewed in the souvenir-filled living room of her sixth-room Ottawa apartment, she had some crisp opinions about the current literary scene and about writing as a profession.

On censorship:

"Dragging up poor Fanny Hill after 200 years and censoring her—that's the most ridiculous thing we've ever done.

"I had an experience with censorship once myself—a novel of mine called Shackles, about a woman's fight for independence, was burned by some Ottawa women in 1927. I believe it was because I mentioned the word mistress."

"Out of 10 people there will always be eight who will disagree about what should be censored."

SEX TOO CLINICAL

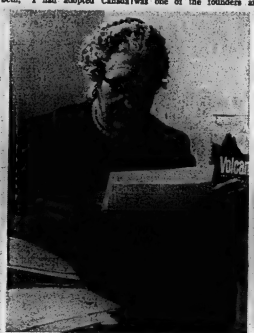
On the approach to sex in current novels:

"Writers today are inclined to be too clinical. In my day, we were more subtle."

Here she paused to explain that she really couldn't pass judgment on current novelists, as her poor eyesight permits her to read only the books she reviews for an Ottawa newspaper: "And they are mostly biographies."

On her favorite authors:

"I liked the poetic prose of Joseph Conrad—he was my inspiration. And of course Somerset Maugham was tops as a short story writer."



On the mechanics of writing:

"I'm inspired every morning at half-past nine. Nobody should have to wait for inspiration to come. Writing is a habit, and once you get it, something inside helps you to go on."

Mrs. Macbeth still works regularly in a paper - cluttered workshop off her bedroom.

"When I'm in the middle of a book, I often have to get up in the middle of the night to add something, or write down an idea — my mind never sleeps then.

"Writing a book is like having a baby."

INSPIRATION AT 9:30 A.M. — Madge Macbeth, 81, published her 20th book last fall — a romantic novel called Volcano. Despite failing sight, she continues writing in a work-cluttered room in her Ottawa apartment house. She advises young writers to form the habit of writing, rather than wait for inspiration to come: "I'm inspired every morning at 9:30 a.m." (CP Photo)

Now-how are the high-priced cars going to explain...

THIS!

Biscayne 4-Door Sedan

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

THE LOW-PRICED CHEVROLET BISCAYNE

Beating the high-priced cars at their own game is becoming a Chevrolet tradition! Luxury is in evidence even in the lowest-priced Biscayne models. This year, Biscayne's wide and roomy interiors sport a rich new feel of luxury from thicker foam-cushioned seats front and rear to deep-twist color-keyed carpeting. And on the outside, those clean, tasteful lines prove that the Chevrolet Biscayne looks as good on the road as any high-priced car!

But Biscayne's appeal lies in more than looks and luxury. For instance, easy-care features like Magic-Mirror finish, flush-and-dry rocker panels, and extended-life exhaust system back up Biscayne's traditionally low maintenance cost and high resale value.

Biscayne's ride is strictly first-class, too. It's the famous Chevrolet Jet-smooth kind! And if you want ample power on a pittance of regular gas, try Chevrolet's standard 140-hp Six. Teamed with a quiet, 3-Speed Synchro-Mesh standard transmission, it's a combination that's tough to beat for top value. Whether you choose a Biscayne, Bel Air or one of the exciting Impalas or Impala Super Sports, you'll find that Chevrolet loves to please particular budgets without skimping. So does your Chevrolet dealer. Try him . . . and try a Chevrolet!

Bullets Shatter Jacksonville's Racial Truce

Negro Woman Killed, Three Men Wounded

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) A sniper's bullet killed a Negro woman and three men were wounded by gunfire Monday, bringing tragedy into continued racial violence in and around Jacksonville after the end of a 3½-year truce.

A gun fired from a passing car brought death to Mrs. Johnnie Mae Chappell, 36, mother of several children. She was shot in the stomach as she walked along U.S. 1 northwest of the city limits.

Two white men and one Negro man were shot and wounded but not seriously.

Near the spot where Mrs. Chappel was killed, a white man was shot in the head. The man, Carlos Gomales, 20, of Miami, was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital.

Police said another white man was tied to a tree and slashed with razor blades.

A Negro man fired upon three sailors when they drew up to a traffic light. A white sailor also fired from another car injured a white sailor and one of his two Negro companions.

The shootings and at least 10 fire bombings came under cover of darkness. Most attacked at young Negroes went before City Judge John Santova and, in most cases, handed out $25 fines and seven-day terms at the city prison farm.

Charges were unlawful assembly against virtually all the 146 defendants, arrested during a day of hit-and-run demonstration and defiance of police orders to disperse.

More than 80 juveniles were taken into custody as well. Those whose parents came for them were handed over.

Elsewhere on the racial scene:

—In Washington, both sides in the Senate civil rights debate indicated that the first test vote might come Wednesday.

—Also in Washington, the government asked the U.S. Supreme Court to order the Reverend Ku Klux Klan of Georgia on a desegregated basis of public schools in Prince Edward County, Va. The schools have been closed since 1959 to avoid integration.

—In Atlanta, Ga., a federal judge involved in a dispute with a state judge took control of a white woman the integration leader arrested during a lunch counter sit-in. U.S.

Trustees Are Ready For Start

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP)—The government's maritime union trustees are ready for the start of what might be a turbulent shipping season on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence Seaway.

They told reporters Monday that sailors are signing up for jobs in the hiring halls of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada, while others are returning directly to the ships they manned last year.

With ships expected to start moving on the lakes next week, Mr. Justice Victor L. Dryer, 53-year-old chief trustee, refused to rule out possible troubles on the waterfront.

He said trouble could erupt "if certain things aren't done." But he declined to elaborate.

"If we discuss this thing right in the open, we won't be able to accomplish what we were charged to accomplish," he said.

"There are things you can't do in a goldfish bowl."

The trustees were appointed last October under a special act of Parliament which empowered them to manage and control the SIU and four other marine transportation unions.

Ousted Leader

The Vancouver jurist and his two fellow trustees—Judge Rene Lippe and Charles H. Millard—reported privately to Labor Minister MacEachen on the events that followed last week's dismissal of Hal C. Banks as president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada.

But Mr. Justice Dryer ducked most questions from reporters on the present waterfront situation or on talks last week with Paul Hall, North American head of the SIU and a vice-president of the AFL-CIO in the United States.

Asked if he expects co-operation from Mr. Hall the judge replied:

"I think it would be wiser if I said nothing at all. I think it might prejudice what we are trying to accomplish."

Budget Debate Closing

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—For a while it sounded as though the scripts were switched in Monday's Commons debate.

Government spending operations are "inherently inefficient," said Liberal David G. Hahn.

"We have an insatiable fear of the electorate," said Conservative Joseph Slogan, speaking of all parties in the House.

Their philosophic criticisms were short-lived, however, as the Commons budget debate moved through its third day.

Mr. Hahn, a businessman and MP for Toronto Broadview, concluded that this year's increases in government spending were reasonable.

Mr. Slogan, a dentist representing Manitoba's Springfield constituency, sounded more like an opposition member as he described the cabinet as "old and tired men who lack initiative, imagination and aggressiveness."

The budget debate adjourns Tuesday following a vote on a Conservative non - confidence motion charging the government with failure to control rising expenditures and with running up a substantial deficit despite tax increases. The last two days of the six-day debate will be after the Easter recess.

WANTS CHANGE

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette moved an amendment to insert a further non-confidence motion into the debate, calling for family allowances geared to rising living costs. However, this was ruled out of order on grounds that a maximum of two non-confidence motions allowed under the rules had already been moved.

Mr. Caouette also reiterated his demands for constitutional amendments to give Quebec control over its own fiscal, immigration and trade policy—all of them now federal prerogatives—plus sole occupancy of the direct income tax fields it shares with Ottawa.

During the budget debate, Mr. Hahn said that despite Conservative talk of economies in spending, the opposition had made only a few suggestions for cuts in expenditures.

"Governments are inherently inefficient in their spending operations," he said. "It seems that they have a hand in hand with the size of a government's operation."

The proposals of the Glassco royal commission on government organization would increase efficiency a bit, but not enough to produce an over-all cut in spending. New inefficiencies were bound to creep in.

CAN IMPROVE

Mr. Slogan said there is room for improvement everywhere in Canada and "perhaps we could start right here in this chamber."

"We have basic shortcomings," he said. Besides MPs' salaries, the voters' lot could also very reticent to take a stand on anything but the most non-controversial problems."

"I think we are followers rather than leaders in this country."

The Commons was often arduous and ineffective in dealing with problems, he said, because its rules were needed to make the government more effective without restraining the opposition's right to criticize.

Mr. Slogan said it is up to the government to establish "a Canada charter—a partnership for progress" which will set national goals and help plan for their achievement.

Jack Horner (PC — Acadia) said Finance Minister Gordon's budget was a "do-nothing budget" that failed to curtail the national debt and failed to provide work for Canada's most important basic industry.

Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) said the budget did nothing to end the "enslavement" of wage earners by the free enterprise system. It and all other budgets of the last 30 years encouraged "the bloodsucking leeches in our society."

Canadians Picnic as British Patiently Untangle Quarrel

LOUROUJINA, Cyprus (CP) While Canadian soldiers picnicked Monday on the sandy shore of Famagusta Bay, 60 miles east of Nicosia, British soldiers were attempting to settle a danger-loaded problem in this Turkish-Cypriot village.

It wasn't the Canadians' fault. They haven't been assigned any peace - keeping role by the United Nations though the first soldiers arrived here more than a week ago.

Oddly enough, a Canadian convoy of 121 men got temporarily lost on the way to Famagusta and came within a few miles of this trouble spot where the Greek - Cypriots arrested two Turk-Cypriots for illegal possession of weapons and the Turkish-Cypriots retaliated by seizing seven Greek - Cypriot hostages.

As darkness fell, a British officer was still trying to arrange an exchange of prisoners and hostages while British armored cars and scout cars surrounded the shabby village appeared ill by a single watery street light.

The British, as usual, showed almost incredible patience in trying to avert a Greek-Cypriot assault on the village.

The young Turkish-Cypriot in a blue sweater who was speaking for the villagers, with about 20 of his compatriots around him was insisting that the two Turk - Cypriots held by the Greek-Cypriots must be brought to the village before the Greek-Cypriot hostages would be released. He maintained that the hostages were alive and would be produced when his demands were met.

The argument wasn't noisy. The crying of a baby could be heard in the square. The British soldiers sat in their vehicles or stood beside them quietly. They tuned in the BBC news. Eventually the hostages were exchanged.

Urge Replacement of Large Isolated Mental Hospitals

OTTAWA (CP)—Gradual replacement of Canada's large, isolated mental hospitals by smaller community treatment centres, in which both psychiatrists and mental doctors could participate, was strongly urged Monday at opening sessions of the three-day conference on mental health.

The 100 doctors and psychiatrists attending the conference were told that segregated mental hospitals—those completely separate from community general hospitals—are one of the biggest drawbacks to efficient patient care.

The conference, sponsored jointly by the Canadian Medical Association and the Canadian Psychiatric Association and the Canadian Mental Health Association, is seeking ways to integrate psychiatry with general medical practice.

Dr. Robert O. Jones, professor of psychiatry at Dalhousie University, Halifax, said:

"The segregation of psychiatry with medicine will only be possible if conditions of practice are the same for psychiatry as they are for other branches of medicine.

"Removing the bulk of psychiatric treatment from the large mental hospital to the community is one change which would foster this goal."

Another psychiatrist, Dr. Dominique Bedard, director of psychiatric services for the province of Quebec, told the gathering:

"We will never succeed in integrating psychiatry with general medicine if we do not develop better facilities which will encourage the general practitioner to play a full role in the fight against mental illness."

Dr. C. A. Roberts of Verdun, Que., addressing the conference on hospital perspectives, said he had been haunted most of his life "by the 70,000 people who are in Canadian mental hospitals." He added they are "frequently deprived of their civil rights and rights to humane care."

Dr. Roberts, repeating the charge by Dr. Jones, said the isolated hospitals for the mentally-ill suggested that all mentally ills be placed under public hospital legislation and that care for the mentally-ill be considered under the federal-provincial hospital insurance plan.

"But the real need," he said, "is for acceptance of the mentally-ill by the community as being truly sick and requiring not only facilities in which they may be cared for but arrangements which will permit them to be treated in the same way as society treats sick people.

"This must happen in order to overcome the stigmatization of the mentally-ill which still continues."

Pick Finn As Cyprus Mediator

CP from AP-Reuters

GENEVA — Greece, Turkey and Britain—the three guarantors of Cyprus' independence—today accepted the appointment of Finnish diplomat Sakari S. Tuomioja as Cyprus mediator.

The acceptance by the three countries and expected acceptance by the Cypriot government paved the way for Tuomioja, a former Finnish premier, to start negotiations aimed at settling the bitter Greek-Turkish communal dispute on Cyprus.

Tuomioja was scheduled to see United Nations Secretary General U Thant, in Geneva to attend the UN conference on trade and development, which opened Monday.

In London, the foreign office said British Prime Minister Wilson's acceptance to Thant.

There was no official word from the feuding Greek- and Turkish - Cypriot communities, which also must give approval with British before UN Secretary-General U Thant can make the appointment official.

WON'T OBJECT

However, a Reuters news agency dispatch from Nicosia reported that a Cyprus government spokesman said Cypriot President Archbishop Makarios would not object to Tuomioja as mediator.

Greece and Turkey communicated their approval of the Finn as mediator to delegates to the UN trade and development conference here.

Tuomioja, 52-year-old veteran Social Democrat Finnish ambassador to Sweden, sat in on Thant's tense negotiations to find a basis for peace talks between the feuding Cyprus communities.

The Cyprus crisis left Thant almost no time to deal with world trade problems.

Thant's personal representative in Cyprus, Carlo Spinelli of Italy, arrived in Nicosia early today in an RAF plane from Nicosia.

Lt.-Gen. P. S. Gyani of India, the commander of the UN force, probably will fly from Geneva to Cyprus tonight aboard the same plane.

In Nicosia, Greek and Turkish-Cypriots exploited an exchange of hostages arranged by British authorities.

Another Lawyer Quits Defence Team for Ruby

DALLAS (AP)—Percy Foreman, echoing Melvin Belli's remarks that Jack Ruby did not get a fair trial in Dallas, quit the Ruby defence team Monday and withdrew from the case.

The 61-year-old defence lawyer said he was going to withdraw from the Ruby case because he wasn't permitted by the Texas penalty law to make his appeal of the conviction alone and in his own way.

"I am not accustomed to conferring with or justifying my course of action to other attorneys," Foreman said in a letter of resignation to Ruby. "I have always worked alone."

Ruby was sentenced to death in the electric chair March 14 for the slaying of accused President-assassin Lee Harvey Oswald last Nov. 24. Belli, who headed Ruby's defence in a month-long trial, was fired by the Ruby family last Thursday.

In a statement issued in Dallas Joe Tonahill of Jasper, Tex., and Phil Burleson of Dallas would work with Belli during the trial.

MARK BOXCARS

Safety reflective markings have been placed on 31,000 boxcars, with about 71,631 still to be marked, Transport Minister Pickersgill said Monday that the railways place the safety marking on about 6,200 boxcars each year.

Move Approved Unanimously; Cass Resigns

Party Lines Broken In Long Day's Debate

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature voted unanimously Monday to kill a widely criticized section of the government's Police Act Amendment bill.

Immediately afterwards Premier Robarts announced the resignation from his cabinet of Attorney-General Cass, who had introduced the legislation only last Thursday.

The two developments climaxed a long day of debate on the government's so-called "police state" legislation. The end of the debate saw the Conservative supporting a New Democratic Party amendment to their own motion.

In this aura of political fantasy, all members shed party lines to vote 90 to 0 in favor of deleting from the Police Act amendment bill a section that would have given extraordinary powers to the Ontario Police Commission.

The commission would have been empowered to imprison persons for refusing to testify under oath and in some cases before the three-man commission of any knowledge they had of organized or syndicated crime. Attorney-General Cass, after introducing the amendment bill Thursday, defended these powers it would give to the commission as "terrible, dangerous and drastic."

WAS UNINTENTIONAL

In his letter of resignation to Premier Robarts, he said his comments had "unintentionally touched upon the sensibilities of some people."

Mr. Cass said he had devoted all of his efforts to the people of the province and had persevered to maintain the principles of justice and liberty in Canada.

"Having in complete innocence aroused the concern of the people about these principles, I do not feel that I wish to continue in this office."

Outside the house, Premier Robarts said he would appoint an interim attorney-general today.

A late-evening switch — one that surprised the house—by Premier Robarts paved the way for the sudden death of the controversial section.

When the legislature began its Monday sitting at 3 p.m., Mr. Robarts put forward a motion to send Bill 99—the amendment bill—to the legislature's legal bills committee.

He did this despite the fact

Loot May Exceed $250,000

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Police say the loot in a record looting of safe-deposit boxes at a Niagara Falls branch of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce will exceed $250,000.

Police and bank inspectors continued today into interview the holders of 87 boxes broken into during the weekend. In all, 128 boxes in the modern open bank—31 were not rented out.

Police indicated the loot consisted mainly of negotiable and registered stocks and bonds, but also included some cash, jewelry and travellers' cheques.

Niagara Falls police called in Insp. John Gillespie, head of Metropolitan Toronto's breaking and entry squad, and Insp. Robert MacGarry of the provincial police for help in the case.

FIND HOLE IN WALL

The hole in the wall was discovered Monday morning when bank employees reported for work. Police said thieves had carefully dug through the bank wall from an adjoining vacant store and entered the bank vault and opened the safe - deposit boxes.

The thieves apparently made two futile attempts to drill through an inner vault housing the bank's records, police disclosed Monday night, but gave up.

Workers repaired the main vault Monday and work on filing in the hole in the three-feet-thick bank wall was to begin

Strike of 47 Mine Technicians May Close Four N. S. Collieries

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP) — Four major Cape Breton coal mines faced shutdowns today as support spread for 47 striking mine technicians.

Railway crews refused to cross picket lines Monday and this led to a shortage of coal cars for the four Dominion Coal Company collieries, two here and two in nearby New Waterford.

Today's Chuckle

Whoever it was who first called women the fair sex didn't know much about justice.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Warm sunny weather is reported over southern Ontario today. Over the south country however snow and blowing snow is the rule. The disturbance causing this will then will move rapidly east ward today and much colder weather will spread southward across southern Ontario. On Wednesday cloudy cold weather can be expected over the province with snowflurries in some regions.

The strike had no immediate effect on the collieries because the 6,000 coal miners, members of the United Mine Workers (final), have ordered the work by mutual by their leaders. UMW District 26 President William Marsh said his men would do their normal work, but would not perform the duties of the strikers.

The threatened stoppage. described when railway crews refused to cross the strikers' picket lines.

No. 18 colliery at New Waterford suspended operations Monday because all the hoists of railway cars. No. 12 colliery at New Waterford remained in operation but reported a shortage of cars.

No. 26 colliery here had enough coal cars to continue production Monday "but we don't know what will happen today," a mine spokesman said.

No. 20 colliery here had enough empty cars on hand to operate today.

The technicians, members of Local 509 Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC), struck early Monday to back wage demands.

General War Impossible in This Nuclear Age -- Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson said today a general war would be impossible in this nuclear age, and that nations must follow "reasoned agreement instead of ready aggression" in dealing with global problems.

Departing from his prepared text for addressing a labor convention, Johnson said some people often urge him to send in troops when international crisis flares.

"There may have been a time that the commander - in - chief could order soldiers to march," at the first sign of a crisis, he said.

But, he said, "the world has changed and so has the method of dealing with disruptions of the peace."

Mentioning some current world trouble spots, Johnson said he hoped some agreement can be worked out with Panama over the Panama Canal dispute, and is hopeful that civil strife on the island of Cyprus could soon be ended by agreement.

In Cuba, he said a crisis was averted when the water to the U.S. Guantanamo naval base was cut off by Fidel Castro's regime.

This was done, he said, "not by a battalion of marines bayoneting . . . instead we sent a single admiral over to cut it off."

By cutting off the water line into the U.S. naval base, Johnson said, "a source of danger had been removed." The naval base is now being supplied with water by tankers.

Speaking of Nam, Johnson said divergent voices urge various courses such as broadening the war against communist guerrillas, more appeasement or even retreat.

Johnson said "we stand ready to help the Vietnamese preserve their independence . . . and keep them from being seized by communism."

Johnson, speaking before the building and construction trades department of the AFL-CIO, said:

"We are the most powerful nation in the world and we can afford to be patient, we do."

But, he added, power brings obligations" and the people of the United States are the most strongest nation on earth "than just a show of brute force."

Clinton Gray of Marmora Injured by Hit-Run Driver

Police today are seeking a damaged automobile or a rubber egg blue in color in a hit-and-run accident last night that left a severely injured hitchhiker on Oak Hills ditch.

Clinton Gray, 21-year-old Marmora man, was hospitalized with two broken legs after his unconscious form was spotted by four women driving to a hockey game in Marmora.

"If he'd been hit 15 feet further down the road he'd never have been seen until morning," said one investigating OPP officer. He'd have been tumbled in a ditch 33 feet deep."

Police say Gray, carrying a suitcase and believed unemployed, was hitchhiking a ride to Marmora at the foot of Boardman's Hill -- the first steep incline south of the Oak Hills -- when he was struck. He was thrown about 15 feet off the roadway into a shallow ditch.

Time of the accident was unknown.

About 7.30 p.m. Mrs. Gordon Channell, of Wellington, who was driving to a Marmora hockey game with Catherine Channell, Connie Romyne and Mrs. H. Channell spotted Gray's suitcase by the roadside, and then the injured man himself.

After he was rushed to hospital by LaSalle Ambulance and his true condition confirmed, police began searching the area for a suspect car.

The hunt continued this morning and police believe the wanted automobile may have a right fender damaged in the accident.

John Legate Gives Talk on Cement Plant

An inside story as to how the Canada Cement at Point Anne is operated was given by plant superintendent, John Legate, at Rotary club on Monday.

Mr. Legate, a new member of the Rotary Club of Belleville gave his classification talk, his job at the cement plant. He said the plant was founded in 1909.

The speaker said the plant has seen many changes since then, the first coming in the late 20's or early 30's when the cement process was changed from dry to wet.

Mr. Legate said there are presently eight Canada Cement plants in Canada with a ninth under construction. He said the Point Anne plant is capable of producing 17,500,000 bags of cement per year, with distribution all across the country except New Brunswick and Newfoundland.

The speaker explained manufacturing process and said about 20 per cent of the product is shipped bulk in bags with the biggest percentage shipped to Toronto on the well known Cement Karrier.

The speaker was introduced by past-president Bill Hurst and thanked on behalf of the club by Rotarian F. Vealand. Official thanks was extended by club president, Ronald Cass. Secretary Cass and visiting Rotarians at Monday's meeting were introduced by Rotarian Adam Stalker.

Night School Students to Get Certificates

Season studies for more than 200 night school students at Belle...lle Collegiate and Moira School will end this week with presentation of certificates at the two schools.

Tonight at Belleville Collegiate 281 ...ht school students will receive their certificates while Wednesday night another 40 acaden... and vocational students will get certificates.

For most night school students it means the end of night classes for this season, but grade 13 academic students taking chemistry and English will continue classes after Easter and will write departmental exams later.

War veterans taking building construction make up a big per...ntage of the vocational students to receive certificates this evening at Belleville Collegiate. During the past winter 72 students in this course, have been lear...ng the rudiments of house construction with many of them planning construction on their own homes.

Tonight at BCI prior to the presentation of certificates their will be a display of work done by vocational students with examples of woodworking, drawings and paintings by art students, and hats and wearing apparel by the millinery and sewing members.

"It's not a public display," explained BCI principal Don Stirling, "but a special showing being put on for other members of the night school classes".

Tourist Group Plans Approved By C of C Board

The board of directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce recently approved of the program of work presented by the members of the tourist committee.

This committee, consists of chairman Ron Keel and J. A. Blackey, G. Haggis, D. Kerr, G. Mulroney, R. Wilson, as chairman and Bob Johnson representing the ReNeet. It is expected at its submission at a great deal of consideration and deliberation.

The tourist committee has been asked to plan programs so far for two organizations that will be meeting or visiting in Belleville. The program offered are these: Royal Canadian Air Cadets 690 Squadron, Blind River Ontario, 20 Officers and Cadets in all. Planned to date is a cruise up the Bay of Quinte through the assistance of members of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club and a short lunch furnished by the Chamber of Commerce. The afternoon portion of the program will be planned in conjunction with the Air Cadet Wing.

9th annual convention Ontario Building Officials' Association, Sunday May 17 to October 15, 16, 17, 1964. The Chamber has been requested to arrange a ladies program for Thursday October 15th and Friday morning, October 16th. Approximately 50 women will be in the group. Planned so far is a tour of Avon Jewellery and a tour of Corby Distillery. Other events are under consideration.

The Chamber would like to have been able to include a luncheon and a bus tour of the district but lack of funds prevented this gesture.

WANT TAX RELIEF

A letter will be written to the Canadian Tourist Association informing that the Belleville Chamber is at present paying 11% sales tax and 2% tax in the publishing of tourist brochures which are distributed free of charge and requesting this association (CTA) make every effort to have these taxes removed.

A letter will be forwarded to the chairman of the City Council's public works committee requesting the installation of signs at various main street crossings directing tourists to two main picnic areas, Victoria Park and Zwicky's Island. A letter will also be forwarded to all gas station operators informing them of these locations, since it has been found this is one of the most asked questions by tourists.

Six additional tourist racks will be purchased bringing to 12 the number placed in gas stations, motels and hotels for tourist information.

In order to inform tourists staying at hotels and motels during coming months what is going on in our city and there, by possibly enticing them to stay a day or two longer, the Chamber will produce a bi-weekly calendar of events which will be sent to all motels and hotels in Belleville for distribution to each new guest. This will include shopping notes, sporting events and dances.

Plans are underway to print a "Shop in Belleville" directory which would be distributed at the Chamber office to the 12 tourist racks throughout the city. It is hoped to have this completed shortly.

The Chamber will publish a Belleville brochure containing a simplified street map and highlighting the points of interest. Plans for this brochure are going ahead quickly and it should be available shortly for city-wide distribution.

Chairman Ron Keel informed the directors that his committee is lookifg forward to a good tourist year.

IN MEMORIAM

WEAVER — In loving memory of a dear son, Lloyd Weaver, who passed away March 24, 1962.

Memory keeps his face in view,
Time cannot change them, it's true,
Years fly but time cannot sever,
My loving remembrance of you.
—Lovingly remembered by his mother, Sadie.

HAMMETT — In loving memory of our dear father, Ernest Hammett, who died suddenly March 24, 1962.

His charming ways and smiling face
Are fond memories we trace
In a kindly word or cash,
He'll help you if he can.
—Lovingly remembered by Elsie, Ann, Audrey and Ernie.

DOWNEY — In loving memory of our dear mother Clara Downey who passed away March 24, 1962.

So many things have happened,
So many changes too,
So many things to share with you.
Every day in some small way,
Every day in some small way,
Your memory is with us dear mother,
Though absent, you are ever near,
Still missed, still loved, always dear.
—Lovingly remembered by Janet and Don, Dean, Ben and Doug and family.

BELNAP — In loving memory of our dear father, Ronald Belnap who died March 24th, 1962.

We shall remember him as he was,
For the years had made him wise,
We shall recall in memory,
Our mother and his smiling eyes,
His wouldn't ask the sorrow,
He wouldn't ask the tears;
Only to be remembered,
As the years go by.
—Always remembered by brothers and sisters.

BELNAP — In loving memory of our dear father, Ronald Belnap who died March 24th, 1962.

We shall remember him as he was,
For the years had made him wise,
We shall recall in memory,
Our mother and his smiling eyes,
His wouldn't ask the sorrow,
He wouldn't ask the tears;
Only to be remembered,
As the years go by.
—Lovingly remembered by Mom.

COOMBES — In loving memory of our dear husband, Reginald Coombes, who passed away March 24th, 1962.

Moonlight and roses,
Bring memories of you.
—Ever remembered by wife Alice and the family.

MONDEVILLE — In loving memory of our dear father, Ernest Mondeville, who passed away March 24th, 1954.

He bade no one his last farewell
He said goodbye to none,
The heavenly gates were opened,
A loving voice said "Come".
I often sit and think of you,
And things you used to say.
I wonder why you had to die,
Without a chance to say goodbye,
Though out of sight, you're ever,
In memory dear, always,
You will live with us in memory,
Until the end of time.
—Ever remembered by father and mother.

BELNAP — In loving memory of a dear father, Ronald Belnap who passed away March 24, 1962.

SHELBY — In loving memory of a dear mother, father and grandparents Elsie May Shelby, passed away March 25, 1963 and her husband James, passed away July 23, 1951.

It takes our hearts to lose you but you didn't go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day God called you home,
You God take a message,
To our parents in heaven above,
Tell them how much we miss them,
And give them all our love.
—Sadly missed, lovingly remembered by the family.

Historical Society Had Good Year

The March meeting of the Hastings County Historical Society was held in the Corby Library auditorium with more than 60 persons present.

Mrs. Gordon Williamson presented an interesting talk on early life in Upper Canada, highlighting some of the equipment and activities of early days.

Mr. Thomas Ransom then gave a recorded talk on the history of the music box, using several examples to trace its development. He concluded by demonstrating the excellent music box from the Coulter collection at the Hastings County Museum.

The historical society's appreciation to both speakers was voiced by Mr. T. Dane Martin.

Earlier in the meeting, historical society president, Gerald Boyce, reported a museum operations for 1963 after which museum curator, Mrs. J. Sargent explained that the present military display would be continued for another three weeks, every Saturday and Sunday afternoon from 2 to 5.

Mr. Rodger Greig reported on last fall's walking tours and announced that these tours would continue after Easter.

SUCCESSFUL VENTURE

The Society's display at the Quinte District Home and Sports Show was described as a "successful venture" by the president and appreciation was extended to the volunteers who prepared and staffed the booth and to the Junior Chamber of Commerce for providing the space.

The budget for 1963 was discussed briefly by treasurer, T. D. Martin, who also moved the adoption of the budget for the present year. His figures showed that the museum had a good year in 1963, despite a drop in admittance revenues.

A draw for an original 1898 wall map of Hastings County was won by Mrs. F. H. Bedell, who represents the Quinte Women's Institute in the historical society.

Membership officials of the museum report keen support by the 34 memberships were received, bringing the paid up total for 1964 to almost 100. The membership goal for 1964 is 200.

It was voted that two new types of membership are being received very well. These are the family membership and the student membership. It was encouraging to see several of these student members at the meeting.

REFRESHMENTS SERVED

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served by the committee headed by Mrs. J. Sargent and Mrs. F. H. Bedell, with the kind assistance of the members from River Valley (near Madoc).

Historical society officials are very pleased by the attendance and enthusiasm at this meeting and are planning a series of meetings throughout 1964 to call attention to some of the important chapters in our local history.

Many of the speakers are expected to come from the membership of the historical society and program co-chairman Thomas Ransom issued a call for interested persons to address the historical society. He noted that such talks need not be long and that two or three brief talks may be included in a single program.

17 DIE IN BOAT

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)—Eighteen Cubans, including five children and six women, drifted 18 days in an open boat in the Caribbean in an ill-fated attempt to flee Castro's Cuba, it was announced Monday. Seventeen died. Sixteen bodies were dumped into the sea. The eventual lone survivor drifted on to Grand Cayman Island with the body of his dead wife still aboard. He had grown too weak to dispose of it. . . .

Music Column

By ART HAKLAND

What is the minimum age to start playing a musical instrument? What instrument should you play? Is piano the only instrument worth playing? How expensive is it? These are the most common questions asked when considering taking up an instrument.

It is best to start instruction on a musical instrument as early as possible but due to the physical and intellectual demands of certain instruments it is necessary to wait until you are ready. It is difficult to state a specific minimum age at which you can start on an instrument due to individual physical and mental difference but the following may serve as a guide.

3 to 5 years—Piano.

6 to 9 years—Pre-band instruments.

9 to 10 years—Flute, Clarinet, Alto Saxophone, Trumpet, Snare Drum, Violin, Cello.

10 to 11 years—Tenor and Baritone Saxophone, Trombone, E-flat Tuba.

11 to 12 years—Piccolo, French Horn, Viola.

12 to 13 years—Oboe, Alto and Bass Clarinet, Bassoon, BB-flat Tuba, String Bass.

There is no reason to study on pre-band instruments for more than one year. Piccolo players should have played Flute for two years. Alto and Bass Clarinet, Bassoon and Oboe players should have previously studied Clarinet. It is helpful for French Horn players to study Trumpet first. It is also recommended for those wishing to learn Viola play Violin.

Which instrument is best for you depends on your academic ability, pitch, physical dexterity, interest and musical aptitude. With a few exceptions the brass instruments are generally the easiest to form followed by single reeds instruments, while the double reed, strings and French Horn require a greater deal of intelligence to master. If you anticipate playing strings, the French Horn or Trombone, you may find an almost perfect sense of pitch. If you wish to play the Bassoon it is necessary to have a long finger span and be supple. People with crossed or overlapping or crooked teeth will have trouble controlling and directing the air stream in a brass instrument and should choose a reed or string instrument. A handicap, however, very often proves to be an added incentive and the student's desire to overcome his difficulty results in good progress.

EACH HAS PROBLEMS

Many people consider the piano to be a more difficult instrument than the others. This is not true. Each instrument has its own peculiar problems to overcome. I took a brass and reed course with an accomplished pianist. At the conclusion of the course she confided, "I never dreamed those little things could be so demanding and difficult. I am going back to the piano, while I still have a little respect and confidence left."

Many parents find that allowing a son or daughter to transfer from piano to a different instrument in their early teens will rekindle a dying interest in music.

The expense involved should not be a deterrent as one lesson a week is not usually more than two or three dollars, although there are some teachers in Toronto charging over $75 an hour. I would strongly advise renting an instrument rather than buying unless you have played for over a year and are convinced it is the instrument you wish to play. Most music dealers will allow you to rent an instrument and then apply the rent to the purchase at a later date if you wish.

The ideal situation, however, is to study music in high school. At Quinte Secondary School students interested in Music are given a free musical aptitude test, guided to the instrument that they could not easily master and enjoy, given free instruction leading to Matriculation standing in any instrument mentioned in this column, allowed the opportunity to play in bands before audiences, and the use of instruments is supplied free by the Bay of Quinte District High School Board. A similar plan exists at Belleville Collegiate for brass and reed instruments. Metro Toronto has limited instruments in the lower grades only, which must be rented or purchased by the students.

Bay of Quinte Toronto Lodge Pays Visit

TRENTON — The officers and members of Trent Masonic Lodge, A. F. and A.M. No. 38, were hosts Saturday night to the Bay of Quinte Toronto Lodge at a special meeting. Dinner arrangements were under the direction of Junior Warden Walter Wrightman and his committee.

In all, 160 lodge members were present including 40 officers and members from the Toronto lodge.

Conducting the meeting was W.M. J. A. Webb of Trenton. Head table guests included the present D.D.G.M., A. Clare McFaul, former Grand Lodge officer and W.M.s of the various lodges represented at the meeting. The head table guests were introduced by W.M. Clifford A. Baker.

W.M. Shaw, McEwen of the Toronto lodge expressed his pleasure and that of his members for the privilege of attending a meeting in Trenton. W.M. McEwen lived in Trenton from 1934 to 1941 and taught at Trenton High School. In 1941 he joined the service and on his release, moved to the Toronto area. While in Trenton, W.M. McEwen became a member of Trent Lodge No. 38. Six Trenton lodge members attended his installation as Worshipful Master in Toronto this year. W.M. McEwen is now vice-principal at Riverdale Collegiate in Toronto.

The Bay of Quinte Toronto Lodge derives its name from the fact that a large number of members have affiliated with this area. The lodge was formed in March, 1923. At Saturday's meeting, Rt. Wor. Bro. Douglas McMaster of the Trenton lodge, presented a copy of the (Trenton) Quinte Sun to W.M. McEwen. This issue of the former Trenton newspaper was dated March 10, 1923, and contained the names of all the members, who joined the Toronto Bay of Quinte lodge in that year. Many of the Toronto members at Saturday's meeting stood up and announced their birthplaces in the Quinte area.

An invitation was issued for the Trent lodge to attend a Toronto meeting on May 30, and this will be accepted by many of the Trenton members.

D.D.G.M. McFaul announced that a District Masonic Divine service will be held in Wellington, Sunday, May 3. All members are asked to assemble on the Wellington school grounds at 2 p.m.

Following the banquet, the members adjourned to the lodge room where the first degree was exemplified on John Johnson of 25 Rivers' Drive, Middleton Park, Trenton.

Cpl. T. Hinde Lone Airman Left on Cyprus

By Flt. Sgt. Bob Tracy

TRENTON — The RCAF detachment positioned in Nicosia, Cyprus, during the week-long "Operation Snow-Goose" airlift returned to Canada on Monday.

At the peak of the airlift the Canadian detachment was 42 strong, consisting of six officers and 36 N.C.O's. and airmen. Of this number, 37 were from RCAF Trenton, Ont., the remainder from RCAF Station Naman, Alta., near Edmonton.

When the Trenton airmen returned home with their detachment commander, Wing Commander R. K. Trumley of Air Transport Command Headquarters, they turned over their work to a one-man "detachment" in the person of Cpl. Terry Hinde, a transportation technician of No. 2 Air Movements Unit, Trenton.

To the Trenton airmen, the job was almost routine, for most of them had previously been on detachment duty at Dusseldorf, West Germany, during the Canadian Army Brigade Rotation this winter.

The job at Nicosia consisted of meeting, unloading, servicing and reloading Yukon and Hercules aircraft arriving from Canada with troops and equipment for the Canadian contingent for the U.N. force.

Their stay at the Royal Air Force base at Nicosia was a real test of Commonwealth co-operation, and the men are high in their praise of their compatriots in the Royal Air Force.

"They beat over backwards to help us out, no matter what the time of the day or night — and after duty hours they made us feel right at home around their base," stated Sergeant B. "Slim" Howell, an Air Frame Technician from Carrying Place, Ont.

OFFICERS ELECTED

VON Had Busy Month, 157 Visits Made

TRENTON — Trenton Victorian Order of Nurses' duties are becoming more like those of a United Nations counsellor, according to the report submitted this week by Trenton V.O.N. head nurse, Miss Anne Stewart. Miss Stewart said that calls made in February were to persons from a variety of ethnic groups, including Czechoslavakian, Chinese and French. Many of the persons visited could not speak a word of English.

Miss Stewart said that she and her staff nurses had made 157 visit in February, 68 of these were for nursing care; 73 for health supervision. Recently, V.O.N. services were extended to Batawa and Frankford and 17 visits were made to these centres.

Miss Stewart said she had spent some time last month discussing the right mental approach to children in one of the town's separate schools with the teachers. Some of the children are experiencing difficulty in their school work because of a faulty mental attitude toward the work.

Miss Stewart will be able to attend Health Education classes at Trenton Hospital, along with hospital nurses from the area, Miss Stewart announced.

V.O.N. tag days will be held in Trenton June 3 and 4 and the annual VON tea will be held April 29.

NAMED BY BOLIVAR

The "Watchtower of the Universe" was the name given by American liberator Simon Bolivar, to 20,561-foot El Chimborazo peak in the Ecuadorean Andes.

81 Births In Hospital During Feb.

TRENTON — Average daily population at Trenton Memorial Hospital (adults and children) for February, was 115, according to the report released this week by hospital administrator, Miss Hazel Naudett.

Births numbered 81; deaths seven. Seventy-six major operations were performed; 98 minor operations.

Total out-patients treated numbered 349 and 417 emergencies were handled.

ROTARIANS ENJOY VISIT

Last week the Trenton Rotary Club in recognition of world understanding week were hosts to a group of gentlemen representing nine different countries at the Bata Recreation Hall. The combined dinner meeting was addressed by a fellow Belgian, Judge J. C. Anderson, Q.C., nationally known jurist. Judge Anderson spoke on the merits of being a Canadian among the impressions of developing a national pride for our country and having faith in our future. It was an inspiring talk that kept an attentive audience listening to every word which brought forth favorable comment at its conclusion.

Rotarian Jack Irwin introduced the Judge and Past President John Garrett, offered the speaker the thanks of the guests and members. In his official thanks Pres. Bob presented the speaker with a box of apples.

DERIVED FROM DYES

The North American Indians' fondness for painting themselves with red ocher or vegetable dyes led early explorers to call them redskins.

Trenton Student Top Speaker In Competition

TRENTON — Ruth Ann Campbell from Trenton high school won top district honors in Sunday's Legion public speaking contest at Trenton.

Miss Campbell is 16 and will be 13. Second prize in this category went to Brian Lappin of Peterborough.

In the Grade nine to ten division, Ann Moorhouse of Peterborough placed first, Joan Bennett of Cannington, second.

Grade's seven to eight contest was won by Susan Robinson of Lindsay, Patsy Blake of Bowmanville, placing second, while Mary Kearns of Lindsay won the Grades one to six award.

FINAL STANDINGS

Trenton and District Dart League final standings: Airmen 9; Sgts. Mess 6; Ted's Antennas 5; One Half Hundreds 5; Glen Miller Wickens 5; Bear Cats 5; Bar Flies 4; Eric 3; Hasty Tasters 3; Hoppers 2; Hasty Teens 1.

A general meeting of the league will be held on April 2, starting at 8 p.m. at Trenton Armory. At this meeting, officers for 1964-65 will be elected.

Silly Proposals

Some things seem to bring out the worst in people.

With a woman it may be an auction sale, with a man a fast car. With diplomats it seems to be disarmament conferences.

On Jan. 29 Russia proposed to the Geneva parley now in session that all bomber planes be scrapped.

It would be a good trick if it could be done, but the Russians know very well that it couldn't be done—not in today's world.

Thursday the U.S. proposed that 960 strategic bombers be scrapped, 480 by Russia and 480 by the U.S., over a two-year period.

The Russians promptly rejected this proposal. Unlike their own, it was feasible. But the Russians maintained—and, alas, we suspect they were right in this instance—that what the U.S. wanted to scrap was a lot of obsolete planes which the Pentagon had already decided to replace with newer types.

It would be pleasant if we could believe that proposals like these, while achieving nothing, did no harm. Unfortunately, that may not be true. If either side has any trust or respect for the other, such proposals could easily serve to erode it.

It might be added that this erosion of respect is not limited to any which the two big powers may hold for each other. It occurs, too, in the respect in which they may be held by other, smaller, nations.

The temptation to say "a plague on both your houses" grows apace. This is dangerous, for it leads away from, rather than towards, an ultimate meeting of the minds of the problems of disarmament. And there are still many people who are convinced that if the nations retain their arms long enough, eventually there will arise an occasion on which the temptation to use them will prove irresistible.

Poor Show

Acquisition of a former resident of Canada's first Prime Minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, was debated in the House of Commons for an hour on Wednesday.

Douglas Aikenbrack, Progressive Conservative member for the riding of Prince Edward-Hastings, placed before the House a motion that the government buy the house.

There was only one thing wrong with this proposal. The government bought the house three months ago.

Yet Mr. Aikenbrack managed to keep the House busy for an hour considering his motion.

The only bright spot in the debate appears to have been provided by Harold Winch, NDP member for Vancouver East.

"He (Macdonald) lived there for seven months, called it a monstrosity and wanted to get rid of it," he declared.

Sir John would have appreciated that quip. We doubt whether he would have enjoyed the rest of the debate. Probably he would have stopped. Who could have blamed him? In Sir John's day, though, House-mappers were not paid $18,000 per annum.

Was there nothing more important for the House to consider than Mr. Aikenbrack's attempt to get himself a little attention in Hansard?

An Excellent Suggestion

The Ontario Hog Producers' Association wants imported meat stamped with the country of its origin.

This is an excellent suggestion—though its results would not necessarily be those sought by the association.

It wants to discourage the consumption of foreign pork products. If stamping the meat had this effect, all well and good. It could only be because Canadian consumers preferred Canadian pork or because, though they noted no difference in quality, they chose to buy Canadian meat.

But it ought to be noted that if foreign pork products should be superior to those produced here, and the price competitive, stamping the foreign products would be likely to increase, rather than decrease, their sale.

Either way, the consumer would be protected by having imported meat marked. And if the Ontario Hog Producers are willing to take the chance of the legislation having precisely the opposite effect from that intended, more power to them. They are ready to take their chances in the open market. They deserve to be given the opportunity.

Ottawa Offbeat

Blusher, Bully, Browbeat, Beg! But Bring the Absentees Back

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Every Conservative Opposition MP now carries a little card in his wallet.

It reads:

IMPORTANT
Report to Conservative Whip's office whenever you absent yourself from the House of Commons.
PHONE US AT
Office: 992-3545 or 992-3566
Lobby: 992-3276 or 992-3499
Give Full Information
ERIC A. WINKLER

Any MP who hopes to keep Conservative Conscientious Whip Eric A. Winkler off his back, carries this card, just as he would his driver's license, and what is more, he carries out the instructions.

With this card and certain other measures he has taken, Eric Winkler, a pleasant-faced but tough-talking young Ontario's Grey-Bruce riding, likes to think he is beginning to get his party's absentee problem if not exactly licked, then pretty well under control.

DEFEND WHIP

Pounding away - - fist on desk in person and iron in voice on the long distance phone — he has hammered down Conservative House hookey-playing from a high of 40 MPs to a low of eight.

That was the night, not long ago, when the ministerial caucus learned had its closest call - - 120 to 128 - - in a want-of-confidence challenge.

Actually, nine Conservatives skipped that vote, but one of them, former Defence Minister Douglas Harkness, has only breaking party rules - - and defying both Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker and Party Whip Winkler - - by "pairing," or trading off his vote with an absentee Liberal.

"The Grits have to pair, we don't," is the way Eric Winkler looks at it. Any Liberal wanting to go home on pleasure or business must cancel out a Conservative vote. That's fair if it isn't quite so essential for a Conservative taking time out from his House duties to help repair, killing off a Liberal vote.

For while all the Conservatives can look at is just another in a series of confidence votes, a Liberal too could be as disastrous as defeat.

How has Whip Winkler come within eight votes—almost one "pair" of beating his problem of House hookey-playing?

Well, he's been at it - - -

Spring Fever Strikes

More than likely you, like many others, are getting that Spring urge to get out to the lakes to do some fishing, or possibly get back to your cottage and get it open for the summer time. Transportation may be a temporary problem you may have, but can be easily remedied by Canadian Tire's new trailer rental service. Box trailers are as low as $2.00 per day and also for that once or twice a year, boat trailers are also available.

Speaking of trailers, Canadian Tire has added to their stock, two new types of Campers' Trailers; selling for less than $300.00. There's sleeping space for 6 people. A real compact model to save motel bills, and enjoy any location you want to, for swimming, fishing and camping. For those who possibly aren't sure that this type of holiday would appeal to them, we have a rental service to Try Before You Buy. Just think, no money down on sales or rentals. Keep your ready cash to enjoy your holidays the most.

Better make a reservation now, as the number of units is limited.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP)—Golds softened but the remainder of the stock market moved ahead in moderate morning trading today.

Dome Mines was the main loser among gold stock, down ⅛ to 29, trading ex-dividend 20 cents.

Dominion Foundries and Steel advanced one point to 76¾ and Algoma ¼ among steels, while Imperial Oil and Texaco both gained ⅛ among integrated oils.

Banks were mixed to higher; Nova Scotia up ½, but pipelines ▪▪▪▪d, interprovincial down ⅛ and Westcoast ⅛. Liquors moved ahead.

Senior base metals edged upwards with gains of ¼ to Hudson Bay Mining and ⅛ to Falconbridge. Noranda declined ⅛.

Several speculative issues were active. Calvert was the heavy trader with a turnover of 222,270 shares, off 12 cents to 50 cents on profit-taking. Chimo rose seven cents to $1.02 and Pax International one cent to 48 cents.

Funeral

MRS. FREDERICK F. DOWNING

The funeral of Mrs. Frederick F. Downing, the former Laura Kathleen Courtney, was held Saturday afternoon, March 21st, from her late residence to St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling.

Seven Anglican ministers all had a part in the service with Rt. Rev. Arch Deacon A. S. McConnell, Belleville; Rev. R. G. Fleming, Belleville; Rev. D. Sinclair, Brockville; Rev. A. C. McCallum, Kingston; Rev. John Hart, Cataraqui, and Rev. Francis Crook, Stirling.

A friend, Rev. D. J. Potter, minister of Erneville United Church, officiated at the console of the organ.

The bearers were Messrs. John Courtney, Edward Preston, Leslie Preston, James Jeffrey, Dan Courtney and Forde Hutchings.

The interment was made in St. Thomas' Cemetery, Eighth Concession of Rawdon township.

The funeral was under the direction of the Duffin Funeral Home, Stirling.

On Thursday evening members of Branch No. 228 Royal Canadian Legion paid their respects to their bereaved comrade padre, Rev. F. F. Downing and family.

Several ministers from the surrounding area occupied seats in the pews for the service.

'Spring Thaw' Well-Known Review Coming to City

"Spring Thaw" that institution of Toronto theatre has been a perennial blooming for 17 years in the provincial capital.

Now, for the first time the famous review has moved out on the road seems about to set another record as the most successful tour in Canadian Theatre history.

Tomorrow night it reaches — by way of sponsorship by the city's Mental Health Association.

With a cast including such topliners as Barbara Hamilton, Bill Cole and Jack Duffy, the one - night stand will play Belleville Collegiate auditorium en route back to Toronto.

The show's reputation has long preceded it and caused a bustling local business in ticket sales in recent weeks. However, Association officials today reported they have now allotted for general sale a block of tickets set aside for students. Easter exams have reduced the original estimate of student patrons.

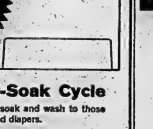
however, said the Canadian government is relying on American co-operation and support in ensuring free movement for Canadian ships when the season opens.



He said Canada had reached "understandings" with U.S. government officials in discussions over a long period of time. It was assumed here that this co-operation would continue "in any eventuality that may occur when the shipping season opens."

"What we have sought is their co-operation within their own laws to remove harassment and I think we've had that," he said.

The trustees have appointed agents in each SIU hall on the Great Lakes and both coasts, but have made no changes to the rotary system under which seamen are placed board ships on a first-come, first-served basis.

Before altering this system, the trustees are understood to want to develop seniority rights within shipping companies and to set up training programs for sailors, with certificates to recognize training and experience.

the bill had not received second reading. The normal procedure is to give all bills second reading—approval in principle—before they are dissected section by section in committee.

HAD DOUBTS

Mr. Roberts said that while he had grave doubts about sections of Bill 99, his legal advisers had reaffirmed to him "that the fundamental rights of the citizens of this province would not be interfered with by this legislation."

"If these opinions had been expressed at the time the bill was introduced, the apprehension and disquiet which arose in people's minds before the bill had actually been examined would have been avoided," he said.

Mr. Roberts said he wanted the bill to be given thorough examination in committee. Members of the police commission and government legal experts would appear before the committee to explain the offensive section of the bill.

Liberal Leader Farquhar Oliver attacked the premier's motion to send the bill to committee before giving it second reading. Mr. Oliver said the premier was "afraid to take his chances before the proper tribunal"—the legislature as a whole.

Mr. Oliver moved an amendment to the premier's motion declaring that the government should withdraw the entire bill and replace it with one which did not include Section 14—the one referring to the commission.

DEBATE AMENDMENT

Debate on this amendment began shortly after 3:30 p.m. and continued until about 10 p.m. A number of conservative speakers said they would support the motion to send the bill to committee but would not support Section 14 of the bill in committee.

When the vote on the Liberal amendment was called, NDP Leader Donald MacDonald suddenly introduced a second amendment. Mr. Roberts expressed qualified support for it.

Mr. MacDonald's amendment proposed that the government motion to refer the bill to committee have a clause added to it instructing the committee to delete Section 14.

Premier Robarts at first told Mr. MacDonald the amendment was not necessary. He was sure the effect of his own motion referring the bill to committee would be to have the section deleted.

He told the house that if Section 14 was as offensive as had been interpreted, it would be "as offensive to me as to any member of this House."

WANTS IT DEALT WITH

"I think Section 14 would be dealt with by the committee exactly in the way you say in your motion," the premier told Mr. MacDonald.

Mr. Roberts said, however, he wanted to be sure the section was given the fullest examination before it was deleted.

The premier then proposed that Mr. MacDonald revise his amendment to state that Section 14 of the bill should be deleted "if the section is found to be offensive."

Mr. MacDonald objected and the premier did not press the suggestion.

Mr. Roberts said there was a conflict of opinion as to what the section of the bill really meant. Previously, not one person in the Ontario legislature supported the section.

"I believe that no one who supported the Progressive Conservative party in Ontario wanted Section 14 to remain in the bill.

Leonard Reilley (PC—Eglinton) asked the premier to clarify the degree of his support of the NDP leader's amendment.

Vernon Singer (L — Downview) pleaded with the premier to accept the wording of the NDP amendment without change. He said the Liberals would do anything within their power to kill offensive sections of the bill that night, no matter who had proposed the amendment.

WILL ACCEPT

Mr. Roberts then said he would be "quite prepared to accept an amendment to delete Section 14 after study."

"It means that the section simply will not be pulled out of the bill without any discussion as to why it was there," he said. But the people of Ontario would be assured the section was gone.

Mr. Oliver spoke heatedly against this proposal by the premier, but his words were the last hot ones of the debate, as Mr. Roberts replied:

"I'm trying, Mr. Speaker, to deal with this matter without reference to partisan politics.

"I would hope to get the same treatment from the other side of the floor because this is bigger than party politics at this stage."

Support for the MacDonald amendment then was voiced by Allan Regison (PC — Toronto Lakeshore) and Allan Lawrence (PC—Toronto St. George), both backbench lawyers.

At the same time Premier Roberts was assured by two members of the opposition—Ken Bryden (NDP—Woodbine) and Andrew Thompson (L—Dovercourt) that the opposition would permit full examination of Section 14 at the committee meeting.

ACCEPTS MOVE

Mr. Roberts then said:

"I am prepared to accept the amendment made by the honorable member for York South (Mr. MacDonald).

"I do so with the thought in my own mind and with the assurance that has been given to me that this section will be debated and discussed."

The first vote that followed turned down the Liberal amendment by a vote of 70 to 25, with the New Democrats voting with the official opposition.

The second vote was unanimously passed the NDP amendment 96 to 0. The members agreed to pass the main government motion by the same count.

The attorney-general's letter of resignation then was read to the house by Mr. Roberts. "Mr. Speaker, with regret and reluctance I have accepted this resignation," he said.

Mr. Cass, a 50-year-old former magistrate, had been attorney-general since October, 1962, when he replaced Keiso Roberts, now lands and forests minister, in the portfolio.

Mr. Cass formerly was minister of municipal affairs. His elevation to attorney - general saw him act as government leader in the legislature in the absence of the premier.

A former magistrate in the eastern Ontario counties of Grenville and Dundas, Mr. Cass first was elected to the legislature in 1955 for the Grenville-Dundas riding. He entered the cabinet as minister of highways in 1958 and was named municipal affairs minister in 1961.

FROM CHESTERVILLE

He was born in Chesterville, about 40 miles southeast of Ottawa, in 1913. He was educated in local schools and obtained his bachelor of arts degree from Victoria College, University of Toronto, in 1935.

He received his masters degree two years later and was called to the bar in 1936.

Mr. Cass served in the Second World War as a major with the Stormont-Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders.

Peter Lorre Found Dead In Apartment

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Peter Lorre, a master of horror on the screen, but offscreen one of the most gentle of men, was found dead Monday of an apparent stroke.

The body of the 59-year-old Hungarian-born actor was found beside his bed by his housekeeper at his modest Chinese style apartment near Hollywood Boulevard. Lorre had suffered from high blood pressure for years.

In 1950 while making a movie in Spain, he almost died of high blood pressure but a Spannish doctor used the old fashioned remedy of blood - letting by leeches to reduce the pressure and save the actor's life.

Lorre's comic talents were last used by Jerry Lewis in The Patsy, a picture just completed. He also had done Muscle Beach Party for American - International Pictures—the same studio in which he co-starred with Boris Karloff and Vincent Price in Comedy of Terrors.

He leaves his fourth wife, Anna Marie, from whom he was separated. They had a 10-year-old daughter, Kathryn.

DEFECTOR'S HOME LOST

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Otto G. Otepka, who defected to Red China during the Korean War and then returned to the United States, lost his home and everything in it in a fire Monday. Bell's wife and three of their four children were in the home but escaped unhurt. Fire Chief Robert Thomas estimated the four-room house was worth about $8,000 and said the Bells had no insurance.

today.

Police also disclosed that one of the thieves apparently dealt with the bank to make his job easier.

A man identifying himself as Joseph Thomlinson opened a savings account at the bank early this month, depositing $100 and giving as his address the vacant store next door. He later issued a $75 cheque on the account to pay a month's rent on the store.

The man also rented a $7-a-year safe-deposit box at the bank. That box was one of the none broken into.

The break-in recalled similar cases in recent years in Ontario, the largest of which were a $3,300,000 looting of vaults at Brockville Trust and Savings Company in 1958 and the nearly $1,000,000 theft from vaults and safe-deposit boxes of Frontier Trust Company of St. Catharines in 1960.

$1,500 Damage In Collision

PICTON (Staff) — Property damage amounting to over $1,500 resulted early this morning as result of a rear-end collision on No. 14 Highway about two miles south of Rossmore.

Malcolm Greer, 43, of Wellington, was southbound about 12:30 a.m. when he slowed down to pass a car stopped with a flat tire. As he did so his car was struck from behind by a car driven by David VanGeest, R. R. 2, Picton. The impact pushed the Greer car down the highway and into the guide rail.

There were no injuries and the $1,500 damage resulted mostly to the late model Greer auto.

'Fellowship' Key to Peace Kiwanians Told

PICTON (Staff) — "Fellowship is the key to peace," said Canon Robert Wright, as he was the guest speaker at the regular dinner meeting of the Picton Kiwanis Club here Monday night.

"The Church and the State must give more dynamic leadership than either is now giving if we are to enjoy true fellowship which is the only key to peace, whether it be here within our borders, or within God's World," he added.

"Not too long ago, I met a student from Asia who was studying at one of our Universities. I asked him some straight forward questions about his impressions of Western civilization. Here are some of the answers I received:

He said that he found that Western man was pre-occupied with success, success at any cost, often at the expense of his own immortal soul. He mentioned that he had learned that it was common practice for one to 'pad one's expense account', to take insurance companies for all it was worth because they were big business and could afford it.

To travel at excessive speeds on the highways with little or no concern for the well being of others. To look for ways, legislate or otherwise to get out of paying income tax, and yet still wanting all the services a welfare state can provide; to buy votes because it was more important to get your party elected than to uphold the moral standards that one gives lip service to on Sunday morning, and to feel that no party or gathering is a success unless alcoholic beverages are served.

Mr. Wright left some recommendations that he felt would bring about a closer fellowship and at the same time would assist each other in putting across the individual projects of the different clubs, for "we are all working to improve the conditions of mankind in the home, in the community, and throughout the world," he added.

Canon Wright suggested also that the service clubs should set up joint plans to commemorate Confederation that will look ahead the next hundred years as well as back upon the past.

"My suggestion," he said, "would be a closed swimming pool that can be used by the children of the whole county and could become the beginning of a Y.M.C.A. or a Y.W.C.A. much like the one enjoyed so thoroughly in the City of Kingston, to which I drive my children and others each Saturday."

"And finally, we as service clubs should be so interested in town and county government that we should encourage our memberships to take an active part in governing our communities. We get only the kind of government that we get out and work for," he concluded.

The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian Andy McIntosh and thanked for his excellent speech by Kiwanian Len Pearn.

Apple Growers Asked to Aid Promotion Plan

PICTON (Staff) — During the week of April 6th, the Ontario Apple Growers will be asked to vote on an Apple Advertising and Promotion program. The program will provide for a levy of 3c per bushel on fresh apples, 4c per cwt. on processing apples, and 3c per cwt on juice apples. The money will be used to stimulate, increase, and improve the marketing of apples grown in Ontario, by advertising, promotion, publicity, new research development, and by providing information services to producers and others.

The program is being set up under Section 12 of the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Act, which provides that where an Association of Producers of a farm market wish to improve the marketing of that product, the government on the advice of the Farm Products Marketing Board, may establish such a program requiring all producers to pay fees to the Association.

The Government will not act, of course, until it is satisfied that a majority of producers want such a program.

The Apple Section of the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association has made the request to the Farm Marketing Board for the apple program. The Board has prepared a set of regulations in consultation with the Directors of the Apple section, and the Board has now asked that the Association conduct a vote of the apple growers of the province to determine if a majority are in favor.

The collection program that is proposed, has been developed by the Apple Section after careful study of plans elsewhere such as New York State and Michigan. The proposed program is patterned fairly closely after the very successful program in operation in New York State.

During the week of April 6, the Association will hold 16 meetings throughout Ontario. At each of these meetings the Apple Section will be on hand to answer any questions that growers might have. After this, the vote will be taken. The ballots will be handed to the returning officer, which it is anticipated will be a member of the Department of Agriculture, or an agricultural representative, who will place all ballots in a sealed envelope and forwarded to the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Board.

When all 16 meetings have been completed, and all ballots are in, the Board will count the ballots in the presence of representatives of the Apple Section. If a majority of those voting are in favour of the program it will be put into effect for the 1964 crop.

Successful Living

Occupational Therapist To Aid Handicapped Widow

DEAR DORIS — I am 60 years of age and for the last two years have been employed as a housekeeper. Before this, I did clerical work, as a hospital ward clerk, etc.

Although I can save more money at housekeeping, I cannot now keep up the work as I have a touch of arthritis in my knees and I cannot stand for long periods.

Can you tell me where I might earn my living, doing work where I can sit at least some of the time? I am very interested in cooking and am considered a good cook, but of course this is something where one must stand all the time. — WIDOW.

DEAR WIDOW — Yours is a case for an inspired employment officer or rehabilitation worker. I know women who keep house for large families from wheel chairs.

Good cooks are rare; and they don't have to stand all the time. If a high stool (which moves in when you do) won't solve your problems, pay a visit to your rehabilitation centre or the occupational therapy department of the general hospital, and have the occupational therapist work out something for you.

DEAR DORIS — There was a letter from a man to you a few days ago saying he had been told by a lady (?) he would hear from her lawyer because he had found two of her children in an old frig in his garage, and he had taken them out, given them a whack on their rears and sent them home.

Instead, she should have punished them and given them to understand others' property is not their playgrounds. Suppose instead of going out to work he had just gone to lock up prior to going away for several hours or days, what then?

I am a grandmother with grandchildren and it bothers me to see children let run wild with no discipline. Then we hear and see youngsters in trouble as a result. — WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED — Agreed! We cheat the young fry when we deprive them of loving discipline. How otherwise can they learn to behave?

CONFIDENTIAL TO NEED HELP FAST — Young brother hates to think you are in charge of him. He does his best to rile you — and succeeds! You simply must ignore this. Then choose your time for a talk with your father. Tell him you need someone to take your part. Ask for understanding and a fair deal.

DEAR DORIS — Whenever my sister does anything bad, she blames it on me. I don't like this because it gets me into trouble. Whenever I try to explain to my father who did it, he gets made at me.

I think my sister is a little bit spoiled. Please tell me what to do. ALWAYS GETTING THE BLAME.

DEAR ALWAYS — Try to think back. Were you the first baby? Perhaps you took a dim view of little sister turning up at all; so Dad got the idea you didn't like her.

Have you tried making a pal of her? She probably thinks you are quite wonderful, underneath. How about proving to her, and yourself, that you are? It's worth a try.

DEAR DORIS — I am 11 years old, five feet two inches, and weigh 105 pounds. I always try to lose weight by doing exercises, not eating bread or potatoes, and having dietary lunches.

My mother thinks I should go to see a specialist because she thinks it might be my glands. Could you send me something on losing weight like exercises and foods? — FATSO.

DEAR FATSO — You may look somewhat overweight, but I'd get to that doctor if I were you. When your frame lengthens out you may use up that extra fat in a hurry.

Then if you find you still want it, write again, enclosing ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and I'll send you a simple reducing diet.

(Teen-ager troubles can be desperate. Doris will be glad to offer ideas which can help you over the rough spots. When you write, identify yourself.)

GOOD DEED MARS Y

CHICAGO HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP)—The six Cub Scouts who dashed into a burning home Monday and carried out three small children are waiting to see what they're going to get out of it. It's not that they're hoping for an award—they just learned that two of the rescued children have the measles. None of the cubs have had the measles.

HAVE MORE PRISONERS

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Canada's federal prison population is growing at a "fantastic rate," A. J. MacLeod, commissioner of penitentiaries, said in an interview Sunday. It has increased by 385 since last September, to the point where there are 7,600 prisoners in various federal prisons compared with 5,700 in 1958.

Emphasis Is on Prevention Rather Than Custodial Care For Mental Illness — Williamson

"The next decade should see a trend toward community centred comprehensive mental health services," stated Dr. Evelyn Williamson, Belleville psychiatrist, in addressing a meeting at the second annual conference of the Ontario division, Canadian Mental Health Association, held at the Park Plaza Hotel in Toronto, March 20 and 21.

"The mental patient should have available the same range of ancillary services as are now available to the physically ill," she continued. "He should be cared for as soon as possible to his home and family. This can only be accomplished by having psychiatric units in general hospitals and such hospital related services as day and night care and outpatient clinics."

She recognized that funding such a comprehensive program would require long range planning. The community must know its characteristics, its needs, its facilities and its future direction. It is necessary that present facilities be augmented and extended rather than duplicated. She emphasized that to be acceptable any medical insurance program must include psychiatric services.

PROFESSIONAL PEOPLE NEEDED

More professional people are needed in all areas of psychiatric service. There are too few psychiatrists for them to be the sole guidance figures. The general practitioner can and must be competent to deal with the emotional problems of his patients. As more psychiatric training is given to the para-medical team - (the nurse, social worker, occupational therapist, etc.) the psychiatrist will take on the role of specialist leader and consultant.

She stressed that education of the public was needed to change attitudes.

FIVE WAYS TO HELP

Dr. Williamson felt that C.M.H.A. members had an important part to play. They could support the overall program of needs as well as individual aspects of the plan. They could study their own communities with reference to facilities and provincial legislation with regard to such things as medical insurance programs. They could share the results of their studies with others. They could serve as board or committee members or as volunteer workers. They could encourage students and residents on mental health careers and the general public on the importance of training people to work in the field of mental health.

Prevention, treatment and rehabilitation are now emphasized rather than mere custodial care of the mentally ill.

"Comprehensive planning is needed," stated Dr. Williamson, "to provide the array of coordinated services needed to ensure the continuity of care so important for the patient".

Mrs. Louise Hurst, Mr. Roger Roulet and Mrs. Jannette Thompson of the board of directors of the Belleville branch of C.M.H.A. attended the conference.

Buyers Should Study Antiques Before Buying, Speaker Warns

"Even experts make mistakes," warned Mrs. Shirley C. Wilder, well-known Kingston antique dealer during a recent address on "Do's and Don'ts at Auction Sales," in which she advised members of the Belleville and District University Women's Club to be cautious and careful when buying an antique.

Mrs. Wilder defined a Canadian antique as an object made before 1840, and an American antique as an object made before 1830, but noted that, in Europe, an article made in 1830 would be comparatively modern. Many collectors' items were not genuine antiques, added the speaker, since some fairly modern articles, such as Carnival glass, became collectors' items as soon as their manufacture had been discontinued.

The standard advice of "watch the dealer and follow his way of bidding" at an auction sale was unsound, said Mrs. Wilder. Aside from the fact that some of the cheap, but clever reproductions on the market today could "fool" the dealer, a dealer might bid more than five times for an antique because he wanted it for his private collection; because one of his customers was willing to over-pay for it; or because he was anxious to outbid a rival dealer, she explained.

READ, STUDY, HANDLE

The speaker further advised her audience not to buy any antique at a sale without first having read all the pages of the booklet in which items to be auctioned were listed; not to buy a piece of antique furniture without having previously examined it to ascertain that the whole piece was original; and not to buy colored glass at all without some assurance that the piece was genuine. Mrs. Wilder noted that colored glass was particularly amenable to reproduction and explained that it was necessary to "read about glass, handle it and study it," before buying it.

However, in spite of all the potential hazard, it was fun to go to an auction sale, concluded the speaker.

Mrs. Wilder displayed several antiques. Among them, and arousing especial interest, were a charming "little night lamp" of Cranberry glass, an "Old Sheffield tea caddy, and two Oriental antiques from the collection of Mrs. Wilder's son.

Mrs. Wilder was introduced by Miss Madeline Young and thanked by Mrs. W. L. Simmons.

DISCUSS SPRING TEA

During the business meeting, which preceded Mrs. Wilder's address, a letter acknowledging the club's donation to Canadian University Services Overseas was read, and plans for the Spring Fair and exhibition of Manly Macdonald paintings, which will be held on May 2nd in St. Michael's auditorium were discussed. Mrs. Macdonald will donate to the club, this year a small untramed painting, which will conform with requirements.

The date of the next regular meeting will be Friday, April 17th in order to accommodate Dr. Pauline Jewett, who will be the speaker at that meeting.

Clinic Will Be Formed For Retarded

WINNIPEG (CP) — A clinic for care of pre-school children whose mental and physical development is retarded has been established by the Manitoba Hospital Commission.

Due to go into operation at Winnipeg Children's Hospital by summer, the clinic will be run at a cost of $20,000 a year, to be paid by the province's Hospital Services Plan.

Hospital officials say they hope the clinic will result in hundreds of children with developmental delay being saved from lives in institutions.

Dr. W. Wallace Grant, a psychiatrist-pediatrician, has been named director and his assistant will be pediatrician Dr. Kenneth McKee.

Children with poor hearing or sight, speech impediments, lack of muscular control, difficulties in habit formation or problems resulting from brain injury will be referred to the clinic by family doctors or pediatricians, hospital out-patient departments and child health centres.

While trying to help children make the most of their positive attributes and prepare them for regular schools, the clinic will also provide a centre for giving specialized training to medical students and graduate physicians.

80 Senior Citizens Enjoy Social Event

CAMPBELLFORD — About 80 members were present for the regular meeting of the Senior Citizens Club on Wednesday evening, which began with a pot-luck supper. President Harry Cassidy introduced the guests which included Mayor and Mrs. Morley Tanner and Councillor and Mrs. R. Hughes.

Mayor Tanner addressed the group briefly wishing them the best of luck for future plans and said the town was always glad to assist the club in any way. Councillor Hughes also spoke, wishing them continued progress.

Past president Ernest Craighead was presented with a gift by Forest Dennis on behalf of the members in appreciation for his efforts during his term of office.

FINE PROGRAM

The Senior Citizens Glee Club under the direction of Thomas Gillibrand presented the following program accompanied by Mrs. J. Black at the piano: quintet, comprised of Mrs. B. Miller, Mrs. Charles Shaw and William Skinner; ladies of the Glee Club singing in unison; the entire Glee Club presented several selections with all members joining in; a humorous duet by Ernest Craighead and Robert Black and Fred Tredree presented an accordion number with Eileen Griffith, Irene Smith, David Larcome and Jimmie Griffith.

The remainder of the evening was spent in playing cards and dancing to the music of Peter Monoghan.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

AT HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Kerr A. Losey, John Street, Stirling will be at home to their friends on Wednesday, March 25th, 1964 from 2.30 - 5.00 and 7.30 - 9.30 on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Flindall, Belleville, R.R. 7, announce the engagement of their daughter Susan May, to William H. Way, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Way, Belleville, R.R. 7. Marriage to take place Saturday, April 18 at 2 p.m. in Christ Church, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. George Grant, Dufferin Avenue attended the funeral of Mr. Grant's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Grant in Bancroft, yesterday afternoon.

St. Michael's C.W.L. Holds St. Patrick's Tea

Every Irishman loves a cup of tea and with this in mind, Mrs. G. Donoghue and Mrs. A. Kaiser used shamrocks and greenery to magically transform St. Michael's auditorium into a bit of old Erin to do honour to St. Patrick on his day.

Upon entering the hall guests were cordially received by the president, Mrs. E. Rashotte and the tea convener, Mrs. F. H. Rose.

The homemaking table resplendent with shamrocks and ladies with goodies proved too tempting to be by-passed. Mrs. J. Boyle, Mrs. J. Morey, Mrs. S. Gauvin Sr. and Mrs. T. Mascaro did a fine trade.

Continuing on their way guests were invited by Mrs. C. O'Brien to the tea room, through an archway, gay with green, shamrocks and white Dowers. Here the main table was covered with a white damask cloth dotted with shamrocks and centred with white 'mums. The flame from tall green and white candles in silver candelabra spread a cheery glow on the silver tea service presided over by Miss B. Ford, Mrs. F. Domenico, Mrs. C. Regan and Mrs. K. J. Sodes.

The miniature full-skirted Irish colleens covering the white cloths of the guest tables added a special note of Irish hospitality.

The various duties of serving, replenishing and the making of tea were capably performed by other members of St. Michael's Catholic Women's League.

Treasurer for the afternoon was Miss A. Doyle.

Thanks and appreciation are extended to everyone responsible for this highly successful venture for a job well done.

Marg Osburne to Present Ballad by Belleville Woman

Jean Riley (Mrs. William E. Riley) 7 Strathcona Drive, has had the distinction of having a song accepted for presentation on the D. . Messer Easter show on "Jones" March 30th at 7:30 p.m. on the CBC network.

The show will originate from the Children's Hospital in Halifax. The soloist will be Marg Osburne, vocalist with the show. This was confirmed in a letter to Mrs. Riley recently.

The song, called "Faith You Have in Me" was written originally as a poem for her son Ross, when he was three years old and thought his parents could capture the moon for him. The song was later published by the firm of Gordon V. Thompson in Toronto.

Publisher Gordon V. Thompson had "Faith You Have in Me" arranged by Irving Berlin's personal arranger in New York.

ANTHEM ENTERED IN CONTEST

An anthem written by Mrs. Riley was performed at College Hill United Church. This has been entered in a contest in Toronto. The lyrics were written by Mrs. Riley, and Mr. Larry Brown collaborated with Mrs. Riley on the music arrangement.

Mrs. Riley is a graduate of Lawrence Park Collegiate, Toronto, and a graduate of Toronto Western hospital, class of 1942.

She has been invited to go to New York to see a music publisher about other songs she has written.

Don Messer on several occasions has performed songs by and the distinction of having a song accepted for presentation on the CBC network.

Food Shopping in Sixties Subject of Home Economist

By Mrs. Percy MacMullen

RAWDON — On Thursday, March 19th Pleasgrove Branch Women's Institute under the leadership of their president, Mrs. Alex Tanner sponsored a Home Economics short course on the subject "Food Shopping in the Sixties" at the new educational centre of Marsh Hall United Church.

Miss Mary McKenzie, home economist with the Ontario Department of Agriculture at F.W.I.O. headquarters, Toronto, gave an interesting and educational commentary from ten until four o'clock. Two other branches were represented, River Valley and Uniondale. Three other nearby branch institutes did not accept the invitation.

The morning session opened with a resume of a survey conducted by the national Health and Welfare department. Many factors which affect food shopping were examined. Various brands of food, grading, processing, packaging and labelling at both the manufacturers' and consumers' levels were discussed.

A leaflet on "Canada food grades" stressed that the word "Canada" in a grade means that the product has been graded according to federal standards. Another leaflet gave a full list of cereals which are on the market today with the relative cost per serving. A copy of each was given to those in attendance. Various other booklets were displayed for the group to view at the noon hour and included books which could be purchased.

RETAIL METHODS

Store arrangements and display methods at retail level gave an informative idea of the vast planning of those stores who are food dealers. There are many resources to consider such as money, time, space, energy, equipment, etc., but it is most important to learn the best methods of buying, storing and preparing various foods.

Vegetables are best cooked until just tender and the juice is valuable in soups, etc.

Miss McInnis gave a resume of what foods freeze or can to the best advantage, and passed along many good ideas for planning menus, marketing once a week, and stressed that each housewife know her own groceries and buy what is best for her own household.

"Canada's food guide" was displayed on a flip sheet and the speaker said the cause of many bone breakages in older people was the lack of calcium in the bloodstream.

COMPARE LEMON PIES

At this juncture Mrs. Harry Coulter and Mrs. Roswell Reid each made a lemon pie. There were two trays with all ingredients in readiness. One lady used all prepared food and the other made her pie in the old fashioned way. These pies were sampled in the afternoon and both were luscious and tasty. The only difference was that it took less time and fewer dishes to use the prepared food whereas squeezing two lemons and making pie crust absorbed time.

The commentary covered the various kinds of milk and cream on the market and outlined which vegetables were best buys at this time of year.

At noon the ladies sampled three kinds of peaches, fancy, standard and second quality and gave their opinions. All enjoyed their own box luncheon and the hostess group furnished tea and coffee.

The afternoon session centred on modern advertising, the value of vitamins in food, prefilled flour, and many items common on a grocery list.

A film strip gave a food demonstration of the various grades of meat, eggs and dairy products.

IV. STOREKEEPER IN PLEASED

The last hour was devoted to detergents, honey, tea, etc. and a chart giving the exact cost of a stove pie and a homemade pie. The speaker stressed that if the housewife is pleased with a certain product then she should tell her store keeper and he will be glad to know. Mrs. Alex Tanner voiced thanks to Miss McInnis for the educational commentary. Mrs. Percy Mullen expressed appreciation on behalf of River Valley W.I. and Uniondale W.I. for the kind invitation to share such a worthwhile course on food shopping. She also voiced thanks to Miss McInnis for her interesting message.

The Home Economics Service program for Ontario is under the direction of Miss Helen McCutcheon of the Extension branch and it is planned to help rural women and girls to understand principles and to put them to use for the betterment of home and family life.

These courses are free to any rural group if they contact the County economist. Over 30,000 homemakers and girls participate in these programs annually.

SELL CALENDAR

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP)—Two young mothers, Diana De Filippi and Sally Zilber, decided to launch a business. Tired of missing public events because they didn't know about them till it was too late, the housewives worked at home making up their own public events calendar. It was easy to sell it to local retailers.

Elected Group Travel Convenor

OLIVE BRANSCHE

Photographed as she received word of her appointment as Mrs. Branche quickly recovered and said travel details for her club would be handled excitedly by Canadian National. "CN" s Group Travel Plans offer convenient, comfortable travel at the most economical rates. We all save because there are thrifty plans for both large or small groups. Party Fares for groups of 10 or more members save us 10% to 20% over and above the big savings on Red "Bargain" and White "Economy" Days". Mrs. Branche chirped away happily about her plans for the future —

"We'll stretch our excursion budget still further — by chartering a CN coach. For example, the 60 of us, with a coach of our own, can save as much as 33%. And it's exclusively ours. One day, we'll surprise our husbands and go away overnight. We can, too! We can charter a sleeper. You see, dear boy, nowadays it's smarter to charter — and cheaper by far!"

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: Several women I know have the nerve-wracking habit of curling up on a chair and drawing their feet up with them. You can imagine what this does to me now that I've just had my furniture newly slipcovered. I don't like to seem inhospitable, but would it seem impolite if I asked them to take their feet off so they won't dirty up the fabric?

Mrs. L.A.B., Columbus, Ohio

Answer: When this happens —and I know how irritating this can be — try suggesting "Why don't you kick your shoes off so you'll be more comfortable" as a way of reminding them they shouldn't sit with their feet tucked up on the furniture.

Question: I'm taking a car trip this spring and, for the sake of comfort while driving will wear slacks during most of the journey. I'll be staying at motels mostly, but have reservations at major hotels in large cities. Most I change into a skirt before checking in at each stop over, or would it be permissible to walk through the lobby in slacks. I don't want to feel impropery dressed, and would appreciate your assistance?

E.V.A., Washington, D.C.

Answer: Slacks may be worn when checking into a motel, but you'd feel more comfortable wearing a skirt when entering the lobby of a big-city hotel, so I'd suggest you plan to change when your itinerary calls for this type of stop over.

Ghana Woman Will Teach in Own Country

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — When Patience Asante goes home to Ghana she will be an unseen teacher with a nation-wide impact.

She will operate as a one-woman educational programming department for the Ghana Broadcasting Corporation when it opens in October.

Miss Asante has been the only woman among 10 Ghanaians who have been with the CBC since June learning to be TV producers. Each will help set up a different category of program in the East African country.

"I am still regarded as a teacher—not a producer—in the sense that I can't leave schools broadcasting to do any other television job," Miss Asante said.

Her teacher training began with college in Ghana and the University of London Institute of Education. She taught education in Accra and then worked on the radio schools broadcasting staff.

Miss Asante will leave Canada about the end of April to take more training in London before she goes home.

The TV programs, she will produce will be aimed at classroom use. She isn't sure exactly how it will work but assumes it will be similar to the present radio system.

"There is a radio reception box in each classroom, put there by the government. Teachers are sent brochures to tell them what programs will be on and when and how they can lead up to them and follow them in lessons afterward.

"It can be done because the timetables in Grades 1 to 6, the compulsory grades in Ghana, are almost the same."

With TV there will be one difference at the start. "There won't be a receiver in every room, nor will they be supplied. The schools will have to get sets through their own efforts."

Miss Asante says that, as in Canada, the programs will be based on curriculum enrichment. "We try to do a little more with films and experts than the classroom teacher can do."

School broadcasts are in English, the official language of Ghana although six or, seven others are spoken.

Deseronto Wins Legion Ladies' Bowling Title

A Deseronto team captured top honors in women's five-pin competition staged by the Zone 3 Ladies Auxiliary of Canadian Legion at Deseronto on the weekend.

Teams from Bancroft, Deseronto, Belleville, Tweed and Madoc took part in the competitions to name a team for regional and provincial play.

Vivian Brant was captain of a team consisting of Betty Brant, Mary Tompkins, Wilma Tinney, Kathy Fraser and Rita Wager which won top spot for Deseronto.

Three games were played with the winners opening a small lead in the first game, faltering slightly in the second and coming back strong in the final to defeat Tweed, the second-place finishers.

Terry Black, of Bancroft, won top individual honors with high single and triple for the tournament.

Arrangements have been made for another tournament to be held in Madoc on April 18.

Ever Present Aunt Poses Many Problems for Couple

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband's aunt is a widow. She has been very generous to Ronald and we can't afford to offend her. This means we must include Auntie whenever we entertain.

Is it too bad when we have an open house or reception where people mill around, but a sit-down supper poses a real problem because we don't know where to seat her.

ANN LANDERS

Auntie is a belligerent, outspoken woman, who comes on mighty strong. She has lived in this community for over 35 years and has managed to make several enemies. In addition to the long list of people who dislike her intensely, there are a number of individuals with whom she is not on speaking terms.

Our supper party set-ups are tables of eight. It is virtually impossible to find seven people who would be comfortable at a table with Auntie. If you have any suggestions Ronald and I would be grateful. — S.BALL.

DEAR S — Why scramble your brains over this? Auntie sounds like Bad News no matter where you put her. If she's not seated beside an enemy she'll probably make one.

Why don't you put her next to a broom closet so she'll be close to transportation — and then forget it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband has been bugging me about something pretty silly. Please be the referee.

My boss lives about a mile beyond our home. About three evenings a week we leave the office within minutes of each other. Often he asks me if I would like a ride home. My husband claims this looks bad to the neighbors — especially since he (my husband) is out of town a couple of nights a week.

Does it make sense to stand on a street corner and wait for a bus and then walk two blocks in the dark on a snowy night when I could be driven to my door? We live in Grand Rapids, Michigan, and the winters here are no joke.

My boss and I are on friendly terms but it's strictly business. He is happily married and so am I. There is nothing personal between us. I'd like to hear your ideas on this. — HOME FREE.

DEAR FREE — If you had been inviting your boss in to have a little drink when your husband is out of town, I'd say he was justified. I see no harm, however, in being dropped off at your door — in full view of the neighbors or anybody else.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Last year we had to send our 17-year-old daughter to a home for unwed mothers. After all the unhappiness she went through I never thought we would ever have to worry about her conduct again. Well, I was wrong.

Gloria returned in November after signing papers giving her child up for adoption. She was depressed, which was understandable, but she was pleasant and co-operative around the house. She talked about going back to school "next year."

Yesterday we learned that Gloria has been secretly dating the boy who got her in trouble. Our neighbors hated to tell us, but they felt we should know that this boy has been coming to our house in our absence.

I don't think we could live through another year like the last one. Please tell us what to do. Gloria will be 18 next week. The boy is 18. Thank you. — P.D.Q.

DEAR P.D.Q. — Have a talk with Gloria and the boy. If they want to marry perhaps you should encourage it. This isn't my favorite kind of marriage but it beats what could be the alternative.

Cross-Canada Survey

White, Navy and Pink Most Popular Colors

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Fashion shows in Paris and Rome are all very well but what's more to the point is how they affect the styles displayed on store racks accessible to the average Canadian woman.

As far as this spring is concerned, the exclusive salons of the world's fashion capitals are having a definite effect on the Canadian ready-to-wear trade.

Buyers and store managers questioned in a Cross - Canada Survey by The Canadian Press generally agree that Canadian women are adopting this year's leading couturier trends quickly.

Color and femininity are the loudest rustles in a quiet fashion season. Across Canada, navy, white and pink are the most popular colors, although the order of preference may vary from place to place. These were also the prominent colors of the Paris and New York showings.

LITTLE GIRL LOOK

Surface-interest fabrics such as linens and slubs, tweeds, huge plaids and lively patterns are used in soft, semi - fitting styles tuned to the feminine, little-girl ideal. Skirts are slim, A-line and pleated.

In footwear, extra high heels and pointed toes are in demand in only a few areas. Toes are still tapered, but gently. Pumps are popular, especially in colors. And in spite of the Canadian climate, low-cut styles with open sides and heels are selling. The two-tone comeback is gathering force.

The ubiquitous Chanel look turns up in every province with its loose, straight jacket, collarless and braid - trimmed, and its modified shift dress.

Hats feature brims and sailor styles and many have a linen look to complement coats and suits in the same texture.

All-weather coats in pastels are belted or partially so, and many are cut with pleated skirts and cape effects.

There are other coats in candied pastel tweeds, mohairs, bouclette and twill and the order of the color spectrum is white, ivory, pink and rose.

The growing interest in lace and ruffles is strongest in Montreal and Toronto. Lace takes the spotlight after five but there is a suggestion of it during the day, even in lacy straw hats. Ruffles touch the throat, wrists and trail down the front of blouses and dresses.

Batwing sleeves and capes gain emphasis in Quebec and Ontario cities. Here, especially, shoes have lower heels, often stacked, and the open, bare look.

In suits, Winnipeg casts one of several votes for the alternative of the Chanel jacket—the military, double - breasted and and slightly longer brass - buttoned version.

From one end of the country to the other, women still show a springtime fancy for all-over floral hats, though high fashion potentates have decreed only floral trim for this year.

Regina reports pink and dusty pastels its favorite colors in everything, including hats. The modified shift and jumper dress have both found continuing welcome there.

In Edmonton, several fashion co-ordinators comment on how much faster trends from style centres are catching on than in former years. They cite current acceptance of capes, of pastel-toned tweeds and open shoes as examples.

WARDROBE PLANNING FOR A COOL SUMMER

No one likes to think about long summer dresses when the temperature is in the humid eighties. Because we like to forget how uncomfortable this ordeal can be, we sometimes tend to brainwash ourselves on this subject. After all, it is cool and sunny in April when most summer wardrobes are in the planning stages. Most of us have, at least, one cool summer dress which, unfortunately, needs frequent pressing. Now that the stores are stocked with cool, comfortable summer dresses and suits, one of the first rules to remember is "Don't buy it, if it has to be pressed after each wearing."

Before any shopping is done, a thorough review should be made of what is left over from last summer. This does not mean just taking those dresses and suits out of their garment bags. It means trying them all on to check the fit, the length of the skirts, the fabric and the general condition of the garment.

It will soon become apparent that replacements are needed for the average wardrobe. In the case of summer suits, sometimes a new blouse will add another look to an otherwise tired outfit. Sometimes a skirt can be salvaged. Then too, once in a while the whole suit will have to be discarded.

A review of last year's accessories will show that replacements in this department will rejuvenate last year's favourite ensembles. If 1963's accessories were white, it is easy to update a whole wardrobe by adding shoes, gloves and handbags in 1964's newest shade — creamy beige. This color is being shown with every tone from navy to pale pink this year.

Summer dresses can be renewed by the addition of fresh belts in velvet for after-five dresses, or soft "pretend" leather for more casual dresses. Cotton shift dresses are to be had at all price points. Some of the more expensive take on an air of chic when coupled with a good sweater of a toning or contrasting color.

The only accessory that really does not lend itself to two seasons' wear is millinery. There is really nothing older than last year's hat. For 1964, the wide shady brims are new-looking with their tilted Florentine brims of unusual straws or stitched fabrics. Some of the prettiest of the season are pricked at under $5.

Gloves are an absolute "must" for an urban summer. A collection of fresh white or pale beige washable gloves will make you feel and look well-groomed in the middle of a heat wave.

But before even a pair of gloves is added to the wardrobe, the whole collection should be reviewed. It's amazing how many of us suffer from amnesia when it comes to what we wore last year.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers care of this Paper.

U.C.W. Meeting

(PLAINFIELD U.C.W.)

Mrs. Wilbur Elliott opened her home for the Easter meeting of the U.C.W. on March 19th. Twenty three members attended.

The president, Mrs. Clarence Hall opened the meeting. Mrs. Harry Harrison was pianist for the various hymns of Easter time.

Several items of business were discussed including the annual fall bazaar and tea. Thank-you letters were read. A report of the Presbyterial, at Napanee, was given by one of the attending delegates, Mrs. Grant Kerr.

The Bible study was conducted by Mrs. Clarence Marshall, based on the theme, "I am."

The worship service was in charge of Mrs. Charles Dickens and was based on the story of the resurrection. Dr. and Mrs. Swan gave the topic on Christian Education. They discussed the various interpretations of the meaning of Easter and spoke briefly on the new curriculum.

A social half hour was enjoyed, light refreshments being served by Mrs. Frank Hodges, Mrs. Garnet Denyes and the hostess.

ROBERT HEIL'S (West Lorne Ontario) Third Prize Cherry Pie' 64

by Mary Moore

It must take a lot of courage for lass-aged boy to invade a predominently female Cherry Pie Bakeoff. It so, Robert Heil has the courage. His cherry pie won the third prize in the 1964 contest.

Notice that Robert's pastry calls for icing sugar and cream.

ROBERT HEIL'S THIRD PRIZE CHERRY PIE -1964:

West Lorne (Ontario) High School.

Pastry: 2 cups sifted pastry flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon icing sugar, ½ cup shortening, 1/3 cup lard, ½ cup sweet cream.

Measure and sift the flour, salt and sugar. Cut in the shortening until it is like cornmeal (for tenderness). Cut in the lard until it is the size of split peas (for flakiness). Sprinkle the cream over the flour, a tablespoon at a time, and mix lightly with a fork. Wrap in wax paper and chill. Enough pastry for the bottom and lattice top of a 9" pie.

Filling: 2¼ cups frozen cherries (thawed, drained, 20% sugar), ¾ cup cherry juice, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon butter, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon almond flavoring, ½ teaspoon red food coloring.

Drain cherries. Take 3 tablespoons cold cherry juice from the ¾ cup of juice and mix with the cornstarch. Heat the balance of the ¾ cup of juice until it comes to a boil. Slowly add cornstarch mixture. Stir well until mixture is transparent. Add the sugar to the hot mixture and cook for 3 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in butter, salt, almond extract, red food coloring and drained cherries. Allow filling to cool while rolling pastry.

Roll out 2/3 of the pastry on a lightly floured pastry cloth. Line 9" pie plate. Roll out the remainder of the dough and cut into ½" strips for the lattice top. Place the strips on a sheet of wax paper and with a pastry brush, lightly brush them with sweet cream. Put the filling into the unbaked pie shell. Attach the pastry strips to form a lattice top and decorate as desired. (Robert made freehand "leaves" for the edges.)

Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes. As soon as the edge of the pie browns, remove from oven and place tin foil around the edge of the pie to prevent it from browning further while the rest of the pie bakes.

CANADA CEMENT

A second kiln will be put in operation at Canada Cement's Point Anne plant on April 1st, and about 20 more men will have been called back by then. Working force will be about 140 hourly workers on April 1st, compared with about 120 on March 1st. It will take three days to get the kiln up to full production. It must be heated slowly to protect the bricks. Each kiln will produce about 3,700 barrels of cement, (350 pounds to the barrel), per day. Once the kiln is started, it's kept going for several months at least unless something goes wrong.

UNION CARBIDE

Employment is up to more than 200 men now at Union Carbide, the highest in the firm's history. For the past month, an average of about ten men a week have been hired. Manager Wilbur Caniff says the increase is due to expansion of old business, and it looks like a long-term trend. One of the greatest gains has been in the phenolic resin laminates — there are three shifts working on this production now. The laminates are used in the bare form for several purposes and copper-clad for the manufacture of printed circuits. Belleville's Northern Electric plant is one major customer of the copper-clad laminates.

DEACON BROTHERS

Sixteen commission salesmen of Deacon Brothers were in town Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, for a showing of the fall 1964 line of styles, to see the fabrics available for the fall, and for a preview of the planned advertising campaign. Sales of these lines will start soon. Spring and summer is almost over as far as clothing manufacture is concerned.

CANADIAN FLIGHT EQUIPMENT

Canadian Flight Equipment's assembly department moves down to Trenton from Campbellford today, and should be in full operation in Trenton by Wednesday. Initial shipments in the move were made last Saturday. Only three men have been working in the department in Campbellford for the past week or so. The department was left behind when the rest of the firm moved to Trenton because the parts had been made, and were ready in Campbellford, for a batch of the "propellant actuated devices" the firm produces, and management decided they might as well be assembled there. Today's move puts the whole of the Canadian Flight Equipment move in Trenton, leaving only the Flightline subsidiary in Campbellford.

BRUCE MAY MAUNFACTURING

Production of folding lawn fence began last week, at Bruce May Manufacturing, and the six-man work force is turning out about 4,000 feet of fence a day, in addition to normal production of screens. The fence will be sold through a wholesale house in Montreal, and through at least one station-wide retail chain.

KIWANIS SHELTERED WORKSHOP

One new contract was obtained last week for the Kiwanis Sheltered Workshop. They will be preparing direct-mail advertising packages for Deoro Steklite. The firm has had the work done in Toronto in the past, according to Deloro sales manager Bruce MacKenzie.

DUSSEK BROTHERS LTD.

Agencies for Dussek Brothers new Concretol product have been established now, to cover the whole of Canada according to company manager B. V. E. Walton. Handing Concretol in Ontario is InterCity Paint and Supply Ltd., of Toronto; in Montreal and Eastern Canada, L. Levasseur Enterprises of Montreal; and in Western Canada, W. Ronald Benson Inc., of Vancouver. All firms have stocks on hand and are planning full-scale promotion of the product for next winter. Concretol is a preparation made to be mixed with concrete. Dussek Brothers, which began production of it a few months ago, says that with Concretol, concrete will set and harden normally at temperatures far below freezing. The product promises a boost for winter construction in Canada, and a new industry for Belleville.

BATA

Bata Ltd.'s sales conference is over now and the 15 delegates have returned to their respective countries and the Bata firms they work for around the world. The group arrived in Batawa Wednesday, after a one-and-a-half week tour of the U.S., and shoe manufacturing operations there in Batawa, they had three days of lectures, demonstrations and discussions in which Bata advertising and sales campaigns in Canada and around the world were analyzed and explained. Because the delegates have different problems arising from the nature of the firms they represent and the countries they operate in, the lessons learned from the Canadian operation cannot, in most cases, be applied directly to their own work. The idea of the course, and of other courses run by Bata during the year, is to provide a large pool of experience from which each delegate can draw according to his requirements.

Delegates to the conference included Maqbul Alam of Pakistan, P. Dekkers of Holland, S. Eggert of Germany, H. Finch of New Zealand, W. Hammond of England, E. Jacob of Iraq, A Jesek of Kenya, G. Le Dru of France, L. Lim of Malaya, K. Lintner of South Africa, A. Nossek of Mexico, J. Okorie of Nigeria, O. Prieto of Chile, R. Sonder of Senegal and F. Warmkessel of the U.S.A. Organizers were L. Kursewicz of the U.S.A. and P. E. Cowell of Toronto.

ACHIEVEMENT RECOGNIZED — Ontario School for the Deaf curling team was presented with a trophy donated by the Northwestern Ontario Hearing Association by school superintendent J. D. Demeza, at windup game between teachers and students Monday afternoon at the Quinte Curling Club. Here are Superintendent J. D. Demeza; Eldon Clarke, skip; Raymonde LeBurn, vice; Diane Wilson, lead; and Ivan Beer, second. Organizer Denis Newman (left background) looks on in approval.

Canadians File Suit Against U. S. Company

CLEVELAND (AP) — A $2,200,000 lawsuit was filed Monday on behalf of twin Canadian boys who were born badly deformed after their mother allegedly used the drug thalidomide.

Richardson - Merrell Incorporated of Cincinnati was named defendant in the suit filed in common pleas court by the Cleveland law firm of Spangenberg, Hasenflue and Shibley. The company held U.S. and Canadian manufacturing rights to the drug that was developed in West Germany.

Donald G. Traci, lawyer with the law firm, said the suit was filed on behalf of Peter and Paul Settle of Hamilton, Ont., born Jan. 3, 1962, in Canada to Maxene Settle, 32. Her husband is a plumber. Traci said the Settles' four other children are normal.

NEGLIGENCE CHARGED

The suit alleges the company, which manufactured thalidomide under a trade name, distributed it to physicians for clinical testing on human beings and that the company was negligent in representing that its product was safe for pregnant mothers and acted as implied warranty.

Mrs. Settle said in the petition that she got a sample package of the drug from a physician and took one pill of the synthetic chemical on four straight nights during the early part of her pregnancy.

Compensatory damages of $1,000,000 were asked for each of the twin boys and $200,000 damage for the parents for loss of service and subsequent medical attention for the twins.

Traci said five other suits, seeking between $7,500,000 and $10,000,000, will be filed here within the next two weeks on behalf of one Canadian boy and three girls, all deformed.

In Cincinnati, officials of the drug firm said they had not heard of the suit and declined comment until they learn more about it and talk with lawyers.

HAMILTON (CP)—A $2,200,000 law suit filed by a Hamilton couple on behalf of their thalidomide twins will not be heard by Cleveland courts until "at least" 1966, their counsel said Monday.

Mrs. Settles had no comment in answer to questions about the suit.

A partner in the Cleveland law firm which represents them said Monday that it will be at least two years before their case comes to court.

Thomas Hasenflue, of the firm of Spangenberg, Hasenflue and Shibley, said the delay would be because of the complexities of the case and the heavy docket before Cleveland courts.

Dr. Frances Kelsey of the firm, Craig Spangenberg, was not available for comment.

The 1960 thalidomide tragedy

"I imagine that Mr. Spangenberg was retained because of his qualifications as a personal injury cases," Mr. Hasenflue said.

The Cleveland firm is involved in five other thalidomide cases and in the latest one claimed amount to about $10,000,000, he said.

The largest amount of damages claimed will serve as a deterrent to firms which sell drugs, Mr. Hasenflue said. "Adequate testing has been carried out," he said.

"If we can introduce the children but in the case of minors over 21 will accept photographs as evidence."

Kingston Plans To Teach French In Grade Five

KINGSTON (CP) — Kingston board of education's management committee decided Monday night to recommend to the board that conversational French be introduced at the Grade 5 level here next September.

The board will be asked to approve the recommendation at its April 9 meeting.

Conversational French was introduced at the Grade 6 and 7 level last year.

A poll taken by the board earlier this year showed about 90 per cent of parents in favor of introducing the course from Grade 3 upward but it was decided to extend it only one year because of the cost factor.

Court Upholds Dismissal of High Official

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada Monday upheld the dismissal of Mrs. Barbara Jarvis by Associated Medical Services Limited of Toronto for engaging in union activity while employed in a managerial position.

The court's 5-to-3 judgment upheld a ruling of the Ontario Court of Appeal which had reversed a decision of the Ontario Labor Relations Board ordering Mrs. Jarvis' reinstatement. The board found that she had been discharged for union activity contrary to the Ontario Labor Relations Act.

Mrs. Jarvis was employed as a clerk by Associated Medical Services in December, 1959, and was a member of Office Employees International Union, Local 131 (CLC).

At that time the union applied for certification as bargaining agent for employees of Associated Medical. In February, 1960, she was promoted to the position of railway claims supervisor, a position in which she exercised managerial functions.

The labor relations board in October, 1960, certified the union to represent employees of Associated Medical. Mrs. Jarvis was discharged in February, 1961, and asked the board to reinstate her.

The board ruled that Mrs. Jarvis had been dismissed contrary to the Labor Relations Act. It said the union activity for which she was dismissed did not conflict with her duty to her employer.

However, the board's order was reversed by the appeal court which held that a person who exercises managerial functions cannot be included within the bargaining unit and become entitled to rights under the Labor Relations Act.

Mr. Justice J. R. Cartwright said the question to be determined is whether the board under the Labor Relations Act had jurisdiction to order the reinstatement of Mrs. Jarvis, who at the time of her discharge was not an employee of Associated Medical under the provisions of the act.

"It appears to me that the appeal can succeed only if we are able to construe the act as giving the board power, in appropriate circumstances, to compel the continuation of the employment not only of all persons who are employees within the meaning of that term as defined in the act but also of all persons exercising managerial functions," Mr. Justice Cartwright said.

"In my opinion such a construction would be at variance with the purposes which appear from reading the act as a whole, and would involve giving a novel meaning to the words used. The legislature has employed."

OSD Students Enjoy Curling As Quinte Curling Club Guests

It has been almost a year now since a new avenue in recreation, the only one of its kind in Canada, was opened to students at the Ontario School for the Deaf here.

Students at the school were invited by active members of the Quinte Curling Club to become junior curlers along with students of the local high schools. Under the organization of Denis Newman, 38 pupils, with no previous experience at curling, took up the challenge.

An introductory program introduced the students to the terminology of curling by means of labeled diagrams. They became familiar with the various words associated with the game through the use of these diagrams and instruction of the blackboard.

Each rule and term was carefully outlined on the blackboard. Every problem and situation was presented to the pupils. Following classroom instruction the students were taken to the Curling Club where they watched theories put into practice by members of the club.

Finally after many hours of practise, the best players were selected from the 38 students and formed a team. They participated in bonspiels in such places as Napanee, Trenton and Cobourg. During the first year they suffered many defeats but refused to be discouraged and in less than a year they have become serious competitors.

A team of girls which has played less than two competitive games, through rigid practise, refined their skills and came within a rock about three weeks ago of representing the Quinte district in Toronto, following competition at Cobourg.

CHOOSE OWN EXECUTIVE

The students selected their own executive who set the rules and regulations. They run their own club and organize events, correspondence with other clubs and handled monies to finance the club.

Their latest project was a distinct crest and pin designating that curling club as an indication of pride and accomplishment.

Perhaps some day you may be fortunate enough to have a "deaf curler" assisting you.

Curling was first introduced to the school about a year ago when Mr. Newman joined the staff at O.S.D. and this year has been assisted by Miss Barbara Jennings.

The outstanding team of the year was awarded with a trophy on Monday afternoon following the season's wind-up game between students and teachers. The Ontario School for the Deaf in Belleville is the only school of its kind in Canada offering this type of sport to its students.

Woman Allowed To Take Son Home to Ireland

KINGSTON (CP)—A mother from Northern Ireland was making arrangements today to take her errant son back home with her after pleading successfully to have him spared from jail.

Mrs. Mary Heaney of Belfast was in magistrate's court Monday when Magistrate James B. Garvin read six charges of fraud and one of attempted fraud against her 19-year-old son, R. A. Heaney.

The soft-spoken woman told the magistrate the family "used to hear regularly" from her son after he came to Canada. Then he stopped getting letters and she felt he must be in some kind of trouble."

She came to Canada three weeks ago and enlisted the help of relatives near Toronto in the search for her son. She located him in Toronto, but he did Kingston police. He was arrested Saturday and brought here for trial.

"He was always a good boy at home," Mrs. Heaney said. . . . I'm sure he just got running with the wrong crowd here."

Magistrate Garvin fined the youth $1 on each charge and ordered restitution made to the defrauded firms.

Mrs. Heaney paid the money and said today she plans to take her son home with her when she leaves Wednesday for Belfast.

Fluoridation of Communal Water Supplies Not Harmful Report From Federal Govt.

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government said Monday that fluoridation of communal water supplies is considered to be of "great importance" in the total health picture of Canada's population.

It said no ill effects had been observed in persons who consume water with fluoride content adjusted to one part of fluoride per 1,000,000 parts of water, nor among thousands who have been drinking water fluoridated from underground deposits of fluoride.

However, the federal health department has given no advice for the specific purpose of influencing policy decisions in relation to fluoridation.

A written government statement on fluoridation was read to the Commons by John C. Munro, parliamentary secretary to Health Minister Judy LaMarsh in reply to questions by Manitoba dentist Joseph Slogan (PC—Springfield).

Mr. Slogan asked the federal government's position in regard to fluoridation of communal water supplies and when a clear statement of policy regarding the "favorable results of water fluoridation on the teeth" could be expected.

LIMITED TO RESEARCH

Noting that the health department has been engaged in fluoridation research for some 16 years, the government reply said the department's activities limited to research, the publication of research findings and the provision of technical advice and information.

"No advice has been given for the specific purpose of influencing policy decisions," it said.

However, fluoridation of communal water supplies is of broad public interest and is considered to be of great importance in the total health picture of the population of Canada."

As of November, 1963, more than 3,800,000 people, or 20 per cent of the population, in 183 communities, were consuming mechanically - fluoridated water.

NO ILL EFFECTS

In addition, many thousands have been drinking for a lifetime, and even for generations, water which has been fluoridated from underground deposits of fluoride. No ill effects had been observed.

Asked by Mr. Slogan what general health benefits have been found from fluoridation, the government said:

"It is an established fact, from extensive research, that the adjustment of the fluoride content of a water supply, wherever it is in a concentration of one part fluoride to 1,000,000 parts of water, brings about an average reduction of 60 per-cent in the prevalence of tooth decay to children consuming fluoridated water since birth.

"The ill effects have been noted.

"This improvement in dental health of children, who will later be adults, represents an improvement in general health, dental health being an integral part of total health."

USE LEAVES

Wild chimpanzees make drinking utens'ls from leaves, and some even use them for napkins.

Bill Belsey Ends Lifetime Of Service With Railroad

Bill Belsey ended a lifetime of service with the Canadian National Railways yesterday—and was told he still had a company role to play as pensioner.

Mr. Belsey, who lives with his wife at 290 Bridge Street East, has now retired as chief clerk and cashier at the railroad's Belleville offices.

Yesterday, as fellow-workers bade him farewell as full-time employee, he was told by C.N.R. Rideau division manager K. R. Hunt that pensioners still were a part of the railroad's "one-big-family" organization.

They can do much to enhance the image of the organization, particularly in a period of change, he told the workers who gathered in Bill Belsey's office at the freight warehouse.

"There's going to be a lot of change here in Belleville in the next two years—and the change is going to be for the better and we are going to see some new developments," said Mr. Hunt.

BORN IN ENGLAND

Born at Woolwich, England, (his father was a worker in the historic Woolwich Arsenal), Mr. Belsey came to Canada with his family in 1907. They moved from Brockville to Belleville in 1917 where he started service as night ticket clerk with the Grand Trunk Railway.

Starting pay was $45 a month.

In 1931 he was made general clerk and relieving ticket clerk with what had become the C.N.R. Up to 1946, Mr. Belsey filled various clerical positions up to 1946 when he was appointed permanent rate clerk. In 1956 he achieved the top post, succeeding E. R. Taylor.

His wife is the former Edith White, of Corvette.

In retirement, he will have more time to concentrate on one of his chief interests—something that betrays the flavor of his English background: gardening.

CBC Television Program Not Yet Shown Kicks up Furore, Called Sacrilegious Insult

OTTAWA (CP)—A CBC television program that has not even been shown yet kicked up a furore both inside the outside Parliament Monday and prompted a race government intervention in CBC programming.

The play, The Open Grave, scheduled to be broadcast Wednesday was attacked by opposition MPs and some clergymen as a sacrilegious insult to Christians.

State Secretary Lamontagne, who reports to Parliament on the CBC, said in the Commons he intended to discuss the program with CBC President Alphonse Ouimet before it is shown. On several previous occasions when the publicly-owned corporation has been under fire, he has refused to intervene.

The minister did not elaborate. His parliament secretary, John C. Stewart, said earlier the CBC considers the program suitable for the Easter season.

The play, written by Charles E. Israel and filmed in eight weeks at a cost of $50,000, draws an analogy between the death and resurrection of Christ and the fictitious execution in modern-day Toronto of a baby-bomb leader "framed" for the murder of a Montie.

HASN'T SEEN IT, BUT

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said he has not seen the video-taped behow, but advance publicity indicated that it was a "flagrant, scandalous and sacrilegious insult to the majority of Canadians."

The Conservative leader said Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders are deeply concerned about "holding religious faiths up to contempt."

Mr. Diefenbaker said he has always defended freedom of speech, but he would not tolerate Easter week programs that maligned religious faiths at the taxpayers' expense.

Meanwhile, the Anglican Bishop of Toronto, Rt. Rev. F. H. Wilkinson, special Good Friday Leader Robert Thompson fired off angry telegrams to Mr. Ouimet.

Bishop Wilkinson protested that the program is "sacrilegious, unhistorical and offensive." Events commemorated by Easter week were too solemn to lend themselves to such treatment.

Mr. Thompson charged that public confidence in the CBC now has sunk to a "critically low ebb" for which Mr. Ouimet was appointed as president.

ASK PREVIEW

He asked the CBC president to preview the program and reconsider the decision to screen it.

CBC Executive Producer James Guthro said the program, far from sacrilege, is an attempt to make the New Testament more relevant to modern life.

He was sure viewers would like the show when they saw it.

Mr Stewart told Reynold Rapp (PC — Humboldt - Melfort-Tisdale) that the cost of The Open Grave numbered 187, including 137 extras.

The program is neither a satire, nor a caricature of the resurrection of our Lord, he added. Part of the show had been taped at night at Mount Pleasant cemetery in Toronto.

The show is in the format of a one hour news special reporting on the body of Judas Coubert, a pacifist who was ruthlessly ended by the gallows. He disappeared from Mount Pleasant. CBC reporters conduct interviews across Toronto trying to find out what happened to the body.

The show's "message" is that the state eliminated Corbett because his pacifist movement closed down several defence production plants and threatened the political and economic status quo. The implication is that this would be the fate of those who'd be came to earth today rather than 2,000 years ago.

Dr Leland Gregory, general secretary of the Ontario-Quebec Baptist convention, said in Toronto he found the theme "very risky."

Deranged Youth Wounds U. S. Envoy in Tokyo

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Edwin O. Reischauer was reported recovering in a Tokyo hospital from a stab wound in the right thigh inflicted by a Japanese youth who police said was mentally deranged.

Police said the assailant, Noikazu Shiotani, 19, was near sighted and told them he wanted to protest because the U.S. and Japanese governments did not do enough for people with poor sight.

The police quoted Shiotani as saying: "I am nearsighted. The reason why Japan has no protective facilities for weak-sighted people is due to bad American occupation policies."

The police said Shiotani had tried unsuccessfully earlier this year to set fire to a U.S. Embassy building to advance his crusade.

The police said there appeared to be no political motive for the assault.

De Gaulle Home After 5-Day American Trip

PARIS (Reuters) — President Charles de Gaulle returned here today after a nine-day trip to Mexico and the French West Indies.

Still wearing his light summer uniform, sun-tanned and looking fit, de Gaulle, 73, was welcomed at Orly Airport by Prime Minister Georges Pompidou and other cabinet officials.

Members of the entourage said de Gaulle was extremely satisfied with his trip, one of the longest he has made abroad since assuming the presidency in January, 1959.

The trip was regarded as a warm-up for a month-long tour de Gaulle will make through South America this fall.

Lethargy and Resignation Basic Problems Facing India And Hardest to Overcome

By HENRY S. BRADSHER

NEW DELHI (AP)—The train slowed down at flat, brown fields dotted with mud-walled villages began to be replaced by a clutter of thatched huts, crude buildings and garish vendors' stalls.

Krishen looked out the train window at an alien world: The Indian city. It was a dismaying sight that meant uncertainty for an illiterate villager.

Under the gnawing anxiety, it also meant hope of earning a living for Krishen and the family he left behind in his village.

Krishen disentangled himself from the other men packed into the train's third-class compartment. Porters squatted by the station, selling cigarettes and betel leaves on chews. Bearded Sikh drivers lounged by rickety taxis. Men in dhotis, wrapped like diapers about their loins, strained every fibre of their thin, under-fed bodies to lift grain sacks onto a bullock cart. A cow ambled along the road, oblivious to the confusion, beat and filth.

Hands unencumbered by any baggage, Krishen set forth to search for work. The first street would be his home, his bed beside a well, his warmth a man squatting on the sidewalk cooking unleavened chappatis. The reason for his meagre existence would be the few rupees (about 60 cents) that he could earn in a day's casual labor and send back to his village.

SOME BETTER WAYS

Some villages have awakened to better seeds, better ways of plowing, the use of irrigation and of fertilizer.

Other villages have failed to tap massive government irrigation projects built for their benefit.

As a result, food production has remained stagnant instead of rising in accordance with government plans. A large part of India's population is badly under-fed.

Lethargy and resignation are ingrained in the Indian culture and Hindu teaching that life is to be endured as penance to obtain a better rebirth. But coming this is the most basic problem facing India.

India has 125,000,000 men and women working on the land, 100,000,000 of them cultivating their own fields and the remainder trying to survive with casual employment. The farmhand sees probably average less than five cents a day to live on and the others little more.

Underlying all India's other problems is the surge of population. The 1961 census showed 438,000,000 persons—about the total of all of Africa and Latin America combined. The population now is pushing 470,000,000.

The national government has conducted a birth control program for years. Some state governments encourage sterilization by making small payments. But the growth of a population increasing by some 2.5 per cent a year is basically untouched. Many villages kept supply declining living standards and less food a person than a generation ago.

In the last decade India has expanded its industrial base. Some of the new factories from a massive steel plant to a fertilizer plant using electricity from one of the biggest dams in the world, are owned by the government. Some are private enterprise.

Industrial development has been uneven. The Punjab area just north of New Delhi has shown spectacular energy in starting new industries. So have a few other areas. But large regions remain industrially, as well as agriculturally, in the middle ages.

India has had stability in the 16½ years since independence from Britain. In the century and a half that it ruled India, Britain built the basis for a modern nation. Railroads tied the country together. An elite civil service provided sound administration.

India's geography varies from frosty Himalayan heights to monsoon - drenched coastlands dotted with coconut palms. The people are just as diverse. Color consciousness is strong, resulting in racial discrimination that is no longer related to Hindu caste — the original word for caste meant "color." Light-skinned Indians are considered superior. A light - skinned woman requires a smaller dowry than a dark one when parents must pay heavily for a husband.

India's people speak dozens of languages. Hindi, the tongue of north India and the main official language, is understood by fewer than half.

The English language still ties India together but the many other tongues create strong regional influences that could pull India apart.

Under Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru the government has been strong. Nehru has remained the hero of villagers such as Krishen despite quibbling by many more educated Indians.

Nehru had a youthful infatuation with socialism and since five-year plans began in 1951, India has laid some of the groundwork for a strong economy. But the goal of continued economic growth without massive injections of foreign aid is not yet visible.

OPPONENTS GROW

No other party has a truly national base. The Communists, a distant second with 10 per cent of the vote in the 1962 elections, and other parties exist in regional clusters of strength.

But there are many such clusters of opposition to Congress control. They are growing stronger and more numerous.

Everything Nehru has tried to do for India amounts to an effort to stave off such a political development by establishing a firm base of economic progress and representative government.

But now Nehru is 74 and fading from the scene.

The man who has become Nehru's principal successor, 60-year-old Lal Bahadur Shastri, cannot be domineering. But neither is he simply a compromiser. His toughness as home minister in charge of domestic security during the 1962 Chinese attack showed a steely effectiveness.

Shastri is already planning to deal with problems that Nehru has been unable to solve.

'.. With Our Boys on Cyprus'

BY REUTERS

The Canadian soldier doing United Nations guard duty in Cyprus will find in the pine and cedar forests of that Mediterranean island something to remind him of home.

But it likely will be the island's old castles and customs and wild flowers in village girls' hair that will capture his eye.

In his off-duty hours, the Canadian soldier can plunge into the island's colorful and turbulent history or the usually calm waters off one of the many sandy beaches that dot the coastline.

For a relatively small island, there is much to discover.

One of the first things he will learn is that the origin of the word Cyprus is uncertain. Perhaps, under present conditions, it will not come as a surprise.

Some say the word Cyprus is derived from the Greek word for copper while others maintain its derivation comes from the Greek word "kypros," a plant which at one time flourished on the island.

The Canadian soldier will find a land of castles and abbeys dating back to the 14th century. Assuming a return to normal, he can spend his free time under an olive tree or in the plush cocktail lounge of one of the island's leading hotels.

BELIEVE IN LEGENDS

He will find it a land of people who still believe strongly in legends, who still pluck the grape from the vine and crush it into the sweetness of Cyprus wine.

In a land where terrorism threatened to become an almost everyday occurrence, he can find that a man sweating to till unlikely-looking land is a poet. It is not uncommon to hear men recite or make up poetry on festive occasions.

Cyprus has an area of 3,572 square miles—slightly smaller than Canada's Cape Breton Island—and is the third largest island in the Mediterranean. The coastline is generally indented and rocky, with long sandy beaches and a few fairly extensive coastal plains.

The December, 1960, census showed Cyprus' inhabitants numbered 577,639, of whom about 82 per cent belonged to the Greek community and 18 per cent to the Turkish.

The island's religions are Christian—mainly Greek Orthodox—and Moslem. The Greek and Moslem Turkish communities cling to their separate languages.

Cyprus became a Roman province in 58 BC and was soon converted to Christianity. But the island came under Byzantine rule on partition of the Roman Empire.

CONQUERED BY TURKS

In 1191, with the fall of Acre, Cyprus became the outpost of Christianity in the Levant. It fell to the republic of Venice in 1489 and was conquered by the Turks in 1571.

Britain signed a convention with the Sultan of Turkey at Constantinople in 1878 under which Cyprus was transferred to British administration.

This was in exchange for a promise of British assistance against Russian encroachment on Turkey's eastern provinces.

On the outbreak of the First World War, Britain abrogated Turkey's formal sovereignty over Cyprus and annexed the island, as Turkey had become an enemy state.

The following year the British government offered to cede Cyprus to Greece on condition the Greeks immediately went to the aid of Serbia. Greece declined the offer.

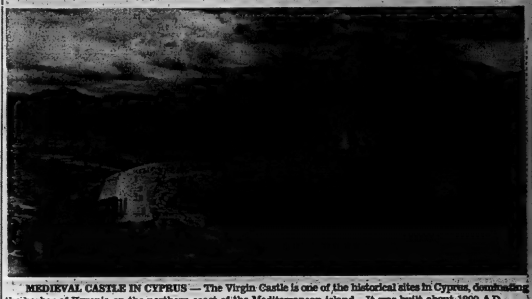
Both Greece and Turkey recognized Britain's annexation of Cyprus under the Treaty of Lausanne signed in 1923.

There were widespread disturbances on the island in 1931 following demands by the Greek population for Enosis—union with Greece.

CAMPAIGN BY EOKA

In 1954, the Greek government took the question of Cypriot self-determination to the United Nations. The Greek-Cypriot underground movement EOKA launched an armed campaign the following year for union with Greece.

A state of emergency was declared by the British governor after a tripartite conference in London between Britain, Greece and Turkey failed.



The Greek-Cypriots' spiritual leader, Archbishop Makarios, was deported to the British-ruled Seychelles Islands in the Indian Ocean in 1956 for complicity in the EOKA campaign.

Agreement on independence for Cyprus was reached in 1959. Archbishop Makarios, released from exile in the Seychelles in 1957, became president of Cyprus when it became an independent republic in 1960.

The president's proposals late last year for a major revision of the island's constitution brought to a head the already considerable differences between the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities.

The republic's Turkish-Cypriot vice-president, Fazil Kutchuk, objected to the proposals, which included increased Greek-Cypriot manning of the civil service, police and army.

So did Turkey, which, with Britain and Greece, is a guarantor of Cyprus independence under the 1960 constitution.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carter, Sports Editor

Want a recipe for vivacity, charm and a trim figure? Try skating six hours a day.

It works. Peg and Jessie McCutcheon, charming teen-age daughters of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. McCutcheon, Albert Street, will vouch for it.

Peg, 14, and Jane, 13, have been doing it for the past six years or so.

Individually, they've been skating, figure, that is, since they were knee-high to a butterfly.

Now at the more or less tender age of early secondary school training, they hold championships in the Toronto Cricket and Skating Club and the Toronto Granite Club.

Not too long ago, trudging down deserted city streets in the cold grey winter dawn on the way to the arena, they couldn't hazard sounds of music emanating from Memorial Arena.

Being a snoopy newspaperman I investigated. I found the place deserted, well practically so. Two youngsters were gliding over the ice surface in pair skating. A lone figure stood in the players' box, his hand on a musical throttle.

It was Dr. McCutcheon, and Peggy and Jane. There wasn't another soul in the vicinity.

"Up at 5.30. At the arena at six. Two hours' hard practice, then home, breakfast and school."

And rounding out the day's performance more than often Dr. McCutcheon would drive his family proteges to Toronto for more skating, coaching and training.

Nor do the warm spring and summer days when other youngsters are experiencing the thrills of vacation, allow any let-up to their demanding schedule of training.

You will find them taking summer skating courses of skating at Montreal, Schumacher or perhaps Lansing, Michigan.

These are eight-hours-a-day grinds. And they've been under the expert guidance of such well known coaches as Sheldon Galbraith, John Rodzay and a Mr. Tikkanen, currently at the Toronto Granite Club.

"We have liked skating skating since we first discovered it," the youngsters told me in a joint interview the other day. "Mother and Dad never pushed us. We liked it and they have been wonderful to us."

They're warm-hearted vivacious youngsters, with nice personalities and a wholesome appreciation of what is being done for them.

And don't the idea they are, with all the adulation that has come their way, headline hunters. It took me two or three days to coax them to the office for a talk and the accompanying pictures.

Perhaps Fifi has been good to them. But the are as far as this agent is concerned, a couple of fine "kids," taking advantage of the opportunities afforded them—and making the most of their young years to indulge in their favorite sport, not perfectionists yet, perhaps, but giving all they've got to achieve that aim.

They will not, perhaps, ever be Olympic champions. I do not believe their ambitions point in that direction. Let's say they're aim is to be perfect themselves as far as ability goes, which, after all, is a personal achievement regardless of the glory of subsequent tangible reward.

By the way, with the sanction of the Canadian Figure Skating Association, Peggie and Jane will give a performance at the Minor Hockey Presentations Night tomorrow.

Frank Howard Changes Mind, Ready to Play

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP)—Los Angeles Dodgers outfielder Frank Howard, who has been sitting out spring training because of personal reason, said Monday he was ready to sign.

Howard said he has a telephone conference planned for today with Los Angeles manager Buzzie Bavasi.

"I'm anxious to see what he will say," Howard said.

"I want to play," said the 6-foot-7 Howard, one of the mightiest hitters in baseball. "I'm ready to go down to Vero Beach, Fla. I hope Buzzie feels the same way I do."

Hodge, Habs Bulwark In Stretch Run

MONTREAL (CP) — Flash back to October 30, 1963:

"I'll call up Charlie Hodge from Quebec Aces. Losing Gump will hurt—he was playing well—but Charlie plays as well as he did in training camp. We'll be okay."

With those words, uttered in a dressing room in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens, coach Toe Blake unwittingly embarked on a course that took his Montreal Canadiens to the National Hockey League championship.

It was a pulled hamstring muscle in the eighth game of the young 1963-64 season that forced Gump Worsley to the sidelines. Then Blake made the last in a series of telephone calls that have summoned Hodge from points in Quebec, Buffalo, Seattle, Providence, Ottawa, Rochester and Shawinigan.

The Hodge story has been written, rewritten, told and retold this season. Briefly, Hodge was expected to stay with the team until Worsley returned to form and then head back to the minors where he had toiled almost unnoticed for 12 years.

But not this time.

UNDERSTUDIED PLANTS

"Playing in the minors wasn't my idea, you know," the 30-year-old goaltender told an interviewer recently. Playing in the shadow of Jacques Plante, his desire began to wane. When called up to the NHL he was great for a few games, but he slipped.

No one expected Hodge to change the pattern this season but the little man fooled them all and stayed, renewed his determination to make the grade and won goaltending's highest award, the Vezina Trophy, in his first year as Montreal's regular netminder.

NHL statistics released today confirmed what was evident Sunday night: The Canadiens won the league title, Chicago's Stan Mikita captured individual scoring honors, Vic Hadfield of New York was the most penalized player and Hodge won the Vezina as the regular goalie on the team least scored against.

The figures showed Hodge responsible for 107 goals while playing and defending trophy-holder Glenn Hall of Chicago was held accountable for 108. What they didn't show was Hodge's amazing work during the latter half of the season when Montreal was in a dog-fight for first place.

GREAT IN THE STRETCH

He only managed one shutout in 27 games during the first half of the season but came home with seven—including four straight and one against Chicago—in the last 20 league with eight. In seven last-half contests with Toronto, he allowed a meagre four goals and 14 against the tougher Hawks—but the Canadiens, nevertheless, won four, tied one and lost two to Chicago over that stretch.

His goals-against average was 2.27 a game, second only to Toronto's Johnny Bower (2.14). But Bower's chances were reduced by somewhat inferior work by goalie Don Simmons, the victim of an 11-0 Boston whipping on his route to his 3.25 average over 30 games.

Hall had the third best personal average at 2.33 and Toronto's Terry Sawchuk was next with 2.52 and followed by Boston's Ed Johnston (3.02) and Jacques Plante of New York (3.49).

Because of $1,000 went to Hodge and Mikita, whose 86 points gave him a two-point margin over teammate and runnerup Bobby Hull, the highest scorer with 43 goals. Hull collected $500 for second spot.

Hodge also earned $250 for leading the Vezina race in the second half of play and $500 as over-all runnerup, and $250 for netting the first half pace. Gordie Howe received $500 for leading the second half scoring with 44 points and Hull got $250 as runnerup in that category with 42.

Toe Blake Coach Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Hector (Toe) Blake, who led Montreal Canadiens to a surprise regular season championship, was selected National Hockey League coach of the year by The Associated Press Monday.

Blake beat out Billy Reay, whose Chicago Black Hawks finished second, one point behind Montreal. Sid Abel of Detroit Red Wings was third.

Canadiens were picked to wind up in fourth or fifth place in most pre-season estimates.

Home Ice Could Be Big Factor

MONTREAL (CP) — If Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings continue against each other in the Stanley Cup semi-final the way they did during the regular season, home ice could decide the winner.

Neither clubs was able to win a single game in the other's rink during the regular National Hockey League season. At Detroit, the Wings had six wins and a tie and at Chicago the Hawks came up with five victories and two ties.

The advantage of home ice is also illustrated, but not so dramatically, in the season's performance of Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs, the other semi-finalists. In the games at each rink, the Canadiens won four, lost one and tied two against Toronto at the Forum and Toronto won four and lost three at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Here are the clubs' season's records against each other:

Stanley Cup TV Dates

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC announced Monday it will televise the Montreal Canadiens-Toronto Maple Leafs semi-final series of Stanley Cup play.

However, when the dates do not conflict, the Detroit Red Wings - Chicago Black Hawks games will also be shown. All games will be televised from 8:30 minutes after the opening faceoff, except the seventh game—if necessary—which will be carried from the start.

The first two games will be broadcast from Montreal Forum Thursday and Saturday starting at 8:30 p.m. Sunday at 2 p.m. the Detroit - Chicago game will be shown and then coverage switches to Toronto next Tuesday and Thursday at 8:30.

Remainder of the schedule is tentative, depending on how long the series last.

If the Toronto-Montreal series ends first, CBC will cover the rest of the Detroit-Chicago games, starting 20 minutes after opening faceoff.

All Stanley Cup final games will be shown in full.

CHICAGO (AP)—It was only a year ago that Chicago Black Hawks fell apart near the end of the season and finished second to Toronto by one point in their bid for the National Hockey League championship.

The disappointment of coming so close to win their first league title carried on to the Stanley Cup playoffs, where the Hawks won their first two games and then bowed out with four successive losses to Detroit.

This year the Hawks again finished second by one point. The only difference was that Montreal won the NHL championship instead of Toronto.

Detroit again will be their opponent in the Stanley Cup semi-finals.

DIDN'T LIKE IT

Naturally, the Hawks didn't like what also bothered the team was goalie Glenn Hall finishing second to Montreal's Charlie Hodge in the race for the Vezina Trophy by a scant two points after having held an insurmountable early-season lead.

"It's been a great season for all of us," said Bobby Hull. "All that keeps it from being perfect is that we finished second and Glenn lost the goaltending. But we can make up for part of that in the playoffs and I think we will."

Coach Billy Reay said:

"Yes, we're disappointed but there's no danger of a letdown."

The Detroit series begins in Chicago with games Thursday and Sunday before shifting to Detroit March 31 and April 2. If it should go seven games, the Hawks would have the benefit of the home ice in four of the games.

Blake Cautious 'Any Club Can Win'

Habs Spirits High

STE. MARGUERITE STATION, Que. (CP)—What a difference a year has made to the Montreal Canadiens.

According to coach Toe Blake, there's a refreshing new attitude among his National Hockey League champions as they prepare for their Stanley Cup semi-final playoff with Toronto Maple Leafs.

"I'm not going to say we're going to win anything, but we'll sure have better chance than last year," Blake said Monday in this resort village, where the Canadiens are lodged pending the opening of the best-of-seven series Thursday in Montreal.

"Last year, when the Leafs beat us 4-1 in the semi-final, we had just flubbed a chance to take second place and the spirit on the club was low. Toronto had just taken first place and we were beaten easily.

"But things have changed," Blake assured "We took first place. The team worked hard. The team knows what we're doing and I expect them to continue playing as they have all year.

TREMBLAY RETURNS

Left Winger Gilles Tremblay, out for a week with an ankle injury, is expected to join the team today after skating in Montreal Monday and then reporting to camp.

His replacement, junior ace Andree Boudrias, has rejoined the Junior Canadiens and will remain in reserve in case of injuries. If he is called up, the Canadiens must turn him pro fessional.

"We haven't decided what to do," Blake explained. "If we lose a centre or left winger, we have Boudrias and if a right winger is hurt we can call up Yvan Cournoyer from the jun iors. But let's not talk about injuries."

Instead, the Canadiens coach preferred to discuss the league title and pass along credit to members of the team who have been overlooked.

"You know, no one has paid much attention to fellows like Henri Richard and Claude Provost. Their scoring wasn't that great, but they never let us down defensively and that's what won the title.

"Our defence, has been the steadiest in the league and it was the tight play in the last couple of months that won Charlie Hodge the Vezina Trophy."

Blake said "any one of the four teams can win the cup.

"Chicago is disappointed they didn't win the title, like last year, and Detroit could upset them again. And I hear Toronto is favored to beat us."

Presentations Night

Will Honor Minor Puck Champions, Stars

Plans have been completed for the big "Minor Hockey Presentations Night" scheduled for Memorial Arena tomorrow evening.

Two special hockey games plus a host of team and individual presentations form the major part of the program while a skating demonstration will complete the schedule.

The evening gets under way at 5:30 when Belleville McCormack's Peewee All-Stars will play host to Napanee.

Jane and Peggy McCutcheon, this city's young skating stars, will give their figure skating demonstration at 6:30, with the permission of the C.P.S.A. It should be one of the evening's highlights.

The presentation of trophies and crests will be handled by divisions this year with the midget group first in line beginning at 7:15. The Juvenile division will follow immediately.

Second of the hockey exhibitions will commence at 7:30. This game will be played between the C.N.R. All-Stars and the R.M.H.A. Oldtimers. Following the first period of this game the Tyke, Squirt, Peewee and Bantam presentations will be made, starting at 8:00.

The remaining two periods of the CNR - RMHA game will be played as soon as the presentations are completed, likely around 8:30 p.m. Jack Devine will be master of ceremonies for the evening.

In the Midget group, crests will be presented to the champion Bonnie Lassies team by convener L. Williams, followed by the Hurst Memorial Trophy for best all-round player to Chris Short by Ted Hurst. Williams will present the M.V.P. trophy to Ray Summers and Cliff Mc Grimmon will present the top scorer's trophy to John Dorsa.

In the Juvenile division, convener Fred Jones will present crests to the group-winning Aces team and also the top goalies' trophy to Ralph McCabe. The Ontario Intelligencer M.V.P. Trophy will be presented by Bill Goodfellow with Jones presenting the George H. Carver sliding the honors. Coach Al Sills will present the leading scorer's trophy to George Pugh.

In the new Tyke division, crests will be presented to the Kinsmen Tyke group winners by the team coaches.

The Squirt grouping has the longest list of presentations. Crests will be presented to the group winners by the coach. (Finals are being played tonight, as well as Tyke finals). Coach J. Creswell will present the best goalie"s trophy to John Peasby and coach D. Coates will present the M.V.P. trophy to Dennis Cone. Coach E. Watkins will handle honors when Rick Meagher receives the top scoring award.

Also in the Squirt division, the coach of each team will present a "Squirtmans hip Award" to a player from his team. Then comes the chief presentation of the night, the Tommy McNevin Memorial Award, presented by his Worship Mayor J. R. Ellis. Winners of these awards are kept secret until Wednesday.

In the Peewee division, C. Paxman will present crests to "A" group winners, the Macs, and to "B" group winners, the Browns. Coach S. MacDonald will present the top goalie award to Brian Coughlin and coach D. Denyes will present the M.V.P. award to Charlie Powell. The Peewee scoring trophy is donated by Terry Meagher and Steven Moore, Coaches G. McAteer and T. Neil will make the presentations. T. Murray will present the CJBQ Most Improved Player award to Dou Finally, in the Bantam grouping, M. Richards and coach F. Jones will present crests to the "A" champion Frontenacs and Richards and coach B. Garvin to the "B" winning Canadiens. Coach E. Cousins will present the best goalie, trophy to Ron Jury, Coach E. Pursey the M.V.P. trophy to Rob Carter and Coach B. King the leading scorer trophy to John Hogate.

The night is being sponsored by the B.M.H.A. and the Belleville Youth Centre Committee. Admission will be by ticket only and tickets are selling at 25 cents each.

TOMMY McNEVIN MEMORIAL TROPHY

Skowron With Washington

'Moose' Hits 3 Homers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bill Skowron, has been plagued with problems throughout his baseball career. Now he's with the Washington Senators.

He got there the hard way, starting with the then world champion New York Yankees, stopping off with the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers and finally landing to the cellar-dwelling Senators.

Despite the change in atmosphere, the 33-year-old first baseman is willing to accept his fate, at least for the present. He feels if he can get off to a good start this season, he can help not only the Senators but also himself.

His performances of the last two days have hurt that thinking any. He slugged a pair of two-run homers Monday in powering Washington to a 7-3 triumph against the Dodgers. That gave him three home runs in two games following his return to the line-up.

Skowron, whose injury record reads like a medical journal, set out six days with a bad back, his most persistent affliction.

The appearance of the six foot, 197-pound veteran against the Dodgers was his first since he'starred in their World Series sweep of the Yankees last fall. He had five hits in the Series, including a home run, for a .385 average and knocked in three runs.

That showing was almost as surprising as the Dodgers' four-game victory. He batted .300, hit four homers and drove in 19 runs, all career lows. He played regularly, being used as a pinch hitter most of the time.

In exhibition action, Pittsburgh defeated New York Yankees 9-2, Houston Colts bombed St. Louis Cardinals 11-2, San Francisco Giants defeated Boston Red Sox 7-4, Cincinnati Reds defeated Kansas City Athletics 11-3, Chicago White Sox knocked off Philadelphia Phillies 9-2, New York Mets nipped Minnesota Twins 7-6, Cleveland Indians edged Chicago Cubs 6-5 while Milwaukee Braves beat Detroit Tigers 4-3.

Meet Lindsay Next

Picton Jrs. Group Champs

By JACK FAWKES

PICTON — The Picton Juniors finally made it. After three straight years of being dumped in the semi-final by Kings of Napanee in group playdowns, Picton came up with a dazzling display of hockey and dropped the Wings by a 5-4 count and sent 1,385 fans home happy.

Picton now moves up into the next group and open a best of seven series here on Wednesday night with the Lindsay Lions providing the opposition. The second game will be played at Lindsay on (Good) Friday night. Both games start at 8:30. After the second game it will be decided where and when the balance of the games will be played.

The Red Wings came out skating fast and with two first period goals by Bob Drury, had a 2-1 edge going into the second period.

Picton lifted one in the opening frame, that one by Tim O'Grady, and this one must go down as one of the prettiest goals of the entire season. Big Tim picked up the puck behind his own net, skated out to his defence position, dipped doodled his way through the entire Napanee team, deked Tom Mercer out of his pads, and tucked the rubber in behind him for the score.

The Red Wings went you up again at 8.30 when youthful Ricky, Gerow slapped a fast one into the Picton nets: Bob Brown made it 3-2 at 8.06 of the middle frame when he batted in a Bill Hopkins pass, with Terry Martin sitting out a hooking penalty.

At 8.56 of the last period, Rovy McDonald took Wayne McConnell's pass to tie it up once again, only to have Dwight Galt flip in a shot-shot by Phil Meeks to put Napanee back into a one goal lead.

Knowing they could not win with a tie, Picton kept pressing, and were rewarded for their efforts when Herold Haddock took the puck from his own blue line and Hershey flew down the right side to beat Mercer from close range.

Actually that was the ball game, but knowing that another ten minutes in the form of an overtime session was not for them, Picton kept pressing the attack and at the 19.06 mark the "I" line did it. Hopkins fired the winning marker from Haddock and Gary Campbell.

So, now it is Lindsay, and we will not know just what they have until Wednesday night, but as Sam Mulholland, the Picton coach said, "we might or we won, but they will know they have been in a game.

Game time 8.30.

Take 'Thriller' Series From Lightfoots 3-2

Flyers Cage Champions

RCAF Flyers climaxed a tremendous uphill battle last night when they defeated Belleville Lightfoots 80-77 in two overtime periods to capture the Bay of Quinte Basketball League championship.

Flyers, who received the Labatt Trophy from league president F/L Ernie Miller after the game, trailed the second-five timer set two games to none at one point before snatching two last-second one-point wins to force last night's sudden-death affair.

Lightfoots found themselves making the uphill climb in last night's thriller as they overcame several large deficits to force the overtime heats. There they ran out of steam against the hard-driving Flyer squad.

RCAF moved in front early in the game 14-3 and held a 35-20 edge at half time as the Lightfoots fought back. Belleville's D. Rose scored a field goal with a few seconds left in regulation time to tie the score 69-69.

Again in the first five-minute overtime Flyers took command and moved ahead 72-63. Belleville once more refused to quit and L. Campbell scored with five seconds left in the period to tie it 72-72—but that was it.

Flyers scored four quick baskets in the first minute of the second overtime and downed Lightfoots 12-5 for the final 80-77 score. Lightfoots had nothing left to come back with in the dying minutes.

Brian Clarke was high point man for the championship RCAF crew. He hooped 28 points, followed by Wilf Rorabeck with 19, Bob Widzyk with 14, Mac McNichol with 11 and Arlen Burleigh with nine.

Doug Rose and Gord Smith paced the Lightfoot attack with 24 points apiece. Rose, the regular season scoring champ, will be presented with a trophy shortly. Doug Smith dropped in 18 points and Larry Campbell was next in line with 12.

Trenton RCAF Flyers (80): E. Clarke 25, W. Borden 19, M. McNichol 11, Wilkie 5, R. Butterfield 4, B. Widzyk 14, A. Burleigh 2, Cooke 2, Ryle.

Belleville Lightfoots (77): L. Campbell 12, D. Rose 19, D. Smith 18, W. Whitely 7, G. Rorabeck 2, Smith 19, I. Houchin, T. Ewing.

No Talking During Semi-Finals

'Silent' Punch Works Out Leafs

DETROIT (AP)—A new, "silent" Punch Imlach will hit Toronto Maple Leafs through a 60-minute practice session Monday as the National Hockey League club tuned up for the opening of the Stanley Cup semi-final series with Montreal Thursday.

The Leafs' coach had no comment on virtually every question asked him Monday.

"I'm not going to do any talking during the semi-finals," was about all that Imlach would say.

Asked why Imlach was irritated by recent stories attributed to Montreal Canadiens officials in which they said that Imlach was the Cassius Clay of hockey, implying that he talked too much.

One of the surprises of Monday's workout, called less than 12 hours after the Leafs wound up their NHL season by walloping Detroit 4-1, was the fact that goalie Johnny Bower worked through the entire 90 minutes.

Bower suffered a deep cheek cut Saturday while the Leafs were beating Detroit 5-3 to clinch third place in the NHL. He had been expected to take it easy to give his ailing face a chance to heal a bit.

The Leafs will work out on Olympic ice—home of the Red Wings—again on Tuesday and Wednesday before flying to Montreal for the Stanley Cup opener Thursday.

Unless Something is Done

Time Running Out For Boxing--Senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Philip A. Hart, (Dem., Mich.) opening an investigation into alleged shady deals in boxing, warned today "time is running out for the boxing industry unless something is done" to end "general public disrespect and distrust."

Hart's comments were in a prepared statement as his Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee opened three days of hearings on circumstances surrounding the controversial technical knockout Feb. 25 by which Cassius Clay won the heavyweight title from Sonny Liston.

"There has been a growing suspicion," Hart said, "that the sport is controlled by hidden manipulators and that the men who go into the ring and take the knocks are the ones who profit least from the gate receipts."

Hart said the first interest of the hearings will be a $50,000 promotional fee paid Clay before the title bout by Intercontinental Promotions Inc., in which Liston is a stockholder, for the exclusive right to promote Clay's next fight and to pick his opponent.

This fee has figured in efforts by Ed Lasman, president of the World Boxing Association, to take the heavyweight title away from Clay.

WILL APPEAR

Lasman, scheduled to appear before the subcommittee Thursday, is taking a poll of the WBA's 20-member executive committee to declare the title vacant.

He is expected to endorse strongly the proposal before the Senate subcommittee to set up a federal czar over boxing.

Hart said the subcommittee was considering establishing the federal boxing commissioner in some other agency than the justice department.

He said that with the advent of closed-circuit television fight promoters who once longed for million-dollar gates are now talking of $5,000,000.

Other witnesses besides Lasman during the three days of hearings include:

Garland D. (Bill) Cherry of Chester, Pa., a secretary of Inter - Continental Promotions Inc., and an official of the Delaware Advertising and Management Agency, Inc., which had closed circuit television rights for the Liston-Clay match.

The brothers, Jack and Robert Nilon of Chester, Pa., Jack Nilon, Liston's $50,000 - a - year adviser, was described by the subcommittee as a majority stockholder of Delaware Advertising, while Robert Nilon is executive vice president of Inter-Continental Promotions.

Gordon B. Davidson, counsel for the syndicate of wealthy Louisville businessmen that guided Clay to the top of his profession.

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

Gary Dornhoefer, Boston's newest rookie right winger, has some good moves and a good shot. Possibly if he puts a little meat on, you might hear a lot more of him.

Somebody said he looked a little awkward when he is skating.

My answer was that he gets where he wants to go in a heck of a hurry. The fact he is rangy makes it appear that he isn't moving as fast as is actually the case.

Jacques Laperriere, the Montreal defenceman, is another rookie who definitely is proving he belongs in the National Hockey League.

He's got a vicious shot. I know, because I've stopped a few of them with my body. He plays his position well. He is a good strong skater and he can handle the puck.

Unlike some defencemen, he doesn't anchor himself. He moves around. He positions himself advantageously when playing the point.

When they shoot the puck back to him, he's ready for it, knows exactly what he is doing. He fires it quickly and he can move it pretty good.

Terry Harper, Montreal's other rookie defenceman, isn't quite as effective offensively as Laperriere. He's doing an efficient job on defence. He's what we call a hard-nosed hockey player.

A frequent mistake defencemen make is to take after the puck when a player shoots the puck in on a 2-on-1 break.

Since he was the last man to touch the puck, a defenceman can hit him, do almost what he wants to with him, rather than turning his back and racing in for the puck.

By facing him, the defenceman can run him out of the play instead of giving him a direct route to the puck, give the other defencemen a chance to pick up the puck.

If you shoot the puck in, Harper will bound you until somebody else gets it, bound you to the point you think he's interfering with you. He's a good defenceman.

WOODSTOCK, N.B. (CP)—Earle Bradford Avery, the former potato inspector who became one of the world's best harness racing drivers, has always insisted he'll return to the peaceful St. John River valley when he retires.

And since he's 70, the first inclination is to expect he'll be home soon. But Woodstock-area residents aren't holding their breath. Realistic folk, they know they're more likely to see him in a sulky at one of the major U.S. or European tracks.

For last year was perhaps Avery's best in 46 years of racing and he let it be known he intends to be bouncing over the ovals for another 10 years at least.

It was a remark that prompted Norman Woolworth, owner of Clearview Stables, Winthrope, Me., to say: "You mean I'm going to have to put up with him for another 10 years!"

Woolworth was joking, of course, because it's no secret that the owner-driver partnership that has existed since 1955 is an ideal one.

SET RECORD

very has been in Europe in recent months and although he finished out of the money with Porterhouse in a $100,000 international race in Paris in January and also missed out in several others, he's had his share of good fortune in recent months.

Last Oct. 1 he drove Meadow Skipper to a 1:55 1-5 mile, a world record for three-year olds.

Other well-known horses Avery piloted to wins during the season included Muncy Hanover, two-time world champion that copped honors in the Palisades Mile at Yonkers Raceway May 25 with a time of 2:00 3-5. At the same track Aug 8 Avery drove Porterhouse to a 2:00 3-5 victory in the $25,000 Kimberley Trot.

RECALL FIRST RACE

There's some question about when Avery was first drawn to harness racing. He says it all began when he saw his first competition at Bristol, 25 miles north of here, in 1898. His was five at the time.

But Lorne Britton, a longtime resident of the district, has a different version.

"We all seem to get the harness bug at one time or another," he says, "but Earle very got it the day he was born."

In any case, local horsemen recall when Avery broke into the sport, driving over St. John River ice, and one recalls the first race he ever won.

Allan Poole was racing on the same card in 1919—first year of operations at Woodstock's 1-mile Fair Raceway — when Avery drove Black Peter to a five heat win.

The day the $250 stallion from Houlton, Me., was to race, Avery's wife was having a baby. The 23-year-old Avery rode Black Peter into town for a doctor, returned to his farm, drove the doctor back to town and went on to the race. First prize was a blanket but he also picked up $100.

The new fee was made public in a special edition of the Canada Gazette released Monday.

Some Call It Illegal

Many Oppose Title Stripping

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

World boxing opinion was opposed heavily today to the proposal of President Ed Lassman of the World Boxing Association that Cassius Clay be stripped of his heavyweight crown.

"Clay won the title in the ring and it's in the ring he should lose it," said Freddie Mills, the former world light heavyweight champion, in London. "Cassius has brought a lot of color into boxing and he has a right to his belief in a free world whether they are right or wrong."

"It's rubbish to talk of taking away Clay's title," said Terry Downes, Britain's former world middleweight king.

Teddy Waltham, secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, said Lassman's action was "arbitrary."

The New York State Athletic Commission, which is not a member of the WBA, said it would continue to recognize Clay as champion.

It assured Clay of a place to fight and opponents by announcing it was organizing an elimination tournament to pick a challenger.

NEW HASSLE

But the commission got involved in a rhubarb with this action by omitting the name of Ernie Terrell of Chicago from the list of four contenders.

Gen. Melvin Krulewitch, chairman of the commission, said former champion Floyd Patterson, Doug Jones of New York, Eddie Machen of Los Angeles and Cleveland Williams of Houston, have been invited to a meeting Thursday to discuss the tournament.

Sonny Liston, the dethroned champion, is not licensed in New York.

In Chicago, Joseph Triner, chairman of the Illinois Boxing Commission, said the state also would continue to recognize Clay as champion.

"Championships are won and lost in the ring," he said, a comment that was echoed around the world.

Dr. Charles P. Larson, predecessor of Lassman as WBA president, and Abe J. Greene, WBA commissioner, both said they were opposed to the action.

IS RIDICULOUS

Any move to strip Clay of his title "for any reason other than dishonesty is ridiculous," said Dr. Larson at Tacoma, Wash. "On the basis of what we know now, I feel there is not enough justification to withdraw the title," said Greene at Paterson, N.J. "He's done nothing heinous. This move to dethrone him started only because of his general attitude on things but it's slowed down considerably.

"And now that the Senate subcommittee is meeting to inquire into the promotional and contractural activities, I think we might leave it to the committee and see what they develop."

Richard B. Dick, the president of the Canadian Professional Boxing Federation, said the reasons given by Lassman to lift the title are "ridiculous."

In Providence, R.I., Tony Petrosella, a member of the committee, said he had voted against Clay, and Tony Macchitti, another member, said he would vote to withdraw the title recognition "if the charges are substantial enough."

THERE'S NO FIX

And in Miami, State Atty. Richard E. Gerstein said a months-long investigation of the Clay-Liston title fight showed no evidence of a fix. He said, however, there was "little doubt" that Liston entered the ring with a sore or lame shoulder.

Liston, claiming he had injured his left shoulder, lost his title to Clay while sitting on his stool when the bell rang for the seventh round of the Feb. 25 fight at Miami Beach.

British writers opposed the title stripping proposal but agreed with the WBA in condemning the contract Clay signed to fight for Inter-Continental Promotions, of which Liston is a big stockholder.

J. L. Manning, sports editor of The Daily Mail, apparently wasn't too perturbed about the affair.

"The Americans can do what they like with Clay and Liston as long as they don't send them to Britain again," he wrote.

IRON SHIPMENTS UP

Iron ore shipments in anuary were 1,023,140 tons, a jump of 36.8 per cent from anuary of last year, the bureau of statistics announced today. Shipments for export were ahead 54 per cent at 730,211 tons.

Will Protest But Plans No Legal Action

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Cassius Clay's manager said Monday the syndicate backing the heavyweight champion will protest but plans no legal action if the World Boxing Association strips Clay of his crown.

"I think we would protest vigorously but would take no legal action to fight the action," William Faversham said in Salt Lake City.

"Cassius, no matter what the WBA rules, is the heavyweight champion because he beat Sonny Liston decisively," Faversham added.

Faversham said Clay "does nothing illegal or immoral".

"No one threatened to take Liston's title away despite his background and his three arrests during his reign," Faversham said.

THREE-WAY TIE

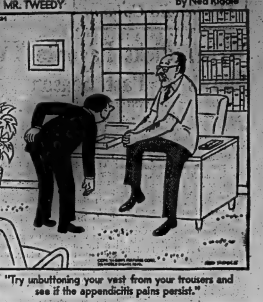
WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Al Besselink shot three-under-par 69s Monday to share low pro honors in the $4,000 18-hole Lost Tree Pro-Am golf championship. Each received $350. Twenty-eight pros entered the one-day event.

Picton Ints. Win Over Thorold 6-1

PICTON (Staff) — Davey Jones' Picton Intermediates chalked up their second easy victory in a row by thumping Thorold 6-1 in Thorold last night.

The win may have been all that was necessary to put Picton into the next round of the OHA Intermediate "B" playdowns.

The two team managers agreed following last night's game that the series should be called to a halt right now. It was to have been a 3-of-5 affair with the third game also scheduled for Thorold next Monday night. Picton won the series opener 16-3 and if the OHA agrees, the series is over as of now.



Picton had a number of the team's regular players missing last night but still won with ease. It was a 6-1 score until less than two minutes remained to be played before Thorold broke the shutout.

John "Shaker" Baker and Lionel Bolley paced the Picton attack with a brace of goals apiece. Larry "Pocket" Pero and Carl Stacey contributed one goal each.

Boucher Threatens To Resign

REGINA (CP) — Commissioner Frank Boucher of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League has advised the league's seven clubs that he will resign unless he receives a vote of confidence.

His decision to stage the eighth and deciding game of the Regina-Weyburn quarter - final series at Melville Monday was disputed by Ken Petitt, president of Weyburn Red Wings.

"Failure of at least four of the seven clubs in the league to support me will make my resignation effective as of this date," he said Monday.

Writer Picks Favorite TV Shows of Past Season

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Award-giving has become a spring event as inevitable as the return to the swallows.

Television and allied industries play the awards game furiously, and for awhile now the television screens will frequently be peopled with smiling winners, earnestly thanking "the great team that made all this possible."

After hundreds of hours spent looking at hundreds of television programs, it is hard indeed even to recall most of the programs.

If I were forced into personal decisions, I would probably pick CBS' The Defenders as, consistently, the most interesting dramatic series; CBS; The Danny Kaye Show (which has sharp ups and downs) as my favorite variety hour; The Dick Van Dyke Show, also on CBS is, far and away, my choice as a really funny comedy series.

In the panel - quiz - audience participation show category, College Bowl, on NBC has my vote.

In the thousands of hours of television, there were a lot of pretty dreadful shows. Some programs fall so short of their goals that, in their own way, they were memorable: The Neds Rzanelle Show on CBS last summer; ABC's Jerry Lewis Show which was rushed off the air at the first possible moment—the list is long, and it is kinder to forget.

It has not been one of network television's great years.

Recommended tonight:

Telephone Hour, NBC, 10-11 EST—with Carol Lawrence and Dancer Rudolf Nureyev.

"The Sword In The Stone," New Walt Disney Feature, Brims with Mirth, Music and Color

After more than three years in production, Walt Disney brings his newest animated cartoon feature, "The Sword in the Stone," to the Belle Theatre screen, tomorrow, Wednesday, continuing through Saturday. Brimming with mirth, music, magic and Color, this fun-filled package of screen entertainment is aimed to tickle the funnybone of moviegoers everywhere and to delight the young in heart of all ages.

Based on the widely-read book of the same name by T. H. White, Disney's production relates in a highly amusing way, the story of the legendary King Arthur's boyhood and his adventure with Merlin, the prophet, magician and benefactor of the young king.

Filmed in brilliant Technicolor, "The Sword in the Stone," was adapted to the screen by Bill Peet, talented artist, writer and veteran of twenty-six years with the Disney studio. In adapting this well-known work of T. H. White, Peet has remained true to the author's original concept and the result is a humorously told tale contrasting life in the Fifth Century with that of the Twentieth Century.

Wolfgang Reitherman who has shared directing credit on such past Disney successes as "Peter Pan," "Lady and the Tramp," "Sleeping Beauty" and "One Hundred and One Dalmatians," held the directorial reins alone on this newest Disney achievement. This marked the first time in the history of the studio that a full-length animated cartoon has been entrusted to the care and supervision of but one cartoon director.

Tony Perkins Back in Town After Sojourn in Europe

AT THE PARK — Joey Bishop has a role in the action-packed story of underworld vengeance, "Johnny Cool" which ends tonight at the Park Theatre through United Artists release. The Chelsea Production stars Henry Silva and Elizabeth Montgomery. On the same program "Incident In An Alley" Complete shows at 7.00 and 8.40 p.m.

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Tony Perkins is back from a three-year, six-movie European education which included a postgraduate course in Brigitte Bardot.

Says he: "I figured I had reached the pinnacle when I had done a film with Brigitte. How much higher could I go? So I decided it was time for me to come home."

He has returned to Hollywood, where he hasn't made a movie since the sensational Psycho. He's ready to go back to work here and the studios seem eager to have him. His film-making abroad made him a draw at European box offices, enhancing his stock with American producers who rely on the foreign take for their their profits.

"I can't say I really went to Europe with any plan in mind," he explained. "I went over to make one picture. The reception was so marvelous that I stayed.

TRIP AN EDUCATION

"I considered it part of my education. I never went to Europe as a kid; we were too poor for that. So I figured I should take advantage of the opportunity when I could. Everybody should go to Europe some time in their lives.

"It's great for me as an actor. There were opportunities I couldn't get here. I worked with Ingrid Bergman, who doesn't come to Hollywood any more. And Orson Welles, Sophia Loren, Brigitte Bardot."

The same Bardot recurs in his conversation. He said working with her was a rare experience. They recently filmed a comedy with the rough translation of Adorable Idiot. Tony's French has become so good-cient that he was able to make the film in that language.

He added this information: "Brigitte speaks excellent English. She speaks it even better than Sophia, and I think she has hidden the fact for self-protection. It allows her to be uncommunicative with Hollywood producers who want to sign her for pictures.

"But I do think she would come to Hollywood with the proper inducement. I urged her to, and she said she might, if I found her a musical."

CNR All-Stars Edge Napanee

The C.N.R. All-Stars, who meet the Belleville Minor Hockey Association Oldtimers here tomorrow night at "Presentations Night," defeated Napanee All-Stars 7-5 last night.

It was a nip-and-tuck battle all the way, with both teams coming up with good hockey.

Doug Moreau led the Belleville scoring with two goals, with Stu Muirhead, Don Bishop, Junior Day, Don Brooks and Don Conway adding singles.

Napanee spread its scoring over five players, with John Hartwick, Paul Hartwick, Jerry Conway, Bill and Doug Cordeau tallying.

R. Lapinette, Bishop and Brooks each had two assists for Belleville. Muirhead and Day getting one each.

Beat the House Tournament

Bud Petican won the qualifying round and clobbered the House to take top prizes in the Belleville Bowl's five-pin action of "Beat the House" on the weekend.

Petican rolled 1262 in the qualifying round with scores of 265, 281, 289, 321 and 106 to pace the field.

Ron Elliott bowled for the house in the challenge round and had scores of 164, 192, 189 and 253. Petican won every game with scores of 415, 223, 306 and 312.

In the 10-pin "Beat the House" tourney, Bill Elliott and Gilberte Villeneuve tied for tops in the qualifying round with 986, including handicaps. Elliott won the two-fresse roll off.

In the challenge, the "house" bowler won every game with scores of 166, 200, 168 and 197. Elliott had games of 196, 162, 152 and 185.

Calls Negro Boycott Of Olympics

NEW YORK (AP)—Mal Whitfield. Olympic gold medal winner at 800 meters in 1948 and 1952, urged Monday that every American Negro athlete eligible for the Tokyo Olympics boycott the Games if they have not been guaranteed "full and equal rights as first-class citizens" by that time.

Whitfield, calling for the boycott in a signed article in Ebony magazine, said it might seem a "shocking proposal coming from a former Olympic athlete who has traveled in many foreign countries."

Whitfield said he thought the time had come for American Negro athletes to fight the fight for civil rights. He added that "it is time for America to live up to its promises of liberty, equality and justice for all. . . ."

A spokesman for the U.S. Olympic Committee said he thought that Whitfield had made a mistake and hoped that nothing would come of the proposal for a boycott.

King of the Hill

Bud Petkos remains King of the Hill unchallenged by virtue of being high man in the five game qualifying round. Bud's scores were 233, 223, 241, 223 and 256 for a total of 1225. Leo St. Louis finished second with 1196. Three bowlers had four consecutive strikes, Bud Petkos, Leo St. Louis and Wayne Spencer.

BEAT YOUR AVERAGE

In the Beat Your Average contest Frank Ducios qualified to challenge Bill Cox by beating his average by 59 and then went on to beat him in the challenge match. Ducios beat his average by 24 and Bill Cox 26 below his average.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For March 25

Aries (Mar. 21 - April 19)—Be sure your case is sound. Don't try to oppose majority without first reviewing facts, figures. Tactful approach wins day. Details critical which will require attention. Be certain, confident, aware.

Taurus (Apr. 20 - May 20)—Be selective. Choose wisely. Applies especially to romantic interests. —Tendency to act on impulse must be checked. It could prove costly—emotionally as well as financially.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21)—Pay special heed to personal appearance. Maintain cheerful attitude. Tendency for upsetting domestic conditions is temporary. Stress common sense. Be diplomatic in dealing with higher-ups.

Cancer (June 22 - July 21)—Ideas due to come from unexpected sources. Examine "far out" suggestions. Kernel of truth available which could be nourished into profitable venture. Perfections not necessary to ultimate success.

Leo (July 22 - Aug. 21)—Be aware of timing. Now time will add up to money. Partnership proposals could prove exciting. But realize that rushing into projects not wise course. Money question should be resolved.

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22)—Popularity, publicity aimed in your direction. But remember responsibilities. Turn thumbs down on devious scheme. Maintain principles. You can get what you want through "legitimate" channels.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23)—Changes due where organization, routine are concerned. Don't hang on to past. Make way for progress. Do so by co-operating with one who seeks improvement. You'll be happier as result.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21)—Chance to acquire new friends, opportunities. Differentiate between fact and whimsy. One who talks softly could have most to offer. One who boasts may lack security, emotional and otherwise.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21)—You may be drawn into middle of organizational dispute. Best course is to stick to facts. Remain calm, cool—realize condition is temporary. Be objective.

Capricorn (Dec. 23 - Jan. 20)—Good lunar aspect indicates fulfillment of long-range plans. Best to avoid travel. Be progressive. Avoid one who wants to retreat. Greatest asset today is sense of humor.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19)—Many changes where money question is concerned. Ride with the tide! Offer suggestions, alternatives. Don't be bogged down with only one method. Highlight versatility.

Pisces (Fe. 20 - Mar. 20)—Maintain attitude of "live-and-let-live." Don't try to change the rules. Be impartial observer. Those who claim many victories may be victims of delusion. Be selective.

If Today is Your Birthday—you are remarkable individual in that you perceive trends of future. Would make excellent real estate dealer, broker, lecturer.

General Tendencies — Struggle between the established and the up-and-coming.

Scouting activities

On March 17th, the 13th Belleville Group Committee held its annual Father and Son banquet at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Following appropriate opening ceremonies the 140 fathers and Scouts and Cubs sat down to a delicious turkey dinner served through the courtesy of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Following the dinner, Scouts Doug Mason and Robert Beecher received Campers' Badges and Jim Ackard Proficiency award in Scouting. Other badges were presented to Tommy Hache, John Caughey, Doug Fraser and Doug Mason for proficiency in swimming and in a brief ceremony, Rev. Alfred Poulter received from Troop Leader of the 13th, Cubleffe Scouts, George Mason, a Chaplain's Scout Crest. Rev. Alfred Poulter has completed 7 years as padre and in the recent church parade attended with the 13th Belleville Scouts at the service at Bridge Street United Church in his capacity as chaplain.

Following the presentation ceremonies an interesting film on Outdoor Survival was shown. LAC Sandy Brown of Base Trenton, Search and Rescue, brought the film and talked to the Scouts, Cubs and fathers about survival in the winter conditions. With this he generally into the scheme of 13th Belleville Scouts who are at present engaged in the winter camping activities and the tips on winter outdoor living were well received by the Scouts present. Following a lengthy and interesting question period, the supper meeting adjourned after appropriate thanks to ladies who served the meal attractively and plentifully.

Due to the Easter examinations the 13th Belleville Scout Troop are holding off activities until after the Easter season with the first activity being planned for April 6th, a camping over the weekend at Presqu'ile Park or some other suitable location.

Steal $80,000 In Diamond Dust

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) Thieves smashed open a safe and stole more than $80,000 worth of industrial diamond dust from a processing plant here.

Police said the thieves cracked a concrete top on the safe at the Norton Abrasive Company, then drilled 87 holes to complete the safe opening Sunday night.

Entry to the building was gained by cutting through a steel side door.

Charles Proudfoot, president of the firm, made the $80,000 estimate of the diamond dust, which is a component of grinding and polishing wheels and of polish compounds.

Dental platinum and gold also were taken.

The firm processes scrap materials for industrial use.

Booklet Declares Frenchmen 'Never Had It So Good' Under de Gaulle Direction

By DAVID MASON

PARIS (AP) — "Under direction of General de Gaulle, the Fifth Republic has given France peace, a stable economy, its place in the world—and this while assuring the prosperity of Frenchmen and social progress."

So goes the preface to a 36-page booklet published recently to tell the French they never had it so good and to tell the world to sit up and take notice of France.

The booklet deals with France since 1958 when Charles de Gaulle was swept back into power on the heels of a revolt and established the Fifth French Republic.

Some Frenchmen and foreign observers scoff their way through sections of the pamphlet which give a rosy view of agriculture, education, housing and salaries.

But few would argue with a statement that "France has again found her voice and her rank in international life."

This voice and this rank can largely be attributed to de Gaulle himself. Through a combination of well - studied but often surprising moves, de Gaulle has crowded industrializing most of his opposition at home and making the world swallow a lot of Gallic medicine.

ANGERS ALLIES

He has angered and baffled his closest allies with many unilateral acts conducted with an almost disdainful attitude that he knows what's best, and that history will be on his side.

Gaullists, bathing in a sea of euphoria, argue that everyone eventually will understand. But some Gaullists themselves have trouble explaining what the haughty brigadier-general is up to.

His allies grumble and fume, but in no major instance have they taken measures which have succeeded in putting de Gaulle back into the limits they might imply from France's population (48,000,000) and size (some 212,000 square miles).

What is life like in de Gaulle's France?

The government booklet treats the question alphabetically and starts with a surface impression, listed under "Affaires culturelles." Most of the French capital's history—rich monuments and buildings have been scrubbed of decades of grime. The sprawling city shines. Thousands of man hours have been employed to scour and sand blast the giant Louvre museum, de Gaulle's Elysee Palace, and hundreds of ordinary apartment and business buildings.

But in some of these gleaming buildings, bath tubs and central heating units are rare and families are crowded into dark, inadequate quarters.

SHORT OF HOUSING

Some estimates say the big city housing crisis will not be solved for 20 years, although the government claims France is building 1,000 homes a day.

France is at work and the country is booming by most every statistical yardstick which can be applied.

Unemployed workers receiving government assistance dropped from 42,000 in 1959 to 19,000 in 1963.

But nearly full employment and the business boom have brought with them inflation, cutting the real value of the worker's pay-cheque and recently sending him out on strike. The government launched a serious effort to "stabilize" the economy last September and has been pressing down hard since to keep the lid on.

France's gross national product—the value of goods and services produced—has grown more than 2.1 per cent a year since 1958, government statistics show. For the period 1959 to 1963, the GNP grew more than 25 per cent—one of the greatest growths in Europe and greater than that of the United States.

Much of this prosperity can be attributed to the development of the six-country European Common Market—signed, sealed and started toward implementation well before de Gaulle returned to power. De Gaulle, however, has insisted that the customs union move on as scheduled from industrial spheres to agriculture—holding over his partners a threat of scuttling the whole Common Market if they don't go along.

FARMERS DISPLEASED

Agriculture is one of de Gaulle's big headaches and the "peasants" have been showing their displeasure. Farmers in Brittany have let piles of artichokes go unmarked because of low prices, blocked roads with their tractors, marched on city halls and clashed with riot police.

France's schools are inadequate for the soaring population. University crowding has brought angry students streaming into the streets to demonstrate.

De Gaulle's rejection of a multilateral nuclear defence is a sample of his attitude toward joint defence efforts—including the West's major military alliance, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. De Gaulle gives NATO lip service, as being desirable, but that's about as far as he goes. He has erased most of his fleet from NATO planning charts, has refused close integration of his air force and has refused to let the United States stockpile nuclear weapons on his soil unless he can have a direct say in how they will be used.

De Gaulle ordained a year ago that Britain was not prepared to become a Common Market member — a hotly controversial decision that many thought was more political than practical. De Gaulle clearly did not want the British on the continent he is insisting on preserving for French leadership.

THIRD-FORCE ROLE

France, he believes, must assure for itself and for Europe an independent third-force role, standing between the Soviet Union and what he almost scornfully refers to as the "Anglo-Saxons." How can one be sure, he says, that the United States will again come to Europe's help in another war, particularly if it would mean Soviet missile retaliation on the United States?

Meanwhile, in another pair of moves which stirred much wrath in the United States, de Gaulle called for neutrality of Southeast Asia, and then recognized Communist China.

De Gaulle at the same time is preparing to spread France's "rayonnement" (radiance) to Latin America, and he plans a series of official visits there this year to underscore this effort.

ORDER INQUEST

SUDBURY (CP) — An inquest has been ordered into the death of Angela Leduc, 5, who was found dead in her crib Friday. The coroner, Dr. Gilles Damarais, declined to reveal cause of death until the inquest, set for April 1, except to say "it is of a serious nature."

Butchers Ask More Chicken In the Soup

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen spoke up today for more chicken in chicken soup.

When the housewife serves prepared chicken soup she shouldn't have to "turn to a microscope" to find the chicken in it, the AFL-CIO union told a U.S. agriculture department hearing.

The union protested that some soups sold in dehydrated form contain less than one per cent of poultry meat when they are ready for eating.

Chicken or turkey soup should contain at least two per cent poultry meat on a ready-to-serve basis or else it should not be labelled as chicken or turkey soup, the union declared.

Return to Base

OTTAWA (CP) — Bough ice has forced Norwegian adventurer Bjorn Staib and his comrades to return to their expedition base near Alert for sled repairs after launching an attempt to trek to the North Pole.

Word of the setback was received in a brief message from Alert, northernmost Canadian settlement at the tip of Ellesmere Island, about 500 miles from the pole.

REPLACES TEETH

MOSCOW (AP) — Dentist Alexander Afanasiev has developed a new method for replacing a decayed tooth, provided there is a healthy root, the Soviet news agency Tass reports. He treats the extracted root with penicillin, fits on a plastic crown and replants the root in the jaw.

Queen's Visit Will Proceed As Scheduled

Minority Threats Will Not Be Entertained

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will not surrender to vicious minority threats against the Queen's October visit to Quebec but will throw a tight security guard around her when she is in the province, Prime Minister Pearson said in the Commons Tuesday.

He was replying to opposition questions about another open letter from the so-called Army of Quebec Liberation. The letter ordered—to use its language—that the Anglo-Saxons of Upper Canada to cancel the visit, or she will be the first British monarch to die on Quebec soil.

"I think it would be shameful to surrender to this kind of minority and vicious propaganda," Mr. Pearson said. "When Her Majesty comes to Canada she will receive every security protection that is possible, and I am sure her visit will be both a happy and a safe one."

The ALQ order—a mimeographed letter—said the Queen and members of the British and Canadian governments are responsible for the death of Elizabeth II "of Windsor, residing at Buckingham Palace." Copies of the letter were handed out to a covering note, sent to the Times of London, The Daily Worker, and Quebec newspapers, radio and TV stations.

Harold Winch (NDP — Vancouver East) suggested that while he was a socialist he was also a monarchist, asked what protection would be given "if we do not want a fanatic of any kind killing the Queen of Canada and the Commonwealth."

Mr. Pearson said the ALQ order was "a very vicious one, expressing views of a small minority of the people of Quebec." He'll doesn't take many," said Gordon Churchill (PC — Winnipeg South).

"I am aware that a very small minority—indeed, a minority of one—can do a lot of damage," Mr. Pearson said. "There have been tragic exam-

Guns Roar, Fires Crackle, Sirens Wail Through Night In Riot-Torn Jacksonville

At Least Three of Ten Blazes Are Blamed on Firebombs

By DON McKEE

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) Flames and gunfire crackled in sections of this tense seaport for the second night Tuesday, rapidly punctuating racial violence which has killed one person and injured a dozen others.

Fires broke out in several Negro areas. Shotgun charges splattered a school building and a police car.

Rocks and bottles struck several autos, injured at least one motorist.

Mayor Haydon Burns, cancelling a visit to Tampa in his campaign for governor, told his supporters there in a telephone speech that things were under control in Jacksonville.

"Heavily reinforced police details rounded up more than 100 Negroes during the night, raising the total arrests to nearly 250 since Monday's outbreak of violence climaxed several weeks of anti-segregation demonstrations.

More than 20 Negroes and two white youths were charged with unlawful assembly and assistant Police Chief H. V. Branch, two Negroes had firebombs, he said.

At least three blazes were attributed to firebombs.

Thick clouds of stress filled the air for two hours. Firemen answered about 30 calls—40 of them false alarms.

WINDOWS BLASTED

A shotgun blast shattered two windows of Central Adult School, a block from police headquarters. Ten persons in a second floor history classroom escaped injury.

Police Sgt. James Miller said buckshot from a shotgun slammed his car as he was driving through a Negro section. He was not hurt.

Motorists reported they ran into a hail of bricks and other missiles at several intersections in predominantly-Negro areas.

At least seven persons were injured during the first night in various incidents.

Shortly after midnight police reported they caught the court docket. Charges included vandalism, carrying concealed weapons, disorderly conduct, possession of firearms and fire bombs, larceny and prowling.

The collection of weapons

Freshman May Join Cabinet

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP) — A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, 40-year-old Ottawa lawyer and freshman member of the legislature for Russell, eventually will enter Premier Robarts's cabinet in an expected three-way shuffle, it was learned Tuesday.

Mr. Lawrence likely will step into the health department portfolio, now occupied by Dr. Matthew Dymond, as Premier Robarts seeks to switch his attention to fill the attorney-general's office, vacated Monday with the resignation of Fred Cass.

Although Mr. Robarts has given no hint of who his next attorney - general will be, word is being circulated at Queen's Park that Provincial Secretary Yaremko, a lawyer, will take over the portfolio in the near future.

That would mean Dr. Dymond would remain in the provincial secretary's job.

Asked by reporters Tuesday whether he was contemplating cabinet changes, Mr. Robarts said no decision had been made on juggling of cabinet.

UNDER CONSIDERATION

He said the matter of whom was to replace Mr. Cass as attorney-general was being given "very careful consideration."

The Premier plans to assume the attorney-general's portfolio himself until the cabinet shuffle is made.

The switch will enable Mr. Robarts to bring his cabinet up to full strength without the addition of another Toronto member. Mr. Cass, who resigned following his handling of the government's Police Act amendment bill, represented the east-central Grenville-Dundas area.

By moving Mr. Lawrence into the cabinet, Premier Robarts will maintain the eastern Ontario representation.

Mr. Lawrence first was elected to legislature in 1963.

Sustain Govt. In Big Vote

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite one of the most rousing six-days of the session, Progressive Conservative Leader Diefenbaker Tuesday night failed to rally other opposition parties to his cause and his party's non-confidence motion in the minority Liberal government was swamped.

Only the 80 Conservative members present supported the motion that charged the government with failing to control rising expenditures and with running up substantial deficits in spite of increased taxation.

A 150-member force of 111 Liberal, 12 Social Credit, 12 Creditiste and nine Social Credit MPs easily defeated it, making this fifth non - confidence vote of the session an anticlimax to the boisterous debate that preceded it.

That was when Mr. Diefenbaker roused the ire of Finance Minister Gordon and both men stood before the Speaker trying to make their voices heard over the din in the supercharged chamber.

"I say to the minister, you falsified the facts and you know it," thundered the opposition leader.

He was flaying Mr. Gordon for statements he was reported to have made in January, 1962 about a predicted slowdown in economic growth.

GORDON REPLIES

Up jumped Mr. Gordon. "Mr. Speaker, I accuse the leader of the opposition of falsifying the facts now, and ask him to withdraw that statement."

Mr. Diefenbaker was on his feet immediately. "When the minister was faced with the facts and quotations from his own speeches all he can say is that childish attitude of 'you too'."

Both men struggled to be heard. Mr. Diefenbaker refused to yield the floor to Mr. Gordon's interjections of "point-of-order." The finance minister finally got the microphones on a point of order.

For the second time he asked Mr. Diefenbaker to withdraw the "falsification" charge.

Speaker Alan Macnaughton, calming the combatants, said he didn't think Mr. Diefenbaker was imputing a personal motive, although "falsify" was pretty strong language.

The opposition leader quoted Sir Winston Churchill: "... if terminological inexactitude is parliamentary, I certainly subscribe it with the greatest of pleasure."

CONSIDER ESTIMATES

Today, the Commons is scheduled to consider supplementary spending estimates and interim supply, measures the government wants passed before the Easter recess which begins Thursday night. The budget debate will be resumed after Parliament reconvenes April 6.

Earlier in Tuesday's budget debate, Mr. Gordon defended his 1963 budget for providing "powerful stimulants" to the economic growth of Canada. The effects of these measures

Finn Is Accepted by All For Job as Cyprus Mediator

GENEVA (CP-AP) — UN Secretary-General U Thant today appointed former premier Sakari S. Tuomioja of Finland as mediator in the Cyprus dispute.

Tuomioja, a 52-year-old politician and diplomat, said he would take up his work in the strife-torn east Mediterranean island by the middle of next week.

His appointment was approved Tuesday by Greece, Turkey, Britain and the island's two feuding communities.

Tuomioja, who has been Finland's ambassador to Sweden, said he would go to Stockholm later today to clear up his affairs there and would fly to New York Sunday for further consultations with Thant. The secretary-general came to Geneva for the opening of the UN trade and development conference and was to return to New York later today.

Tuomioja described his mission—to try to bring a permanent peace between the feuding Greek- and Turkish - Cyprist communities — as "a thrilling challenge." But he stressed that he was aware of the great difficulties facing him.

He said the Finnish government had given him a six-months leave of absence, but "nobody can tell how long it will take." The mediator's mandate from the Security Council is for only three months, but it would undoubtedly be extended if factions and nations involved desire an extension.

With Tuomioja's appointment, the United Nations was almost ready to begin its two-fold task of enforcing a peace between the Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots and trying to mediate their bloody communal dispute.

Lt.-Gen. Prem Singh Gyani, Indian commander of the UN peacekeeping force for the island, arrived back in Cyprus and said the international group may be operational by the end of the week. He had been in Geneva for two days of talks with Thant.

Canadians of the Royal 22nd Regiment—the Van Doos—are the only contingent so far to arrive on the island although Ireland, Sweden and Finland have promised troops. The Canadians are stationed in their camp on the western outskirts of Nicosia. They have been making practice patrols to show the UN flag.

Plan End Of Bed Shortage

TORONTO (CP)—Health Minister Dymond said Tuesday the government is considering a plan to end a massive shortage of hospital beds in Metropolitan Toronto, but refused to discuss details before the measure is introduced in the legislature.

Speaking outside the house, he said the results of current discussions with all hospitals concerned and with the nursing profession will be ready for legislature within a month.

The minister told the house earlier it would not be able to describe the program until all discussions are completed.

He noted that the federal-provincial conference opening in Quebec City next week will discuss cost-sharing programs, but declined comment on what Ontario's stand on hospital programs would be.

Welfare Minister Cecile underwent New Democratic Party criticism while presenting his department's estimates, called the NDP motion picayune and refused to support it.

Stephen Lewis Brydon (NDP — Toronto Woodbine) accused Mr. Cecile of misunderstanding the goals of welfare. He said the minister did not conduct his department with the aim of making welfare recipients self-sufficient.

"Most of the travelling in the world will not make him a good minister of welfare," he said.

NDP Leader Donald MacDonald called the minister a roadblock to the province's welfare legislation program, and Hamilton Lewis (NDP — Toronto Scarborough) said the department's maximum allowance of $35.40 for a mother and six fatherless children was disgraceful.

James Trotter (PC — Toronto Parkdale) called the province's payments inadequate in many areas and urged the government to follow the U.S. example of engaging in a war against poverty.

He asked that welfare be considered at the Quebec conference so that the provinces had such a weak minister that any improvement was unlikely.

In other business, Miles Hildebrand Wardope announced that there is not enough land available in Alikokae to hangle construction of a proposed iron ore treatment plant.

Ted Freeman (NDP — Fort William) had asked whether anything was being done to alleviate unemployment in the northwestern Ontario town.

Mr. Wardope said unemployment in Atikokan was only 2.4 per cent of the male population compared with 4.3 per cent for Mr. Freeman's own constituency.

Says Judge Should Be Charged

MONTREAL (CP) — Charges of perjury, conspiracy to obstruct justice and conspiracy to facilitate the commission of public mischief should be laid against Mr. Justice Albert Mercier of the Superior Court, Seniors Judge Claude Wagner recommended Tuesday.

The recommendation to the Quebec attorney - general, contained in a 29-page judgment following a lengthy in camera preliminary investigation of a $64,726 bankruptcy, has provoked in Quebec legal history.

Judge Wagner also suggested a total of 28 criminal charges be laid against seven other individuals.

The charges surround the bankruptcy of furniture merchant Constant Brodeur and the acquittal of two men, Hilaire Pinsonnette and Andre Poupart, in April, 1963 on charges resulting from possession of furniture in-cluded in the bankruptcy.

Judge Wagner, dealing with evidence given by Mr. Justice Mercier, said that in the disappearance of the large dossier in the Paquette-Poupart case from October 30th to the subpoenas between Sept. 24 and 25, 1963.

CIRCUMSTANCES STRANGE

"Strange circumstances surrounded the disappearance of the dossier from the time that trial had been heard and more precisely on the eve of the trial of Hilaire Paquette and Andre Poupart," Judge Wagner said.

Mr. Justice Mercier had testimonial Capt. Andre Poulin of the Montreal police on the day of the trial and told him, "in fairly strong terms," to notify Det. - Lt. Roland Brunet that "this dossier would never be found because it had been disposed of in an incinerator . . ." Judge Wagner said.

Mr. Justice Mercier was not a judge at the time mentioned. He was a lawyer and a Parliament for Montreal Papineau

Home and School Group Asks Review of Religious Instruction

TORONTO (CP)—A religious instruction course in Ontario's public schools which has "generated strife and tension in many communities" should be investigated by the education department, the Ontario Federation of Home and School Associations agreed Tuesday.

The federation adopted a brief at its annual convention asking Education Minister William Davis to set up a committee of teachers, social workers, psychiatrists and psychologists to study the course. Religious instruction has been compulsory in Ontario schools since 1944, providing for two periods a week totalling one hour.

However, a local school board may apply each year for exemption of one or all of the schools under its jurisdiction.

Synopsis: More rain and thundershowers are predicted for the lower lakes regions this evening and tonight. Through central Ontario, wet snow and possibly some freezing rain can be expected. With the passage of this low Thursday morning precipitation will end and partial clearing is expected during the day.

Family Doctors Can Treat Mental Ills Successfully

OTTAWA (CP) — General practitioners can be highly successful in treating many forms of mental illness but they should not attempt psychiatric treatment of sexual deviates or patients with severe symptoms of depression.

Dr. Ewen Cameron, head of McGill University's psychiatry department and president of the World Psychiatric Association, told 100 physicians and psychiatrists that family doctors could be of real assistance to their patients in a time of family crisis.

"If someone is involved in a severe reaction of grief, or sudden bereavement, the physician, along with treating physical symptoms, can apply the psychiatric principles to help the patient maintain his mental health," the McGill psychiatrist said.

Dr. Cameron, who is director of the Allan Memorial Research Institute in Montreal, spoke during a three-hour appraisal of medical education in psychiatry at a conference on "Medical Action for Mental Health."

The conference is sponsored jointly by the Canadian Medical Association, the Canadian Mental Health Association, and the Canadian Psychiatry Association.

Physicians and psychiatrists attending it are seeking ways to integrate the practice of psychiatry into general medical practice.

Dr. Marvin Stock, of the College of General Practice, Toronto, called for greater emphasis on psychiatric training for medical students. He said all interns should be given a chance to work in a psychiatric out-patient clinic.

"Teachers in medical specialties have the responsibility of telling their interns and residents that in actual practice, much of their work is on a psychotherapeutic level with the patient and family, and that this must be learned now," he said.

Dr. John McCreary, dean of the faculty of medicine at the University of British Columbia, told the gathering that medical schools were keenly aware of the importance of teaching psychiatry to all medical students.

Dr. Ross Chambers, professor of psychiatry at the University of Montreal, called for "an agreed upon curriculum" of medical school curricula.

"The teaching of psychiatry must be integrated with the medical specialty, so that the student will be confronted with the total man he will meet in later practice."

Dr. Andre Boudreau, director of psychiatry at the alcoholism for the Quebec health ministry, said alcoholism has reached almost epidemic proportions" in Canada.

The psychiatrist said that in the early stages of the problem, it was time medical doctors took a greater responsibility in helping to solve it.

"Some years ago, alcoholism used to be thought of as a moral failing or a mental illness, but today it is recognized as a disease and as such, lies within the scope of the medical doctor," he said.

He suggested that most medical doctors were not sufficiently aware of the problems of the alcoholic and of modern treatment methods.

"It is important that doctors be properly educated about alcoholism. They must be convinced that it is possible to rehabilitate alcoholics."

Colorful Quebec Senator Dies

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP)—Senator Charles B. Howard, 78, of Sherbrooke, Quebec's most colorful political figures, died today at his home here. He had returned Tuesday from a trip to Mexico.

Senator Howard, appointed in 1945 to represent Wellington division in the upper house, had slackened his activities somewhat since 1958 when he suffered a heart attack.

Howard controlled Charlie Howard Limited his friends by legions both in Canada and abroad.

A man with a homey philosophy, Senator Howard spoke with equal facility in French or English. He was in demand during election campaigns as a hustings speaker who could work a crowd up to fever pitch.

Examinations for Women Only Way to Cut Breast Cancer Toll

PALM BEACH SHORES, Fla. (CP)—Periodic x-ray examinations of all women more than 40 were urged today as the only means of cutting the "grievous" toll from breast cancer.

Dr. Jacob Gershon-Cohen of the Jewish Hospital, Philadelphia, made the pleas in addressing the annual examination of breast cancer sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

He said that at present about 85 per cent of all breast cancers are first detected by the patients themselves, and that at the time they are spotted 60 per cent of them already have spread beyond the breast to the armpits.

Thus, he said, available curative methods—such as surgery —are forfeited in approximately 60 per cent of all cases.

"It is my belief," he said, "that periodic x-ray examinations of women over the age of 40 can alter this . . . grievous . . . situation."

Describing a survey of his own, he said that among some 1,150 women having breast cancer, 1,000 were women who had cancers of both breasts.

In all instances, the cancerous growths were small, and spreading to the armpits had occurred in only 10 cases—far fewer than would have been encountered among a comparable group of women who had not been x-rayed regularly, he said.

He said a Mayo Clinic study of 1,000 women and 1,000 healthy women more than 35 years of age who had but a breast cancer found "presence of unsuspected breast cancer was shown in only eight cases.

"In our own survey project," he said, "had we limited our study to a limited examination, we would also have achieved no better results. Only by repeated examinations at frequent intervals can the detection of unsuspected cancers reach a percentage approaching the normal expected incidence."

In another report, a top researcher said he has developed a new "molecular fingerprinting" test that should make it possible within a year to determine whether or not a tissue sample of viruses can cause human cancers.

Dr. Maurice Green of St. Louis University school of medicine said the testing technique —which involves use of radioactive tritium, one of the ingredients of the H-bomb—should make it possible to determine, whether any human malignancies are due to similarly prevalent "adenoviruses," a common cause of certain respiratory ills in man.

Some of these viruses, of which there are at least 28 types, are known to be capable of causing cancers in hamsters, some forms of human cancer, although none of these viruses —or any other virus for that matter—has ever been recovered from a human cancer.

Delegates of Two Societies Attend Program in Toronto

Representatives of the Hastings County Historical Society and the Belleville Branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada attended last Wednesday evening's program at the Toronto Art Gallery.

"A Future for the Past" was the topic arranged by the Art Gallery by the Architectural Conservancy of Ontario, which organization attempts to save buildings of architectural merit.

The meeting was conducted by Dr. Thomas Howarth, director of the School of Architecture at the University of Toronto. Dr. Howarth presented one of the series of films which he had prepared for the CBC in 1952. The film dealt with the problems of preservation of buildings of architectural and historical merit, particularly in the urban environment. Also outlined were the contributions to the conservation of these buildings by the Federal, Provincial and Municipal governments and the public.

Among the projects highlighted by the film were Fort Henry at Kingston, Upper Canada Village and the Barnum House at Grafton.

PANEL DISCUSSION

The film was followed by a panel discussion chaired by Dr. Howarth. Panel members were: Dr. Napier Simpson Jr., Arthur Adamson and William Goulding.

Arthur Adamson is known for his work as a town planner, and as the co-author of the recently published "Ancestral Roof," a history of the architecture of early Ontario, and Napier Simpson is known to many local residents because of his former employment with Watson and Fitzgerald and his recent address to the Hastings County Historical Society on early Ontario architecture.

It was the opinion of the meeting that communities such as Belleville should consider three main factors in attempting to preserve buildings of architectural and historical merit.

First, there must be established some criteria for judging such buildings. Expert advice is required.

Second, there should be prepared an inventory or list of buildings of historical and architectural merit. This list should include not only single buildings but also groups of buildings which may form a significant pattern and streets with a particular character.

This inventory should include buildings whose interior could be changed but whose exterior should be retained or even restored. It should also include factors and rooms of importance.

Thirdly, some power must be obtained to try to preserve such buildings on the inventory. This is frequently a serious problem unless a legitimate use can be found for the building.

Not every old building should be preserved, nor should every building be turned into a museum.

PROVINCIAL INVENTORY ASKED

Perhaps a provincial inventory should be prepared and the important buildings on this inventory safeguarded.

Participating in the question period at the close of the meeting were Mrs. Dolly Cale, chairman of the Belleville Branch CPAC, and Mr. Rodger Craig, an executive member of both the CPAC and the Hastings County Historical Society.

Other journeying to Toronto included Mrs. Don Boyce, historical society president; Gerald Boyce, historical society vice-president; Thomas Ransom, museum curator; Mrs. J. Gordon Wilson and Mrs. Gordon Williamson.

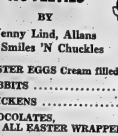
The subjects of community planning and the preservation of historic buildings, are attracting widespread interest. At the April meeting of the Historical Society the formation of a proposed inventory of important local buildings.

And at the Belleville Branch CPAC will present an illustrated lecture on some significant Belleville buildings.

Naturalists View Slides At 'Fun Night'

Monday evening, March 23rd was "Fun Night" at the Quinte Field Naturalists regular meeting at the Entomological building with Miss Joy Nichols in the chair.

Mr. Irwin Knight reported on the Federation Conference at which many important things were discussed.



For the evening's entertainment 12 members of the club each showed 2 slides. Mr. Knight narrated the projection with Miss Helen Keeler and Miss Moonerey assisting in scrutineers. The subject of the slides varied with autumn leaves, birds, snakes, dogs, cats, ice scenes and back yard pools.

The photography was excellent making it difficult to decide on the best. After ballotting the following results were announced: first prize, Mr. Harvey, Codrington; second, Mrs. Alma Willis; third, Mr. Mac Wallbridge. Prizes were presented to these successful candidates.

Mrs. Wallis who is leaving Belleville was presented with a bird feeder for which she expressed her delight. Mrs. Wallis is a valued member of the club contributing so much, and the club members will cherish the memory of her cheery personality, as was an evening of fun and greatly enjoyed by all present.

Scouting activities

The Canadian Corbyville mothers' auxiliary met recently at Canniton Sunday School rooms. In the absence of the president Mrs. Holgate, Mrs. Corn Hitz, secretary took charge of the meeting.

A report on sources was given by Marcia Hannah. Due to the scout material being hard to get in the right width it was decided to wait until the latter part of August to order material.

The annual father and son banquet will be held April 6th, in place of having the regular meeting of the mothers and fathers in Ameliasburgh to be dealt with would be done the night of the banquet.

Suggestions were brought up by Kay Putman on different ways to raise money for the group.

Around the Tee

Congratulations are in order to Mrs. Helen McCorquodale and her rink of Mrs. Hettie Doyle, Mrs. Ruth Lowther, Mrs. Mary Livingston with Mrs. Kea Pinder as skip for the club title. The winning rink progressed through the different draws and were given top in the standings. It is quite an honor to win the club title of the womens section of the local club due to the many fine curlers that are included in the membership.

A rink of Harry Trepanier, Court Minor, Ken Pinder and Jim Walker enjoyed a week of curling at the Ottawa 'bonspiel' where they were accompanied. The rink won two and lost four during the week but the greatest thrill was one of the members, Ken Pinder, was watching his son, Gordon, as a member of a rink from Carleton University win the Perrin trophy against some of the best curlers in the Province. Gordon was the skip of the rink that upset Bill Wagg of Port City rink, tomorrow in the finals 10-8. The young curler was runner-up in the Ontario schoolboys championships and has been hurling rocks for about five years. It was a very popular win and Mr. and Mrs. Pinder are very proud of their curling son, who incidentally is showing the same class in his studies at the University as he shows on a curling sheet of ice.

Commission Now Unsure Of Its Rights

TORONTO (CP) — The legislature has left the Ontario Police Commission unsure of its right to subpoena and question witnesses, Commission Chairman Lorne Cumming said in an interview Tuesday.

The withdrawal Monday of Section 14 of a bill giving the commission the broad powers of questioning and punishment for contempt has all but wiped out its previous authority in this regard, he said.

Deputy Attorney - General Leo Gemmell introduced the commission's right have been clouded since Premier John Robarts supported a motion killing the bill Monday.

The legislation was introduced last February by Liberal Agency - General Frederick Cass, who has since resigned his cabinet post because of controversy created by the amendment.

Mr. Robarts said the proposed legislation was considered piated as replacement for previous legislation which will be able to subpoena anyone until some power is restored in the legislation.

The withdrawal of the controversial section does not affect the R. B. Commission's future plans, the chairman said, but they had intended to use the legislation sometime in the future.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment

(Second of a series on the regiment which will be presented with its new regimental color in mid-May.)

On a dull sullen fourth of October, 1945, the "Black Princess" of the "Plowboy Regiment," who with their comrades of the White Battalion had sent their names on the bloody fields of Europe, marched proudly down city streets.

It was their last official parade as a fighting unit. "The Hasty Ps" had come home. Cheering crowds greeted them as they swung along thoroughfares to the final dismissal at the Bridge Street Armouries.

With the dismissal the famous "First Battalion" of the regiment was disbanded. An equally proud unit, the "Second Battalion" became "The First."

These men with those who preceded them and followed them can look back on a proud history.

STARTED IN 1800

It was back in 1800 when the men of the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward first flocked to the colors. The first regiment of the Prince Edward Militia was organized in that year and four years later the Hastings First Regiment of Militia came into being.

These were no peacetime soldiers. A number of officers and men of these regiments were mobilized and proceeded on active service in the war of 1812; the rebellion of 1837; the Northwest Expedition of 1885 and the South African campaign.

In 1873 the Hastings unit became the 49th Regiment Battalion of Rifles.

The war bugles sounded in 1914 and members of the regiment reported for active service with the First Canadian Contingent, and the subsequent expeditionary forces.

They fought gallantly with their comrades from other parts of Canada and their deeds are written in the history of famous battles as Mont Sorrel, the Somme, Arras, Vimy, Ypres, Amiens, Hindenburg Line and the Pursuit to Mons.

Reorganization of the militia in 1920 saw the formation of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, which combined to one unit the history and tradition of the counties units. Under the new regimental color was presented in 1954.

Under the qualities and leadership of a sequence of commanding officers, the regiment reached a peak of militia efficiency.

The war clouds broke over Europe again in 1939 and among the first to volunteer for active service were the men of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

THE "PLOWBOYS"

From offices and factory, plant and shop, store and farm they came to serve their country. Because of their home environment they were dubbed later by city regiments the "Plowboys".

But the name subsequently became one of respect and esteem when the "Plowboys" revealed they had the same brilliant fighting qualities of their good-natured "forbears".

They were mobilized in Picton shortly afterwards "adopting" its mascot "Little Chief" huge Indian that adorned the roof of a local canning factory.

The regiment proceeded overseas sailing from Halifax December 23rd, 1939. After intensive training and the long wait in England they saw action in Sicily, Italy and Holland.

Proudly they point to the battle honors of Regalbuto, Nissoria, Assoria, The Hitler Line, the Moro River and Apeldoorn. Time marched on.

The amalgamation of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, the Midlands and the 9th Anti-Tank Regiment was formulated in 1954.

Say Freedom Man's Goal Since Creation

"The goal of freedom in its broadest, spiritual, creative sense has been the object of man's search since creation. Its attainment requires not only one - a - person people but dedicated leaders, aware and sensitive to their own and their neighbors' responsibilities."

These were the words of G. B. Daugherty, personal manager of the Bell Telephone Company, as he spoke at the regular dinner meeting of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville at noon hour on Tuesday.

Mr. Daugherty took for his topic, "People".

"Let's talk about you", he said.

"I believe that life is a serious business and service clubs such as Kinsmen have the same way — that we have an obligation to help each other and together, to help those outside the club."

"The purpose or motto of the club is challenging one", he said, "We build"—it carries a noble dignified connotation of which you can be well to be proud.

LONG HEAD UP

He had been a painful evolution of man from a brute," the speaker continued. "fighting physical evidence when he first improved the effective use of muscle - power, through the use of tools, then learning and discoed our fear of hunger and the elements by more skilful use of our brains and hands until today where we are, as a mass beginning to intelligently inquire into the spiritual elemental processes that will free us for a higher sense of life related to the complex society which at times threatens to overwhelm us.

"One of the sources of stress we find today arises from the conflict of the two basic physical self independence where impatience for success often lays claim to instant results", he added.

The speaker went on to say that instant accomplishment is only in the anticipations of adventure and that adventure can be very rewarding and could begin right today, by acknowledging the need to become deeply personally involved — to really care about and work for the things we believe in.

EACH HAS OPPORTUNITY

Mr. Daugharty continued, "each of you has the opportunity right in your business to become a dedicated leader. We must be aware, and I feel this is very important, we must be aware that several times a day we are in situations where we have the power to alone or a handful stock to someone who is looking to us and who has a right to expect guidance.

"Most of all and first of all", he said, "we must expect to guide ourselves."

The speaker concluded by saying, "history has given us many men who could not resist the conditions and have found them with their appreciation of some facet of freedom. Their personal sacrifice, expanded or encouraged the beauty of freedom in their particular opportunity."

The speaker was introduced by President E. Prestone and thanked on behalf of the club by Kiwanian Robert Graham.

IN MEMORIAM

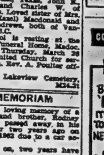
WOOD — In loving memory of a dear daughter, Penelope Audrey Lynn, who passed away March 28th, 1955, at the age of 2 years and 5 months.

Sweet thoughts of you, dear Penelope,
Fill memory's every page,
And though each must go alone,
It's hard to walk life's journey home,
Dear Father claims His own,
But the pain and the sorrow,
Fades happiness and rest,
And then we shall meet in the Beyond.
That is loving God knows best.

—Always remembered and sadly missed by Mother, Father, Brother, Sister-in-law, Art, grandchildren Gloria, Shirley and Rhonda.

SHELLEY—In loving memory of a dear mother, father and grandparents Henry and Rhoda Shelley, who passed away March 23, 1943 and her husband, Henry Shelley, who died July 28, 1951.

It broke our hearts to lose you so,
But you didn't go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day God called you home.
You left us memories,
To our parents in Heaven above,
Tell them how much we miss them,
And give them all our love.
Sadly missed, lovingly remembered by the family.



CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks to those who remembered me with cards, flowers and gifts while in hospital. Also a special thanks to Dr. Ferguson, Dr. Gary Patterson, the nurses of 3rd South and to Mr. Jay McGrath, Rev. Philip Ray

Stores Will Be Closed on Good Friday

Major department stores in the city have taken the lead and will remain closed on Good Friday it was learned today.

Last week members of Belleville Ministerial Association appealed to city council to take some action to persuade local stores remaining open on the Christian holiday and the matter was referred to the council finance committee to obtain legal opinion on whether such action would be within the city's authority.

Today Mayor Jack Ellis said it had now been decided that the city could do nothing to force stores to remain closed on Good Friday.

However, a poll of the major department stores in the city, revealed that these stores would remain closed on the holiday.

"It is only right that business generally should observe this major Christian holiday of the year," he said.

The officers and Companions of Quinte Friendship Chapter, No. 237, Royal Arch Masons, under Ex. Comp. Carm Guest, First Principal, paid a fraternal visit to Madoc Chapter, No. 161, on Monday night and conferred the degree of the Holy Royal Arch on a number of candidates.

The chapter room of Madoc chapter was crowded with representatives of Moira of Belleville, Mt. Sinai of Napanee, Prince Edward of Picton and St. Marks of Trenton.

Grand Chapter was represented by Rt. Ex. Comp. Lorne Vaughan, Grand Superintendent of Prince Edward District, No. 11, the Grand Lecturer Most Ex. Comp. B. H. Smith; Rt. Ex. Comp. J. A. Payton, chairman Educational Committee of Prince Edward District.

Ruling First Principals present were: Ex. Comp. Garth McCreary of Moira, No. 7; Ex. Comp. C. Brummell of Prince Edward, No. 31; Ex. Comp. C. Sexsmith of Mt. Sinai, No. 44, who conveyed greetings from their chapters.

Rt. Ex. Comp. Vaughan, who worked out the schedule of inter-city visits, of which this is the sixth in the series, expressed his pleasure at the members who were present. He called attention to the forthcoming sessions of Grand Chapter and thanked all for their support during his term of office.

HISTORICAL TALK

Rt. Ex. Comp. Payton gave a very instructive and historical talk on Royal Arch Masonry.

At the lunch which followed the business of the chapter a number of visiting companions expressed their appreciation of the hospitality of Madoc chapter, to which Ex. Comp. Gerald Kelly, the first principal, replied, and extended a welcome to all to come back again.

Officers of the degree:

Z, Ex. Comp. Carm Guest; H, Ex. Comp. A. Gilb; J, Ex. Comp. R. Cooper; scribe E, Very Ex. Comp. Mont Barlow; scribe N, Comp. W. Clifford Stewart; treasurer, Very Ex. Comp. Y's Activities

EXTENSION AND HI-LO.

The West Hill extension program at Prince Charles School continues to be effective in reaching boys and girls in the area. The children have completed a program of minor games of low organization in the first portion of their program term. After Easter they will be doing some elementary tumbling and later some outside activities. At present each passing is working hard on the national Y.M.C.A. Hi-Lo athletic contest. Hi-Lo is an annual event at this time of the year for many Y's across Canada. It is currently under way at the Belleville YMCA as well.

The contest is open to both boys and girls and in this Association. All may take participate although only those between 11 and 17 years are reported as part of the national competition. Last year Belleville was the proud winner of a beautiful trophy for the highest number of points in the Hi-Lo classification of associations.

SIX EVENTS

There are six events set for the contest: chin-ups, high jump, standing broad jump, basketball throw, potato race and softball throw for accuracy. The boys score is for the first five but the girls may count their best scores in five out of six events.

There are two standards, and participants are checked for passing or failing either the high or low standard — thus the name Hi-Lo. Each contestant receives 1 point for passing the Lo standard and 2 points for passing the Hi standard. A competitor may score a total of 3 points in each event. Those who score the 6 points possible will receive a national Hi-Lo crest.

NATIONAL SO-ED MEETING

For approximately 45 young men and women from Peterborough, Kingston, Prescott, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Belleville and Rochester, New York, the week-end of March 21 and 22 was a social and educational experience.

The business aspect of the weekend was carried out with the official reports of other So-Ed sessions and their activities, reports of various Young Adult Conferences in Belleville, Lebannon, Winnipeg, and at Rochester, New York, and reporting and discussions among those present of how they could improve their own So-Ed meetings.

Following the business sessions, a banquet and dance were held at the Sheraton-Brock Hotel overlooking Niagara Falls, where members renewed old friendships and met other So-Ed members. Attending from Belleville, were: Colin Wilcox, Bob Hills, Judy Trusler, Margaret Elmy and Mildred Gray. Who were the action-opportunity's visit such museums as Madame Trussard's Wax Museum and Ripley's Believe it or Not Museum.

EASTER HUNT

The annual "Easter Egg Hunt", sponsored each year by the Industrial Management Club of Canada, Quinte Chapter, affiliated with the YMCA, will once again be held this Saturday, March 28th, at the East Hill playground, starting at 10:00 a.m.

Members of the club will be hiding tokens in all parts of the playground and boys and girls will hunt for them. Those boys and girls who find the greatest number of tokens will receive chocolate Easter eggs and bunnies. All participants will receive lolly pops.

The hunt is planned and supervised by the Quinte Chapter of the Industrial Management Club, and is open to every boy and girl in Belleville. Last years, over 400 children enjoyed the hunt.

Postal Service To Be Curtailed

The Post Office Department has authorized the following postal service in Belleville on Good Friday, and on Easter Monday.

There will be no deliveries by letter carriers or rural carriers on Good Friday. A street box collection will be made in the evening only, while general delivery, registration and postage stamp wickets will be open from 10.00 a.m. to 12.00 noon.

On Monday, there will be one full delivery by letter carriers, but none by the rural couriers. Street letter box collection will be made as usual. All wickets will be open from 8.00 a.m. to 10.00 a.m. and from 4.00 p.m. to 6.00 p.m.

On both Good Friday and Easter Monday, special delivery service will be available.

Mails will be received and despatched as usual. The lock box lobby will be open from 6.30 a.m. to 6.00 p.m.

'Craft Night' At Shrine Club

"Craft Night" at the Belleville Shrine Club was held recently when the Shrine Club entertained members of the Masonic Craft. Lorne Vaughn, the Grand Superintendent of the Chapter and Clare McFaul, District Deputy of the Master of the Masonic were in attendance. Noble Phil Davis, president of the Shrine Club, was in the chair and Noble D. A. Dalton, secretary of the Brockville Shrine club gave an outline of the Imperial Council in Toronto. Shriners were present from Brockville and Cobourg and a most enjoyable night was held.

Doberman Pinscher Winner at Dog Show

"Ouchenbosius Clocke" won her own class and swept past American champions to win the coveted winners' award.

Coming from a strain of champions, the Dobermann emulated her mother, "Ch. Red Monique," who won the same award at the 1959 National Sportsmen's Show.

Witch Will Give Tenets Of Her Craft

LONDON (Reuters) — The high priestess of a British coven of witches has promised to reveal all the secrets of her centuries-old cult in a new book to be published in the United States this summer.

Mrs. Sybil Leek, a self-admitted "white" witch, said Tuesday all the tenets of witchcraft would be outlined clearly for the first time in the book.

"All other books on the subject have been written from the outside," she commented. "But this will give inside details of our cult, which has been handed down from Pagan times."

The stocky, red - haired witch recently drew attention to herself when she attended a talk on witchcraft by folklore expert Alan Smith dressed in a fashionable version of a witch's cloak.

However, she left her pet bird, "Hotfoot-Jackson," at home. He usually rides on her shoulder during public appearances.

A witch's book, until now a jealously guarded secret among practitioners of witchcraft, is a personal record of secret rituals and spells used by covens—gatherings of 13 witches.

Mrs. Leek claimed recently there were at least 60 covens in Britain.

Lived in Town For Number Of Years

TRENTON — A Toronto newspaper, the Globe and Mail yesterday identified the head of a group of investors who had made a bid to buy 300,000 shares of the Calgary Burns and Company's meat packing operation, as Alexander R. Hill, the former manager of the Central Bridge Company plant at Trenton. Mr. Hill lived with his wife and family on Queen St. in Trenton for a number of years.

The acquisition of the large block of stock, valued at more than three and a quarter million dollars, by the Canadian investors, would have the end result of keeping the controlling interest of the company in Canada.

BUDGET NEXT WEEK

Trenton council is expected to bring down the 1964 budget by the end of next week and at that time announce the 1964 residential and commercial mill rate. The bills will be compiled by the end of April, and tax bills sent out. First installments of the 1964 taxes are due May 15.

Last year's budget was for $1,788,350. The residential mill rate was 94.23; commercial 104.8.

MARK ANNIVERSARY

ROME (AP) — Italy Tuesday solemnly observed the 20th anniversary of the Ardeatine Caves massacre, the Nazi reprisal killing of 335 Italians. Hundreds of persons, including families of the victims, gathered for the observance at the caves in the Roman countryside near the ancient Appian Way.

Trenton Juvs. Win Series With Orillia

TRENTON — Trenton Legion Juvenile hockey team last night beat Orillia Juveniles 9-3, winning the Ontario semi-finals for the Hale championship. The teams were tied in a five-game series before last night's game.

Belleville Girl Charged With Public Mischief

TRENTON—Diane Mancuso, 24, of Belleville, pleaded guilty in magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday to a charge of committing public mischief and was fined $50 and ordered to pay court costs of $21.50.

The court was told that Trenton and Belleville police spent several hours learning that Mancuso's wife and child were claiming the ownership of the car she was driving when involved in a minor accident in Trenton on February 22. The accused had given the name of "Diane St. Lewis," and a fictious Belleville address. She also identified two female passengers in the car by aliases.

Miss Mancuso was fined $10 and asked to pay costs of $3.50 on a second charge of driving without a licence.

Liquor Outlets Discussed by 4-Man Panel

TRENTON — A four-man panel at Bethel Temple in Trenton last night came to the general conclusion that additional liquor and beer outlets in Trenton were undesirable, and in the words of one panel member, H. B. McConnell, of the Ontario Temperance Federation, "unjustifiable," because Trenton "already has four hotels, a brewer's warehouse, a licenced country club, a licenced Legion hall, drinking privileges at the RCAF station for RCAF personnel and a licenced military mess."

"Mr. McConnell refers to a "military mess'," said another panelist, Rev. Douglas Wilson, "well, I consider the whole thing a mess. We've not only reached the saturation point with liquor outlets, we're overflowing. One cent more of tax too much to spend on additional liquor in this town."

Panelist Rev. R. Haycroft of the Trenton Salvation Army, said that increasing the availability of drink in Trenton was the only effect that increased more accidents through drunken drivers.

"Drinking has as much right to be legalized as drinking," said Mr. Haycroft.

Rev. L. A. Hornby of the Campbellford Pentacostal Church, thought that liquor interests were back of a forthcoming vote in the recently announced plebiscite in Trenton and that it was a case of increased revenue for these interests that the vote was being taken on March 31.

Moderator Rev. Ronald Reid of Bethel called the panel together last night to discuss the vote to be taken in the areas of the town annexed on January 1, when former residents of Murray and Sidney townships will decide whether to tolerate beer and liquor outlets in their areas. The questions arose from the areas in question were at the meeting.

AGAINST LOUNGES

Mr. McConnell said "dining lounges" in the Trenton area would mean that a man could take his entire family to dinner in the lounges. There would be no age limit for those who entered the lounge, although minors could not purchase liquor.

"These people are asking for something that isn't even in Trenton now," said Mr. McConnell.

Mr. McConnell thought motels obtaining a licence would cause the town to be licence rates would go up."

Mr. Wilson, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, said that liquor advertising today was "very subtle." He said that he had heard an 8-year-old child advise his father to "take Five," when working in the garden, and that this was a well known liquor adver-

Two Charged Are Remanded For One Week

TRENTON—In Trenton court yesterday, Freeman Albert Hart, 22, and Harold Albert Lorne Bassett, 21, both from the Trenton area, pleaded guilty to charges involving the theft, over a period of months, to goods valued at around $1,200 from Mark Tripp Wholesale Ltd. Hart was charged with the theft of the goods, which included such items as an electric knife, a movie camera, a camera, a wrist watch and cigarettes; Bassett was charged with possession of the goods.

Paul Tripp testified that the men had made restitution of $1,000 to the Tripp firm "satisfactory," considering that some of the items had been recovered and were unsalable. Mr. Tripp said that Hart had worked for him for five years and that there had never before been any "trouble."

The court was told that Hart had admitted taking the goods, and passing them on to Bassett, who supplied him with a list of "customers." Money was given to Bassett, who passed it on to Hart, or to Hart himself. Bassett received goods as "commission."

The thefts were first discovered early this year when an inventory of Tripp's Stirling warehouse showed articles not ordered by the warehouse manager. A watch was put on the delivery truck driven by Hart, and goods found in the truck which Hart admitted taking from the Trenton warehouse.

The men were remanded for one week by Magistrate T. Y. Wills who said he wanted some time to think about sentencing.

"This is a serious offence," said the magistrate, "A theft from an employer by a trusted individual is worse than an ordinary theft."

tising slogan.

"Socialites" object to being called "alcoholics," the panel agreed, and one member went further and said that "alcoholics" objected to being called "alcoholics."

The church as a whole was "prone to hypocrisy" around the question, the panel also agreed, because of social drinking in the congregation and other factors.

"Everyone who takes a drink moderately or immoderately is serving the devil," stated Mr. Wilson.

In a question period following the discussion, one lone voice from the audience suggested that many persons in Europe drink moderately and still remain Christian, but Mr. Wilson re-iterated his last statement.

The Real Issue

John Addison, Liberal member of the House of Commons for York North, told a meeting at Wasaga Beach that there is a "dramatic tension" between federal and provincial governments.

The real opposition to the federal government "is not the opposition parties but rather the collective provincial governments," he said.

Mr. Addison said the constitution must be amended and the powers of government redistributed.

This sounds familiar. It is the argument we are hearing so often these days from Quebec.

This is no mere coincidence. The controversy over biculturalism and bilingualism is not synonymous with the controversy over the proper roles of the federal and provincial governments, but if we could solve the latter dispute with an agreement giving primacy to the provinces most of the bitterness would disappear from arguments over the roles of Canada's two founding races.

Given a greater role for provincial governments, the French-Canadian could remake his home province of Quebec nearer to his desires and could bargain with the governments of other provinces where there are large French-Canadian minorities.

But if major powers are concentrated into the hands of the federal government, the French-Canadian has to bargain for what he wants in his own province and has little bargaining power in other provinces.

There are many matters in greater provincial autonomy in English-speaking Canada, too, but for them this belief does not assume such overwhelming importance, because federal control does not place them in a minority role.

There can be little doubt but that Canada's constitution needs revision. The trouble is that there are those who will argue that any revision should provide the federal government with more, rather than less, power.

Take old age pensions. These are now a provincial matter, but the case for providing equality of treatment to all Canadians is so overwhelming that every province except Quebec may agree to relinquish this control to the federal regime.

Education, too, is a provincial matter. The case for federal control is not so convincing here, but may grow stronger if discrepancies between educational opportunities in the different provinces widen.

Highways, once obviously of regional concern, now assume national importance.

These are only a few of the many fields in which uniformity of service for all Canadians appears desirable to many.

Today's task is to discover some way to provide this uniformity, while still leaving different areas of the nation free to develop their own distinctive ways of life. Achievement of such uniformity within diversity is possible—but it hardly seems probable.

Today's tide is flowing strongly against centralization of government. Only time will tell whether the reasons advanced for opposing centralization are sound, whether the disadvantages inherent in a weak central government will not more than offset any good which may materialize from giving greater powers to regional governments.

Attention, Women!

Cleaning fluid used on the living room floor of a Rawdon township home burst into flames the other day, when the woman who had used it turned the switch on an electric polisher. Furniture in the living room and parlor was damaged, smoke and water damage extended through the whole house, and three small children had to be rescued from the house. The incident might easily have been worse.

Cleaning fluids are often used in Canadian homes, too often without a real understanding of their nature. Most are highly inflammable, others are toxic. Some are neither inflammable nor toxic, but give off fumes which can cause asphyxiation.

No cleaning fluid, regardless of the manufacturer's claims, (and most manufacturers or packers of cleaning fluids print this warning on the labels), should be used in poorly ventilated areas. Few cleaning fluids are completely safe in the presence of fire—and the danger is nearly as great from an electric appliance, in this case, as from a match.

Generally speaking, the safest course to to pursue after a lot of cleaning fluid has been used indoors is to open the windows and leave the room for a while.

Letter to the Editor

Answers Objection To Teaching French

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

In reference to Mrs. Guay's letter which appeared in your Saturday's paper, I would like to refute a few points where I think a misunderstanding overcame logic.

I fail to see where the number of failures in French justifies the "throwing out" of the subject. It would seem to me that you need better qualified teachers or the program should be revised. I, myself, failed my grade 13 trigonometry exam in June of 1960, at least half of our class failed the same subject, but nevertheless "trig" is still being taught in grade 12 in Quinte. Another indication is the fact that Mrs. Guay's son had only two weeks to study a textbook — whether he knew it wasn't very thick, or there was poor planning somewhere.

I understand how he feels however, I'm currently taking grade 13 English at night, and I had only three or four weeks to study Hamlet. I don't have a snow flake's chance in hell of passing the June exam, but at least I'm trying, and I feel that the knowledge which I acquire at age is just as important as taking exams.

It is hard for a child to understand the importance of studying certain subjects, but it is the parents responsibility to do the explaining and to decide what is best for the child's future.

I have two boys going to school, and they are looking forward to take French: of course, there are arguments every Saturday. I tell them that they could play cowboy and Indian all their life if they wish, but there will come a time when they can learn their mother language and it is right now.

As for Mr. Kells and Dr. Scott, I would join their names to people like Hitler and others: The Fathers of Secession.

Respectfully yours,
Julia Pronovost,
334 Bleecker Ave.,
Belleville.

Opposes Any New Political Party

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

That such an irresponsible idea should be put forth by such a supposedly responsible person is indeed distressing! Of course, Mr. Kenneth G. M. Ross in your edition of Tuesday, March 12, 1964. Perhaps Mr. Ross timed the writing of his letter so that it would be published on St. Patrick's Day in an effort to show that he has "kissed the blarney stone", but I think not.

Mr. Ross opens with "the political organization of Canada" and the formation of a new political party." (Will Sir John A. Macdonald and Wilfrid Laurier please refrain from twirling in their graves.) To any true supporter of our country the political conditions of Canada necessitate the immediate return to the original two party system.

The present decry that Canada is a divided nation. We are divided by geography. We are divided by religion. We are divided by race. We are divided by language. We are divided by class. But we are divided by principles. If we have a reactionary "Free Enterprise party for of Canada" what is to hinder the formation of a further French language party, or a purely 'Anglican' party or a purely republican party? Where is province or region? Indeed such parties actually do exist but are confined to the narrow confines of the monolith known as the Conservative or Liberal party.

Does Mr. Ross negate the parliamentary system of this type of government we host when only two parties are present. At the moment there are five political parties represented in the Parliament of Canada if there is a further particularizing of interests Canada cannot help but fall into the morass which plagued the Third and Fourth Republic of France, and Weimar Germany.

Can Mr. Ross say with a clear conscience the he desires such a situation?

If I may be permitted — both the Progressive Conservatives and Liberals are free enterprise parties (so is the Social Credit party) but Mr. Ross has taken it upon himself to wipe out this organization (Social Credit party) which controls the governments of British Columbia and Alberta and "at the same time holds twenty (20) seats in the House of Commons. The "entrepreneur" must feel that his views are adequately voiced and that he is rather secure where he now is, in the Conservative and Liberal parties because he continues to swell the coffers of these parties. Mr. Ross ignores the natural conservatism of Social Credit and their fervent vice and the effect of this on 'policy' in Canada. Certainly Canada spends a good deal on "welfare" services and she should continue to do so while people suffer in a land of plenty. In spite of the much publicized tax cuts in the U.S.A. the tax load in Canadian continues to play less tax than his American counterpart.

The true statement is valid in many places. However it contains too many errors and of truths it is acceptable.

I have taken your proposes seriously Mr. Ross; however if it were meant to be facetious I withdraw my remarks.

Rodney E. Folwell,
Queen's University.

Strictly Personal

Use of Words Can Become Too Involved

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

One of the most interesting of recent semantic problems is showing the profound influence of word upon concepts — in the latest nuance of the Whorf-Sapir school of linguistics, which refused to allow intuition for to be labeled "imitation fur."

This decision followed logically — but illogically — upon the FTC's proscription of the use of the word "fur" in identifying man-made products, even if it is qualified with the word "imitation."

Although the presumed intent of such a ruling is to protect the consumer, the ultimate result is to force the manufacturer to invent some other word for their product — and that other word will not always be clear to the public that the product is, in reality, "fake fur."

One clothing manufacturer, indeed, has already taken the bit in his teeth and advertises: "It's not fake anything. It's real Dynel."

It is just as if the FTC forbade jewelry counters to sell "fake pearls" labeled as such, on the premise that a pearl must be made by an oyster and not by a man. Jewelers might then call them "cultured pearls," and the public might easily believe it is getting a superior kind of pearl, rather than a mere imitation.

To be consistent, the FTC ought to prohibit the candy and ice-cream makers from labeling their products as they do, "Imitation Strawberry," "Imitation Banana," and so on. If it's not made from strawberries or bananas, it then falls in the same class as fur made without animals and pearls made without oysters.

I am not unsympathetic to the aims of the FTC, for it is the American consumer certainly needs a vigilant policing agency to protect him from being labelled with obvious intent to defraud. But why is frozen dessert made with vegetable fat permitted to call itself "imitation ice cream," while whipped dessert topping made with vegetables fat may not legally be called "imitation whipped cream"?

These are gross examples of the tyranny of words under which we live. Words are increasingly in a world of synthetics; in many cases, the synthetics are superior to the "natural" products they simulate. What is important to the consumer is the value he is getting for his money, the more name of the product.

One wonders if what the FTC would do about "catgut" which does not come from cats; "honeydew" which is not from honey; "Irish stew," unknown in Ireland; "kid gloves," not made from kids; and "sweetbreads" which has no rics in it: "scaling-wax," without a particle of wax; and "lead pencils" which contain no lead at all.

Magic Scent Sells Hose

Dienst aus Deutschland

German advertisers have now discovered a new "weapon" weapon": fragrance. In discovering how easy it is to reach subconscious minds, they have they mapped out a whole fragrance strategy. Today, magic-produced fragrances woo our vision but solely our sense of smell.

Acting on the advice of their advertising manager, a large Frankfurt stocking firm recently innovated a novel experiment: the customers were offered, free of charge, different types of stockings that were in reality identical. The only difference was that each pair was slightly scented. Nearly 80 per cent of the women chose the scented stockings. Others relied on their vision and discovered a difference in color or a better color. Not a single customer noticed that she had followed her nose.

It has long been proved that small plays a more important and frequent role than we believe. But it is not as dominating as the other senses, it works "behind the scene," affecting moods and emotions.

The new advertising campaign has not only increased perfume sales. Underwear, stockings, purses, belts, shoes, gloves, suitcases, writing material, books, fuel and furniture are now being marketed, discreetly perfumed—and sell well. Bakeries that not only scent their wrapping paper have noted excellent sales. Many department stores are now installing air-fans in order to put their customers in a buying mood. The scent chosen is usually inconspicuous and the chemical industry must continually make up new fragrances. A new product called "New Car" is presently in the making that will be sprayed on used cars to take the smell of existing the used car market.

Even advertising men have exploited the psychology of scent. Work psychologists have recognized its beneficial influence. They advise messengers to install scent vaporizers in elevators, corridors and offices. From time to time, refreshing waits are to circulate through the rooms, thereby greatly increased performance and improved working atmosphere. Doctors have successfully experimented with the "scent therapy." The patient's mood or type of living can be influenced by scent compositions.

All attempts to woo our noses are limited, however, as our sense of smell is equipped with its own automatic self-defence system. Even the most pleasant smells lose their effect after a short while.

Combines Act Needs Teeth

Saskatoon Star-Phoenix

City Solicitor Phillips regards a set of identical bids as evidence that combines are likely to be at work to set prices to consumers. He is not convinced that the matter be referred to the federal combines investigation authorities.

The city received 13 identical bids from 12 Saskatoon suppliers for light bulbs. In a small woodpe that Mr. Phillips made the reference suggestion. Mr. N P Wells, the city commissioner, also said that he would recommend that the matter be referred to be federal authorities. "I blame the manufacturers," he commented. "The hands of our local suppliers are tied."

If identical bids are accepted as evidences that restrictive trade practices are effectively reducing competition, which would be hard to deny, citizens are being affected in two ways. First, as taxpayers, they will be paying, or have been paying, a monopolistic price for the city's purchases, unless the city finds some way to beat the selling and record, they will be paying, or have been paying, an extra that not only scent their wrapping paper have noted excellent sales. Many department stores are now installing air-fans in order to put their customers in a buying mood. They advise messengers to install scent vaporizers in elevators, corridors and offices. From time to time, refreshing waits are to circulate through the rooms, thereby greatly increased performance and improved working atmosphere. Doctors have successfully experimented with the "scent therapy." The patient's mood or type of living can be influenced by scent compositions.

All attempts to woo our noses are limited, however, as our sense of smell is equipped with its own automatic self-defence system. Even the most pleasant smells lose their effect after a short while.

25 YEARS AGO

March 23rd, 1944.

Present members of the Belleville Civic Cadet Corps are interesting enthusiastically in the current drive for additional cadets to add to the squadron roster and since February 1st, have brought in 15 boys who have been accepted into the corps, it is announced by the squadron commanding officer.

The campaign for additional recruits was started on February 1st, and all new cadets accepted into the corps by Monday evening of next week will be eligible to attend the air cadet summer camp. In itself this is felt will be a splendid inducement for district boys to become air cadets while the splendid training afforded by the varied instruction given will be added encouragement.

A sudden epidemic of chimney fires and overheated stove pipes resulted in many time for the local fire department Friday night and Saturday morning with no less than four within a few hours. Friday evening a chimney fire on Ridley Ave., and another Saturday morning. A blocked chimney on George St., also required the attention of firemen on Saturday morning. No damage was reported by Fire Chief William Lynch at any of these calls.

Angina Pectoris and Heart Pain Not Like Heart Attack

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

(First of two articles)

I have a letter from a man with angina pectoris who has been reading about people with heart attacks and "The smaller arteries took over to supply blood to the heart, and developed in size to do the job."

Now I'm rather sure that he isn't the only one who is wondering what confused over the difference between angina and a heart attack (or coronary thrombosis).

They are not the same, even though they have a good deal in common.

Both involve the heart muscle, and the arteries which serve it.

Both involve pain.

Both can be dangerous in varying degrees.

But the causes, the treatment and the symptoms are different.

The best way to explain this is to go all backwards, which we have done before with other articles.

Although we want to get around to the answers on angina pectoris, let's begin with a heart attack, or occlusion, or thrombosis.

As the heart pumps blood to the rest of the body, about 5 per cent goes directly to the heart muscle. It, you might say, has first priority.

If this supply of blood were to be shut off, death would be soon and sure. Fortunately it rarely is any there is little possibility of being occluded or shut off, or plugged completely.

Rather, one of its branches may be plugged. This is a heart attack.

Some portion of the heart muscle dies, whatever is served by that branch of the artery, is affected. A section of the muscle, or a small area, is injured, or destroyed, and turns into fibrous scar tissue.

But the rest of the heart muscle — assuming that the patient survives, and 75 to 90 per cent do — keeps on working. Along the margins of the damaged section, there are areas which are not damaged, but which are unreasonable, non-competitive price list light bulbs for household use. If monopolistic or semimonopolistic prices are in effect then we shall be keen for what other commodities municipal consumers are also paying too much for.

There was shortsightedness in allowing identical bids to be made, thereby bringing to light the highly unsavory situation which has been disclosed. The public, now alerted to what is going on, may feel that it was a fortunate thing that a monopoly prices for Canadian-made goods, but to send abroad for its requirements.

Even if the tariff charge makes the total cost equal to, or even greater than the cost of the domestic product, the latter will at least have the consolation of knowing that his money will go to the Government rather than "it must support anyway;) rather than to a monopoly-minded firms whose purpose is to "gouge" the Belleville Canadians rather than to build up the Canadian economy.

In the circumstances it seems clear that the city should take parallel action. It should "put a spoke in the wheel pour-ers," and import the light bulbs it needs.

It's time, too, for the Pearson Government to look into the status of the Combines Investigation Act and amend the Conservatives left it. The Act was enacted in 1923, and has been repeatedly amended, in 1935, 1937, 1946, 1949, 1951, 1952, and the revision of 1960. The question is, what teeth did the revision "pull"? If the Act is now a toothless tiger, then the sort of thing the Chinese like to call a "paper tiger," it is time the Liberals did a dental job on it.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market moved strongly ahead with both the industrial and Exchange indexes setting record highs in heavy morning trading today.

The industrial index was ahead .23 to a record 143.33 and the Exchange index .21 to a high of 134.6. Golds rose .40 to 133-09 and western oils .40 to 86.38 while base metals dipped .15 to 96.35.

Volume at 11 a.m. was 1,629,000 shares compared with 1,142,000 at the same time Tuesday.

Pipelines, integrated oils and liquors were leaders on the Industrial board.

Interprovincial rose ¼, Trans-Mountain ¼ and Alberta Gas and Westcoast ¼ each among pipelines.

Banks and financial issues were mixed.

Hudson Bay Mining dipped ¼ while Falconbridge and Noranda both gained ¼ among senior base metals. Lake Dufault was up 25 cents to 10¼ among juniors.

The two major indexes on the market broke through to record highs despite an easier New York market Tuesday.

The 78-stock industrial index rose .31 to close at a record 143.50 and the 115-stock exchange index advanced .42 to a record 134.20, wiping out losses experienced since the market entered a consolidation period in late January.

The base metal index gained .11 on the day to close at 96.47, while golds rose 1.81 to 132.77 and western oils .17 to 85.98.

Volume was heavy with 5,238,000 shares traded, highest since Jan. 24. Monday's turnover was 4,229,000 shares.

Steels, papers, distilleries, banks and integrated oils were leaders on the industrial board.

Dominion Foundries and Steel rose one point to 76¾ and Algoma to 48 and Canada Steel to 24¼. MacMillan-Bloedel ¾ to 37¾ and Consolidated 25 rose ¼ to 40 among papers; Distillers - Seagrams ¾ to 53¾ among liquors; Nova Scotia Steel 65¾ and Montreal ¾ to 61¾ among chartered banks and Texaco ¾ to 56 among integrated oils.

On the mines side, Canada Permanent Mortgage fell one point to 75 on light turnover. Interprovincial Pipe Line ¾ to 80¾ and Burns ¼ to 19¾.

Senior metals edged ahead at the close after an uncertain start. Hollinger and Hudson Bay Mining both gained ¼ to 64 and 66¾ respectively while Consolidated Mining and Smelting dipped ¼ to 33¾. Dome Mines was down 1¾ to 39, trading ex-dividend 30 cents, in senior golds.

Calvert was the heavy trader among speculative issues, off two cents to 60 cents on 481,470 shares. Zulapa rose 5¾ cents to 80 cents and Consolidated Sannorm two cents to 12 cents, both on heavy turnover.

Senior oils generally were easier, Great Plains down ¼ to 13¾ and Dome Petroleum ¼ to 15. Americans Leduc dipped one cent to 24 cents in speculative oils.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Trading was active and prices were steady to the week's advanced on all classes and grades of slaughter cattle at the Ontario public stockyards today.

Veal calf prices were steady. Hog prices were barely steady and sheep and lamb prices were steady.

Slaughter cattle 2,019: Choice steers 24-24.50 with sales to 25.10; good 22-24; medium 18-20; common 15-19; choice 650 yearlings 24-25; good 22 - 24; good cows 16-17 with sales to 17.50; medium 14.50-15.50; canners and cutters 11-14; good heavy bologna bulls 19-19.50; common and medium 17-19.

Calves 347: Choice vealers 32-34 with sales to 36.75; good 28-31; medium 24-27; common 20-24; boners 12-20.

WHAT GIVES HERE? — From the looks of things an outraged civilian (Tom Fraser) has stepped between a sword-drawn military mind (Lee Jourard) and a skimpily-clad bar maid (Sandra Svendsen). Of course, since it's "Thurber's Carnival," things may not be what they seem.

Wackiest, Fastest Show In Town for Years to Be Presented by Theatre Guild

The stage revolves.

A cool jazz combo tinkles in the background as the man walks his wife and tale her matter-of-factly:

"There's a unicorn outside". The stage revolves.

The combo tunes away and the bashfully homicidal husband, intent on butchering his wife in the basement, reveals his crackpot alibi:

"I was going to say you went visiting—and fell over a cliff!"

And the band plays on — and the stage keeps on revolving with what promises to be the wackiest and fastest show in town for many a moon — Belleville Theatre Guild's production of "A Thurber Carnival."

It's the most delightful zany because of its author, James Thurber, who spent a lifetime watching the world's anthology of social humor as artist and author. (His cartoons of people and animals are now classic individualisms — as zany as the situations and dialogue he wrote for the characters he sketched).

It's the fastest because of the unique way Director Jim Alexander has handled this production. (Mr. Alexander can lay claim to the last fastest show seen in these parts with his mock-serious presentation of "Will the Mail Train Run Tonight" — a melodrama so fast-paced even the actors were left behind).

STAGE ON WHEELS

Key to "Carnival" is another Alexander innovation — a stage on wheels.

With 18 scene changes in two acts more than the country-style curtain-raising-lowering bit was called for. It was finally solved by the director and artist, Tony Lassing, putting their heads together and blueprinting a small revolving stage.

Next came the music — an indispensable part of this production — sound effects, scenery and lighting.

Calves 347: Choice vealers 32-34 with sales to 36.75; good 28-31; medium 24-27; common 20-24; boners 12-20.

Designer for the production is Ann Boyle, who scanned volumes of Thurber drawings before putting brush to paint to canvass atmosphere to evoke the peculiar knaidy-through-logic of the humorist's works.

The multidirectional lighting effects called for by the script are being organized by Bruce Jarvah.

In one respect though, the Guild started with something in its favor.

"A Thurber Carnival" will be the first public performance of a full-scale production in the Guild's own home in the Firehouse at 224 Front Street. A huge studio, it has been completely refurbished, redressed and rewired by the Guild as its permanent home.

TIME COMMODITY

With its own quarters, the Guild can make its own hours, to build and design scenery on the spot — thus ruling out the ordeal of moving an entire production from its organizational point into an auditorium — an operation that once took days. And time is a precious commodity to the amateur acting to a deadline.

With "Thurber" the deadline is only a week away — opening night is April 2nd.

More aware of it than anyone else, perhaps, are the actors — hurrying to make the date amid the bulls of hammering, painting and cable-stringing.

With them on it the stage revolves and the music plays.

A VIP doctor agrees with his colleagues chartered short a crucial operating table:

"Precisely. But I'm afraid of that new anesthetizing machine."

The stage revolves — and so on.

Historians Seek To Honor Cheese Industry

The Hastings County Historical Society met in the old courthouse and enthusiastic workshop meetings Monday evening.

Two persons were on hand to take part in the various projects, ranging from the preparation of a picture display for May to the arrangement of a giant 6 foot by 12 foot map of downtown Belleville in the 1890 period. This map is being compiled from 70 smaller maps. It shows the height, type of construction and use for all the buildings there in the central part of the city. How to set up this giant map was the project directed by Thomas Ransom.

Also on the docket is a large picture collection showing Belleville in the period 1911 to 1923 was inspected. Museum officials are ordering approximately 40 enlargements from this collection. Quite a number of other pictures deal with the district's cheese industry in 1910 and it was felt that perhaps some local cheese company or group of companies might make a small financial grant to enable the County Museum to purchase a set of these interesting pictures. This would mark the centennial (1960) of the cheese industry in Ontario.

Hastings County Historical Society president Gerald Boyce hopes to be able to further develop this large picture collection when he visits Ottawa this Easter.

There will be another workshop meeting at the County Museum next Monday evening and museum officials anticipate another enthusiastic group of volunteers will gather then.

B and B Board to Hold Regional Meets in Ont.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism holds two regional hearings in Ontario today.

While five members of the 10-man commission meet with representative groups in this industrial and educational centre of south-western Ontario, the other commissioners were due to meet with similar groups in the northern city of Sudbury.

The commission plans to hold about 25 such meetings throughout Canada between now and mid-June.

Mrs. Mary Barber, who will preside over the London meeting, said Tuesday not so many participants are expected at the hearing here as in those in Quebec last week, when 300 took part.

Andre Laurendeau, co - chairman of the commission, said this is not surprising because last week's turn-out was itself unexpectedly large and because "the problems of bilingualism and biculturalism are certainly not so evident in London as they are in Quebec."

Mr. Laurendeau said the current series of meetings "is not a crusade waged by the commission across Canada."

He told a press conference on his arrival here, "We are only trying to determine the feelings of all Canadians."

Horticultural Soc. Prepares For Convention

STIRLING — Mrs. Harry Clarke, Mill Street, Stirling was hostess for the March meeting of Stirling Horticultural Society with an attendance of 31 members.

Mrs. Floyd Armstrong presided for the evening and Mrs. Ray Rose gave her report and read the Correspondence. Place cards and nursery catalogues were displayed. An invitation was received from the Kingston Society who are observing their 75th anniversary. All the societies in the district are invited to participate.

The Ontario Horticultural Association convention letter was read and it will convene at the O.A.C. Guelph on June 17 and 18. The president plans to attend and will provide transportation. Those appointed as delegates were secretary Mrs. R Rose and Mrs. A. Brooks with alternate Mrs. P. Bronson. Two others may accompany the group if they wish to provide their own expenses at Guelph, and to see Mrs. Rose at 50 cents. tact the president.

One of the members Mr. Ernest Munro who is spending the winter in Victoria British Columbia sent greetings to the president which was read.

The April meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Belshaw on the 30th. Plans were made to order Easter lilies for the nine churches in this area. The group was reminded that the annual flower festival will be held June 10, 11. A letter was read re a special bus trip to Toronto in April. Several items of business were discussed.

ARTICLES READ

The president read an article re the state flower of Ohio which is the red carnation and gave an explanation of this exquisite flower. Mrs. Harold West read an interesting account of liquid plant food, and how it was developed over a period of years. Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave a graphic picture of alliums which are both decorative and used for seasoning. The article stated that lilies appeared on Crete pottery made about 2000 B.C.; also on Chinese vases from early Buddhist times. In the middle ages the early paintings show the angel Gabriel presenting lilies to the Virgin Mary.

Roman women used the sap from the lily stalk to cleanse their skin because it had fragrance as well as cleaning qualities. There are many species of the lily family which are used as seasonings. The Bible reads that in the wilderness the wandering Israelites missed the onions, garlic and leeks that were so plentiful in Egypt.

Mrs. L. Howard read an article giving a fine description of "Town and Garden", making sure that the soil was sterile and that many precautions had been taken to provide the proper mixture of soil and peat moss.

Mrs. Grant Hubbis read an article written by Dr. Robert E. Atkinson which outlined how James MacDonald of Santa Maria, California had developed a selection of double and semi-double poppies. These are called Mission Bells and they thrive in almost any climate. The seeds can be sown in waste places and wild slopes in early spring and the poppies will bloom in May.

WORLD'S FAIR

Mrs. Ashley Brooks gave a message re New York's World Fair and Mrs. George Warner displayed a dahlia bulb and demonstrated the proper way to plant this bulb; also how to prune and grow this beautiful plant. She gave the origin of the dahlia growing wild in Mexico. In 1789 seeds were sent to Spain and a Swedish scientist was honored with naming the dahlia. Mrs. Warner gave a concise description of the culture of this plant from the time the bulb was planted in the garden in the spring until it was stored in the cellar in late autumn. She also outlined the best way to use it for cut flowers and gave many worthwhile ideas.

Mr. R. B. Belshaw spoke briefly and thanked all those who had contributed to the program which was both interesting and informative. The president conducted a contest on the Provinces of Canada which was a good way to learn more of the Dominion from sea to sea.

Numbers were passed and the winners of small gifts were Mrs. P. Bronson, Mrs. Ivan Caldwell, Mrs. R. B. Belshaw, Mrs. Dan Danford and Mr. Belshaw.

Refreshments were provided by the hostess, and three of the members from Medoc Junction, Mrs. Clarence Pichett, Mrs. Maurice Clancy and Mrs. Harold Chambers.

Appreciation for the lunch was voiced by Mrs. Raymond McConnell.

More than 4,368,000 persons aged five years or older reported in the 1951 Canadian census as having attended school full-time some time during the previous year.

The Experts Say:
NES Official Counsels Women Who Seek Work

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—It's your first job interview and you're scared out of your wits. You sit in the waiting room, nervously rubbing your hands together and mopping your shiny nose.

How do you overcome that nervous tension?

"Breathe deeply," says Margaret McIrvine, co-ordinator of women's employment for the National Employment Service.

"It may sound silly, but if you try it you'll see what I mean. While you are waiting to see a prospective employer, breathe deeply, right down to the bottom of your lungs.

"You'll find this helps to relax you and keeps that nervous quaver from your voice."

Miss McIrvine, who learned the technique when she studied voice control, says it is also important to be neatly dressed and well-groomed when you set out to look for a new job.

"This is just commonsense, but it is surprising how many women don't know how to dress for an interview."

WEAR GLOVES

The first thing to remember is that it's better to err on the side of conservatism. If you have a choice between wearing a tailored suit or your best silk dress, choose the suit. Gloves are a must. A small hat also looks neat.

Avoid a fussy hair-do. The employer may think you'll have to spend all day looking after it.

Similarly, shun elaborate jewelry. A small brooch or thin, round necklace looks attractive, but avoid armloads of bangles or dangling earrings.

Be sure to be on time for the interview. Your prospective employer may be seeing a number of people that day, and may keep you waiting. On the other hand, he may run to punctuality busy and will be glancing at his watch when you arrive five minutes late.

Miss McIrvine says a well-prepared personal data sheet is invaluable to any job hunter. It should list all the pertinent facts about your education and qualifications, including all previous experience. "Don't overlook any summer jobs you may have held during high school or college years."

The data sheet should be typewritten if possible and should answer all the obvious questions a prospective employer would ask about you.

ANSWER FULLY

"Try to send him a copy before your interview. If he, or she, has a chance to read it before seeing you, the interview will be more relaxed and easier for you both."

If you are applying at several different places, be sure to have enough copies of your data sheet so that you can leave one with each prospective employer, says Miss McIrvine.

Some other pointers about job hunting from the women's employment co-ordinator:

—Be prepared to answer questions fully. Don't give bare yes or no answers when you can avoid them.

—Try not to talk too fast, however nervous you may be. No one expects you to know the answer before the question is asked, be deliberate. Think about the question before you answer.

—Most prospective employers make allowance for the fact that you may be nervous. If you find you can't talk a blue streak, they will probably forgive you if your qualifications are suitable, says Miss McIrvine.

Church Groups

Frankford A.O.T.S. Men's Club held a special kind of meeting in Rose Lowery hall, Frankford, on the evening of March 19th, with about 160 in attendance.

It was an occasion when men of the United Church, Anglican, and Catholic denominations met and enjoyed the fellowship and an excellent supper served by the ladies of the U.C.W.

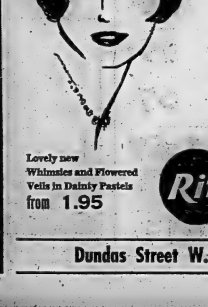
The guest speaker was Mr. James McCauley of Carleton College, Ottawa, who visited Africa last year. He spoke on Cross Roads Africa, and supplemented his talk with slides showing the numerous places he visited. He said there is an urgent need for a closer relationship with our African friends, and if we do not take advantage of this fact we will lose the greatest opportunity presented today.

Africans are clamoring for education in social, economic religious fields, and such organizations as those responsible for Cross Roads Africa provide a means for some knowledge of the western world and a closer fellowship, and is a stepping stone in the right direction.

At the close of his talk Mr. McCauley received many questions which were ably dealt with to everyone's satisfaction.

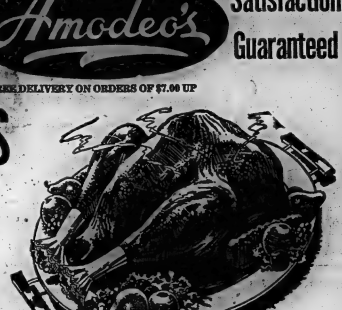
Reverend McGarry, Catholic priest, Stirling - Frankford, thanked the AOTS Men's Club for making this kind of fellowship possible, and Chaplain through the medium of such men's clubs this fellowship could extend to all parts of the country with beneficial results.

In like manner, Reverend Hammerson of Stirling U.C., and Reverend Fletcher of Rawdon U.C., responded.



The devotional speaker was Mr. Felix Skoutajan who gave an interesting talk on brotherhood. He said that regardless of the various denominations and races, we must, through the medium of religion provide a closer relation with all peoples and extend God's word throughout the world. This was the command of Jesus Christ, and it is a Christian's duty to obey and to witness in the home, industry, and wherever opportunity was provided.

Reverend Judd, presiding minister, closed the meeting with a few remarks. He said that the men's responsibility in the work of Christian witness extended far beyond this immediate area, and such fellowship as was evidenced there was an example of what can be achieved.



It was a wonderful experience to all present, and he hoped this was the beginning of an effective and continuous fellowship with all denominations.

St. Columba Church Holds St. Patrick's Tea

Despite the inclement weather there was a good turnout at the St. Patrick's Day Tea held recently at St. Columba Presbyterian Church. General convenors for this event were Mrs. F. Lyons and Mrs. R. Blakey.

Appropriately decorated in green and white, the tea room presented a pretty picture to all in attendance. The Misses Heather Lyons and Sherryl Taylor added much to the decor, when, dressed as pert young Irish colleens, they passed about the tea room re-filling teacups.

Mrs. N. Hutchinson and Mrs. P. Baldwin greeted the guests as they arrived and Mrs. R. J. McLaughlin took the tickets at the door.

Pouring at the tea table, which was graced with silver bowl filled with green chrysanthemums were: Mesdames G. Miller, J. Fisher, G. Culver, J. Cathcart.

The task of serving and helping in the kitchen were performed by various other ladies in the church.

The candy booth in charge of the choir was convened by Mrs. Mitz McLaughlin, Carol Rendall, Marilee Taylor and Cathy McDonald, while the home-cooking table did a thriving business with Mrs. G. Devolin and Mrs. S. Mulholland in charge.

Thanks and appreciation are extended to all who helped, and to all who attended.

SCHOOL LIBRARIES

Reports from 65 Canadian university and college libraries in 1961-62 indicated a total book stock of more than 8,000,000 volumes, serving some 121,000 students.

Explorers Hold Initiation Service

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Explorers were hosts to their parents and friends this week at their regular expedition in the Sunday School hall. The program opened with a ceremony of initiation, at which certificates of membership, diaries and emblem pins were presented to the twenty junior boys and girls who form this newly organized group.

Following the ceremony, an Easter play, "The Secret," was presented by the entire Explorer group, with the choral assistance of The Children-of-the-Church. On behalf of the Sunday School staff, Rev. A. L. Sutherland requested the Explorers to give their play for the Junior Sunday School.

175 Children Attend Bible Club Rally

Approximately 175 children assembled in the Holloway Street United Church Sunday School Hall on Saturday afternoon for the annual "Good News Bible Club" rally.

Mr. Floyd Cummings acted as chairman and led the children in chorus singing assisted by Mr. W. Leonard at the piano.

Several clubs gave special presentations which included Bible quizzes, the recitation of many verses of Scripture which the children had memorized, the singing of special choruses and a Missionary skit, which showed the importance of telling boys and girls in other lands about the Lord Jesus.

Mr. Gerry Nichol delighted the children by playing several numbers on his trumpet and they sang lustily as he accompanied them in a selection.

Miss Joan Anglin told the children an interesting story about Ralph, a boy who found it so hard to keep clean on the outside. When he invited the Lord Jesus into his heart, his mother and aunt found out that it was more important to have a boy who was clean on the inside. Ralph witnessed in school by refusing to cheat on a test even though it meant missing a boat trip and because of this was able to win a school chum to the Lord.

The story stressed the importance of coming to Christ as Savior and being faithful in telling others so that they may come to know Him, too.

Miss Anglin closed the meeting in prayer.

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

SMOKE SIGNALS

With all the controversy about smoking cigarettes I was amused by one woman's description of her resolve to stop.

She said that one rainy day in spring she was housecleaning a hall cupboard and came across a box of old photographs. Among them was a picture of her grandmother, and as she studied that sweet and gentle face, she began to wonder as a grandmother herself, what memories her grandchildren would have of her. Would they think of her as always in a fog of cigarette smoke? Would they picture her with a halo of smoke around her head?

She tried to imagine her grandmother with a cigarette in her mouth. The idea was as shocking as drawing a moustache on her picture.

Right then, she said, she resolved to quit smoking if only to leave a better image of herself for her progeny.

With firm resolution she worked through until eleven o'clock and then stopped for coffee. She noticed that she had one cigarette left in the box so she thought there was no point in wasting that, and it would be her last.

She ate lunch alone, but habit was strong, and after lunch she began to long for a cigarette. Perhaps tapering off was the best idea. By one o'clock she was looking for if she might have forgotten to empty an ashtray and there might be a butt left. But she had done a thorough job and all ashtrays were clean. By two o'clock she was searching through old purses, her husband's pockets, even the pockets of her son who didn't smoke. Grandmother was forgotten.

Desperately she looked out the window at the cold rain. With a sigh she put on her raincoat and walked to the store to buy cigarettes, and at four o'clock was having tea with a neighbor and the two of them were happily blowing smoke in each other's faces.

There is a sequel though. She says that when she began to realize how ridiculous it was to be defeated by a small tube of paper filled with tobacco, she did actually stop and with the right motives. It is now several years since she smoked and she hopes her grandchildren were too young to remember when.

She thinks the important thing is not to feel you have deprived yourself of something enjoyable, but to concentrate on the freedom from enslavement to tobacco, on the restoration of the senses of taste and smell, a better appetite, and a cleaner taste in the mouth.

But she also says she hopes she will never sound off in a self-righteous way about it.

COMPARATIVELY SPEAKING

I wonder why dept.: Why would a woman rather be called "older" than "old"? If you say, "She is an old woman" a picture of a frail and feeble person comes into your mind. But if you say, "She is an older woman" she loses ten years immediately. Perhaps it is the comparative that does it. Older that what? Her daughter? Her grandchildren? Let me see — old, older, oldest. Older, shouldn't be younger than old. It is baffling.

U.C.W. Meeting

CANNIFTON U.C.W.

The March meeting of Cannifton United Church Women was held recently with 14 members present. The president was in charge and welcomed all.

The various reports were given and Mrs. Harry Brenton, card secretary, read thank-you letters from Miss Clasie, Mrs. S. Bird, Mrs. Mills and Mrs. Billings-Steele. Members were reminded of the dinner and that a bale would be packed in May. An open meeting will be held in the church on May 6 when other U.C.W. groups on the charge as well as other youth groups will be present. The groups will be addressed by a guest speaker.

Mrs. Clarence Bird was in charge of the program which followed the Easter service of worship prepared by Mrs. Bruce Graham for the Dominion Council of the Woman's Association. The theme was based on "The Gifts of Easter" with the five gifts mentioned as joy, peace, victory over death, immortality, and the gift of a mission. Her assistants read verses from the New Testament in keeping with each of these gifts. Mrs. Bird also gave a talk on Easter and the cross with its meaning. She urged members to rededicate themselves to His service, wherein is found joy and everlasting life.

Successful Living

Too Much Experience, Too Soon, Is Too Dangerous

DEAR DORIS — I am writing this letter for the benefit of young girls 11 to 13. When I was that age I went out with many guys, often five years older than me. At the time I'd say, "Well, I'm mature enough, and people often think I'm 16!"

DORIS CLARK

The maturity of the body is only a small preparation for the real thing which requires experience in meeting people. Often I was just lucky and managed to get myself out of trouble just in time.

We moved and the phone rang constantly. So I decided to do something about my reputation. After a year of disappointments it began to see that my friends were changing to good clean ones and I was the centre of attraction. Then at the height of my dating (16 then) I met a wonderful guy.

We went so far as to talk of all the kids we were going to have. I was in ecstasy because this time I knew it was real. Well tonight he told me after debating for two weeks that it was puppy love and physical attraction for him and that he's too young to date only one girl. It wouldn't have been so bad if he hadn't said he loved me so many times and if he hadn't taught me to love.

Well here I am with a broken heart. So you see girls it doesn't pay to get too much experience too soon. I have now only the memories to keep me company and prayers that he will find happiness and remember that evening in the dark. — GRAY AT SIXTEEN.

DEAR GRAY — It's true that if we jump the gun we can be off to a bad start. Are my very youthful readers impressed?

But, dear Gray, surely the future doesn't have to be as gray as you feel! You know now that companionship and sterling qualities rate higher than physical attraction; and this is wonderful knowledge.

DEAR DORIS — What is your honest opinion of a married daughter who is forever asking her parents for favors, borrowing money and never paying it back? Or always expecting mother to baby sit, or even help with the housework, so she can get out?

You know, Doris, I don't mind helping, but I am beginning to feel I am being used! — MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER — Where were you when said daughter was being raised up in the way she should go? Somehow she got the impression that you were there just to serve her needs.

Now that the worm has turned — how about showing her the other side of this one-sided arrangement? It's still in your hands to make a woman of your girl.

DEAR DORIS — My husband never stays home. He works every day; comes home, eats, changes and goes out till about one o'clock. He says he goes to the show or beer parlor. He says I don't bore him, but he has to get away from the house because he works every day. We have two children.

When he gets good and mad at me he'll go straight to bed after supper and I sit up alone. It's very, boring for me; I sit home alone every night crying. He also says he didn't marry me to stay home. — LONESOME.

DEAR LONESOME — If your wandering mate can't stand home, why did he get married? He's not making a home; he's just sleeping in it. Banish the tears; call up the girls and have your own evening out. Talk him into an early-to-bed night without his having a "real" on. With a wealth of happiness to be had in his family and a heap of living in front of him, he's passing up the richest experience in life. You get nowhere by petting up with it.

DEAR DORIS — I am planning to be married. Since my mother is dead, my father will be sitting alone and will not have a partner in the recessional. Would it be proper to ask an aunt, or possibly my mother's mother to take this honored seat in the front pew? If so, would she be ushered last into the church, or would my fiance's parents be seated last?

If I do have an aunt sit in the front new with my father, I'm afraid she may be mistaken for my mother by my fiance's friends and relatives.

At showers, where the mothers of the bride and groom are seated at the head table could I ask an aunt there again I have the problem of mistaken identity. — WHAT'S PROPER.

DEAR PROPER — Put aunt or grandmother "in loco parentis" beside your Dad, by all means. Then she is ushered into church last.

Same for the shower. Worry not at all about mistaken identity. Your aunt will be introduced to those who do not already know her, later.

CONFIDENTIAL TO A STEADY READER — For the information you want, you will have to write again, enclosing a five-cent-stamped, self addressed envelope for a private reply.)

(If it's etiquette, ask Doris. She can tell you how it's done in Canada.)

Large Crowd At Wellington Fun Fair

WELLINGTON — A large crowd attended the annual "Fun Fair" at Wellington School on Friday night. The was sponsored by the Home and School Association.

Movies were shown in one classroom, and good audience each time they were shown. A rummage sale of used articles and clothing was also well attended. The home cooking table was filled with all kinds of good things to eat and this table was soon emptied. Piles of books of all kinds and records were on sale and this proved to be a popular place for the young people.

In the gymnasium many games were played including hand ball, ring toss, darts, bowling, penny toss, horse shoe and others. The fish pond was the centre of attraction for the children and it was not long before all the fish were caught.

Hot dogs, freshly popped corn and soft drinks were on sale in the cafeteria, while upstairs in the Home Economics room tea and cookies were served.

Prizes were donated by various merchants and tradesmen in town and the winners of the draws were: Mrs. Otto Bowerman, case of pop; Mr. Donald Maycock, cheese; Mrs. Barbara Minaker, 22 lbs. dog food; Mr. James Calkow, cuff links; Miss Marion Wiycik, scarf and gloves set; Mrs. Allan Pettingill, flashlight; Ruth Miller and John Van Haarlem, two lucky dollars; Mrs. Harry Pettingill, basket of groceries; Ingrid Christolyn, picnic basket; Mrs. Colin Minaker, ashtrays; Mrs. Evalina Sanderson, cushion; Mrs. Eleanor Robinson, china dog; Mrs. Murray Wilkes, basket of oil and lubricants; Carl Morden and Linda Malcolm, two Beatle records.

WHEN TO ASK

GALT, Ont. (CP)—A word to wise IODE fund raisers comes from Jean Knapman of Hamilton in a talk to an IODE chapter here, Miss Knapman, national organizing secretary of the IODE, said a "good time is the day after pay day in your main industries. Never hold a money - raising project around tax time."

Church Groups

ST. MARK'S W.A.

BONARLAW — The March meeting of St. Mark's W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Brown with a good attendance. The rector, Mr. Stewart, opened the meeting and readings of the seven sayings of Christ from the cross were given by the members. Mr. Stewart also spoke briefly and dealt with the meaning of Easter.

Various items of business were discussed, while the minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. T. Heath. Mrs. Woodbeck thanked members for cards sent to her while ill and Mrs. Jones expressed thanks for sympathy cards. There was some discussion in regards to the 50th anniversary celebration of the W.A.; she last will be purchased for the vestry.

Mrs. W. Neal and Mrs. Fraser were in charge of the program when readings were given by Mrs. Eggett, Mrs. A. Neal and Mrs. Wellman.

Mr. Stewart showed a film on Hong Kong, after which lunch was served.

Choir Auxiliary Holds Card Party

WELLINGTON — The Choir auxiliary of St. Andrew's Church held a St. Patrick's card party on March 17th with a good attendance. Euchre, bridge and cribbage were played.

Prize winners for euchre were ladies high, Mrs. Cruikshank; low, Mrs. Fern Gibson; men's high, Mrs. Beverstock, playing on a man's ticket; man's low, Percy Lough on a lie with Mr. Archie Stewart. Cribbage, ladies high, Mrs. Maud Carson; low, Mrs. Helen Upton; man's high, Fred Morton; low, Mrs. F. Tripp playing on a man's ticket. Bridge, ladies high, Mrs. L. J. Greer; men's high, Mr. L. J. Greer. First door prize went to Percy Lough; 2nd door prize, Donald Upton; basket of groceries, Archie Stewart; birthday gift, Enid Lemley.

The draw on a hooked rug made and donated by Mr. Fred Morton was won by Mrs. Harold Nash.

MEET BY LETTER

SCARBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — There are 89 "Jones" Girl Guides and Rangers in Ontario, says their volunteer commissioner, Mrs. E. P. Russell. Most of them are girls who live in remote areas and whose monthly meetings take the form of a letter. Mrs. Russell, mother of eight, began working with them after her marriage.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

A VACATION TRIP IN THE CAR

During Easter vacation, everyone seems to get the urge to go someplace.

With schools closed, many parents are inclined to bundle up the offspring and pay a long-delayed visit to grandma's, or simply to get into the car and take the youngsters on a tour of some historic point of interest to broaden their knowledge.

Traveling with youngsters has its difficult moments, but it's still possible to enjoy a good-humored, well-mannered trip through proper planning.

The main reason most children get out of sorts on a trip is because the family tries to pack too much into a day and they tend to get tired. Traveling in slow easy stages is the best prescription for a happy trip.

If you're traveling by car, plan to take a break every couple of hours, and more frequently, if possible. It gives the youngsters a chance to run around and work off excess energy stored up on the road.

POINTS OF INTEREST

Make a list of points of interest to be explored along the way. It gives the youngsters something to look forward to with anticipation. Explain what they will see and its significance — for instance, that the inn you're coming to was once used as headquarters for the Revolutionary Army, and that George Washington watered his horse there. Naturally, they'll be interested in looking for the original trough, and the historic connotations should inspire some good behavior during lunch.

If you're passing through a section where dress and customs differ greatly from what the children are used to, explain why and what the background of the area is. Besides enriching the trip for the youngsters, they won't be prompted to giggle at the unfamiliar or make untoward remarks in public.

Be sure to equip the car with a variety of games and simple toys to keep the youngsters occupied so they won't get too feisty and distract the driver.

For quick fresh-up errands, it's also wise to keep a jar of water and a face cloth in the glove compartment to give hands and faces a touch-up before making stops.

A paper bag, attached to the back of the front seat, is another travel aid that is indispensable so children have some place to deposit candy wrappers and other refuse instead of strewing them along the highway. Since the trip is meant to be educational as well as a break from the routine, it's a good opportunity to give them an object lesson in how to behave courteously to the public at large and to respect the rights and property of others.

Club Activities

B.B.C. COUPLES CLUB

Bowerman's, Burr's, Crofton Couples Club met at the home of Floyd and Norma Huffman with attendance of 22 present.

Warner McFaul, president, called the meeting to order with Richard and Shirley Hall taking charge of the devotion. Richard chose as his topic, "Life Is Essence of Time".

Ellen Burr, secretary read the minutes. Due to the absence of Jeanne Root, treasurer, no report was given. Warner and Floyd attended the executive meeting at Wellington and gave a report reminding members of the annual dance at Club Canara on April 10th, also the district rally at Grace Street United Church, Trenton in November.

Plans were completed on entertaining Wellington Couples Club and Belleville Engevelic Club at Allisonville Hall on April 1st. An invitation was accepted from Cherry Valley Couples Club to join them on April 7. The bus trip to O'Keefe's Centre was postponed to a future date.

Douglas and Hilda Harns invited the club to their home for the next regular meeting on April15 with Sherman and Evelyn Weir responsible for devotion and Douglas and Linda Snider for recreation and program. Floyd and Norma had charge of program. Norma read two St. Patrick's Day stories. Contests and games followed.

Lunch was served.

On behalf of the Club, Warner thanked Floyd and Norma for their hospitality and the meeting closed.

Ann Landers

Cure for Seven Year Itch, To Count One's Blessings

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have heard the expression "Seven Year Itch" and paid not attention — until recently. Now it suddenly seems that "Seven Year Itch" is more than a phrase. I think I may have it.

My husband is a fine man although not as affectionate as I wish he were. We have four healthy, reasonably well-behaved children, an adequate income, part-time help in the house, community interests and nice "mind-your-own-business type in-laws" — as you put it. By most standards I should be blissfully happy.

I confess, however, that I have feelings of restlessness. I keep thinking perhaps I'm missing something —that there must be more to life than this.

Do I need a vacation? I haven't had one in four years. Maybe I need a swift kick in the backside, or a head-shrinker. Or do I have the Seven Year Itch?. — A.M.

DEAR A.M. — "Seven Year Itch" is more than a phrase. Statistics show that the seventh year of marriage is, for some mysterious reason, the toughest one.

Any skin doctor will tell you that a little itch can develop into a stubborn, tough-to-get-rid of problem if it is badly diagnosed or ineptly treated. At the same time, it mustn't be ignored.

The best cure for the Seven Year Itch is to take lives-tory. Weigh the positive aspects of your marriage against the negative ones. You say you have a fine man, four healthy children, an adequate income, good in-laws — and then you add mournfully, "There must be more to life than this."

Yes, there is more . . . and if you start fooling around looking for excitement you may find it. That "more" could be intolerable guilt, fear of being found out, self-incrimination, a shattered marriage and a lifetime of regret.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A new couple moved to our neighborhood last May. They are pleasant, intelligent, and have powerful ideas on everything — including politics.

They do not get ugly, they do listen to the other side and we enjoy their company. Our politics, however, are at opposite poles.

For Christmas they sent us a year's subscription to a magazine we don't want in our home. Our teen-age son is beginning to think like these people because of articles he reads in this magazine.

We don't wish to offend our friends but we would like to discontinue their gift. Any suggestions? — UNFORTUNATELY GIFTED.

DEAR UNFORTUNATE — It sounds as if the magazine is too much of a challenge. What are you afraid of — an idea? Debate is healthy. But if you can't tolerate an opinion other than your own, write to the office of the magazine and ask that your subscription be cancelled.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Will you please tell me why, after a date, a fellow will say, "I had a wonderful time. I'm going to call you again soon." The girl believes him and waits and waits for that call — and it never comes.

If a boy doesn't want to ask a girl out again, that's his privilege. But why does he lie and say he'll call? I wish a fellow would be honest and not say anything but "goodnight" if he doesn't care to see a girl again.

Please print this letter and an explanation if you have one. Thank you. — MISS DANGLING.

DEAR MISS DANGLING — When a fellow takes a girl to the door after a date it would be quite a shock if he said, "I had a lousy time. You'll never hear from me again." So most fellows do the polite thing. They say they had a good time and will call again. Believe it when you hear him on the line.

A colorful Glazed Ham is ideal for Easter Dinner. Today Mary Moore suggests a spring-time menu and gives details. The dessert recipe — Pineapple Cheesecake Pie — will be given here Thursday.

Easter Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

There is a little quiet yearning inside of me that you will read and consider this Easter dinner menu. The flavor combinations are delicious and the colors are beautiful.

EASTER DINNER MENU (see below):

Rhubarb/or Grape Juice Cocktail (optional)
Glazed Ham with Peach Glaze and Peach Halves (see below)
Stuffed Baked Potatoes (see below)
Savory Winter Succotash (see below)
Or Fresh Frozen Asparagus
Spring Salad Bowl with French Dressing (see below)
Pineapple Cheesecake Pie (see tomorrow — Thursday)
Coffee

WEDNESDAY (Guests)

Dinner Menu

Herbed Oven-Fried Chicken; Curried Noodles; Green Peas; Relish Tray: Celery Hearts, Olives, Radishes; Third-Prize Cherry Pie (see Tuesday); Coffee.

DIRECTIONS:

1) Rhubarb Cocktail (if used): Four cups washed, cut-up but not peeled pink rhubarb, 6 cups water, 1 cup sugar, ½ cup orange juice, ¼ cup lemon juice. In a large pot cook rhubarb, covered, in the water until very tender. Drain through fine siege. You may press it a little to, extract all but juice but not so much any pulp goes through sieve. Discard pulp which i ocidentally is almost white at this stage. Add sugar and stir until dissolved. Cool to room temperature, add orange and lemon juice and chill. This is a lovely shade of pink.

2) Ham: Score fat surface of ready-to-eat ham and stud with cloves. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1½ hours. Drain peaches from one 20-oz. can. To syrup add ½ cup light brown sugar and 1 teaspoon dry mustard and bring to boil. Baste surface of ham with syrup 2 or 4 times during last ½ hour of baking. Transfer to hot platter. Meanwhile warm peach halves through in oven. Make border of them around ham and if desired fill depression with a cherry or small pickled crab-apple.

3) Stuffed Baked Potatoes: Bake uniform potatoes until very tender. Cut slice from top, scoop out centre leaving shells intact. Mash centres and add (for six people), 1/3 cup hot milk, 2 well-beaten eggs, 2 tablespoons butter and 1 teaspoon salt, beat well, refill shells and reheat in oven for 15 mins.

4) Savory Winter Succotash: Cook 1 package fresh frozen lima beans until just tender. Drain 1 can kernel corn and add niblets to cooked limas and heat through. Just before serving add 2 tablespoons finely chopped green onions and ¼ cup dairy sour cream and heat through. Serve at once.

5) Spring Salad Bowl: Ten radishes, sliced, ½ cup sliced green onions, 1 bunch watercress or ¼ cup chopped parsley, 1 cup chopped celery, 1 cup shredded cabbage, 1 cucumber, diced, French dressing. Combine vegetables and toss together lightly with French dressing.

Women's Institutes

MARMORA W.I.

The meeting was chaired by the president, Mrs. George Empey. Communications were read and discussed. Final arrangements for the needlecraft class was made, which was held the balance of the week in Marmora Town Hall. Arrangements were made re the district annual which is to be held in Marmora on May 14th. Mrs. Frank Sweet and Mrs. James Noble were named as a committee to bring in a slate of officers at the April meeting. Plans for a spring tea and bake sale were completed.

The branch directors were asked to buy one pair of flannelette blankets for each family burned out in a recent fire, which would be five pairs.

The meeting closed and a social hour followed. Mrs. F. Sweet put on a contest which was won by Mrs. D. Bailey.

Mrs. Lloyd Williams was presented with a going away gift, and lunch was served by the co-hostesses.

The needlecraft class held in the Town Hall was attended by eleven. Miss Flint of the department was the instructress. At the close of the three-day class Miss Flint was presented with a vote of thanks and a gift.

Carmel W. I. Addressed by District Pres.

The March meeting of the Carmel Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Carman Dafoe with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. J. Locus opened the meeting after which the correspondence and treasurer's report were read.

The April meeting will be an evening meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. J. Locus, who thanked Mrs. Dafoe for opening her home.

Mrs. Clayton Sullivan, convener for agriculture and Canadian industries, gave a reading on soft drink machines in schools and suggested that they be replaced with milk machines. This is being tried out in Minnesota and if it succeeds it will be a great boost to the dairy industry.

Mrs. Charles Brintnell, historical research convener, gave a talk on the Irish who came to the Quinte district shortly after the United Empire Loyalists settled near Read, Lonsdale and Strathcona and later on near Madoc.

Mrs. Dunne Martin, convener for education, gave a reading from the Huron Federation of Agriculture. This demanded entrance examinations for high schools which enable rural students equal standing.

FINE PROGRAM

Mrs. Seldon Homan was in charge of the program, which opened with an Irish singsong, Mrs. Percy Reynolds gave a reading on St. Patrick's Day. Mrs. Allan Gowthorpe and Mrs. Merle Robinson sang a number of Irish duets.

Mr. Stanley Geen introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Thomas Reilly, district president, who is a member of the Chegoun's Institute. Mrs. Reilly gave a number of highlights of the board meeting, concerning the world convention which is to be held in Dublin in 1965. The fare is $225 and the total cost is $900 for the three weeks. The officers' conference at Guelph is on May 26th and 7th, for district conveners or their alternates.

The district annual will be held May 28th in Foxboro and the Tweedsmuir History Books are to be on display as well as the girls' work. She expressed the importance of making Canada livable for the centennial in 1967. Any ideas should be sent in before the April board meeting concerning what branches are thinking of doing as their project; the area project is fixing up the mall box.

She also referred to three important books, "Pyrus, a Roadside Widow" by Mrs. Ethel Chapman and two books by H. J. Boyle "Mostly in Clover" and "Homebrew and Patches".

Next year's program is to include the use and misuse of poisons as a safety project for 1964. Mrs. Kelly gave a talk on resolutions. To draft a resolution, a resolution consists of two parts a preamble or introduction which sets forth the reason for the resolution and the body which contains the resolution proper. She used as an example whereas a community lacks a hall and has need for a hall. Time and money should be given before a resolution is formulated and the editor check it for errors before it is sent on.

BRANCH RESOLUTIONS

Resolutions should be sent to the district convener in March. All resolutions except emergency resolutions originate at branch level. A brief with resolutions, either clipping from newspaper (state which paper, place of publication and date) magazines or a written account of the incident or incidents involved should be sent. One member of each branch should be prepared to speak at the district annual meeting to present the views of the branch Institute on the resolution and if possible present them at the area convention.

All Institutes should study resolutions each year. Many of the resolutions handed in are not tidy. The resolution should be written on standard writing paper with four signatures the mover and seconder, president and secretary of the branch the name of the district and the date of the district annual meeting. The resolution must have the support of its branch it must be moved, seconded discussed and put to vote in the branch meeting; it must be passed and discussed at the district annual and signed by area secretary and president with the date and place of the area convention.

RECEIVES APRON

Mrs. Kelly concluded her address by saying that resolutions are an important medium through which all members of the Institute may express their opinions and should be used for the benefit of all. She showed the ladies an apron she had received from Somerset Institute in England which was made of print of maple leaves and dragons with W.I. in the centre of the maple leaf which represents that the first Institute was formed in Canada, the dragon is the emblem of England.

Mrs. Carl Thompson moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Kelly and presented her with a gift.

Mrs. Homan displayed a number of Irish linen pieces including linen tea towels patterned by the Women's Institute of Oxford County.

Mrs. Carl Thompson, district director gave a report of the district meeting and announced a meeting of the secretaries and area treasurers at the Y.M.C.A. on April 1st and a workshop for the Tweedsmuir history book conveners at the Y.M.C.A. on April 16th.

Miss Rudy Brintnell conducted a "Pat and Mike" contest with Mrs. Earle Latone the lucky winner.

Refreshments were prepared and served by the hostess and her assistants.

PROPOSES SECURITY

The Norwegian government has proposed a bill to provide social security for widows and single mothers, effective Jan. 1, 1965.

"I won't be gone long, Ted—I'll be back in forty-five dollars—er—forty-five minutes."

U.C.W. Meeting

U.C.W. — UNIT 3

FRANKFORD — The March meeting of the U.C.W. Unit 3 was held in Frankford United Church in Rose Lowery Hall. Mrs. Fay Bleaker gave the treasurer's report.

The April meeting will include all units. The Fashion Show is planned for April 22nd in Rose Lowery Hall.

The worship service was conducted by Mrs. G. McLay, Mrs. K. Morris and Mrs. E. Bleaker. Readings were given by Mrs. G. McLay and Mrs. E. Bleaker. Mrs. C. Judd sang a solo. Mrs. Grace Frost was pianist for the meeting.

A talk on India, given by Mrs. G. McLay proved most interesting. Mrs. E. Grills closed the meeting in prayer.

Refreshments were served last.

BECAME GYMNAST

MONTREAL (CP) — Diane Masse, a 15-year-old who hopes to be among the Canadian contingent in the Olympic games in Tokyo, says that when her family moved near an athletic centre her mother encouraged her, then a child, to go there, and "one fine evening I suddenly found that I had become a gymnast."

were still being felt. Unemployment was still too high, "but at least the curve is moving downward."

He said the parties involved in the development of the hydro potential of Labrador's Hamilton River would work out their differences "and get ahead with this vitally important project." It would take a big bite out of the unemployment figures in the eastern provinces.

A vote for the non-confidence motion, he said, would be a vote against extended family allowances for 16- and 17-year-olds who are in school as announced in the budget.

When Mr. Diefenbaker followed, he blasted the government for its record of "fiscal irresponsibility," and said it has run out of steam because of its 60 days of decision when "they ran so fast in so many directions."

JUST MORE TAXES

There was nothing in the budget for the wage-earner except more taxes. It was a "phenomenon" budget; it couldn't be explained by logic. The Canadian government had lost the confidence of the Canadian people.

Paul Martineau (PC — Pontiac - Temiscaminque) said the budget was an "affront to the provinces." It gave no indication of how provincial demands would be met and it was useless to talk about co-operative federalism without indicating how it could be achieved.

Gerard Girouard (SC — Labelle) had more to say about last year's controversial budget. Mr. Gordon, he said, was a greater man for presenting that document than he was for this year's unexciting offering.

"All he offered us was pure traditionalism," he said. "This budget shows us that he has no further innovations to offer."

Prime Minister Pearson said the Canadian ambassador in Moscow has been instructed to find out whether Jews in Russia will be allowed to receive shipments of unleavened bread for celebrating the Jewish religious festival of the Passover.

CALLED 'UNFAIR'

He was replying to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who said a Russian ban on shipments of matzoth was "most unfair" and was in violation of the United Nations charter on religious freedom.

Mr. Pearson said he was disturbed to hear that Soviet authorities may not be allowing the special shipments to enter Russia for use by Russian Jews.

Mr. Pearson also said he hopes Russia will make some payment towards the United Nations' peace-keeping operations and so continue as a voting member of the world body.

The prime minister said the establishment of a federal-provincial secretariat may be discussed at next week's premiers' conference in Quebec City.

He was replying to a question asked by Heward Grafftey (PC — Brome - Missisquoi) who sponsored a motion on Monday for the establishment of a secretariat.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the Eskimo people in Quebec must not be "bartered as chattels or sublet for political expediency."

"These Eskimos shall not be placed in Mr. Levesque's hands just because Mr. Levesque wants them," he said, referring to efforts by Quebec Resources Minister Rene Levesque to have Eskimos in the province put under provincial administration.

To turn the Eskimos in Quebec over to provincial administration, without a constitutional amendment, "will be not only unjust and unfair but a travesty on the constitution." The Eskimos could not be removed from federal jurisdiction by a simple agreement between the federal and provincial governments.

Labor Minister MacEachen was asked to investigate a government application form said to require the applicant to indicate whether he was born in wedlock.

Reid Scott (NDP — Toronto Danforth) made the request, adding that the question on applications for social insurance numbers seems to visit the sins of parents on their children.

The form asks an applicant to state "mother's name at her birth."

Old Sol Heats Atmosphere To Record 62 in Town

PICTON (Staff) — The temperature soared to a high of 62 degrees in Picton on Tuesday.

This extremely warm weather put a lot of tops down on convertibles, had a great many people eyeing the yard, had others looking longingly at their golf clubs, and, of course, had the boaters starting to figure what they would have to do to get their boats in shape for summer.

There is already a lot of water showing in the Bay of Quinte, although the inner harbor is still quite solid, but a few days of this sort of weather, and it won't be there long.

With the half load season in effect, the trucks are not as busy as they would like to be, but the used car operators are starting to sort out the bad from the good, and are placing the good ones in the front row, and the "iron" back in the farthest corner of the lot.

A drive around the streets today showed a considerable number of people washing their cars, a few were burning the collection of debris raked from the edges of the property, some were actually scraping away at the still frozen ground, trying, as it were, to get an early start on their gardening chores.

Some pessimists in the crowd were saying, "take advantage of it while you can, it will probably snow tomorrow.

Snow or not, it was a beautiful day in Picton.

Mrs. Fletcher Winner of Club Trophy

PICTON (Staff) — The Prince Edward Curling Club, women's section, held their annual club trophy competition Tuesday, with the winners being Mrs. Teresa Fletcher, skip; Mrs. Donna Maddox, vice; Mrs. Bea Hamblin, second; and Mrs. Betty Cork, lead. The runners-up were Mrs. Carol Riddell, skip; Mrs. Evelyn Drew, vice; Mrs. Ruth Murphy, second; and Mrs. Lillian Hicks, lead.

Tuesday morning the semi-finals were played. Mrs. Fletcher's team played the team skipped by Mrs. Betty Evans; Mrs. Edith Perkin, vice; Mrs. Beryl Fawkes, second; and Mrs. Emily Hughes, lead. Mrs. Riddell's team played the team skipped by Mrs. Marjorie Allan, Mrs. Mary Folkard, vice; Mrs. Marjorie Collier, second; and Mrs. Helen Jackson, lead.

The club trophy and the individual miniatures will be presented at the annual ladies' dinner meeting that will be held following a club bonspiel on Thursday.

AVERAGE INCOME

In 1958, the average Japanese farm family was about $1,400, or about one third of the family's total capital assets.

Most Canadians Will Register For Numbers

A nine digit number, designated as the Social Insurance Number, will be issued beginning April 1 to all persons Canadians with the exception of those engaged in agriculture, those in private domestic service where there is only one employee, and members of the armed forces.

The issuance of the Social Insurance Number is being carried out for a number of reasons, one of the paramount being a means to better government record keeping. The Glassco Commission has suggested that a single numbering system should be established to do away with multiplicity of numbering systems in government departments.

At the Unemployment Insurance Commission the situation has been that the growth in the labor force and the use of electronic data processing had made the old UIC number obsolete. Therefore, it was felt that a good starting point for the new numbering system would be the operations of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, and the UIC has been assigned to carry out the numbering project. This new numbering system will be introduced in conjunction with the annual renewal of unemployment insurance books that will take place, as usual, this spring. The Social Insurance Number will be issued to all employed persons whether they are covered by unemployment or not. It will be broad enough and flexible enough to be adapted to the record - keeping required for the proposed pension plan and other social security measures.

When the project gets underway April 1 employers will have a supply of application forms.

The employee will obtain an application form, fill it, out completely and accurately, sign it and return it to the employer. Then the employer will send the application form to the nearest office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. The Social Insurance Number will then be sent back to the employer in the form of a three-part card.

The first section of this card will have the Social Insurance number, surname and at least two given names where applicable and will have the employee's signature affixed. This section will be most useful and handy if it is kept in a wallet or purse but there is absolutely no compulsion that the card be carried. However, it would be handy, for example, for those who are from time to time seeking or changing employment so that they may make their number known to their employer immediately.

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Wadsworth and family were Saturday evening guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Yates.

Mr. Lawrence Larsen who has been a patient in Trenton Memorial Hospital is convalescing at his home.

Mr. Isaac Arbuckle of Tweed was a visitor last week of his sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Smith. Their mother, Mrs. Margaret Arbuckle of Carrying Place joined them on Wednesday and all spent the evening with another sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. George Poole and family of Ameliasburg to honor Isaac on his birthday.

Mrs. Arnold Ketcheson was guest of honor at a party on the occasion of her birthday on Sunday.

Mr. Archie Arbuckle of Belleville was a Sunday visitor of his sister, Mrs. Kenneth Smith and Mr. Smith.

Section two is a duplicate and will have in addition the old UIC number where applicable. This section is to be put in safe-keeping, it is suggested.

The third portion will be retained by the employer. It will bear the Social Insurance Number, old UIC number where applicable, the surname and at least two given names where applicable. It will show in addition the day and month of birth but not the year.

The third part is to be retained by the employer until such time as the new account number has been recovered on all employee and/or payroll records, at which time it may be destroyed.

An employee who has two employers must ensure that the second employer is advised of his Social Insurance Number. He must not obtain a second number under any circumstances. Officials of the Commission emphasize that only one application form is to be completed.

If a person is at present unemployed and is in receipt of unemployment insurance benefit, the application form will be provided directly by the Unemployment Insurance Commission. However, if a person is at present unemployed, but not in receipt of unemployment insurance benefit, he will apply at the nearest office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission for an application form.

All employers who are not at present registered with the Commission should contact the nearest office of the UIC to obtain the necessary application forms.

There are between 6,000,000 and 6,500,000 persons to be covered in this mammoth project which will be a cross-Canada operation.

plex of this fact."

Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming) said the Queen's visit might result in more harm than good and suggested postponing the visit. Mr. Pearson said that would be an shameful surrender. Real (C.C.F. — Dauphin) Mr. Peter (NDP leader) agreed with the prime minister.

SEEK CANCELLATION

It asked the Queen to "kindly cancel the visit scheduled for October" on the grounds that times have changed since early 1964.

The letter said the planned visit had aroused protests on account it was inopportune and even outside Quebec province newspaper editorials had expressed reservations.

"Separatist groups have nothing against you. Your Majesty, whom they honor as a great lady, but they do not recognize the authority you represent," the letter continued.

It said "trouble will surely break out if the visit is accomplished and we would not wish for any consideration to bear as a people the responsibility for attacks, disorders or even insults."

Guns

seized included several pistols and rifles and a wide variety of knives.

The trouble started Tuesday after a false bomb threat at a Negro high school. Negroes overturned and burned a reporter's car and beat a Life Magazine photographer.

PULLED FROM CAR

Later a white woman reported she was pulled from her car and kicked by a Negro. She was treated in hospital and released.

While persons stayed out of Negro areas even during daylight hours. The Jacksonville Coach Company discontinued bus service to Negro sections.

The racial explosion came Monday with the killing of a Negro mother of 11 children and the wounding of three other persons. Missiles thrown at action injured a fireman, a policeman and a white motorist.

Racial calm had prevailed in Jacksonville since August, 1960, when a wave of Negro demonstrations were climaxed by shootings and other violence. A Chamber of Commerce committee tried to handle racial problems until it dissolved a few weeks ago. The mayor has refused to appoint another biracial committee.

Family

alcoholics were badly needed in Canada as well as a greatly increased research program.

Dr. Boudreau also pleaded for better public understanding of the alcoholic's problem.

"People like a person who drinks moderately — but once he becomes an alcoholic they reject him completely.

"They must realize that the alcoholic is often a very sick man."

Dr. E. E. Zarfas, director of the Children's Psychiatric Research Institute at London, Ont. speaking on family problems and mental retardation, told the gathering:

"One of the most important ways to help a retarded child is to help his family make a more satisfactory adjustment to the fact that he is retarded.

IT'S TREATMENT

"I believe this to be a treatment for the child because I have seen many, if not all, problems diminish or disappear with sound, understanding management of family reactions by the physician."

Dr. Zarfas, said that the initial medical contact with the family was important in their eventual adjustment to their child's retardation.

"The physician must be gentle understanding and accept the problems of the parents in realizing that their child is mentally retarded. His explanation of the child's condition should be brief and simply stated."

He Was Told Alibi 'Sold' By Ex-Mountie

(SEATTLE (CP)—A prosecution witness testified Tuesday that police officers told him in here for bank robbery and murder, told him he had an arrangement to pay an RCMP sergeant $3,000 for an alibi.

The witness, Irvin Lester Terrance Teague, 37, is serving an eight-year term in a federal institution.

Wasylenchuk, a 51 - year - old Canadian, is charged with bank robbery and murder in the holdup of a bank here March 12, 1964, in which a policeman was killed and two others wounded. The trial opened Tuesday.

Ernest Nuttall, retired RCMP sergeant, testified at an extradition hearing last November that he saw Wasylenchuk at the Canadian suspects home in the Vancouver suburb of Burnaby within an hour of the Seattle holdup — 150 miles from the scene.

TOLD OF ALIBI

Teague said Wasylenchuk told him of the alleged alibi in November, 1958, while both men were serving terms in the British Columbia Penitentiary at New Westminister.

Brock Adams, special prosecutor in the case, asked Teague:

"What did he say about an alibi he had?"

Teague replied: "He said Ernie Nuttall of the RCMP would check him out. He said Nuttall would give $3,000."

Nuttall has a serious heart ailment and is not expected to appear at the trial, although a deposition obtained from him is expected to be read later.

from 1953 to 1963, he did not seek re-election in 1963 and was appointed to the bench by the Pearson government October 16, 1963.

Later that day, Lloyd Brunet made arrangements to call Mr. Justice Monnin and, confident their conversation in the presence of other officers and the transcription was heard at the preliminary investigation.

"The conversation is a disgrace," said Judge Wagner, "in terms that the court has not a decent right to describe, the elimination of efforts by police to bring guilty parties to justice."

Mr. Justice Monnier denied that he had called Capt. Poulin or that it was his voice on the recording and, according to the transcript, Judge Wagner commented that "the court was astounded hearing the witness Monnier deny categorically that everyone had heard so convincingly."

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, March 24, 1964

The minority Liberal government survived a Conservative non-confidence motion in the budget debate 130 to 80.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker accused Finance Minister Gordon of deceiving the Canadian people deliberately.

Mr. Gordon announced the $100 federal bonus for winterbuilt homes will be repeated next winter.

Prime Minister Pearson said the government will not surrender to vicious minority threats against the Queen's visit to Quebec.

State Secretary Lamontagne said the CBC will televise its controversial Easter play The Open Grave as scheduled.

Senator Muriel Fergusson (L — New Brunswick) called for a basic minimum age of 17 for marriage.

Question Whether Insurance Companies Would Put Assets In Canadian Common Stocks

OTTAWA (CP) — Will the life insurance companies actually put a greater slice of their huge, rapidly - growing assets into Canadian common stocks —even if Parliament gives them added freedom to do so?

Some doubt is being expressed in official circles here in the wake of Finance Minister Gordon's budget - speech announcement last week that he would seek amendments to this effect.

Informants say Mr. Gordon will take the usual path leading to financial legislation of this sort, and consult the insurance companies before drafting a bill for Parliament. It may be late in the year before he is ready to proceed in the Commons.

The move dovetails with Mr. Gordon's attempt to achieve a greater degree of Canadian ownership of foreign - controlled companies. In 1962, latest year for which figures are available, they operated 60 per cent of this country's manufacturing and mining industries.

$12½ BILLION INSURANCE ASSETS

Obviously he has one eye on the life insurance companies' assets — $12,235,000,000 at the end of 1962.

In theory, at least, part of this enormous fund could be used in buying shares being made available by foreign-based companies which try to dissolve at Mr. Gordon's new cut—a lower rate of withholding tax for those offering Canadians at least 25-per-cent ownership.

However, Canadian and American insurance companies —the British are the exception —have only small holdings of common stocks. Some companies simply don't regard stocks as a proper way to invest policy-holders' money. Others have said the range of high-grade Canadian common stocks is too narrow.

Parliament has its own ideas of how much the insurance companies can put into stocks—and still protect the public interest.

LIMIT SET

It has allowed them, since 1932, to invest up to 15 per cent of their Canadian assets in common stocks—Canadian or foreign—with a seven-year dividend record. There is no ceiling on their holdings of preferred shares, provided these have a five-year dividend record.

U.S. and other foreign companies have only tiny stock holdings—$1,500,000 at the end of 1962, or about one-tenth of one per cent of their Canadian assets.

In addition to the 15-per-cent ceiling, all insurance companies are allowed to use a so-called five-per-cent "basket" into which they have practically anything, including common stocks without any record of earnings.

But, again, they are far from even that limit. The total investment of all companies in this category ranges from 1¼ to 1½ per cent of combined assets.

For several years the Canadian Life Insurance Officers Association has been wresting for a common-stock limit of 25 per cent. They also want a change in year-end valuation procedure, scrapping the existing requirement that they list shares at market value, in favor of a three-year moving average.

Both proposals have received the support of Canada from the federal superintendent of insurance, Kenneth MacGregor.

SIGNING THE CONTRACT between Belleville firemen and the city are Paul Stephenson, secretary of the International Association of Firefighters Local 497 and Mayor Jack Ellis. The contract—for 1964 and 1965—gives firemen a $200 increase across the board for each year. Top pay for first-class fireman this year will be $5,050, and $4,170 for a probationer.

Arrest Son After Death Of Mother

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Lawrence Cress, 17, was arrested by city police Tuesday and charged with capital murder in the shooting death of his mother Monday.

Police said the youth, object of an intensive search since late Monday, was picked up near Niagara-on-the-Lake, about 15 miles east of here.

They had issued a warrant for his arrest earlier Tuesday. He had been missing since the body of his mother, Florence Cress, 37, was found in her home with shotgun wounds to her back and head.

St. Catharines police received a telephone tip late Tuesday that a youth was walking along the road between Niagara-on-the-Lake and Queenston. They investigated and discovered it was Cress, He was not armed and put up no resistance.

More than 100 police had been involved in a search of the area along Lake Ontario and the Niagara River.

Mrs. Cress had apparently just arrived home at noon from her job in a department store when she was shot.

Police were called to the home after 4 p.m. when the victim's husband, Ralph Cress, arrived from work.

Two shotguns and a rifle, belonging to Mr. Cress, and the family car were missing.

The car was later found abandoned after it had crashed into a tree near the city limits. One shotgun was in the car and the second and the rifle were found in a nearby field.

Geneva Trade Conference Developing Into Dog Fight

By DOUG MARSHALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The 123-nation Geneva trade conference is developing into a four-way dog-fight among planners, free traders, the Communist bloc and the developing nations.

The central issue, called "the dilemma of our times" by United Nations Secretary-General U Thant, is how to make the poor nations richer without making the rich poorer.

Because of declining or stagnating prices for commodity goods during the last 10 years, the "have-not" countries have found it increasingly difficult to export raw materials profitably and thus earn enough money to pay for essential imports.

The developing nations demand a series of specific remedies to swing the balance of world trade in their favor. The Communist bloc, led by Russia, proposes major surgery by sweeping away the present trading structures — particularly the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade—and replacing them by an all-embracing world trade organization.

WEST DIVIDED

The Western powers, while rejecting this solution, are divided between the "planners" and the "free - traders" in their approach to the problem.

As the three-month conference opened, the support of the developing nations was rallying behind the French-led scheme for internationally planned and managed arrangements for raw commodities.

France suggests organized markets for food surpluses at stabilized prices for commodities at a high level and direct aid by piling manufacturing countries.

Britain opposes this because, as a large-scale importer of food and raw materials, her import, production and export costs would soar. British delegates say that' a massive slash in tariffs and general expansion in trade would be in themselves the best stimulant for underdevelopment.

TO EXAMINE GATT

The United States wants a bit of both—massive planning combined with positive moves towards freer world trade.

The U.S. is already heavily committed to support tariff cuts in the Kennedy Round of trade negotiations beginning May 4 in GATT.

During those talks the whole position of GATT, which now is dominated by the West, will be examined in the light of the Communist proposals to scrap it in favor of a universal body.

Most likely the GATT delegates will favor retaining the basis of their present machinery but could well decide to enlarge the organization by including the Soviet bloc. This would make any new international body superfluous.

BACKS SUGAR FACTORY

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government Tuesday adopted an amended resolution that it would help establish a second sugar beet factory in the province when the project was "economically feasible." The government defeated the original motion asking the government to give "active leadership" is establishing a second factory.

Not Informed Of Legal Rights Says Lawyer

TORONTO (CP) — An unemployed laborer from Sudbury, sentenced here Jan. 3 to seven days' imprisonment for smashing two plate glass windows, spent an extra two months in jail because nobody informed him of his legal rights, a lawyer said Tuesday.

Gerrard Bigras, 35, was released from jail Tuesday on an application to a York County judge from legal aid lawyer Allen Mints.

Magistrate F. J. Boisby had sentenced Bigras to pay $410 restitution within 30 days and to post a $200 bond with one other surety acceptable to the court to keep the peace.

Bigras had pleaded guilty to two charges of malicious damage and was fined $35 or seven days concurrent on each charge.

Bigras could not pay the fine, and at the end of his seven days term was unable to pay restitution or post the $200 bond.

Mr. Mints said Tuesday Bigras was misinformed at the jail as to his rights.

"SENTENCE AWAY"

"He was one of those poor guys who didn't know what happened and he just got shuffled away," he said.

A visiting Salvation Army officer learned of Bigras' plight and Mr. Mints was asked to interview the prisoner last Saturday.

The lawyer took the matter to Judge Farquhar F. MacRae under a section in the Criminal Code which allows review of an order of committal if the prisoner has remained in prison two weeks because of default in recognizance.

The judge allowed Bigras' release by placing him on his own surety and directing that restitution be made within six months of the release.

If after six months restitution has not been made, Bigras could be given an extension of time or sent back to jail.

Tories Reject Demands For Resignation After Vote Won on Price Fixing

LONDON (AP) — The Conservative government rejected demands for its resignation Tuesday night after a rebellion in the ruling party's own ranks brought it within one vote of defeat on its bill to abolish price-fixing.

With scores of Conservative members of the House of Commons abstaining to show their disapproval, the government squeaked through by 304 to 303 to put down a Labor attempt to weaken the highly controversial government bill. More than 30 Conservatives voted with the opposition.

"Resign! Resign" cried opposition members after the government mustered only the one-vote margin to defeat an amendment to exempt drugs and medicines from the bill.

Trade Minister Edward Heath, principal advocate of the bill to foster competition among retailers, dismissed the Labor demands. "One is enough," he said, quoting Sir Winston Churchill after his government had survived by a majority of only three votes.

COULD HAVE TOPPLED

Technically the issue was not a major vote of confidence, and the government would not have been obliged to resign had the vote been reversed. But most Conservatives aware of the strength of moral pressure in British politics, foil resignation would have been unavoidable if the government had lost the vote.

Sir Frank Markham, a Conservative backbencher, warned that the government will be forced out of office unless it drops the price-fixing bill.

"Many of us who wanted to vote for this clause abstained out of loyalty to the government," Markham said, "but this bill is dead."

The Conservative rebellion demonstrated the unrest the price-fixing bill has stirred in the ruling party. Former Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

FEAR VOTE LOSS

The bill would prohibit manufacturers dictating retail prices, an established way of British business life. With Britain's general election to be held some time before Nov. 5, many Conservatives fear they will lose the votes of the country's 300,000 small shopkeepers. They complain that supermarkets and other large chains driving them out of business once prices are free to fluctuate competitively.

However, the government expects to offset loss of shopkeepers' votes by increased support from consumers, who will benefit from the abolition of fixed prices on everything from automobiles and television sets to children's toys and cigarettes.

MAKE BIG CROWN

MONTREAL (CP) — A 14-foot crown made of stainless steel, a scale copy of that worn by Princess Margaret, has been manufactured by a Montreal firm. The crown will be shipped to Hamilton, Bermuda, where it will be placed atop the roof of a new hotel. It is believed to be the largest single piece of stainless steel ever exported from Canada.

EXPORT AIRCRAFT

The Soviet Union had exported planes and helicopters to more than 30 countries by the beginning of 1964.

GILEAD

Bronk Cheese Company Lists New Officers

GILEAD—The annual meeting of Bronk Cheese Manufacturing Company was held in the Gilead Community Centre on Wednesday afternoon.

The usual business was conducted with the president, Douglas Tummon, presiding.

The secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Gerald Swan read the financial statement, analyzing the various parts in detail.

Mr. Ernest Henderson, Department of Agriculture Representative, addressed the patrons, stressing that premium milk must be supplied or by a new ruling, the Food and Drug Commission have authority to deem No. 4 illegal for sale. This includes sales to all markets, including creameries. Farm inspection will be carried out for cream patrons as well as those of cheese factories. Two tests during the season for antibiotics and water content in milk will be performed due to subsidy paid by federal government.

Mr. Roy Hoffman, cheesemaker, advised the patrons to stress stricter cooling, use of smaller cans, and cleaner milk procedures. Milk rooms should be screened, clean and adequate for the protection and marketing of premium milk. If patron is in doubt he can confide in the cheesemaker for testing quality.

CONVENTION HIGHLIGHTS

Mr. Leslie McLaren, one of the delegates at the cheese convention held in Chateau Laurier Hotel, Ottawa, in January, gave a short resume on the highlights, stating various resolutions and that if one can supply premium cheese, Canadian cheese prices are higher than New Zealand cheese in the foreign markets. He also stated the cheese industry centennial will be celebrated this year, 1954.

Thanks were tendered by Douglas Tummon to the speakers.

NEW OFFICERS

Mr. Donald Ross was elected chairman for the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President, Douglas Tummon; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Gerald Swan; auditor, Jack Hall; directors, George Sills, Ted Bradden, Leonard Walsh, Wilmot Embury, Douglas Shaw and Frank Shannon.

Mr. Douglas Tummon resumed the chair and the milk routes were sold to the bidders: Rikkert Vos, Russell Glass, Arthur Balcanquel, and Bill Scott, effective April 1st.

SPEAK WELSH

The 1951 census in Wales showed that 26 per cent of the population of 2,518,711 aged three years or more could speak Welsh, compared with 50 per cent in 1901.

During a visit to a Beverly Hills art gallery she encountered this modern impressionistic painting and her reaction left little doubts about her views. Freida's artistic ability was utilized recently when she produced a large painting for her movie debut in "What a Way To Go." (AP Wirephoto).

CAMPBELLFORD

Retail Sales Course Still Being Held

CAMPBELLFORD — The Campbellford Chamber of Commerce held their regular meeting on Thursday evening at George's Restaurant, with President Doug Mayhew presiding.

The guest speaker arranged for the evening, Mr. David Lucas, a representative of the Ontario Chamber, took ill shortly after his arrival in town earlier in the afternoon and had to return to Toronto.

During the business portion of the meeting it was announced that it had been agreed that Campbellford stores would be open on Wednesday mornings during the months of July and August.

Word was received that Seymour council had granted $100 toward the production of a tourist folder on the area. There has been no decision yet regarding the Chamber's request to the Town Council for a grant toward an Industrial brochure.

Members were told that the Retail Sales Course is still being held at the Campbellford High School with three more weeks to complete the ten-week course. This is under the direction of William Campbell of National Cash Register of Peterborough and is very worthwhile.

The first week of May has been declared 'Spruce Up Campbellford Week' and the chamber announced their intention to do all they can to assist in this project.

There will be an executive meeting of the Chamber on Tuesday morning, March 24th. The next regular meeting will be on Tuesday, April 14th, when the guest speaker will be Mr. Stan Shippam, secretary-manager of the Peterborough Chamber.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Former Wellington minor star, Leon Bryant is carving a hockey name for himself in the sports annals of Brown University.

Still a junior, Leon has just capped another successful season for the Providence, Rhode Island Colleges. He has been named to the first team All-Ivy League squad for the second time. He tied for the team scoring lead with 19 goals and 23 assists and had ten points in Ivy playoffs.

The Brown hockey coach says Bryant is not only a fine skater and stickhandler but his penalty-killing abilities were an important factor in the team's success.

As a sophomore last year, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Bryant of Wellington, totalled 46 points from his centre spot and was awarded the George Caven's Trophy as the outstanding sophomore in New England.

In his freshman year Bryant scored 27 goals and assisted on 31 others in leading the Cubs to a 14-3 record.

HOLDS RECORD

John Lewis, this city's national weightlifting champion, was advised of a new honor this week.

Lewis received word via a certificate from Britain that he now holds a senior British Empire record in the middle-heavyweight division in the press. Lewis' mark is 317¼ pounds, lifted in Montreal last December.

Lewis Martin of Great Britain, held the former record of 316 pounds. Lewis is only the second Canadian to hold a senior British Empire record.

PEEWEE TOURNAMENT

Eight outstanding peewee hockey teams of the district and other parts will battle for the Harry Rollins Championship Trophy in an all-day tournament scheduled for Memorial Arena on April 4th.

Held under the aegis of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association the tournament has attracted teams from Kingston, Picton, Napanee, Bowmanville, Trenton, Gananoque, Ottawa, and this city.

In perusing it is noted that the Ottawa team, the Alta Vistas, are coached by Steve Hook. Steve, it will be remembered, formerly resided in these parts and was an outstanding softball pitcher. He later pitched in a top fastball league in Montreal.

The Rollins Trophy was won last year by the Fort Henry Heights youngsters of Kingston, who will defend it here. The Booth Radio and TV Trophy also will be up for grabs.

The day will be a full one for the puck-chasing youngsters. Other games have been added to the tournament fixtures which means that play will start at 9 a.m. and go through until seven in the evening.

Napanee youngsters meet the champion Fort Henry's to kick off the tournament at 9 a.m. Picton meets Bowmanville an hour later and at eleven o'clock Belleville McCormack's tangle with Gananoque. At noon Trenton RCAF youngsters meet the Ottawa kids. Other games will be staged every hour on the hour.

PRESENTATIONS NIGHT

Speaking of minors, don't forget the big Presentations Night this evening at Memorial Arena. This is a big one for the kids as champions, collective and individual, will be honored with trophies, awards and crests.

A feature of the presentations is the awarding of the "Squirtmanship Trophies" to the winners and particularly the Tommy McVeta Memorial Trophy to the champion of Squirt champions.

There will be hockey games, including the CNR Vets and the Minor Hockey Association Oldtimers and a special figure skating exhibition by Peg and Jane McCutcheon.

LATER

It was announced early today that the Bill Cook Memorial Trophy will be presented tonight. The handsome trophy donated by Mrs. Kate Cook and daughters to the memory of Belleville's "Mr. Junior 'B' Hockey," will go to the player judged as combining ability and sportsmanship. It will be presented by Dick Beare at approximately 8.30.

Take Lead In C.P.L. Playoffs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Third-period goals Tuesday enabled Omaha Knights and St. Paul Rangers to take 1-0 leads in their respective Central Professional Hockey League best-of-seven semi-finals.

A goal by Gary Peters gave the league-leading Knights a 4-3 win over Minneapolis Bruins. The Bruins finished third.

RACES RETURN

MONTREAL (CP) — The six-day bicycle race, an old-time crowd pleaser which returned to Montreal last year after an absence of two decades, will be continued this spring. The sponsor of the event announced Tuesday that a second six-day bike race will be held April 24-30.

IS IT TWO? TWO WON'T DO

Detroit Had Edge On Chicago ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Hawks Respect Wings; Habs Confident

By JOE DUPUIS

CHICAGO (AP) — You wouldn't think Chicago Black Hawks would let much over Detroit Red Wings in their Stanley Cup semi-final which opens in Chicago Stadium Thursday.

Hawks had it all over the Wings in league statistics. But in hand-to-hand combat, Detroit was the only team to grab a season's edge on Chicago.

Detroit won six, lost five and tied three against the Hawks.

If the Hawks had even managed to break even against Detroit, they would have won the National Hockey League title instead of finishing one point behind Montreal Canadiens.

To top it all, the Hawks failed to win a single game at Detroit.

Why should the Wings, who finished fourth a year ago and then eliminated the Hawks in the semi-final playoffs, be so tough against Chicago?

STYLE DIFFERENT

"They play a different style from Montreal or Toronto," said Hawks captain Pierre Pilote.

"They always try to keep one or two guys playing behind our defence when we have the puck in their zone," he added. "This draws our defence back and breaks up our attack. You have to play back, or they will hit those guys with a long pass up the middle."

Detroit gained the season's edge over the Hawks by tying two in Chicago, while the Hawks were able to gain but one tie in Detroit.

Aces Rally To Defeat Americans

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec Aces rallied for four goals in the third period to defeat Rochester Americans 4-3 before 9,020 fans Tuesday in the American Hockey League.

Aces, struggling to stay in the game during the first two periods, suddenly came to life in the third and took command.

Bill Sutherland scored three goals for Quebec, two in the final period, and Clelland Mortson picked up four assists in the last 20 minutes, for a total of five in the game.

Doug Harvey scored twice and Leon Rochefort once to complete the scoring.

Scoring for Rochester were Ed Litzenberger, Les Duff, Norm Armstrong and Dick Gamble.

STE. MARGUERITE STATION, Que. (CP) — If confidence can win hockey games, the Chicago Black Hawks had better watch out.

The atmosphere in the posh Laurentian resort where Montreal Canadiens is one of complete calm. There don't appear to be any of the nervous or taut nerves usually prevalent before a big playoff.

If they harbored any doubts before about their deficiencies, the Canadiens seemed to have lost them with their big one-point National Hockey League championship Sunday.

Now, as they prepare to open a best - of - seven Stanley Cup semi-final series against the Leafs Thursday in Montreal, the Canadiens ooze confidence.

Even coach Dick Blake refuses to get serious. "Take it easy, will you?" he bidded a reporter who tried to prod him for comment on the coming series. "Let's all relax. The program is to take it easy."

Leafs, who trounced Canadiens four games to one in a similar semi-final last season, are camped in Dearborn, a Detroit suburb. They are due to arrive in Montreal today.

LEAVE THURSDAY

Blake's charges will remain in the Laurentians until Thursday, leaving by bus for Montreal a few hours before game time.

Canadiens have a workout scheduled today at nearby St. Jerome, the final one before re-taking the third-place Leafs in the opener.

A fast-mending Gilles Tremblay skated during the team's 90 - minute workout Tuesday. Tremblay's bruised ankle, injured in last Wednesday's game against Toronto, is still tender. But Blake said the left winger will be ready Thursday.

Defenseman Jacques Laperriere favored his right wrist, bruised Sunday in New York, but the fracture will be enough to keep him from play.

Although they finished the schedule with seven in a finery to wind up in first place, the Habs haven't been playing their best hockey in recent weeks. Their record for March is three wins, two ties and five losses.

This Might Settle An Old Argument

VANCOUVER (CP) — No one knows what title the winner will claim, but they're staging a match next week between Canada's best women curlers and the world's best men's team.

Ina Hansen and her Kimberley, B.C. rink will play Lyall Dagg and his Vancouver rink Tuesday, March 31.

Bobby Hull Named A.P. Player of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks, the leading goal scorer in the National Hockey League, was named Tuesday as the NHL Player of the Year for 1963-64 season by a vote of Associated Press hockey writers.

Macs, Barons Rangers Win Minor Titles

The B.M.H.A. completed its lineup of champions for the 1963-64 season when winners in the Squirt and Tyke divisions were named last night.

And of the three champions crowned last night, not a one of them managed to pull out a victory.

Rangers captured the Squirt championship by a total score of 6-3 but the Macs took last night's game 2-1. Rangers had won the first game of the finals last week 5-1.

Cliff Janicek scored the only Rangers goal with Rick Meagher drawing an assist. S. Boardman and D. Cone netted Leaf goals with J. Ralph having one assist.

In the Tyke grouping, Barons tied the Bruins 2-1 and took a tight 3-1 victory to grab their championship.

Macs copped honors in the other Tyke division by a total score of 5-1, despite being blanked by the Browns 1-0 last night.

Jarold Pisech netted the only goal, for the Browns, in the Mac-Browns encounter.

John Vescoli scored for Barons and John Spracknet for Bruins in the tie game.

The winning teams will be presented with championship crests during tonight's annual "Awards Night" at Memorial Arena.

Five Hawks Named To All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Scrappy Stan Mikita, the individual scoring leader, and four other Chicago Black Hawks were named today to The Associated Press National Hockey League all-star team for the 1963-64 season.

Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings each placed two players on the second team. Goalie Charlie Hodge and centre Jean Beliveau were the Canadiens while right-winger Gordie Howe and defenseman Doug Barkley represented the Red Wings.

Defenseman Elmer Vasko of Chicago and left-winger Frank Mahovlich of Toronto were the others chosen.

The teams were picked in a vote of Associated Press hockey writers.

Wings Draw A Pair; Leafs Sit Pat

Imlach Breaks 'Silence'

DETROIT (CP) — Reinforcements fotned the camp of Detroit Red Wings Tuesday as they began serious preparations for their Stanley Cup semi-final opening in Chicago Thursday.

Cincinnati Wings, who have completed their Central Professional Hockey League schedule, sent along centre Alex Faulkner and goaltender Bob Champoux.

Toronto Maple Leafs, also training here before their departure for Montreal, where they face the Canadiens Thursday, aren't looking for further reinforcements. Coach Punch Imlach's only regret is that he didn't do his shopping sooner.

After putting the defending champions through a stiff workout for the second day in a row, Imlach relented from his previously announced policy of no comment during the semi-finals to discuss the trade with New York Rangers that brought him Andy Bathgate and Don McKenney last month.

"We would have finished first if we had done it a month earlier," he aid.

Faulkner and Champoux were stricken with tonsilitis in the Red Wings' battle order for their best - of - seven series against the Hawks.

Faulkner, the 27 - year - old Newfoundlander who fired three winning goals in last year's playoffs, had been sent down to Cincinnati to play himself into shape after a long layoff because of injury. He'll compete with Pit Martin for the job of centreing a fourth line that coach Syd Abel plans to throw into action.

Champoux will replace Pat Rupp, the United States Olympic goalie who played against Toronto Sunday, as standby netminder behind Terry Sawchuk.

Abel, taking a more leisurely approach than Imlach to the impending hostilities, has everyone but Sawchuk and Gordie Howe in action for the first time Tuesday after calling out only a skeleton crew the day before. Howe joins Toronto's Red Kelly as a record-setting 16th Stanley Cup appearance this season.

The Red Wings, only club with an edge over Chicago over the regular season, aren't perturbed by the Hawks' intimidating record of topping the National Hockey League in penalties. Detroit scored 19 times this season while Chicago players were decorating the penalty bench. The Hawks managed only nine power - play goals against the Wings.

Imlach tossed a bouquet to his hosts as he commented that "the third and fourth place teams (Toronto and Detroit) were the best in the league this year."

MENTIONS AN 'IF'

"If Montreal hadn't faced the last-place teams in their two final games I don't think they'd have made first place," the Toronto coach added.

The Black Hawks, who lost out by a single point, started off too well, Imlach said, and were unable to get back into stride after their mid - season slump.

The Leafs? Complacency, said their coath. The defending champions simply weren't working hard enough. And then there was the lateness of the Bathgate-McKenney deal.

"We knew what to expect from Bathgate. But McKenney, whom New York insisted on throwing in on the deal, was a very pleasant surprise."

The lanky left winger contributed nine goals to the Leafs' last 15 games, equalling his production all season with the Rangers.

Slugger Back In The Fold

Dodgers Welcome 'Big Frank'

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers announced Tuesday that outfielder, Frank Howard, who decided to play baseball this season after saying three weeks ago that he was quitting the game, will report for training Friday.

General manager Buzzie Bavasi made the announcement that the 27-year-old slugger would report 12 days before the world champions open their National League season.

Bavasi talked by telephone with Howard at his home at Green Bay, Wis.

"He hasn't agreed to terms but we are offering him a raise and I don't think we will have any problem."

Howard batted .273 last season, drove in 64 runs and led the club with 28 homers though he was the regular right fielder little more than half the year.

HIT 21 HOMERS

In 1963, Howard hit 21 homers, drove in 119 runs and averaged .296.

Over the news that Howard will play this season.

"I don't think we could have won the pennant again without him," said catcher John Roseboro. "With Frank gone, we would have faced a steady diet of left-hand pitching."

At Green Bay, Howard said that his personal and business problems have "worked out a lot sooner and a lot quicker than I thought they would."

He said he was "glad to have a chance to play baseball and I would have been making a mistake if I had given it up."

Nilon To Face Senate Body

Liston's Financial Adviser On Carpet

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate investigators turn today to Sonny Liston's financial adviser for an explanation of why the former heavyweight champion signed away promotion profits from his fights and apparently got nothing in return.

The stock in Inter-Continental Promotions, Inc., brought others $100,000 in dividends from Liston's title fight last month with Cassius Clay and may be more valuable in the future.

The adviser, Jack Nilon, also is expected to be asked about his contract with Liston which gives him the manager's 33 per cent share of the purse while Liston already had another manager.

Nilon and his brother, Bob, were scheduled to testify as the U.S. Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee resumed hearings on circumstances surrounding Clay's Feb. 25 victory over Liston on a controversial technical knockout.

The subcommittee headed by Sen. Philip Hart, (Dem- Mich.) seeks to determine whether federal regulation is needed for professional boxing.

Garland- D. Cherry, a Chester, Pa., lawyer, told the subcommittee Tuesday how Inter-Continental was organized to promote Liston's championship fights and give Liston a share of the promotional profits.

HALF FOR LISTON

Cherry, secretary of the firm controlled by Bob Nilon and his other brother, Jim, said Liston was given 50 per cent of the firm's stock.

Cherry said two weeks ago he was surprised to learn during talks with the International Revenue Service about profits from the fight that Jack Nilon was receiving 50 per cent of Liston's purse as a fighter.

He said Liston already was paying 10 per cent to his manager of record, George Katz.

Cherry said that last December, Liston signed away 275 of his 500 shares of stock in Inter-Continental, apparently without getting anything in return, to Sam Margolis.

His identified Margolis as a Philadelphia vending machine operator who had "helped Liston when he was down" and the man who brought Liston to the Nilons to organize Inter-Continental.

Under a secret agreement signed at the same time as the Liston - Clay fight contract, Cherry said, Inter-Continental has the right to select Clay's first opponent as champion and to promote the fight, with Clay accepting 30 per cent instead of the customary 40 per cent for a champion.

Clay received $50,000 for this promotion right, Cherry said. He admitted that Inter-Continental wouldn't have permitted Liston to sign for the fight if Clay hadn't agreed to it.

He said Liston was not a party to the agreement and was unaware of it, even though he had signed it.

Cherry added that although it was designed to ensure Liston a return bout, it might not work out that way.

It depends upon whether Liston's arm, injured in the Clay fight, responds to treatment, Cherry said, and whether Liston can work out his difficulties with the law in Denver, Colo., which involve traffic violations and resisting arrest.

GREY CUP REPEAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions and Hamilton Tiger-Cats will stage a "replay" of the 1963 Grey Cup game as a benefit exhibition July 20. The Canadian Football League teams last met here for the Grey Cup, which Hamilton won 21-10.

New Harness Body Formed

Harness racing here this year ll come under the wings of a ew organization called the Belleville Raceway" operated by the Quinte Driving and Rid- Club.

The new association will op- ate under a new constitution ich involves excerpts from e of the Quinte Driving and ding Club.

It will consist of senior mem- rs and members. Senior mbers are those buying a 0 membership annual 00 membership. Members those purchasing the an- al membership except for the club's activities will be ected annually by a board eleven. Seven will be selected m senior members. Any di- tor or directors may be re- ved from office by a majori- vote or other directors. The ard will be elected at the nual meetings scheduled for uary of each year.

Monthly directors meetings ll be held each month or re if necessary, $2.00 mem- rs may attend these meet- s but directors functional- for membership does not en- e them to vote at a senior membership meeting.

Regular $2.00 membership ildings will be held every nday of those months in nuary. Only those meetings ndicates as senior members ing.

Special meetings will be ovided for as well.

Adopted from the former stitution was Item 10 which ys petitions. It followed Any member may petition the senior members to hold a general meeting at any time provided the petition shall con- tain the reason for the meet- ing and at least twenty-five signatures of members of the club.

"Reason for the meeting shall include any notice or no- tice of motion concerning business to be discussed at that meeting."

"Only business listed under the 'Reason' and or covered by notices of motion in the peti- tion will be discussed at a spe- cial meeting."

"No petitions for any pur- pose will be accepted by the senior members".

The new constitution will be the sole regulations governing the above-named organization. Is accepted minutes of meet- ings held on March 12 and 19th.

The directors for the current year and their positions are:

Chairman, Ron Isaac; vice- chairman, Doug. Hedger; trea- surer, Don Thomas; recording secretary, Carol Young; classi- fication secretary, Ken Hastead; Intendent, Gerald Vance; pro- grams, Herman Lucas; gate supervisors, N. Hickson and H. Kemp.

The position of race secre- tary was held over from 1963 the chairman and classifier to be presented at the next meet- ing.

The meeting endorsed a mo- tion that a complete set of books be kept by the treasurer to be available for audit upon directors request at the end of the season.

Thorold May Default Series With Picton

PICTON (Staff) — It looks as if the Picton-Thorold series in the OHA Intermediate play- downs is a thing of the past. Picton dropped them here in the opening game by an amber- ruling 16-5 count, with almost everyone scoring but the goal- tender.

They went back to Thorold on Monday night and playing without the services of three of their best, dumped them again, this time by a 6-1 score and the manager of the Thor- old club decided to call it quits and toss in the towel.

The OHA had not ruled on this late Tuesday afternoon, but it would appear that the series is over, and will be offi- cial as soon as the OHA can check with Thorold.

Regardless of it being over or not, Picton will be the ulti- mate winner without a doubt and as such now enter a series with Delhi supplying the oppo- sition. It is not known at this writing if this series will be a best of five or best of seven.

Maroons Bow To Toledo

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toledo Blades can end their preseason hockey in first place with Fort Wayne Komets to- night with a victory over the mid-and Chatham Maroons in International Hockey League action.

Toledo moved within two points of locking up first place Tuesday night with a 7-3 win over the Maroons. The Komets, who earlier this season held a 12 - point margin over the Blades, were idle.

The only other scheduled game saw Des Moines Oak Leafs move into a fifth-place deadlock with Muskegon Zeph- yrs by shading Windsor Bull- dogs 6-5.

North Shore League
Wellington Wins Title

Exploding for five unanswer- ed goals in overtime, Wellin- gton thumped Stinson Construc- tion 10-5 last night to capture the Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League championship.

Wellington won the titular series four games to two and will receive the O'Connor Trophy. Presentations will be made at the annual league ban- quet, to be held at the Canadian Legion Hall in Wellington on Saturday, April 4.

Stinson's battled back from a first-period 4-1 deficit to force an extra ten-minute period last night but were completely out- played in the overtime. Welling- ton, paced by Jim Scott, con- trolled the play with ease while scoring five times.

Stinson's scored the only two goals of the second period to cut the winners' lead to 4-3 and outscored Wellington 2-1 in the third for a 5-5 score at the end of regulation time.

Joe Scott fired three goals and assisted on four others while enjoying a big night on the Wellington attack. All three of his goals were scored in over- time.

Gary Fyke, Eldon Carson and Al Hailey each fired two goals and Ed Ross collected one goal and one assist.

Billy Genereaux potted two Stinson markers with the others going to Pete Mitchell, George Daniels and Elgie Carrie.

Wellington drew eight of the game's 12 penalties.

Athletics Tie Series With Galt

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Woodstock Athletics used a three-goal scoring spree by de- fenceman Ron Cadieux to take a 5-3 decision over Galt Hornets Tuesday.

The best - of - seven Ontario Hockey Association Senior final is now tied two games each. Fifth game will be played here Friday.

Galt jumped into a 2-0 lead before Woodstock could get un- tracked and struck for five straight goals.

Art Sullivan scored Wood stock's other two goals.

Ron Hergott, with his fourth goal of the series, and Bob Sea- ger gave Hornets their early lead.

TO HONOR PEARSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Min- ister Pearson will receive an honorary fellowship and deliver the convocation address at the general assembly of the Royal Architectural Institute of Ca- nada at St. Andrews, N.B., in June, it was announced Tues- day.

Al Caron, Babe Ruth Of Minors

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Alain Caron is the Babe Ruth of minor league professional hockey.

Despite tired legs and unim- pressive speed, the 25-year-old right winger has scored more goals in one season than any pro in history—77 in 72 Central Professional Hockey League games this season.

"The feat is utterly amazing," said coach Gus Kyle of St. Louis Braves. "Those 77 goals are like 77 home runs in baseball."

"If he were spotted in the right place in the National Hockey League, he'd score 40 goals for sure."

The old professional mark of 50 was set in 1961-62 by Orval Tessier when he was playing with Kingston of the now-de- funct Eastern Professional Hockey League. Caron broke that record last season when he scored 61 goals in 54 games.

Caron also has 48 assists for a total of 125 points, tops in the CPHL.

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

Goalies in the National Hock- ey League are threatening the record for shutouts this season. The most there ever has been in one season was 37 back in 1957-58.

This isn't any surprise to me, the way I've been going. Actually, I think the answer is a better calibre of goal tending in the league this year.

We used to consider Ed John- ston a weak spot in the Boston pickets.

Johnston has just learned a little bit more. He's getting more polish, getting more edu- cated to the shooting habits of various players.

I think where he used to guess, when he made a move before, now he is more sure of the right move. He knows what he's doing out there now, has more confidence.

With Johnston pulling down his average, it makes a differ- ence to the whole league.

The fact Jacques Plante has been doing a wonderful job for New York makes a big differ- ence, too.

Glenn Hall has been giving Chicago good, steady goal tend- ing. This year he had Dennis DeJordy available to relieve him, give him a rest. DeJordy is a pretty good goaltender in his own right, too. The added rest makes Hall that much bet- ter.

Charley Hodge has done a terrific job for Montreal. He was overshadowed when Plante was at Montreal. But evidently Frank Selke and Toe Blake were quite aware of the fact Hodge was a great goaltender.

That's probably one of the reasons why they could gamble on trading Plante to New York and pick up a couple of good hockey players in return.

FIGHT DOPING

MILAN (AP) — The Italian Soccer League announced Tues- day a more severe anti-doping campaign aimed at keeping ma- jor league players from using pep pills before championship games. The decision came after traces of an illegal stimulant were found in the urine of five Bologna players during a rou- tine spot check after a Febru- ary game. The league's new campaign will mean regular checks on all 18 major league teams after each game starting next Sunday.

ab 2-0 Series Lead
Baby Habs Whip Hawks

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Junior Canadiens took a 2-0 lead in a best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association Junior A semi-final series by trimming the St. Catharines Black Hawks 7-3 Tuesday.

Marksmen for Montreal were Lee Thiffault, Mike Byrnes, Jean-Claude Hebert, Bob Char- lebois, Jean-Guy Lagace, Andre Boudrias and Serge Savard.

Mickey Chervaty and Fred Glanfield scored for St. Cath- arines.

Hard body-checking and alert forechecking combined to ham- string the offensive efforts of both teams during the first pe- riod.

The pattern shifted in the sec- ond period as Montreal bega- to stiff through St. Catharines defence.

Andre Gagnon, Montreal goalie, played a sobers game, making 30 saves, many on dif- ficult screen shots and one on a clean breakaway. His team- mates unleashed 36 shots.

Chisox Whip Dodgers
Yankees Bow To Mets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Maybe New York Mets are in the wrong league.

Casey Stengel's lovable misfits might have worn Los Angeles Dodger uniforms Tuesday as they throttled New York Yankees 7-0, getting six-hit pitching from Ziri Willey and Larry Resmoff.

That made it four wins in as many tries for the Mets against the American League since the start of spring training and four victories in six starts against their fellow - townsmen in two years of exhibition play. Against National League opposition they have been their old selves, losing four games out of five.

"Give him time," was Stengel's comment on the discomfiture of Yogi Berra, the Yankees' fledgling manager, in his first meeting with his old boss. "All he needs is a little experience."

The Mets, who go into their third year of existence as the only team ever to finish 10th in the National League, whipped the perennial American League champions when Frank Thomas singled home Ed Kranepool in the eighth inning for the game's only run.

Elsewhere, Dave Mickelsen's two-run triple in the eighth inning powered Chicago White Sox to a 4-1 victory over the Dodgers. It was Mickelsen's fifth hit in four games, including two home runs and two triples.

The Dodgers had better news off the field as power - hitting Frank Howard announced that he has solved the personal problems that threatened to force his retirement from baseball and plans to report for duty Friday.

In other exhibition action, Bob Gibson helped pitch St. Louis Cardinals to a 13-3 victory over Kansas City Athletics and San Francisco Giants edged Cleveland Indians 9-6 with the aid of Orlando Cepeda's three - run homer.

Rookie Rich Allen clubbed two home runs in Philadelphia Phillies' 7-1 triumph against Cincinnati Reds.

Pittsburgh Pirates made four errors, which helped Milwaukee Braves to a 3-1 victory. Washington Senators won their third straight game 8-3 over Detroit Tigers. Camilo Pascual permitted just one hit in five innings as Minnesota Twins downed Houston Colts 6-0. Rain cancelled the game between Boston Red Sox and Los Angeles Angels.

Canadiens 8-5 Favorites

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto bookmakers say Montreal Canadiens are almost prohibitive favorites to win this year's Stanley Cup series.

The gambling men watch Habed the odds at 8 to 5 on the Canadiens Tuesday to win the cup, 7-5 odds-on favorites to take the semi-final series from Toronto Maple Leafs and 5-2 choices to win Thursday's opening game in Montreal.

Chicago Black Hawks, second - e finishers behind the Habs r the season, are second ce to win the cup at odds t to 1. The Hawks are picked beat Detroit Red Wings in semi-final 3½-3 and are 14 favorites in the opening e at Chicago Stadium urday.

The oddsmakers, who based their calculations strictly on performance over the season, admit that their figures could change rapidly. The prices on the Leafs and Wings will be regarded as extremely attractive in some quarters.

If you want to back underdogs, Leafs are 3 to 1 to win the cup and Wings a lopsided 8 to 1.

Montreal looked like the best bet because their first - place finish entitled them to the deciding home-ice game should either series go to the full seven contests.

Chicago and Toronto were rated about even, but a shorter price was quoted on the Hawks because they face the weakest club in the first series, while the Leafs play the favorites.

Claim TV Hamlet Will Equal Cleopatra

By DAVE PIKE

TORONTO (CP) — A production of Hamlet which its BBC producers say, for sheer size, scope and cost, is to television what Cleopatra is to the cinema, will be telecast by CBC-TV April 15.

Starring Christopher Plummer, who played Hamlet at Stratford, Ont., six years ago, the two-hour and 50-minute production—longer than Sir Laurence Olivier's cinema Hamlet—will be seen on Festival as part of the CBC's commemorative programming observing the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth.

Hamlet was filmed last summer by the BBC in co-operation with the Danish Television Service at the brooding 16th century Kronborg Castle, Elsinore, Denmark.

"This is real art, an original and sound Hamlet with no roots in theatre or movies, but straight television," says former Torontonian Sydney Newman, BBC-TV drama chief.

"We have cut out all Shakespeare's posing and reciting and let actors act as if they talked and loved and slept and killed in this beautiful castle."

"I never want to do another television show in a studio," said Plummer at the end of two weeks of rehearsals and filming at the castle. "I would like all drama to be like this. It has the documentary feeling about it—it's happening now."

USED DANISH TROOPS

A satellite city of makeup, costumes and production huts was erected on the east side of the castle for the Anglo-Danish unit, which numbered more than 400 persons at full strength. They included a BBC company of some 60 actors and technicians, 40 Danish TV engineers, 16 makeup and wardrobe experts and 230 Danish militiamen cast as soldiers in period armor.

Miles of cable were laid to bring electricity to the dour, dark castle, and 10 cameras were used, sometimes all at once. The crew worked up to 16 hours a day on a diet of hot dogs and Danish lager beer.

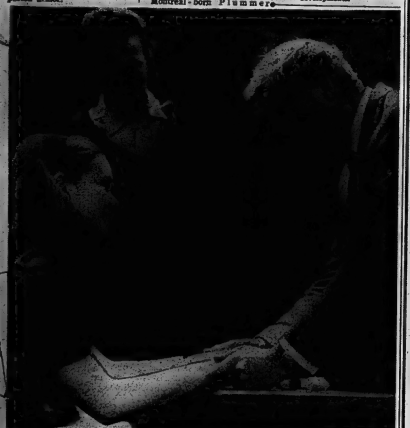
"The pace was killing," said Plummer, adding that as a result he worked "in a state of sustained excitement."

Director Philip Saville worked Plummer continuously for 13 hours on the "To be or not to be" soliloquy, recording it in 26 separate scenes as Hamlet roamed the castle in torment.

The "Get thee to a nunnery" scenes were filmed in the magnificently decorated royal chapel. The castle's Great Hall, largest of its kind in northern Europe, was the setting for the play - within - a - play and duel scenes.

Outside scenes were shot on the battlements of the castle situated on a shipping - lane sound between Denmark and Sweden. A storm erupted on the first production night, ripping the sky with lightning and thunder and lashing the sea with gale-force winds. Cameras recorded the natural effects, which put the special effects crew to shame. Then rain began to fall and mist rolled in, making the castle for a fortnight. Plummer caught the sniffles and June Talbot, who plays the queen, got the flu.

UNKNOWN IS OPHELIA



Because of a foghorn booming for ships passing in the mist-smothered sound and the racket of riveting from a nearby shipyard, outside sound recording had to be limited to occasional silent periods in the scene.

Royal permission had to be obtained to use the castle, a popular Danish tourist site, and to fire its ancient cannons for the "peal of ordnance" ordered by Fortinbras in the play's last scene.

Montreal - born Plummer heads a distinguished cast of principals. Bastien Stratford, Ont., where he played Macbeth and Cyrano de Bergerac in 1962 he also has played at Stratford, England, and Stratford, Conn., as well as Broadway and London theatres. He stars in the new movie spectacular, The Fall of the Roman Empire, with Sophia Loren.

Ophelia is played by 18-year-old Jo Maxwell Muller, described as a natural talent. She worked in Chelsea antique shops to pay the rent while studying acting techniques by watching actors perform in theatres. Saville was so impressed by her that, despite the fact she had only a couple of appearances in public to her name, he cast her opposite top international star Plummer.

Other principals include Alec Clunes, an authority on the play who has acted all its major roles, as Polonius; Robert Shaw, novelist as well as actor, as Claudius; Roy Kinnear, increasingly busy in films, as the gravedigger, and Michael Caine familiar to stage, cinema and TV audiences, as Horatio. Producer is Peter Luke who, since joining BBC-TV last July, has prodded all of its quality Festival series dramas.

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

AT THE PARK — Cupid never had it so good in Technicolor. The scene is Wakinpoogee Lodge where Rock Hudson gets into more contretemps with beautiful girls than anybody. Here, brunette campfire lady Paula Prentiss has an idea about how to have fun with a toasted marshmallow but Rock is too wise for this lil' old game in "Man's Favorite Sport?" opening tonight for its first showings at the Park Theatre. Complete shows at 7.00 and 9.30 p.m. Matinee Friday at 2.15 p.m.

TV Has Had No Influence On Fashions for Women

By CYNTHIA LOWERY

NEW YORK (AP) — Television, which has drastically affected so many facets of American life, has had almost no influence on women's fashions.

Two decades ago, a movie dress designer named Adrian — with a big assist from Joan Crawford — almost overnight changed the shape of women's shoulders from sloping and natural to padded and square. Marlene Dietrich was largely responsible for giving women courage to try their first slacks.

But even in TV's salad days when Faye Emerson's daring necklines drew considerable comment, there was no great vogue for the revealing decolletage.

Restraint and conservatism are television's watchwords — except among the audience contestants on the game shows where you may catch almost anything in the way of fashion. But an actress who was permitted to be the glass of fashion and the mould of form could do real damage to a series.

Interesting clothes could — and probably would — divert attention from the plot. Loretta Young, who probably was television's most stylish actress, wore her smartest gowns only when she whirled through the door on her way to the show's opening commercial.

In the second place, an actress who wore short skirts or an elaborately teased hairdo could date a series as badly as a Stutz Bearcat or a raccoon coat. This, in turn, might interfere with the re-run sales in subsequent seasons.

The clothes give-away in most TV series, curiously, is usually found in men's clothes. It's the width of the jacket lapels and of the hat brims — the narrower they are, the more recently the series was made.

Recommended tonight:

Suspense, premiere, CBS, 8:30-9 EST—Sebastian Cabot is host on a new series of programs, starting with a thriller about a bomb scare in hospital.

AMA Official Defends Policy On Cigarettes

CHICAGO (AP)—An American Medical Association officer defended Monday the association's policy of not urging that health hazard warnings be carried on all cigarette packages and advertising.

The policy had been criticized by Dr. Allen Ochsner, Tulane University surgery professor emeritus, in an American Cancer Society seminar in Palm Beach, Fla.

Dr. Ochsner, a pioneer in criticizing cigarette smoking as a major cause of lung cancer, declared the AMA was derelict in its duty in failing to endorse package and advertising warnings.

Dr. F. J. L. Blasingame, executive vice - president of the AMA, said Dr. Ochsner's opinion that all the answers on tobacco and health are now available is "an extreme viewpoint which is not universally shared"

"Numerous questions about the relationship of tobacco smoke and health remain unanswered," Dr. Blasingame said in a statement issued in response to Dr. Ochsner's remarks.

NO ONE KNOWS

"The statistical evidence points to a causal relationship between smoking and lung cancer for example, but no one knows whether tobacco smoke is a direct cause or a triggering agent."

Roy Rogers Now Making His Money From Swivel Chair

By DAVE SMITH

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Queen of the West was at the hairdresser's, explained the King of the Cowboys, thrashing wildly about on his exercising machine.

"Wish you could meet her," he said. "She's quite a gal."

With a flick of a switch the thrashing stopped and the King of the Cowboys dismounted. On foot again, Roy Rogers looked just about the same as when he thundered over the purple sage —tall, dark, slim and trim. But he has a couple of angles.

"My sawbones thinks it might be tension," he said. "I get all knotted up hard as rock right back here"—he gives himself a poke between the shoulder-blades — "and the doc thinks that may be contracting the main artery of my heart. So I ride that thing every day and just take it easier than I used to. I've been lucky so far — never have had a heart attack— but if I tried to run from here to the barn I'd keel over before I got 25 feet."

By taking it easier, the 53-year-old Rogers means he makes his millions these days by fixing phone calls from a swivel chair, rather than firing his six-guns from the saddle. But he's still winning the west, by buying and selling big chunks of it in real estate deals.

His 138-acre RR-bar ranch at Chatsworth, for instance. He bought it nine years ago for $150,000 and 124 acres to a subdivider last year for $1,300,000 plus part of the grass. "And I kept the seven best acres for myself," he says.

His ranch house office—he calls it The Boar's Nest—is filled with pictures of his wife and leading lady, Dale Evans, and various of their eight children and 10 grandchildren.

AT THE PARK — This, says Hollywood, is the Swivel Chair that may make Roy Rogers richer than Gene Autry. Roy is on with Rock Hudson in "Man's Favorite Sport?" opening tonight at the Park Theatre. Complete shows 7.00 and 9.30 p.m. Her measurements? Same as the rubbishy man, are provocative, esthetic and mah, they're scrumptious!!

Await Trials Of New Drugs Against Cancer

By FRANK CAREY

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Fifteen new and potentially valuable drugs against female breast cancer—uncovered by a new radioactive screening technique—are soon to undergo extensive human trials, it was reported Tuesday.

"And we are awaiting the results with considerable excitement," said Dr. Ralph D. Dorfman of Shrewsbury, Mass.

Dr. Dorfman, of the Worcester (Mass.) Foundation for Experimental Biology told about the developments at the annual seminar for science writers sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

He said the new drugs are all synthetic preparations chemically related to the male sex hormone testosterone—the first hormone used in treating female breast cancer.

Two of the drugs, as indicated by early animal and human trials, are as good or better than the best hormone now available for clinical use against breast cancer, he said.

He indicated, however, that none of the new drugs was expected to cure a cancer — though some might extend survival times beyond present limits in cases not curable by surgery or radiation.

'Palace' For The 'Paupers'

NEW YORK (AP) — There's snow in the dugout and centre field is a swamp, but the new home of New York Mets is going to be ready for the baseball season.

Most of the 55,000 seats are already bolted in place in the five tiers of stands. The infield grass is growing. Bulldozers are churning in the outfield, filling in the mud puddles.

"We'll be ready. The parking lots, the escalators, the restaurants, the drinking fountains, the playing field—all ready by April 17," said Rick Praeger, a partner in the engineering and architectural firm that designed Shea Stadium.

And so in a little more than three weeks, baseball fans, those famous New York Mets will charge out to play in their new playground.

The result will be a combination of the worst baseball team in the National League—10th twice and favored to be 10th again—and what appears to be the finest baseball stadium ever built.

There isn't a post in the place. Every seat is pointed at second base, or the 99-yard-line for football. The Jets of the American Football League will also play here.

Box seats swing on rails to new positions for football.

CANADIANS COLLECT

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Three unidentified Canadian men, winners of last Friday's Gulfstream Park twin double payoff of $77,040.60, collected their money Tuesday. They said last week they wanted to determine if they could avoid the 30 per cent income tax deduction required for aliens.

Sport Snapshots

By ROM TREMAYNE

EDMONTON (CP) — Twenty of four Edmonton teams in the soccer players have launched a six-month conditioning program to prepare them for a European exhibition tour in late summer.

Edelweiss and the Westerners Canada Soccer League will play at least five matches against first-line amateur teams on the Amsterdam and four in West Germany.

Additional matches in Luxembourg and Spain also are being considered, though these will be played only if a sponsor can be found here to meet travelling costs in Europe.

Bob Hartlieb, president of Edelweiss, says it is the first time a Canadian club has sent a team to Europe. Other Canadian teams that have toured Europe or played outside Canada have been national clubs organized by the Canadian Soccer Football Association.

The CSFA and the WCSL have approved the Edelweiss trip, says Hartlieb. "If it is a success we hope a two-way flow of amateur exhibitions can be arranged in future. Edmonton Amateur already are interested in going next year."

To launch the experiment the Edelweiss Club, established in 1906 as primarily a German-Canadian association but now as cosmopolitan as Canada itself, is combining the tour with a three - week holiday for players and members.

Eighty-three players, wives and members will leave Aug. 1 on a charter flight. The exhibition matches will be played only in the first two weeks overseas. The party will disband for private holidays and reassemble Aug. 8 at Amsterdam for the flight home.

Fifteen players will make the trip. All are natives of Europe who now live in Edmonton. Their coach is Larry Campbell, an Alberta Government Telephones employee and a former player with Fulham of the English First Division and Celtics of the Scottish First Division.

GAME NEEDS HOME

"We hope the trip will provide an incentive to youngsters to become soccer or rugby fans," said Hartlieb. "It's possible we might take one or two junior players with us.

"We need an image for soccer. Until the World Cup series in 1958 soccer was a little backward on the Prairies compared with B.C. and Eastern Canada.

"But in Europe amateur soccer is a big thing. Some of the clubs are good enough to play in the Olympics. If we can get a two-way flow of exhibition series our standard will improve and it also will provide something for the kids to shoot at.

"We haven't got a Maurice Richard or Gordon Howe to spark interest in the game. So maybe the exhibitions will do the trick. Once our new arenas and rinks are built we'll have the stars that make headlines and bring fans and youngsters to the game."

Edelweiss, which reached the Canadian final in 1953, is one

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For March 26

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): You attract unusual conditions, person. Even those you feel you know . . . may come up with surprises. Be willing to make basic changes. Time to concentrate on rebuilding.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Good lunar aspect highlights adventure. Includes the adventure of discovery. Day when basic truths hit home. Act on knowledge . . . don't bury head in sand. Be specific, direct.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Upsetting conditions in home are but temporary. This was true yesterday ——and today you can do something about it. Serious talk indicated. Reflect your own feelings. But also listen.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Don't allow yourself to be trapped in "loophole." Read between lines. Study contracts, agreements carefully. Be especially careful where communications are concerned.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Question of security due to arise. Answer is to plan and act in manner to make future more stable. Involves investment questions. Not so good for new enterprises. Stress patience.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): What appears chaotic should boomerang in your favor. Maintain attitude of calm. Turn confusion into order by utilizing intuitive intellect. Push through to heart of matter.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Investment made in your own talents due now to pay off. But wise to hold off on impulsive actions. Examine various angles. Heed voice of experience. Applies also to personal activities.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Obtain hint from Aries message. Look around you, tend to go to extremes. In the midst of confusion, maintain personal balance. Key is listening, then acting on personal convictions.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Implications of recent decision due to arise. Don't skip details. Maintain practical attitude. Show strength by handling details. Larger issues will take care of themselves.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Wonderful time for self-expression. People who previously were "cool" will sit up and take notice. Write, speak, strive to fulfill aspirations. Don't be afraid of change.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Issue vote of confidence — in yourself! Many may look to you for "sign." You can create enthusiasm by setting example. Applies especially in relations with family members.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Avoid being aggressive. Cycle demands receptive attitude. Time not right for forceful methods. Permit quiet / Pisces charm to show. File facts, figures for future reference.

If today is your birthday . . . others cannot fool you, but at times you are a victim of self-deception. Ultimately you will emerge victorious.

General Tendencies: Cycle high for Virgo, Libra, Scorpio. Day when there are delays in national and international projects.

Veteran Business Editor Of CP, Forbes Rhude, Retires Today on 65th Birthday

By JOHN LeBLANC

TORONTO (CP) — Forbes Rhude has been in a prime position to do handsomely in the stock markets for many years but he confesses that the only share investment of his life has been a fifth-certificate in a long-forgotten hole in the ground in British Columbia.

The veteran business editor of The Canadian Press, retiring today on his 65th birthday, says that in his 17 years of directing financial coverage for the national news co-operative he has found it preferable not to have any personal entanglement with his subject.

"I've always felt afraid of not being able to take an independent attitude and possibly being unfair on something," he said as he looked over a 45-year career as a newspaper man that has taken him into most corners of Canada and into many foreign countries.

If he didn't get rich, the soft-spoken, unobtrusive Prince Edward Islander has cashed in on a lot of enjoyment. He says his stint as business editor—after heading CP bureaus in Vancouver, Montreal and New York—has been fascinating as a privileged vantage point for an inside look at Canada's post-war phenomenon of growth.

COVERED WATERFRONT

But the memories that stand out are not those of high-level hobnobbing around Toronto's financial Bay Street or Tokyo or Vienna or London but of such days as when he was tramping the waterfront beat for the Halifax Herald, in 1927 or, a little later, serving as CP's night editor in the port city.

There was one day when he helped give Atlantic sailing history a nudge. The delicate eyeballing of the contenders in America's Cup had been called back to their moorings because of a 22-knot breeze off Sandy Hook, and young Rhude's Herald assignment was to record the elegant sail by-parade among the working sailormen.

It was the prelude to the international fishing schooner series that went on for years under Herald sponsorship. And the young reporter was on the afterdeck of Capt. Tommy Himmelman's Delawana when she showed her heels to the late-famous Angus Walters in his Gilbert R. Walters to win the right to represent Canada in the first match with the United States.

Schooner days and rum-running days merged. Forbes recalls one memorable evening—he was on the Halifax CP desk then—when he went down to the waterfront to get the story of a Canadian schooner that had clawed off Sable Island by a hair-breadth after losing two men and picking up survivors of a Gloucesterman that didn't make it.

On leaving, he was directed to a nearby schooner pocked with what turned out to be machine-gun bullet holes. She was a Canadian that had been fired on by the United States Rum-Row and relieved of her cargo of liquor and her supercargo—seagoing business manager. Nothing more was heard of either.

Before the night was over, the young deskman also had handled a shipwreck off Cape Breton and established wireless contact with a Canadian Pacific Steamships vessel to know when to report that an S O S had been sent out by her.

But the worst night of his whole career, he says, was one in 1923—again in Halifax—when Alexander Graham Bell had died near Baddeck, N.S. CP was hours getting the big story because that was the night the telephone wasn't working at its inventor's late home.

At Halifax, too, Rhude was asked the most startling question of his career, from salty Sir Thomas Lipton, whose Shamrocks were perennially unsuccessful contenders for the America's Cup. Sir Thomas, strong on tea and seamanship but shaky on history, was pacing through on one of his cup tries when he looked out the liner's porthole and inquired of the young interviewer whether this part of the world was "in the Mediterranean."

APPOINTED EDITOR

Rhude, a native of Montague, P.E.I., successively went to Montreal as a CP editor and then to Vancouver, where he became Pacific superintendent in 1937. He became Quebec superintendent in Montreal in 1939 and New York superintendent in 1945, becoming business editor two years later.

As Pacific chief, he made an involuntary contribution to British Columbia legislative lore. CP had a story apparently putting Premier T. D. Pattullo sharply in conflict with federal Liberal policy. Unable to reach the premier, Rhude decided to use the story pending the earliest check. It turned out right.

Tackled on it in the legislature—after the error had been fetched to the premier facetiously moved a mock resolution of regret. Before he realized what had happened, a wag-gish Mr. Speaker whipped it through to put the legislature on record as doubting human fallibility but agreeing life would be less interesting without it."

Colleagues attest that errors have been the exception for business Editor Rhude.

DEDICATED TO FACT

"He's a perfectionist," says Milford Smith, business editor of the Hamilton Spectator and one of the deans of the trade. "In my 36 years in business I've never known a man more dedicated to getting the facts before he wrote anything. If he was going to write one column, he'd have enough for three.

"He never let his own feelings intrude upon the job he was doing. He had no regard for the clock—6 hours he worked. And when he started asking penetrating questions with that disarming smile, he would come up with the answers.

"He'll always been noted for getting to the core of a problem, knowing where to look for information and how to interpret it, and then presenting the news in a straightforward and understandable manner."

On his retirement Rhude plans to continue his experience by offering his service as a consultant on business news.

CBC Executives Say TV Drama 'The Open Grave' Will Go on as Scheduled

OTTAWA (CP) — Top executives of the CBC took a look at The Open Grave Tuesday and later issued a statement saying the television drama "is in no way sacrilegious" and would go on as scheduled.

It is to be shown at 9:30 p.m. EST tonight on the English TV network. Word of the CBC's decision to go ahead was announced earlier in the Commons by State Secretary Lamontagne.

A storm of protest blew up in the Commons Monday over the program, details of which had leaked out in recent days. It draws an analogy between the death and resurrection of Christ and the fictional execution in modern-day Toronto of a banthe-bomb leader "framed" for the killing of a policeman.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said advance information on the taped program indicated it was "a flagrant, scandalous and sacrilegious insult to the majority of Canadians."

The CBC statement was issued by President Alphonse Ouimet, who attended Tuesday's special viewing along with Vice-President W. E. S. Briggs and senior executives of the programming and management divisions.

GIVES REASONS

He said the viewing was held to determine the program's suitability for TV and for showing during Holy Week.

"It is the corporation's opinion that the production is suitable on both counts," Mr. Ouimet reported. "It is an allegorical production which the corporation believes will prove acceptable to most thoughtful Christians.

"The corporation considers the program to be in no way sacrilegious. It has been produced and enacted with a sense of deep sincerity that will be apparent to the viewer and contains scenes which will be found deeply moving."

Mr. Ouimet said three executives who saw the play for the first time "encountered neither shock nor a sense of irreverence either from its theme or its production."

"The corporation is highly conscious and respectful of the varying viewpoints and feelings of its wide audience. While there will be some who will disagree with all or part of the program, the CBC feels there will be many more who will appreciate its basic purpose as a thoughtful contribution to a varied schedule of Holy Week programming."

Pay to Members of Alberta Legislature to Be Raised

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Members of the Alberta legislature would receive pay increases of $900 a year under a bill given first reading in the legislature Tuesday.

The increase would bring the total indemnity and allowances for members to $5,400 a year. The indemnity would jump to $3,600 from the present $3,000 and expenses would increase to $1,800 from $1,500.

Cabinet ministers' pay would rise to $12,500 from $11,000 and the premier's pay would go up to $16,000 from $14,000. Cabinet ministers also receive a $5,400 indemnity.

The opposition leader would receive a sessional indemnity of $7,500 and an annual expense allowance of $3,800 a year. At present he receives $2,200 in addition to his basic $4,500.

The increases would be effective from the start of the present session.

RECEIVE $7,000

Ontario members receive $7,000 from $5,000 indemnity and $2,000 expenses while the premier gets $18,000.

Only five legislatures were sitting Tuesday after the Prince Edward Island house prorogued. Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan and British Columbia houses closed last week while the Quebec house recessed for Easter.

Prince Edward Island—Lieutenant-Governor W. J. MacDonald gave assent to 56 bills and the 50th assembly prorogued. Highlight of the session was passage of amendments to the Liquor Control Act, permitting sale of liquor, beer and wine by the glass.

New Brunswick — Rodman E. Logan (PC — Saint John City) said proposed changes in the New Brunswick Labor Relations Act were "viciously anti-labor" in some aspects and would curtail union strike action.

He was speaking during a non-confidence debate which is expected to prolong the session earlier expected to end tonight.

Manitoba — Municipal Affairs Minister R. G. Smellie said the government is moving with a "new approach" to the problem of urban renewal.

The old idea of bulldozing slum areas and rebuilding was being replaced with the "new idea of conserving structurally sound buildings."

All Americans Aboard Copter Were Wounded

SAIGON (AP)—A U.S. Army helicopter with five Americans and one Vietnamese aboard was shot down by Viet Cong fire 240 miles north of here Tuesday, official sources reported today.

Everyone aboard was wounded, but all survived and were evacuated to a field hospital in a U.S. Marine Corps helicopter.

Earlier in the day, in the southernmost part of Viet Nam, the Communists shot down a Vietnamese Air Force two-seater fighter plane, and the American pilot and Vietnamese observer were killed.

Chicago Mayor Unhappy Name Is Changed

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Richard J. Daley has invoked the opinion of the Queen in a transoceanic tiff with the mayor of Reading, England.

Daley protested by cablegram Tuesday the Reading town council's action in changing the name of Chicago Road to Sandcroft Road.

The switch came when a spokesman for residents of Chicago Road told the Reading council:

"Visitors keep asking us things such as where they should leave their guns. We have got nothing against the city of Chicago, but the residents reasoned we could find a better name for our quiet residential street."

Mayor Daley disagreed and cabled his counterpart in Reading, Mayor J. C. H. Butcher.

'DIDN'T CONSULT QUEEN'

"Unfortunately your town council neglected to confer with Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, before removing the name Chicago from one of your roads," Daley said.

"We believe Her Majesty would have informed the council that Chicago is one of the most beautiful cities in the world, and that its people are both friendly and charming."

The Queen and Prince Philip visited Chicago in 1959.

"Since your neighbors seem to be under the influence of movies and television," Daley continued, "we would be delighted to have you come over and take a look, and then return and inform your friends of the injustice done to a great city."

ARMED SERVICES MERGER PROPOSED

United Appeal At Crossroads

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

We refer to your March 12th editorial entitled "What United Appeal?" We do not question the accuracy of your statement that Belleville has not had a United Appeal in the total, ultimate, "realistic" sense.

None could be more aware of that fact than those who have labored voluntarily and unselfishly and financially during the past six years to eventually achieve a United Appeal in its literal all-inclusive sense.

However, it must be remembered that the ground-work has been laid for this Utopian goal. Now this hard won groundwork is about to fall apart because Belleville is fast running out of people who are willing to ram their heads indefinitely against a stone wall of "Yes, buts".

Why should the "Yes, buts" be more prevalent in Belleville than in other Canadian cities of like size where the objective has been reached? And those objectives were reached in spite of Utopia not being at hand.

No two United Appeals include precisely the same number nor exactly the same list of agencies. They vary right across the country. Yet, like Belleville, they include essentially the same categories of agencies—both character-building and charitable. But, unlike Belleville, they have demonstrated that there can be unity in diversity! What strikes one man as an "Is-should-saddle-its-own-canoe" agency is precisely the one that appeals to his neighbor as the essential community service and vice versa.

During the past six years, 12 essential community services have voluntarily joined in one annual campaign for funds. During the past six years, a great many tag days have been eliminated. During the past six years, volunteer canvassers and erstwhile volunteer taggers have been asked to work only once a year in one campaign instead of being called upon several times a year for such assistance.

Householders have had their doorbells rung only once instead of a possible 12 times a year. Costs of advertising, printing and administration of 12 campaigns have been pooled for the less expensive "all for one and one for all" once a year effort.

Neither industrial nor business establishments would countenance 12, let alone "a hundred and one," separate annual canvasses on their premises. But 56 local firms have cooperated by permitting one annual canvass and by making available the facilities for Payroll Giving for one annual campaign—a United One. Also, let us not forget all those firms outside of Belleville who have each year generously supported this annual campaign—a United One.

And all this is to be wasted by the "Yes, buts."

The United Appeal organization has no authority to force participation by all agencies. It can only use the powers of reason and persuasion. It can only offer the facilities for a "realistic" United Appeal. This has been done annually and repeatedly, publicly and publicly, individually and collectively.

The March of Dimes has neither a local association nor a local Board of Directors to collect or administer funds locally. Regardless of this fact, an exception was made in 1958 and they were invited to join our United Appeal but declined. The Canadian Cancer Society, The Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children and The Salvation Army were invited on several occasions to participate in our fund but they too declined. On the other hand, The John Howard Society has made application for agency participation but due to the fact that they have no bonafide local representation this was regretfully turned down.

Until such time as there is meaningful support for the United Way, starting with City Council and backed by all industry, labor, business, professional and citizen groups, and until such time as public opinion forces a "realistic" United Appeal: it would appear that the "Yes, buts" will scuttlebutt hard work, goodwill and reduce the city to the chaos of multiple campaigns as in the past. It can happen!

Rome was not built in a day, but Rome burns while the "Yes, buts" fiddle. And our time has come for each fiddler to examine his own "Yes, but."

In a last ditch attempt to salvage the situation, a special general meeting has been called for Tuesday, March 31st, at 7.30 p.m. at the Kiwanis Centre.

This is an emergency meeting of the Belleville United Appeal, as presently incompletely constituted, and the complete Boards of Directors of the 12 participating agencies. An invitation has been extended to City Council. A special welcome awaits substantial representation from the non-participating agencies, particularly the above mentioned ones, should they choose to come. Any and all citizens who are constructively interested in salvaging the situation are invited—even urged to attend.

To make the United Way work, everybody must feel involved. On a national average, other communities have raised 95.8% of their objectives. Belleville has fluctuated between a low of 74.1% and a high of 89.3% for an average of 80.1%.

It is recognized by Appeals in Canada that in order to have a successful campaign, at least 25% of a community population should participate. In Belleville 12.8% have participated.

A city of 30,000 should produce 7,500 contributors. It actually produced 4,300. It is recognized that not all donors can give the same number of dollars. However, in actual fact when local gifts are tabulated, 1% of the population of Belleville gave 21% of the funds raised.

This meeting on March 31 can be the beginning or it may very likely be the end of, not only a "realistic" but, any United Appeal in Belleville.

Come; let us reason together.

Yours very truly,
Jane Forrester, (Mrs. J. H. Forrester) Past President.
A. S. Lewis, Past President.
E. G. Gurnett, Past President.

The Weather

Synopsis: The storm centre will move across southern Ontario followed by much colder weather and snowflurries. Heavy lost snowfalls accompanying the storm are expected to be some distance north of the lower lakes chiefly the Georgian Bay and Haliburton regions. Falls of six to eight inches may hit these areas. Cool sunny weather is expected in most areas on Good Friday.

Defence White Paper Is Tabled by Hellyer

OTTAWA (CP) — A plan to integrate Canadian army, navy and air services into a unified defence force, beginning with the appointment of single defence chief, was unveiled today in the government's white paper on defence.

The white paper, presented to Parliament by Defence Minister Hellyer, also laid down the outline of a 10 - year defence plan stressing the development of flexible, mobile military units that could be available for quick movement to any part of the world.

It predicted "considerable savings" through integration of the headquarters, training and administrative staffs now maintained by each service. These now tie up about 50,000 of Canada's 122,000 full-time servicemen.

Unofficial estimates are that savings in this field could amount to $100,000,000 a year on the current defence budget which runs about $1,500,000,000.

The policy paper stresses the continuing importance of Canada's roles in North American air defence and NATO and says these must remain essentially include nuclear weapons. The NATO alliance "must be maintained in a nuclear the weapons in the absence of controlled disarmament and as long as hostile forces have them."

Under integration, the separate chiefs of the army, navy and RCAF would disappear to be replaced by a chief of defence staff and a single defence staff.

Mr. Hellyer told reporters the new defence boss will be Air Chief Marshall Frank Miller, 55, now chairman of the chiefs of staff committee. He recently got a $4,000 pay increase to $25,000 a year.

The 40-year-old minister also said that savings made in integration would be pumped into new military equipment. He estimated it would make an extra $1,000,000,000 available over the next 10 years for increased purchases of defence weapons.

In recent months Mr. Hellyer has said repeatedly his aim is to trim enough "fat" from the defence budget to make 25 per cent of it available for new weapons, equipment and planning only about 13 per cent of the budget goes for weapons, the rest being earmarked up in housekeeping costs such as headquarters staffs.

He said the new plan is expected to cut 10,000 adminis-

Builders Stockpile Lumber To Avoid Higher Sales Tax

By ALAN DONNELLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The controversial sales tax on building materials and production equipment doubles to eight per cent next Wednesday, April 1, and many Canadian builders and distributors have been stockpiling lumber in advance to avoid the higher levy.

Instances of stockpiling were found in a cross-country survey by The Canadian Press. It also found that most suppliers of building materials plan to increase prices as soon as the tax increase takes effect.

The sales tax is levied at the manufacturer's level, the result for some distributors will be a double tax. They operate on lumber and other materials on which the higher tax hasn't been paid.

Reports of stockpiling are not general. Moreover, dealers say stockpiling is practical for only some commodities, notably cedar shingles.

Finance Minister Gordon announced in his budget speech last June 19 the 11-per-cent sales tax would be applied to building materials and production equipment in a partial retreat four weeks later agreed to stretch out the impact with a three-four-per-cent levy, rising to eight per cent April 1 and to the full 11 per cent next Jan. 1.

Before his latest budget Mr. Gordon was under heavy pressure from the construction industry and the Commons opposition to drop out the tax, or at least to leave it at four per cent.

But his budget didn't touch the tax. In a press conference, Mr. Gordon dismissed the

CNR Pensioners Promise Support of 'Railway Week'

Mr. J. S. Fleming, Passenger Sales Manager for the Bidean Area of the CNR, with Headquarters in this city, and Mr. Stanley Wilson of the same department, met with the executive officers of the local "CNR Pensioners' Association at the Club Canara Wednesday morning. The latter was in the meeting as explained by Mr. Fleming was to ask of the Pensioners that they support joining with the railway in a co-operative furtherance of planning for the Joint Canadian National Railways - City of Belleville observance of the celebration of June 22-28 "Railway Week."

Mr. Fleming outlined the proposed scope of participation requested of the Pensioners, and detailed the CNR's planning to date. CNR staff is expected to be making its last trip under steam on Sunday, June 28, with a full train of holidayers from Belleville and vicinity to Cobourg beach, which has been reserved for the occasion. On Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, June 23-24-25-26, a school children's train will be operated to Ancon Junction on the Peterborough line - four times daily. Crippled children will be guests of the Rotary Club and are to be dined at the Quinte Hotel. Or this will be run on the old Grand Junction Railway (Pinnacle St.) for the benefit of the children. Certain frivolities now in the making are to be worked on Pinnacle St. of the old Grand Junction Railway as the CNR joins with the city in the celebration of "Railway Week."

WHOLLY IN ACCORD

The CNR Pensioners expressed themselves as wholly in accord with the railway's desire for their participation in the planning for the events. Committees were proposed to look after the various details involved and a further meeting scheduled for April 10 to report on progress and consideration of other matters involved.

Mr. Fleming expressed himself as very pleased with the co-operative spirit displayed and thanked the pensioners for this show of goodwill — this goodwill, he assured them was fully reciprocated by the management of the Canadian National Railways. Mr. Donald Bradford, in the absence of the president during the "Railway Week" period will be associated with the loyalty of the "old timers".

COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN

The regular meeting of the Pensioners' Association was held after a lunch prepared by the ladies of the club - with president Joe Hunter presiding. Eighty-one members of the Belleville Association were present and a delegation from Toronto and various other points.

The usual business of the meeting completed, a report was made of the morning executive session and found unanimous approval of the members. Considerable discussion on the matter of committees followed and volunteers for the various lines of committees called for with the following appointed with authority to choose their assistants.

Walter Probert, parking authority; Alf Cooper, engine whistle; Jack Gallagher, literature distribution; Bert Selby, ticket sales; Newton Thompson, supplies; Jim Marlow (Pinnacle St. Club); Charles Heels and Jack Milburne, Cobourg representatives; Osborne Smith and James Bill, Peterborough representatives; A. J. Davis, Toronto representative; William Michael, book sales; Arnie Brown, publicity; Clifford and Howard, assisting CNR constables; Sam Cherry and Dave McCabe, describing pioneer engine display.

William Michaud's book on pioneer engines was proposed to look after the various details involved and a further meeting scheduled.

Publication of the book is expected for the latter part of April. A full history of the Grand Junction Railway; the Pinnacle St. line, its last remaining remnant —and to be removed this coming summer, is included in the book.

Short talks from visiting members, two from Western Canada, concluded the afternoon session.

Obituaries

MRS. JOSEPH E. SAMAIN

The funeral of Mrs. Joseph E. Samain was held on Wednesday afternoon from the chapel of the Grant Funeral Home, 69 North Front Street. Service was conucted by Arch-deacon A. L. Fleming.

On Monday evening members of the Women's Legion Auxiliary held a service in the chapel conducted by Mrs. Fred Hodge, president, assisted by Mrs. Bradford.

On Wednesday, previous to the funeral service, members of the L.A. to the A.O.F. Women's Auxiliary, No. 60, held a service at the chapel conducted by Miss Dockley assisted by Mrs. Storms, Mrs. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Lindsay.

A guard of honor was formed at the chapel door by the four ladies as the body was removed to be taken to Belleville Cemetery for interment.

Bearers were J. B. Winstanley, C. M. Brown, W. J. Ford, A. W. Gray, Norman Mills and Arthur Hobbs.

CHARLES VINCENT CULHANE

The funeral of Charles Vincent Culhane was held Wednesday from the White and Morris Funeral Home to Saint Vincents de Paul Church at Deseronto where requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Fr. A. Carey. Interment was in Saint Vincent de Paul Cemetery.

Pall bearers were Blake Moore, Ray Herman, James Foster, Peter Whalen Sr., James Marlow and Peter A. Whalen.

A lifetime resident of the Deseronto district, Mr. Culhane was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Culhane. He was a member of Deseronto Council for a choice of one course — either basic law, public speaking or law. He graduated of filmed lectures, plus a program of selected speakers and a social program. The Fall session of So-Ed also eight weeks long, ended in mid-November last year, and the group has held only social functions since then.

Driving was reported hazardous in spots although there were no serious accidents.

At Shannonville Luigi Codispoti, 450 Dundas Street West, escaped injury when he lost control of his car on Highway 2 and it struck a hydro pole.

In the Hastings County area $3,000 has been collected thus far in the objective having been set at $5,000.

1964 Easter Seal Campaign chairman, William McCormick, said today that all of the Easter Seals had been mailed and he is now waiting for further contributions.

He said pink addressed envelopes had been enclosed with the seals, for the convenience of the seal receivers. Mr. McCormick said anyone who has not received their seals and would like to make a donation may do so by sending it directly to the Royal Bank of Canada, Belleville Branch.

The Easter Seal campaign is the main project directed by the Rotary Club of Belleville.

Bay of Quinte Water Level Is Foot Under Last Year

Bad Weather May Curtail Easter Parade

It's no weather for Easter parades!

That must have been the thought of many a member of the younger generation this morning when they looked out to find a liberal coating of snow and ice on the ground and with rain laden skies forecast for the balance of the day.

And the w...rman says "cloudy and cool" for Good Friday.

Easter traditionally is the time for the fashion conscious to don their new spring finery — that is if the weather cooperates.

This year Easter falls very early — only a few days of the earliest possible date — and it appears as though the weatherman is not going to cooperate.

Plan Spring Session Of So-Ed Program

Forty-five Belleville teen-age and young people this last night signed up for the spring session of the So-Ed program at the Y.M.C.A. The eight - week session includes a choice of one course — either basic law, public speaking or law. They agreed of filmed lectures, plus a program of selected speakers and a social program. The Fall session of So-Ed also eight weeks long, ended in mid-November last year, and the group has held only social functions since then.

Crippled Children's Society Needs at Least a Million

The Society for Crippled Children issued a release recently stating that the 1964 Easter Seal Campaign must raise at least $1,000,000 in Ontario to be able to continue the services it is now providing for physically handicapped children in this province.

Last year there were more than 16,000 crippled children who received direct care and treatment as a result of Easter Seal gifts.

In the Hastings County area $3,000 has been collected thus far in the objective having been set at $5,000.

1964 Easter Seal Campaign chairman, William McCormick, said today that all of the Easter Seals had been mailed and he is now waiting for further contributions.

He said pink addressed envelopes had been enclosed with the seals, for the convenience of the seal receivers. Mr. McCormick said anyone who has not received their seals and would like to make a donation may do so by sending it directly to the Royal Bank of Canada, Belleville Branch.

(Water levels in the Bay of Quinte at Belleville are about a foot below last year's levels and the lowest since records have been kept at the Belleville filter plant, according to the plant go back only to 1950, but filter plant superintendent Jim Hutchinson said the level may be the lowest since the early 1930's. There is little danger of a water shortage in the city, he reports, though there might be if the season proves to be a dry one with summer peak. At low water, he explains, algae are more troublesome and there is a problem for the filter plant. With present water levels and demand for water in the city the effect is a higher cost for treatment of the water. Water levels are expected to be higher during the hot months, though, he explains.

Harbor Master Mac Smith today commented that the water level in the bay-unless it rises by summer—is low enough to restrict most ships operating in the area to about two-thirds of their normal cargo capacity. For many ships, he explained, this would not call at Bay of Quinte ports. Draught of ships operating in the bay is governed by the depth of water at Telegraph Narrows, near Deseronto, where a one-mile shelf of rock lies in the channel dredging. Cost of blasting the shelf would be more than a million dollars.

Low water for the year in Belleville is usually during the winter months, rising from April to June, then dropping again that summer and fall. One hopeful sign for this year is that the level has been rising since late February to March—last year it dropped between the two months. Levels are usually regulated at the filter plant's intake well.

From Brockville comes a report that water level in the St. Lawrence River is at its lowest point in 30 years.

Three Children Of Alta. Mayor Killed by Gas

COLEMAN, Alta. (CP) — A soot-clogged chimney diverted carbon monoxide gas into a bedside gas into a home and killed three children of Mayor John Fritsch, officials said Wednesday.

Police Chief Edmund Corson of Coleman and a gas inspector made the discovery Wednesday during a search of the mayor's home for the probable source of the deadly gas.

Chief Corson said the chimney was partially blocked with soot that had accumulated because the home recently was converted to natural gas from coal.

Mayor Otash's three eldest children Edward, 18, Allan, 15, and Mary Jane, 12, have died. Mayor Otash, 45, and his wife Marie, 37, were in hospital, the mayor in serious condition.

ANOTHER IN HOSPITAL

A four-year-old, four - month old Neelis, had been taken to hospital Monday with what was diagnosed as a "minor stomach ailment."

An autopsy Wednesday revealed Edward died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Chief Corson discovered the tragedy at noon Tuesday after he was told the mayor, elected last October, had not opened the bar in his hotel, no one answered the door at his home the telephone rang busy and the mayor's car was at home.

Chief Corson found Mayor Otash unconscious in a crouched position beside a bed. Nearby a telephone dangled by its cord and it appeared the mayor had attempted to summon help before being overcome.

Other members of the family were in their beds. Edward was dead, Allan and Mary Jane died later in hospital.

It was first thought the family had suffered from food poisoning.

OILBURNER PLUGS

City firemen were called to the home of Mr. Gus Angelatos at 80 Everett Street at 2.22 p.m. Wednesday. An oilburner in the home had plugged up, filling the house with smoke, causing a small amount of damage.

Senior Citizens From Belleville Visit Trenton

TRENTON — A busload of senior citizens, 33 in number, from Belleville visited the Trenton club Tuesday night and enjoyed a sing - a - long and musical entertainment — readings and recitations.....and in the words of the club members, "generally had a ball." Eighty Trenton and Belleville members were at the social which was very well received by Trenton president, Mrs. Emma Panter.

Club members, Mr. and Mrs. Boydell were given a special welcome, and before the entertainment started, Mrs. Panter arranged for bowling and gave details of a planned trip to the Ice Follies on April 4.

Musical numbers were given by Cecil Marchen, violin; William Nancarrow, harmonica; Pat Whalley, piano - accordion and Mrs. Yates, piano.

Mr. and Mrs. Robertson from the Belleville club led in a sing - song, Norman Campney recited and Mrs. Clapp and Mrs. Lena Phillips gave readings.

Square and round dancing brought the entertainment period to a close.

Mr. Brennan, president of the Belleville club, thanked Mrs. Panter and the members of the local club for their hospitality and Mrs. Panter expressed the Bellevillians that they were welcome at any time.

The meeting in the Recreation Hall on Ontario Street ended by the singing of "Till We Meet Again".

ATTEND SEMINAR

On March 14, Mrs. Doris Wood, Mrs. Jean Hall, Mrs. Cole and Miss Vera Clark, the president and first and second vice-presidents of the Business, Finance and Professional Women's Club, attended a leadership training course at the Legion Hall B. & P. clubs at the British Hotel in Cobourg. More than 20 executive members from seven centres in the region attended the five - hour session.

Discussion leaders were Miss Maude Bayley and Mrs. Margery Newtrese of the provincial executive body and they were assisted by the Ontario president, Mrs. Margaret Ambown and district director, Mrs. Dorothy Brown of Belleville.

Points brought out in the discussion were that a president represents the local club in every way. She must be careful not to allow personalities to become involved in her decisions and to be able to delegate authority so that every member enters into the activity of the club.

MORE HYDRO POLES

Utilities workmen are busy this week moving over hydro poles on the west side of Division Street in readiness for the widening of the street between King Street and Dundas Street West. Harvard Ave. is expected to be shut at the widening by early April, according to town engineer Eric Jones.

Meanwhile, Rayner's sub-contractor Carr, is installing a storm sewer and water mains laterals on Sidney Street.

Town crews are installing a storm sewer on Campbell Street and will perform installation of a storm sewer on North Murray Sts. next week.

By next week too, the 1964 curb program should start under the foreman Charles Scialetta, but Mr. Alderney could not say from where the limestone station would start as the work must t'e in with Rayner's work on three of the town's main streets, Dundas East, Dufferin and Sidney.

IN MEMORIAM

MARKLEY — In loving memory of my dear father, Arthur Markley, who passed away March 27, 1960.
Time speeds on, four years have flown
Since death its gloom, its shadow threw
Within our home, where all seems drear
And took from us a shining light.
Dear father, you left us all alone
His vacant place, there is none to fill
Sweet memories we have, we must not dwell
Upon the past, for then we will meet again
Sadly lovingly missed by my son Don, daughter-in-law Helen and family.

RAY — In loving memory of a dear sister, Sibbie Ray, who died March 27, 1963.
A silent thought and a secret tear,
Unseen by others and they were
Time takes away the edge of grief
But memory keeps the wound green.
—Ever remembered by Uncle and sister, Aunt Kaye and family.

MARACLE — In memory of a very dear husband, Ivan Maracle, who passed away March 27, 1960.
Sweet memories, precious and dear,
Enough sad precious thoughts shall not die, and I'll keep them so.
—Ever remembered by Kitie.

GRIFFIN — In loving memory of a dear wife, Lillian M. Griffin, who passed away March 27, 1963.
Oh happy hours we once enjoyed,
How dear to memory still,
But death has left a loneliness,
No one can ever fill.
—Ever remembered by her husband.

Onion Surplus Biggest in Some Years

This is the year of the big onion surplus and the Ontario Department of Agriculture is exerting its influence to have the steak appetizer moved before the onset of another growing season.

The surplus is anywhere up to 450,000 80 lb. bags over supplies at this time last year.

The Ontario Food Council notes that onions can provide a welcome change in fresh vegetables for dinner or lunch. They are easy to prepare and appetizing in stew or salad, fried or roasted or simply boiled. Raw onions for sandwiches and chopped onion for hamburg or hotdogs are another use.

Colin Wilcox Will Journey To Lebanon

"Colin Wilcox, a member of the local Y.M.C.A., has been selected by the National Council of YMCA's of Canada to be one of 30 Canadian delegates to attend the World YM-YWCA Young Adult Conference to be held in Beirut, Lebanon in August," was announced today by Di Diamantides, General Secretary of the YMCA.

Along with 40 American delegates, the Canadian delegation will be part over after flying people representing 40 countries. The conference will be at one week duration with an additional two weeks devoted to touring YMCA centres in the Middle East including Jordan, and points in the Holy Land, as well as Athens, Rome and Geneva.

Colin has been an active member of the Y's Men's Club for 5½ years and this year, he has been elected to the position of vice-president of the club. He is also an active member of the So-Ed Club, serving as vice-president and as National Representative and recently elected to the office of National Project chairman for So-Ed Club. Colin is employed with the sales staff for the Rus-win Lock Division of the International Hardware of Canada.

His selection out of 43 top-notch people representing 28 different YMCAs from coast to coast, who had applied for this "once-in-a-lifetime" experience, is an honor to Colin himself, to the plant he is employed by, to the local YMCA and to Belleville. "I am sure that he will be a good Canadian ambassador," concluded Di Diamantides.

Real Caouette Blames Quebec For Retardment

CHICAGO (AP) — Four gunmen, one an Alcatraz prison alumnus, raced out of a supermarket Wednesday into a barrage of police bullets. Three were slain, one escaped.

Police had set up an ambush for the men on the west side on the strength of a wave of holdups of National Tea Company food stores in the Chicago area in recent weeks.

The gang pulled off the holdup without incident, then fell into the police trap as they rushed for their getaway.

Six thousand dollars was taken in the robbery minutes after an armored express truck had made a delivery. The getaway car was parked in a vacant lot a block from the store.

In a running gunfight one of the robbers was cut down in an alley behind the supermarket. Two others were killed farther away before the fourth escaped.

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — The same curly - haired bandit who robbed the Gateway branch of the Bank of America two weeks ago tried it again Wednesday, but this time left empty-handed.

Teller Susan Leroy, 43, looked at his note. It said: "Give me all your 10s and 20s." She looked at the bandit's gun. She looked at his face. It was the same man who took $320 from her March 13.

She fainted. The bandit fled.

Retired RCMP Sergeant Denies He Was Paid

VANCOUVER (CP) — A retired RCMP sergeant has denied testimony in a Seattle court that he was to be paid $3,000 to provide an alibi for John Wasylenchuk in a bank robbery.

Ernest Nuttall, who retired from the force because of a nervous heart ailment, said in an interview here Tuesday the charges are "utter nonsense" and ridiculous.

"This is a man with a record of mental illness. He might just as well have said I was given $3,000,000."

Sgt. Nuttall was commenting on testimony by Irvin Lester Teague, a prosecution witness serving an 18-year-to-life jail term, who appeared Tuesday at the Seattle trial of Wasylenchuk.

Wasylenchuk, a Canadian from Burnaby, B.C., is charged with robbery and murder in the March 12, 1954, holdup of a Seattle bank in which a policeman was shot and killed.

A deposition taken from Nuttall for the defence of Wasylenchuk said he saw Wasylenchuk at the Canadian suspect's Burnaby home within an hour of the holdup in Seattle, 150 miles away.

Teague testified that Wasylenchuk told him of the alleged alibi arrangement with Nuttall in November, 1950, while Teague and Wasylenchuk were serving terms in the federal penitentiary at New Westminster.

Four Given Prison Terms At Guelph

GUELPH (CP)—Four youths who made an unsuccessful bid to break out of the Ontario Reformatory here Feb. 25, Wednesday were sentenced to penitentiary.

Lenny Joseph, 18, of Ottawa received two concurrent sentences of five years for assaulting two reformatory guards with intent to wound, and a concurrent two - year sentence for breaking prison with violence.

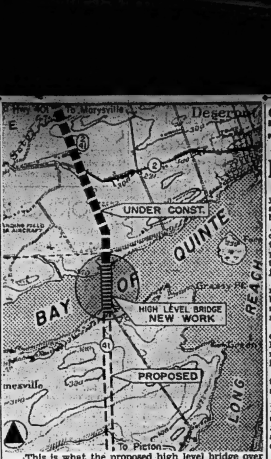
Richard Parsons, 17, of Ottawa, Harold Hulse, 17, of Silver Creek, N.Y., and Anthony Frost, 18, of Niagara Falls, also received two - year prison terms for prison breaking.

Harold Pattison, a guard, and Robert Drysdale, a laundry supervisor, suffered fractured skulls when beaten during the attempted break.

Two Comet Jet Transports Ready to Junk

One time pride of the Royal Canadian Air Force, two Comet jet transports are sitting at Mountain View awaiting their ultimate fate — likely to be the junkman's cutting torch.

The sleek Comets were retired late in 1963 after their role as military jet transports was taken over by the now familiar Yukon turbo-props.



They now sit with a "for sale" sign at the Mountain View airfield eight miles south of Belleville, along with other obsolete aircraft.

The two Comets arrived in Canada 11 years ago, but because of Comet crashes on airline routes in Europe were grounded in January 1954.

Two years later they were flown to England for modification and returned to Canada the following year.

While in use with the RCAF the Comets were used principally for VIP transport and in 1958 flew the Queen and Prince Philip during their Royal Tour of Canada.

Last year, the two Comets were turned over to Crown Assets Disposal Corporation which recently offered them for sale.

Work to Start This Year On Bay of Quinte Bridge

The Ontario Department of Highways says that construction will start this year on the long-talked about high-level bridge over the Bay of Quinte near Cronk's Ferry at Deseronto.

Scheduled for this year is the award of a contract for the substructure, valued at about $700,000, of which about $200,000 will be spent during the present fiscal year.

In addition to construction of the high-level bridge, Highways Department plans call for rebuilding of Highways No. 2 and 41 north and south of the bay to provide a new direct access for Prince Edward County to 401 Highway north of Marysville.

At the present crossings over the Bay of Quinte from Prince Edward County to the mainland in the Deseronto area are accomplished by ferry.

Last year work was started on the rebuilding of Highway 2 from Marysville south to the bay.

This work included a new bridge over Selby Creek, and also construction of an overpass over the double track C.N.R. railway immediately south of Marysville.

Work on this phase of the overall project will continue this summer.

Spring Freshet To Be Lightest In Many Years

For the first time in many years the annual Moira River spring freshet this year has been completely non-existent.

Practically all the snow except in the extreme north of the watershed has now disappeared and in comparison to the normal year the run-off has just not materialized.

And unless there is heavy rain it is doubtful if there will be any run-off as fields even north of No. 7 highway are already bare of snow.

The low water level is general however with the level of Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River at the lowest in at least 30 years.

Rocks normally under two or three feet of water are showing above the surface.

In the Bay of Quinte at Belleville wide stretches of shoreline are appearing and many privately-owned docks are completely out of the water.

All creeks are running very low and already some riverlets that normally carry heavy runoff at this time of year are almost completely dry.

CITIZENSHIP CEREMONY

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — A Briton seated in a wheelchair became a U.S. citizen Wednesday on his 100th birthday. Nicholas Latimer Charles Martindale was born in 1864 near London and has lived in the United States for 75 years.

May Turn Over Unused Space In Hospitals

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government is working on a modified plan for making unused space in veterans' hospitals available for civilian occupancy, reliable sources said Wednesday.

Talks are under way with a number of provincial governments on the plan which may supersede the policy announced March 15 by Veterans Minister Teillet.

Mr. Teillet told the Commons that the only practical solution to the veterans hospital problem "is to enter into agreements with suitable agencies to take over operational control of veterans hospitals."

"These would then become general community hospitals, in which the department could purchase the service it must provide."

The proposal raised a storm of protest from Opposition ranks and a demand by the Royal Canadian Legion that action on handing over veterans hospitals cease immediately pending further study.

A new approach may be to retain control by the veterans affairs department while making arrangements that unused capacity be available to civilians by communities hard - pressed for hospital beds.

Escapee Trailed For 24 Hours Before Capture

SUDBURY (CP) — Anthony Jack, 21, of Kenora, who escaped from nearby Burwash Industrial Farm late Tuesday, was returned to custody Wednesday by a persistent guard who trailed him for nearly 24 hours.

Colin Edwards was supervising a work party outside the minimum - security institution when Jack disappeared into the bush.

Jack, serving two years less a day for theft, will appear in court today on a charge of escaping custody.

W. S. Wills Named Pres. Of Y. M. C. A.

Mr. William S. Wills was elected as President of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. for 1956-57 at the Board of Directors Meeting held last evening. Other members of the executive elected are 1st vice-president, Mr. Hugh Watson; 2nd vice-president, Mr. E. Donald Templeman; treasurer, Mr. Jack Ireland; recording secretary, Mrs. Vern Weir; and past president, Mr. Bruce G. MacKenzie.

Mr. Wills, manager of the Guaranty Trust Company of Canada, has been an active member of the Board of Directors since 1952. During this time, he served in numerous standing committees and as-recording secretary in 1955. In 1951, he was General Campaign Chairman of the Y.M.C.A.'s Financial Drive for a new 'Y' building, which is nearing completion. He is a member of St. Thomas' Anglican Church.

If Rum is your drink Wood's Old Navy is your Rum
This is a rum that's dark and mellow. This is a heavy robust rum that's every bit a man's rum. This is Wood's Old Navy, a blend of the world's finest (many as old as 9 years). A long-standing favourite in England, we think you'll agree that no other rum can match Wood's Old Navy for full-bodied flavour. Try it next time.

Some Still Do Not Understand

The Ontario Legislature, by unanimous vote, on Monday evening killed a section of the Police Amendment Act bill, which had been denounced by politicians, press and public as a "police state" measure.

Let no one think, though, that this means that the real basis for objections to the section are fully understood by all the legislators.

The controversy stirred so much feeling that members broke out of their party strait-jackets and, instead of making their utterances conform to party policy, gave vent to their true feelings.

The results were revealing.

H. J. Price, Progressive Conservative member for Toronto St. David, complimented the opposition parties and the press for handling themselves in a responsible way in their outcry against the bill.

But his fellow Progressive Conservative, John Root of Wellington-Dufferin, complained that news media had completely distorted the intent of the legislation.

Nonsense. No responsible person ever had any real doubts about the intent of the bill. The intentions of those who drafted it were of the highest—the protection of the public from criminals. They had no desire whatever to deprive any law-abiding citizen of any of his rights. No newspaper or politician, that we know of, ever suggested that any sinister motive lay behind the bill.

That, though, did not make it any the less obnoxious.

What Mr. Root evidently does not understand—and what is not understood by many others like him—is that it is essential that no legislation should make it legal to deprive a citizen of any of his basic rights. This legislation would have made such deprivation legal. That those who drafted the bill had no intention whatever to use the legislation for this purpose against people they believed law-abiding was entirely irrelevant to the issue. Had the bill been passed as drafted, there would not have been a man or woman in Ontario who would not have been liable to imprisonment if refused to give the Ontario Police Commission—which has nothing whatever to do with the police—any information it might desire. If they were permitted to keep any secret, it would have been by gracious leave of the authorities, not by right.

And that is the important point. The freedoms we enjoy must be ours by right, and not as a privilege.

Not all of the freedoms we commonly enjoy are still indisputably ours by right. Those who are given the difficult and thankless task of preventing crimes and misdemeanors are always eager, at times, to plug up the legal loop-holes through which the guilty wiggle. They communicate their eagerness to legislators and there is a constant struggle, on the part of the comparatively few who appreciate the fundamental issues at stake, to prevent this eagerness being translated into laws which trample into pretty shreds some of the basic things with the Budget, like importing "Ghost Writers" from Bay Street, and experimenting with taxes that just wouldn't work.

Now they have been pasting him for not going enough, for sitting far too pat.

And still they haven't been able to make him budge.

The Opposition can roar and work itself into quite a rage, but the Budgeteer remains calm and cool, even at times, it seems, detached.

If they could anger him, just once, if they could find a way to taunt him so that he would snarl back and get into a slanging match with them, then perhaps they might begin to have him on the political run.

But even if last year's Budget was a calamitous failure, and this one an unimaginative and unstimulating one, apparently, Walter Gordon, almost alone in the Government, seems amiably unaware of it.

He makes the vastly complicated business of the Budget look almost as simple as A-B-C.

He has a kind of casual way about him that baffles the Opposition.

What a contrast to former finance minister Fleming whose very intensity so often got him into such deep water.

You couldn't, in wildest imagination, ever conceive of Walter Gordon glaring or telling the Commons that to work, as finance minister Fleming excelled he did, for 100 to 120 hours a week was something of an ecstasy.

He might in his secret heart-ever feel that way, too, but he would let no one witness it. Hurt it out to an astonished House.

Ottawa Offbeat

The Unassailable Walter Gordon Is Cool Customer

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Wonder if Finance Minister Gordon, under pressure these last few days of the Budget Debate, has recalled his well-remembered reaction words of last Spring.

If he did, it must have been a bit wistfully.

For it was only about 10 days after the election, while awaiting his appointment by Prime Minister Pearson to the Cabinet, that he wished out loud, and publicly enough to get between quotation marks, he wouldn't find himself landing in the Finance Department.

He gave the oddest — as things have turned out — reason for actively not wanting that department.

Essentially he was lazy, he confessed with a sort of wry grin, and if he wound up as finance minister he'd "really have to work at taking it easy."

It is an under-statement to say that he hasn't had a moment of ease-taking since.

Being finance minister, as he probably knew all along, was as extraordinary a form of working at "taking it easy," in fact, just about the hardest way to be found anywhere in this vast bureaucracy.

MR. RELAXATION

But then, nobody really could have taken Walter Gordon when he spoke of his yen for the lazy life, for you don't pile up his $12,000,000 in Simpsons, Limited fortune simply by going through the pleasant process of relaxing.

The finance minister happens to be the best living proof on Parliament Hill that appearances can be deceiving.

For he looks relaxed, acts relaxed, and gives the impression of relaxed fire — and few finance ministers have been subjected to such intense pelting as Gordon's early, if haltingly so, actually is relaxed.

Perhaps it is this politically invaluable quality of being able to roll with the punch that has made around-the-clock.

No finance minister in these past 25 years, not even Donald Fleming when he was Canada's fumbled the firing of Bank of Canada Governor James Coyne, has taken longer than near the brutal beating that Walter Gordon took, shrugged off, and come back from.

The Opposition gave him a savage roughing last year when he made what he and his Cabinet colleagues admitted was an all but politically disastrous mess of the Budget.

And though the Opposition, particularly the Conservatives, did their desperate best to make it of you look at it the other way, their worst — to ridicule and humiliate him, to play on his short temper, sulk, or do any of those things that most people seem to do when they face legal loopholes through which the guilty wiggle. They communicate their eagerness to legislators and there is a constant struggle, on the part of the comparatively few who appreciate the fundamental issues at stake, to prevent this eagerness being translated into laws which trample into pretty shreds some of the basic things with the Budget, like importing "Ghost Writers" from Bay Street, and experimenting with taxes that just wouldn't work.

Now they have been pasting him for not going enough, for sitting far too pat.

And still they haven't been able to make him budge.

The Opposition can roar and work itself into quite a rage, but the finance minister remains cool, even at times, it seems, detached.

If they could anger him, just once, if they could find a way to taunt him so that he would snarl back and get into a slanging match with them, then perhaps they might begin to have him on the political run.

Good Deeds Do Not Pave Road to Hell

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: For every one child that education sharpens, a dozen are repressed and made dull by it; otherwise, how explain the large number of bright and curious 6-year-olds, and the much smaller number of bright and curious 16-year-olds?

Feminine logic is that which convinces a woman she is getting an item for nothing if the price is cut in half and she buys it with the half she has "saved" from the regular price.

The inequity of all laws was tersely expressed by Balzac more than a century ago, when he wrote: "Laws are spider webs that catch little flies, but cannot hold big ones."

Foolish things done on impulse usually harm no one except the doer; but foolish things done on principle usually harm everyone else in the vicinity.

Women with the most remarkable sleeping habits marry the most prosaic husbands — for this is the only way they can safely retain their romantic yearnings without having them ruined by reality.

As technology enables the peoples of China, India, and Africa to leap into the 20th century, one wonders what neurotic reactions will afflict the white race when it finally realizes it is the "minority group" in the world.

The essential difference between "good" and "clever" religions was succinctly put by John Morley, who noted: "Where it is a duty to worship the sun, it is pretty sure to be a crime to examine the laws of heat."

Speaking of which, the absolutely the one thing the road to hell is not paved with is "good intentions" — for what the road is not resides in its intentions and not in its results. The only catch being that our intentions are not always what we think they are.)

People who feel pity for city dogs because they have no room to run in have never observed a farm dog. He is the abject creature in the world and curiously takes no more exercise than a lethargic cat from the fireside to the trough. City dogs also, generally, live longer and are healthier than their rustic counterparts.

For taking a man back to his senses, an attack of frigid is worth ten pounds of advice.

Why is Canada's oil is "good patient" is one who follows the doctor's orders with the meticulousness of a man on the brink of the grave, if necessary.

No actor in the world can rival a wife who has heard her husband tell the same story twenty times and is still able to muster the astonishment of a fresh smile at the punch-line.

Letter to the Editor

Mackenzie Bowell's History Is Outlined

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

The Belleville Public School Board is to be congratulated on its decision to name the new school after Sir Mackenzie Bowell (1823-1917).

Certainly Sir Mackenzie Bowell has been one of Belleville's most illustrious citizens, being from printer-devil to editor and owner of the Intelligencer, one of Ontario's oldest newspaper. Originally born in 1861 he published the now famous "First Hastings County Directory."

His contributions to local education, militia affairs and the Loyal Orange Lodge were significant.

Perhaps even more important was his self-made retirement. First elected to the Canadian House of Commons in the year of Confederation, 1867, he served from 1878 to 1891 as Minister of Customs in the Conservative administration of Sir John A. Macdonald. This was an important post because one of the government's major policies was the "National Policy" involving higher tariffs to protect home goods.

During this period, Bowell also gained fame for his parliamentary sketches on Lord Riel, A French-speaking Roman Catholic metis (mixed blood), Riel was angered Protestant and other Orangemen by his execution in the Red River Rebellion of 1885, and Scots, the Orange Grandmaster, Scott was said to have employed in the Mados area menace in the 1860's.

After the death of John A. Macdonald, 1891, Mackenzie Bowell served as Minister of Militia and Minister of Trade and Commerce.

With the death in 1894 of Sir John Thompson (the third Conservative Prime Minister to die in office in the early 1890's), the Conservative party turned for leadership to Sir Mackenzie.

Bowell's known love for the Empire, his integrity, his seniority and experience, and the fact that he was considered by the governor general to be the best objectionable candidate resulted in the honor being bestowed.

Accordingly, at an age when most men have retired, 71, Sir Mackenzie Bowell assumed the highest office available to a Canadian — that of prime minister.

Unfortunately, growing controversies within the Conservative party and his inability to cope with the sectional problems of the day plagued Mackenzie in his declining years to bring about Bowell's resignation within two years.

In the first place some other cabinet ministers coveted his position themselves or sought it for a younger man. Several ministers affected a cabinet revolt, the result being Bowell's agreement to resign office and

Angina Pectoris Completely Differs From Heart Attack

By JOSEPH C. HOLMER, M.D.

(Second of two articles)

Now let's talk about angina pectoris, or heart pain, as distinguished from a heart attack, which we discussed yesterday.

In angina, the heart muscle is not getting enough oxygen. This may be the result of insufficient circulation, or a combination of causes.

The dull, oppressive pain in the mid-chest comes when the heart protests against the demands being made upon it, together with lack of enough oxygen in the blood to fulfill the heart muscle's needs.

There is pain from a coronary, too — but it does not, like angina, subside promptly when the patient stops exerting himself, or takes a drug (nitroglycerin being the best known, but there are others) which will dilate the arteries and permit more blood to reach the heart muscle.

With angina, the heart muscle does not have a portion of it completely deprived of blood, and you do not have the destruction and scarring of parts of the muscle.

Conversely, over a period of time, angina puts the heart under continued strain and weakens it.

Causes of angina are varied and at times even baffling, but they include narrowing of the muscle (and hence poor circulation); spasm of the arteries, so they constrict; and the same consequence follows; overactive thyroid, with the heart forced to do more work than it should with a given amount of sustenance; defects in the valves so the heart has to pump harder in order to pump the same amount of blood.

Heredity plays a part, certainly in a tendency toward hardening of the arteries and probably in other ways. Men are victims of three or four times as often as women. There are some cases of angina in which no cause for the other disease can be found to explain the pain.

The government does not exist, in angina, for blood vessels to enlarge or extend themselves, because there is no organized effort of circulation to any area.

It is wiser, therefore, for the angina patient not to look forward to some striking change that will put an end to his problem.

At the same time, he has certain advantages that the coronary does not have to face the sudden and severe risk that must be faced by the person with a coronary, nor does he, as a rule, have to anticipate several weeks of hospitalization.

And he does have certain things which he (and his doctor) can do to make his life more easier. Reduction in weight; reduction in blood pressure if it is too high; control of diabetes if present in the bloodstream — all of these are helpful.

Perhaps most important is an understanding of the situation and a reasonable attempt, in habits and activities, to keep the amount of exertion below the point at which an attack of the pain starts.

And the nitroglycerin or similar drugs, which can be taken for as long as needed, and in such amount as is required without harm, are a great boon. Taken with modified living habits and these treatments, the chance of angina ever to go on for years without being too disabling.

Dear Dr. Molmer: We have been given a large sum of money at present, but we can't go until later. Is it possible to become pregnant if you take pills to prevent and get your period two hours later? I would hate to be eight months pregnant on a trip to Hocolah. — Mrs. C. L.

All but impossible. Bon voyage.

Note to M. J. R.: No, it is not true that cancer spreads more rapidly "when the air hits it." If that were true, skin cancer would spread rapidly. It doesn't.

Attention all women. For the pamphlet, "Pre-Menstrual Blues," write to Dr. Molmer in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill. enclosing a long, self-addressed unstamped envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover printing and handling. This pamphlet may help you!

Robin Hood Was Real Red

By Arthur Hoppe in the San Francisco Chronicle

A lady on the Indians State Board of Education wishes to ban Robin Hood stories from our schools "because the fellow held Communist ideas." And most people I know are saying "Ha, ha, isn't that ridiculous!"

Well, ha, ha, I have checked and the plot lady happens to be absolutely right.

True is Robin Hood, as I have come to think of him, posed at first as a simple agrarian reformer. He merely wanted to get his lands back.

But once he had taken power in Sherwood Forest, what was the political structure he set up? A communist With himself as commissar.

He and his comrades, including Comrade L. John and Comrade A. Dale, lived off the commune, expropriating livestock from the landlords and starting collectives.

And let us not forget that Hood's basic political philosophy was to "take from the rich and give to the poor." What, of course, is precisely the Communist Manifesto's catchy according to his ability; to each according to his need."

Space forbids an analysis of the work's subtle attack on religion, with Friar Tuck cast as a glutton and low comic figure. Nor let us talk about Maid Marian and the doctrine of free love, as there may be children present.

Instead, let us merely ask ourselves what is the one overwhelmingly political message that Hood imparts to young minds? "Revolt!"

For, as you recall, the forces of the King represent the free enterprise system are symbolized by the Sheriff of Nottingham. The villain, book, is the symbol of tyranny!

It is honestly think the Indians lady is right. The book not only promotes Communist ideas, but the joys of communal living, free love and revolution. Not to mention highway robbery. It must be stopped.

So hats off to the Right Wing for spotting at once the small minds of our small children are barely enough to survive such ideas. But that we can feed a whole generation a heavy diet of Communist propaganda as well and wind up with a nation of freedom lovers.

kemzie Bowell. And, of course, his troubled cabinet crisis was relived to a lesser degree by Mr. Diefenbaker.

Locally, Sir Mackenzie Bowell has not received the attention he deserves.

Few people know that the stone cairn in front of the Armouries commemorates this distinguished citizen; fewer people know that his family residence still stands, the red brick house at 194 William St.

It is a good thing that the Belleville Public School Board has seen fit to commemorate the memory of this distinguished citizen.

Officer Kills Hold-up Man In Toronto Bank

TORONTO (CP) — A policeman, wounded and knocked to the floor in a hail of bullets, killed a fleeing holdup man with one retaliatory shot in a downtown Toronto bank Wednesday.

Constable Robert Dixon, 28, shot Gordon Dennis Peterson, alias Fred Stewart, 37, through the back and heart as he reached the outer doors of a downtown branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Const. Dixon was being treated in hospital for shock and continuous pain from bullet that boomed off his belt buckle and grazed the skin beneath his heart.

Homicide Inspector William McNeely said Peterson entered the bank and was recognized by teller Shirley Homer, 28, as probably the man who had robbed her of $4,200 Feb. 10 in the same bank.

Miss Homer tripped a silent alarm, summoning police cars. At the same time Const. Dixon moved forward from the back of the bank.

Before Peterson handed a note to the teller, police cars were already converging on the bank.

Peterson handed the teller a note demanding money. Bills totalling $2,000 were passed to him.

Const. Dixon approached Peterson, who turned and fired four shots as customers and staff ran for cover. Const. Dixon fell wounded, but as the robber ran to the street Const. Dixon followed and shot him.

Police found $2,000 Peterson had taken from the bank lying beside his body on the sidewalk.

Police said Peterson was identified by some of the bank staff as the same man who staged at least one of two February holdups at the same bank.

On Feb. 6 a robber took $1,125 and four days later another holdup netted the robber $4,250.

Since the rash of bank holdups this year—14 before Wednesday — police officers have been stationed in most downtown Toronto banks.

Pleads Guilty To Offence, Given 7 Days

PICTON (Staff) — Nelson Struthers, Wellington, was sent to jail for one week by Magistrate T. Y. Wills, when he pleaded guilty to operating a car while his driver's licence was under legal suspension.

Struthers was seen by Constable Earl Marvin driving a panel truck on Highway 33 on February 16. He admitted driving the truck, also that he knew his licence was still under suspension, and "thought I would take a chance on getting home."

Carl F. Buck of Trenton, currently serving a 12-month definite and three months indeterminate given about three weeks ago in Brighton, was sentenced to an additional nine months in jail, when he pleaded guilty to several more charges of breaking and entering, and of theft.

"I have studied this case very carefully, and I cannot come to the conclusion that the ends of justice would be served if I made this sentence concurrent with the ones he is now serving. I feel that something should be added," said the magistrate in pronouncing sentence.

For relaxation, Douglas Young took up selling; for a profitable investment, he bought London Life insurance. Story below:

How Douglas Young can double his money with his London Life policy

A London Life Jubilee policy is a unique investment. While it gives protection year after year, it also builds surprising savings. Consider the case of Douglas Young:

IN MAY of 1962, Douglas Young graduated from the University of Western Ontario and joined the Marketing Division of a large Canadian company. Three months later he bought a $20,000 profit-sharing policy from London Life.

His age: 22. His premium: $25.85 a month. (This is a special whole life policy that gives lifelong protection but requires premiums only to age 65.)

By age 65, he will have paid $13,338 in premiums. How much will he get back?

If he leaves his dividends with the Company to age 65, he will then have savings of about $32,120. This is made up of $13,440 in guaranteed cash value and $18,680 in accumulated dividends.

(The dividends above are based on London Life's current dividend rate. While they are not guaranteed, the Company has had an outstanding record of dividend growth for over 50 years. For example, since 1951 the dividend rate has been increased seven times.)

If he lives, his family will be protected for 43 years and he can get back over twice as much money as he has paid in premiums.

When Douglas is 65 and ready to retire, London Life will give him three choices:

(a) He can keep his $20,000 policy and continue to build savings. (Remember, his premiums stop at age 65, so he won't pay a penny more.)

(b) He can withdraw his savings as a lump sum.

(c) He can use his savings to provide an annuity for life or for a set number of years.

Douglas realized that a crippling accident or long illness could cut off his income just as quickly as death. So for less than the cost of a steak dinner once a month, he added the disability income feature to his policy.

Should he be unable to work for more than six months, London Life will send him a cheque for $200 on the first of each month.

His wife Brenda, and son David, are well protected. On top of the profit-sharing policy, he added $40,000 of London Life convertible term (for a modest additional premium).

Protection for Brenda and young David is an important part of Douglas' London Life plan.

Later, as his income climbs, he plans to change his temporary insurance to permanent profit-sharing insurance. His policy allows him to do this without a medical.

In a financial emergency, he can borrow on the cash values of his Jubilee policy. Quickly and quietly. The interest rate is 6%—compare able with banks' regular lending rates and much lower than personal loan companies'.

Here are four more reasons why a London Life Jubilee policy is a good investment:

(1) A Jubilee policy is just as safe as high-grade bonds and much safer than most common stocks. It is particularly attractive because while it gains money it also protects your family.

(2) London Life dividends are high partly because the Company invests wisely and profitably in Canada. (In 1963, the Company earned 5.54% on its investments—after investment expenses.)

(3) The London Life Insurance Company operates only in Canada. One reason prominent for low is because Canadians on the average are long lived.

(4) Flexibility is an important point. With the help of a London Life representative, you can build a program that fits your needs.

For example, if you are under 40, you can reserve the right to buy more insurance later on —without a medical. You can pay premiums on a monthly budget plan. You can add on extra protection while your children are growing.

No two men have the same insurance needs; what is right for Douglas Young may not be right for you. That is why London Life representatives are schooled to custom-tailor insurance to fit the individual.

A. W. Wishart

was not present at the press conference, but said in an interview later that the appointment did not come to him as a complete surprise.

He said that although no one had spoken to him about the appointment before he was called to the premier's office Wednesday afternoon, he had thought he "might be considered for the job."

"I feel very humble, very proud . . ." said Mr. Wishart. "I believe I can do a good job."

Mr. Wishart was in the Bay Street board room of the Ontario Water Resources Commission Wednesday when Mr. Roberts telephoned asking him to come to his Queen's Park office.

"The premier simply asked me if I would accept the job of attorney-general," said Mr. Wishart.

DOESN'T HESITATE

He said the premier's action wasn't a surprise as it might have seemed and he had no hesitation accepting the job.

"We worked together on the water commission (a post from which the premier once served) and in other ways. He knew my work and capabilities."

The new attorney - general refused to say whether he would have introduced the Hill - Roberts Bill 99 in the form that led to his predecessor's resignation.

"I've said nothing to say what I would have done in another man's position . . . I am not sitting here in judgment on a colleague."

Mr. Wishart, who has spoken in the house only briefly, said: "I speak only when I have something worthwhile to say"— will speak on legislation in the riding and return Tuesday to work throughout the legislature's 26 weeks' recess preparing for the task of piloting the department's estimates through the house.

The legislature will be recessed at least until April 14. Mr. Robarts will attend the federal - provincial conference in Quebec next week.

The premier conceded that the Easter recess was being extended by five the new ministers for a month to become familiar with his tasks.

Mr. Robarts said Mr. Wishart was highly regarded by the legal profession, having served as city solicitor for Sault Ste. Marie for 10 years and as an alderman in 1946-47.

BORN IN N.B.

Mr. Wishart, one of six brothers, was born in Chipman, N.B., attended high school in Fredericton and later studied at the University of New Brunswick where he received an arts degree.

He then taught high school for three years in Hamilton before attending Osgoode Hall in Toronto where he obtained a law degree. He was later appointed a Queen's Counsel.

Mr. Wishart practised law in Windsor for a year and for eight years in Blind River, Ont., where he was mayor in 1957.

He was married in 1936 and he and his wife, the former Eileen Liddiman, have five girls and a boy.

They moved in 1958 to Sault Ste. Marie, where he practised law.

In other legislature business before the recess, legislation providing for a two-cent increase in the gasoline tax received final approval.

The legislation, announced in the government's February budget, was opposed by both Liberals and NDP members who moved the bill be deferred for six months. The NDP motion was defeated 64-12.

The government has been collecting the tax since the day after the announcement—on a procedure according to Provincial Treasurer James Allan

Nine Convicted For Britain's Train Robbery

AYLESBURY, England (AP) A fury found nine men guilty today of charges of taking part in Britain's great train robbery — the theft of $7,000,000 from the Glasgow-London mail train last Aug. 8.

A 10th man was found guilty of conspiring to obstruct the course of justice.

The verdict came after three days of deliberation and a trial that lasted nine weeks.

Judge Edmund Davies said he would defer sentencing the convicted men until after the trial of eight other persons accused of complicity in the giant money snatch, the largest cash robbery in the annals of world crime.

These eight—including three women—were granted separate trials when the case was brought to court in January. Another defendant pleaded guilty and still another got a directed verdict of acquittal during the trial.

RECOVER SMALL PART

The police so far recovered only $350,000 of the £2,800,000 worth of loot stolen and still are looking for the gang's mastermind, who are believed to be in possession of the balance.

The big haul was made in a commandeered train on the London-bound mail train after it was stopped by a false red signal at a hamlet near Aylesbury.

Canadians

the question arose: Why didn't Canada send a force?

Meanwhile, things began to hum with the arrival of Lt.-Gen. F. S. Gyrod of India, force commander.

Gyani had a half-hour meeting arranged without notice, with Col. Edward Amy, Canadian contingent commander, and there were indications an announcement might come today about when the UN force will become operational. Gyani didn't visit the Canadian camp on Wednesday but is expected to do so soon.

NOT DECIDED

Cesar Ortiz, chief UN spokesman, said deployment of the force has not yet been decided. Lt.-Col. Andy Woodcock, commander of the 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment said Wednesday he still expects to take over patrol of the cease-fire line between Greek- and Turkish Cypriots in the heart of Nicosia and also to patrol Kyrenia, port city 16 miles north of the capital.

Ortiz said terms of reference for the force had not yet been decided either.

He declined comment on a statement by External Affairs Minister Paul Martin of Canada that the UN force will not have the power to disarm Cypriots.

Blast Tears Tanker Apart

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—An explosion tore apart the American tanker San Jacinto early today during tank cleaning operations, killing one crew member and setting the two sections helplessly adrift off the Virginia coast while a host of rescue vessels raced to her aid.

A U.S. Navy vessel, the Raleigh, said the entire 39 - man crew had been accounted for. Some of the crew were injured, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

Wrecked by the blast, the 523-foot vessel broke in two but hung together for several hours before the stern and bow sections parted.

An hour after the 11,257-deadship halted dead in the moderately rough seas, the American tanker Mobile Pegasus drew alongside and removed an undetermined number of her crew.

TORONTO (CP)—The Committee for the Advancement of Professional Nurses announced Wednesday it would ask Ontario Health Minister Dymond to order an inquiry into the complaints of rank-and-file nurses.

Officials of the newly-formed committee have charged that nurses are discriminated against by hospitals and by supervising nurses in hiring practices and employment conditions.

SANTA MARTA (AP)—Illiterate youths in this Spanish city of 7,000 will be fined and forbidden to attend movies, bars and dance halls until they earn certificates for reading and writing, the mayor has announced.

Police Association Assails Other Provisions of Bill

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Police Commissioner Eric Silk said Wednesday night the Police Act Amendment bill does not give arbitrary powers to him or his deputies.

Mr. Silk said in an interview that criticism levied by the Ontario Police Association against the government's controversial Bill 99 is a result of a misunderstanding.

In a letter to Premier Robarts, the association said the bill would give the provincial police commissioner and his deputies powers to launch an investigation within the department by subpoenaing witnesses and forcing them to testify.

Such powers are dangerous and capable of great and unwarranted abuse, the association said. Its letter was not directly connected with sections of the bill killed by the house Monday.

Parts of the bill referred to by the police association would allow the provincial police commissioner to take on the powers of a commissioner under the Public Inquiries Act as far as internal investigations of the OPP are concerned.

ISN'T DRASTIC

Mr. Silk said there is nothing drastic in the legislation. The amended act would be virtually the same as the one that has been in existence for many years.

His effect would be to remove the conduct of hearings from the jurisdiction of the police commission. He said he and his type of deputies have, for some time, had the authority to investigate complaints under oath.

All the proposed legislation does is permit the commissioner to designate one of five assistant commissioners to conduct an inquiry or hearing in place of the commissioner or his deputy.

In the past, assistant commissioners have been able to hear charges against police officers but have not been able to require that testimony be given under oath.

GIVES VIEW

The police association said it interpreted the amendments as giving the power vested in a commissioner under the act to the senior officers of police departments.

The association also protested an amendment to the act prohibit policemen from taking outside police work to supplement their income.

The letter said many policemen take off - hours jobs at sporting events, exhibitions and other functions with the approval of police departments.

An amendment to the act prohibiting this would cut off many policemen from income which is essential to their personal welfare, the association said.

PLAN JOINT STUDY

trative personnel in the next three or four years.

STUDIES MISSILE

No specific weapons plans are mentioned in the white paper but it says preparedness is being given to the possibility of building two or three nuclear submarines as anti - submarine weapons.

This, however, is a large issue and it cannot be decided immediately."

The 13,000-word policy statement contained no major surprises. Most of its main points had been predicted.

One item that was missing was any reference to the Honest John nuclear rocket battery serving with the army brigade in Europe. Last December the Commons defence committee recommended that the four-launcher battery be taken out of the brigade.

The statement reaffirmed, however, Canada's intention of maintaining the army brigade in NATO's European defence line. The two reserve brigades maintained in Canada and rotating to Europe will be retrained and re-equipped as highly mobile striking force capable of being sent anywhere in a hurry.

In addition, the fourth army brigade in Canada will be converted into an airborne force with equipment that can be moved quickly by air or even air-dropped.

In addition, one army battalion will be kept available for NATO's supreme allied commander in Europe. It would be on instant call, drawn from one of the Canada-based brigades.

To achieve this mobility, air transport facilities will be greatly increased.

The RCAF's eight CF-104 low-level bomber squadrons in Europe will be maintained but not expanded. As they are phased out during the next decade they will be replaced by "a high performance aircraft that will provide sufficient flexibility. But any task we might undertake from ground attack to air surveillance."

This new plane was not identified. but officials said three under study—the American F-4 and TFX designs and the British-developed P-1154.

LINK TO NORAD

The new plane would be linked closely to ground forces in training. It would have a sufficient flying range to allow quick deployment overseas from Canadian bases.

"Thus, ground and air forces would operate with each other in a manner which has not been possible in the past."

Also a part of the squadrons stationed in Canada would contribute to North American air defence, eliminating the need for purchasing a different aircraft for this purpose.

Mr. Hellyer said the integration plan might eventually result in the same uniform for all servicemen but this is still in the future." The integration process would start at the top and work down.

His white paper dismissed arguments that integration would lead to a loss of morale or "spirit de corps." There was no reason why morale should not remain high as a direct result of increased military effectiveness.

ALL WANT MORE

Similarly, there would be no lack of competition. "The sailors will press for more ships, the soldiers for more tanks and the airmen for more planes."

Prime Minister Pushes Ahead With Bill

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Sir John Douglas - Home decided ahead Wednesday with his bill to kill price-fixing, defying a House of Commons revolt threatening to bring down his Conservative government.

Brushing aside a humiliating near-defeat in Parliament Tuesday Douglas-Home ordered his ministers to press on with the legislation opposed by rebels within his own party and by opposition Labor MPs. He set a deposition test motion to exempt drugs and medicines was beaten in the vote—65 to 303.

In another test Wednesday on a further amendment to the bill the government won with a margin of 80 votes. This amendment was offered by six conservative MPs. It was defeated 244 to 164.

The battle is far from over. About 170 similar amendments still are down for discussion and possible voting.

May Ask House to Make Trial of Rule Revisions To Streamline Operations

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons may be asked to make a trial of rule revisions aimed at streamlining parliamentary operations.

A hint of the plan was contained in a report tabled in the Commons today by Speaker Alan Macnaughton who is chairman of the all - party procedures committee.

About 20 concrete rules changes have been proposed during the last two sessions, mostly by party leaders, and the report says there was a degree of unanimity among the parties on some of them.

"If it were the wish of the House, such proposals could be adopted on a trial basis for the balance of the current session," the report says.

One of three subcommittees —two under the chairmanship of opposition members — has been asked to give priority to study of these suggestions and recommend which should be fore the main committee consideration.

One proposal on which there was near-unanimity would eliminate debating which is usually repeated at later stages, on government legislation involving spending or taxing funds.

REQUIRED BY BNA ACT

The British North America Act requires the government to introduce a resolution seeking permission to present a spending bill. The proposed change would eliminate debates on the resolution since they usually are repeated when the bill itself comes before the house.

The daily oral question period may be another area on which the subcommittee will make recommendations for trials of new rules.

The period usually occupies the first hour or more of the Commons sitting each day and various proposals have been advanced for reducing its length.

Stanley Knowles, New Democratic Party whip, has been named chairman of the subcommittee studying these proposals. The Winnipeg North Centre MP is an acknowledged expert of parliamentary rules.

Former Commons Speaker Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) is chairman of a second subcommittee which will make a study of the organization of Parliament, including such subjects as the possibility of establishing a permanent speaker rather than having one elected by the Commons after each federal election.

Pauline Jewett (L—Northumberland), a freshman MP and former head of the department of political science at Carleton University, is chairman of the third subcommittee.

This group will study such problems as research facilities for MPs, training courses for MPs and the staff required for the Commons.

RULED OUT

This was ruled out of order.

Meanwhile Theogene Ricard (PC—St. Hyacinthe - Bagot) jumped to his feet to do battle with Mr. Howard over his remarks about Quebec members.

"We," said Mr. Ricard, "are sick and tired of being patted out as some sort of bird of which there is only one species."

". . . We are tired of being accused by members like the one who just took his seat of trying to have everything our own way. This is not what we want We want to place our views in front of this House, and nothing more. We recognize that others have a right to their opinion just as we have a right to ours."

A burst of applause greeted his remarks.

Gustave Blouin (L — Saguenay) later proposed that a commission, similar to the International Boundaries Commission, would be more suitable than a special committee to handle boundary questions. But he was still speaking at 6 p.m., and the matter was talked to the bottom of the order paper.

raphy, mapping procedures, demography, and industrial expansion.

GIVES SUPPORT

Firm support came from Louis - Joseph Pigeon (PC—Joliette-l'Assomption - Montcalm) who said Premier Lesage of Quebec "seems to want to bow to the demands" of Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland. He thought Quebec had lost some of the area "because the province had not sent qualified lawyers to London to plead the case."

Firm opposition came from C. W. Carter (L—Burin-Burgeo). As far as he was concerned the matter had been settled once and for all by the Privy Council. "Canada accepted that decision as binding and final" and he suggested it would do nothing for the judicial system to have Parliament question decisions through committees.

It was when Frank Howard (NDP — Skeena) rose to propose an amendment that the debate warmed up. He said it was becoming more obvious every day that "when annoyed with Quebec becomes involved in anything in the House or proposes anything in the House they want to have it both ways."

"They do not want anybody else to say anything in Quebec or what happens in Quebec but they want the federal government to intervene on their behalf whenever they have a problem with some other part of the nation.

"As far as I am concerned this desire to have it both ways should come to an end."

Punctured by interruptions by Mr. Gregoire, Mr. Howard offered an amendment that would give the proposed committee power to investigate border questions between Ontario and Quebec and around the Alaska Panhandle.

Laurendeau Says Problems Become Increasingly Urgent

By GUY RONDEAU

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — André Laurendeau, co - chairman of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism, says the problems under study are becoming increasingly urgent and inevitably generate tensions.

"Tensions are not necessarily bad in themselves," he said Wednesday. "They constitute a reaction to a novel situation."

Mr. Laurendeau spoke at a regional meeting held by the commission in this southwestern Ontario centre of industry and education.

The meeting was one of a series of sessions in which representatives of groups in regions across the country are invited to express their opinions. The series will continue until mid-June.

Some of the spokesmen from groups in this area contended that French is not necessary to life in London but others told the commission that speaking French could increase understanding of Quebec in other provinces and produce better inter-provincial relations.

TEACHING IS LACKING

There was general agreement that the school system in Ontario schools is inadequate.

There were few extreme opinions expressed during the meeting.

One spokesman for such a viewpoint recommended that English become the sole working language in Canada while other languages be regarded as "consultative."

Several study groups suggested that the federal government might launch a school program for all Canada, but the groups did not explain their position in any detail.

Another group said that, if Quebec is having difficulties, it is perhaps because that province has spent too much money in the past on politics and religion and not enough on education and the arts.

In an evening discussion open to the public, the commission was told by a French-speaking Montrealer that the bilingualism and biculturalism issue concerns neither Canada as a whole nor the provinces of Quebec, but is a problem for the "national state of Quebec."

MORE THAN PROVINCE

The young man said Quebec considers itself more than a province.

He went on to say the problem was of little importance to French - Canadian minority groups beyond Quebec because they either had become assimilated by the English-speaking population or had pretty well accepted the English - Canadian way of life.

Another participant, Stanley French of London, rejected the idea of two nations for Canada. He said a study of 19th century history shows that French-Canadian patriots fought for a Canadian nation, not a French-Canadian one.

Mr. French added that it was very strange that many French-Canadians now had forgotten their past.

A participant of Ukrainian origin suggested the commission should not forget to consider that element of the population whose background is not the English nor French.

White Man Badly Beaten By Negro Gang

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)— Violence in the form of a gang attack and fire bombs plagued the port city even as white and Negro leaders groped for a way out of the racial crisis.

HEARINGS END

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bobby Baker hearings apparently ended Wednesday with testimony by a government auditor that examination of the former Senate aide's 1959-62 federal income tax returns had turned up only "a few discrepancies." Since Baker resigned last Oct. 7 as secretary to the Senate's Democratic majority, the committee has been investigating whether his outside business dealings conflicted with his official duties or involved other improprieties.

Grade System Too Rigid Says Expert

TORONTO (CP) — Children should not be taught to read in kindergarten classes, J. R. McCarthy, superintendent of curriculum for the Ontario department of education, told the Ontario Federation of Home and School Associations Wednesday.

There will always be five-year-olds with a mental age of 6½ who can read, but the proportion will be small, he told 1,000 delegates attending the federation's annual convention.

He emphasized that the duty of a school is to allow for the maximum development of each child, intellectually, socially, physically, and morally, with recognition of his individual differences.

A gradual starting too young may continue through the grades but there will come a time when he is not promoted and he will get the idea he is a failure, Mr. McCarthy said.

He said a school at any level should never set out to provide experience in failure.

Deploring the grade system as being too rigid, Mr. McCarthy said that assessment of a child's rate of achievement must be measured against his ability and not against the rate of progress of the class of which he is a member.

This is one area in which parents really work against the best interests of their children, he said. Parents should seek out how the child rates against his own potential without regard for others in his class about whose mental ability and background they know nothing.

Glamorous Success She Charges Living Conditions For Canada's Indians 'Intolerable'

By JIM PEACOCK

NEW YORK (CP)—The question brought Kahn-Tineta Horn's sparkling brown eyes up from the yogurt-and-honey lunch she was having at a plush mid-Manhattan hotel.

She looked straight at the questioner and replied:

"For quite a number of years, you know, I've been an Indian."

She had been asked what prompted her to apply so much of her time and energies to efforts to bring improvement to the circumstances of the Canadian Indian.

Her answer seemed startling at first, but on examination it explained simply and succinctly the motivation behind this young woman's enthusiasm for the activities she pursues.

IMMENSE CONTRAST

"As an Indian, born and raised on a reservation, she knows of the life her race lives. As a beautiful woman educated in the schools of New York, Montreal and Paris and employed in professional modelling, television and writing, she has learned of the life of the non-Indian.

She found the contrast immense—the condition in which her people live intolerable. And she set out to do something about it.

While a student at Sir George Williams University in Montreal, Kahn-Tineta often wrote letters to the Indian Affairs branch in Ottawa to complain of the living conditions of the Indians of Canada. She received little more than an acknowledgement of receipt.

Articles she wrote on the Indian problems appeared in various publications in Canada.

"But nobody knew who I was then," she explained. "Many people thought that I was a middle-aged man with nothing else to do but write these article letters."

A COVER GIRL

These misconceptions were cleared up about 18 months ago when Kahn-Tineta appeared on the cover girl for Weekend Magazine. Since then, her fame has spread and so has her influence in her Indian affairs work.

The black-haired, five-foot-seven beauty was born 22 years ago on the Caughnawaga reservation just south of Montreal, a Mohawk Indian and second eldest of nine children. She lived on the reserve with her father and mother as a high-steel construction man, but returned to the reservation when she was 11 and her father died in a building-project accident.

"Our life was always a struggle to exist," she said of those years when she was 13. "I have been working."

Kahn-Tineta worked at many jobs as she went to high school for two years at Lachine, Que., then took interior decorating, commercial art and her bachelor of arts degree at Sir George Williams. She spent a term in Paris as an exchange student.

Throughout, she lived at home on the Caughnawaga reservation, catching the last bus home at 11 a.m. after work and rising at 6 a.m. to return to Montreal for classes.

ENORMOUS PROBLEMS

"It was a difficult thing," she said, "but when I became educated, I realized the problems of my people."

She can list enormous problems—from poverty and disease on the reservations where the present 220,000 population is expected to reach 1,500,000 by the end of the century, to discrimination by non-Indians.

These problems are brought home to her by visits to Indian settlements across the country in connection with her work as a director of the National Council of Indians of Canada. The council honored her last year by naming her the first Princess Canada of Canadian Indians.

Her work for her race is widespread.

She lectures Indian children on the importance of completing their education, tries to recruit teachers for Indian settlements and seeks grants to aid them in getting to university.

A NEW CONCEPTION

She writes articles and lectures across the country in efforts to change the non-Indian's conception of the Indian and the Indian's own conception of his circumstances. The Indians have never known anything better in many cases," she said, "and they must be made to realize what conditions they live in."

She also is working with the foundation of North American Indian culture to organize a professional festival company of 100 to 150 Indians from across the continent to demonstrate native North American culture to audiences around the world.

She is chairman of the committee organizing Indian participation in the world's fair in Montreal in 1967 — and she writes frequently to Indian affairs branch people in Ottawa, where she now visits often to meet with them.

They write three-page replies to her queries now and seldom reject requests for appointments with spokesmen Kahn-Tineta sends to them—perhaps because they know the appointments must be followed by interviews with news reporters.

"I've learned something about the power of publicity through my work as a model and in television and writing," she smiled.

Publicity brought Miss Horn

PROMOTES INDIAN CULTURE — Kahn-Tineta Horn, 22-year-old Mohawk Indian from a reserve near Montreal, earns her living as a model and actress but devotes much of her time to improving the lot of her people. Educated in Montreal, New York and Paris, she works with the National Indian Council of Canada, the Foundation on North American Indian Culture and as chairman of a committee organizing Indian participation in the 1967 world's fair.

to New York. She appeared here at a toy display that included Princess Kanata Indian dolls which she designed in her own likeness for a Toronto toy company.

She also designed the clothing for the doll, which will be made by the women of Caughnawaga, where Kahn-Tineta still resides when she can. She maintains an apartment-office in Montreal now, however.

"My people were disturbed when I left the reserve," she said. "My mother thought I should marry and raise children as other Mohawk girls do. But I am getting the support now and my mother is one of my biggest fans."

"We must do something" she added. "The people of Canada should be worried about the Indian problems. There will be a terribly drastic situation facing Canadian authorities if they do not do something now."

U.C.W. Meeting

SETHANY U.C.W.

The Easter meeting of Sethany U.C.W. was held recently in Sethany United Church with 19 in attendance. The pastor president, Mrs. Russell Hitt was in charge.

A note of thanks was read from Mrs. Duane Martin and Mrs. D. Fenwick. Mrs. V. Hamilton gave personal thanks for cards sent during her illness. The need for men's clothing for the overseas bale was announced. Calls and cards were taken by Mrs. G. Best.

The worship service was conducted by Mrs. Bert Martin with Mrs. H. Pound, Mrs. M. Treverton, Mrs. H. Rupert and Mrs. C. Eggleton joining in the devotional.

Table decorations of the cross and Bible, featured by Easter lilies, made an appropriate setting for the Easter theme. A Lenten reading, "The Most Question" was given by Mrs. H. Walker. The scripture reading was the text English Bible, was read by Mrs H. Pound. Mrs. Bert Martin read a selection.

The meeting was closed after which lunch was served.

STONE CHURCH

The U.C.W. ladies met at the manse for their March meeting with Mrs. J. Cooper as hostess. Mrs. E. Demorest, the president opened the meeting and welcomed three visitors, Mrs. Savage, Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. McColl. Mrs. Everett Phillips gave an interesting talk on the theme for the day "Easter".

The delegate from Stone U.C.W. to the 2nd annual meeting at Napanee, gave a report on the two days she had attended the Presbyterial, the panel discussion on the theme "Family Life" was interesting. Many families in the church as well as outside, are not stand ing up under the strain of worry and care, therefore the leaders of the church must be trained and ready to give Christian leadership to help keep families together. Christ must be made the center of the home, all members of every family showing true love and affection.

CANADA'S COUTURE FOR SPRING 1964

Again the Association of Canadian Couturiers has unveiled their spring collection. Against a background of spring flowers, Canada's own designers showed pretty feminine fashions designed to add individuality to the wardrobe of any woman who wants fashion with a flair.

Among those showing their creations were Marie-Antoinette, Raoul-Jean Fourre, (the dean of Canada's creative designers), Mario di Nardo and France Davies of Montreal. Ottawa was represented by Frances Stewart and Torotto by Rodolphe.

The figure is back according to the Association. There were no form fitting evening gowns with ruffle under the hemline, long evening coats with more than a hint of shape and sophisticated dinner suits. The most startling number was an evening or patio gown, which came apart to reveal a bathing suit with a spectacular plunging neckline. Daytime dresses with crisply pleated skirts, touches of white, unusual combinations of colors and fine fabrics both domestic and imported, were featured.

Yellow led the parade, sometimes paired with white, often going it alone. Lilac was present along with navy and lots of white. Beige is always the couturiers' classic and it was shown in coats and suits of linen and wool.

There was nothing "freakish" in the show. In fact, the only startling number was the above mentioned patio-evening dress. Somehow it looked far more wicked with the neckline plunging to the waistline when it was worn with its matching, long evening skirt. Once the model shed the skirt, it seemed to lose its wicked air!

Where it is considered that the members of the Canadian Association of Couturiers are a rail highly creative competitors for Canada's limited couture market, their association is a small miracle. It is truly amazing that this small band has held together through the years with little or no friction. This year's show is the fruit of imaginative co-operation and enlightened self-interest.

Rodolphe of Toronto, Frances Stewart of Ottawa, Marie-Jean Fourre and Marie-Antoinette of Montreal were outstanding. But it is difficult to award any individual laurels, as the standard of this spring's work was far superior to any collection that the association has presented since its inception. It is pleasure to offer congratulations to every member of the association and to the organizing committee who had the good sense to ask Ilona Monahan to co-ordinate, and produce this excellent collection.

"The Status Seekers" Discussed At Meeting of Study Guild

The Status Seekers by Vance Packard was reviewed at the Women's Study Guild this week by Mrs. R. Boulet and Mrs. A. E. Orr. This book is a report on social behaviour in the United States but the same behaviour patterns are quite apparent in Canada. The Status Seekers is the well worth reading and, in so doing we can see our friends, and if being honest, ourselves, in the various behaviour patterns. Mrs. Boulet pointed out that a classless society is wishful thinking. Research done by the author of the book and numerous sociologists has proven that America definitely does have a system of social stratification. Class is sometimes invisible and unacknowledged but it is still there.

FIVE CLASSES

Mr. Packard lists five major classes: the diploma elite and the semi-upper class (both university educated); the limited success (high school graduates); the working class (40% of the population) and the low class (minimum of schooling). There are of course variations and many do not fit into any of these. People are judged on nationality, background, religion, etc., and on what is visible i.e. home, neighborhood, occupation, children, cars, more than on the individual worth.

Mrs. Boulet read several serious as well as humorous quotations from the book on how status appeal affects home buying, occupation, business, where we shop and what we buy, our friends, clubs and lodges and even our churches and politics. Rearing children varies greatly with the class into which they are born, as differences are noted in discipline, training, education and opportunities. States even invades our so called democratic educational system and is evident in an individual's selection of courses and in fraternities and sororities.

Mrs. Orr dealt with the price of status striving and spoke of the "conspicuous consumption" of lower classes who suddenly attain success and try to crash the social scene such as actresses and professional sportsmen. She spoke of the strains and tensions of suburban living, of white-collar worker versus blue and problems of achieving recognition and avoiding the strain of status climbing. The effects of backgrounds, occupations, and the special status problems of discrimination faced by the Jews were all touched upon. Many people accept status blindly, some naturally are followers, but a definite effort which encourages status distinction makes for unrest.

FALSE IMPRESSIONS

Mr. Packard suggests more understanding through seeking the talents of the individual and appreciation acquired with people of various races rather than making symbols of bigness and success. Last but not least advertising exploits the "upgrading urge and appeals to "success through material things". We see increasing social turmoil caused by false impressions of life.

As an introduction to the program Mrs. Wells led us in her devotional theme "No man can serve two masters. Ye cannot serve God and mammon". She posed the question, Are our moral achievements keeping pace with the technological achievements of today? Our horizons are limited by what we can see around us. Many things are taking precedence over spiritual things. We bow down and worship earthly material things instead of using them for our benefit. We have conquest space but lost spaciousness.

Mrs. Witham read a letter from the Guild's foster child in Tunis. Miss J. Tickell opened her home for the March meeting and the hostesses were Mrs. G. Meades and Mrs. Wells.

Church Groups

ST. THOMAS W.A.

MINTO — St. Thomas W.A. held their Easter meeting at the home of Mrs. Albert Cook on Tuesday afternoon with a splendid attendance of members and visitors.

The president, Mrs. Preston, opened the meeting. Miss Edna Tanner read the Scripture lesson from the Holy Week. Minutes of last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Preston welcomed all and expressed thanks to Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Lorne Cook for hospitality.

The diocesan annual was announced, bale and business were discussed, and the board meeting read. Next meeting is to be held at Mrs. Preston's home in two weeks, with a dinner and quilting.

The program followed with each member contributing a reading pertaining to Easter. Little Miss Cathy Cook gathered the offering.

Mrs. Lorne Cook assisted by Mrs. George Bunnalls served refreshments.

ST. JOHN'S FRIENDSHIP GROUP

POINT ANNE — The regular monthly meeting of St. John's Friendship Group was held March 17 at the home of Mrs. Nina Fournier with 14 members and one guest present.

The treasurer, Mrs. Clara Green gave her report. A donation was made to the church renovation fund. A number of the members turned in their "Talent Money". Next meeting all contributions to this fund should be turned in. Mrs. Ruth Henderson reported that cards had been sent to the sick members of the congregation. The Group decided to hold a spring auction sale in April in the Parish Hall.

The Rev. Smith asked for volunteers to assist the Altar Guild president, Mrs. Nellie Breach. Volunteering were Mrs. Ruth Henderson, Mrs. Doris Mollins, Mrs. Evelyn Lott.

Mr. Smith closed the meeting and Mrs. Fournier served refreshments.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

THE PERFECT GUEST ROOM

Read any good catalogues lately?

In the country, where I live, catalogues are high on the list of preferred reading and, while they may not help put you to sleep at night, they do provoke a lot of daydreaming.

One of my favorites made its quarterly appearance the other day, and since I'm in the midst of carving a guest room out of a storage room, it gave me much food for thought. If only my budget were as free as my imagination, what luxury my guests could indulge in while they visit.

One item I'd love to have in the guest room — or even in the utility room — is a push-button shoe polisher. It has polishers for black and brown shoes and a guest wouldn't even have to bend down to get it to work. All you have to do is give the foot switch a tap with your toe and every part of the shoe shines as you get?

Then there's a gadget that is set next to the bed and produces something which, according to the caption, "is a scientific blend of cylindric tones that screens out disturbing noises, presumably the early-rising lawn mower and noisy youngsters who also get up early. If ever I should get any of these in the guest room, you may be sure I'll be tempted to move in with it.

NOTEWORTHY ITEM

Since nothing is too good for a guest, another noteworthy item is a remote control button that lets the user turn off the lamp, TV, radio, etc., from the safety of his bed. No tripping over chairs or stubbing toes for our spoiled visitors.

I also was intrigued by some plastic disposable boots which, after being worn, could serve different sizes. Just imagine the freedom this would give an absent-minded guest who would tear off a pair of boots, before going for a stroll on the damp grass without having to root through the mud room for a pair of rubbers.

Still another dream item is a one - piece rack that hangs from the ceiling enable a fit we aren't too comfortable, they may never want to leave on their own which we usually indicate is the most courteous train they can take home on a Sunday.

TB FIGURES

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP)— Two cases of active tuberculosis and 900 chest, abnormalities were found here during a chest x-ray clinic in the last three months of 1963, reports Joe McKenzie, general secretary of the Alberta Tuberculosis Association.

Ann Landers

Heavy Necking Upsets Mother of 14-Year-Old

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Last night our 14-year-old daughter came home from her first date. We allowed her to go to a movie with a neighborhood boy.

When she walked into the house she tried to avoid coming into the living room where her father and I were watching TV. She shouted "Hello," and proceeded directly to her room.

When I caught up with her it was apparent that she had been doing some heavy necking. Her make-up was all over her nose, her dress was wrinkled and a seam was ripped. I was shocked. I never dreamed a 14-year-old girl would conduct herself in such a manner.

I tried to tell her she would ruin her reputation if she continued to behave this way. She denied she had done anything wrong. Please tell me what to do before this girl gets into serious trouble. — SICK AT HEART MOTHER.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MOTHER — You'd better get busy and start your long over-due homework.

Your daughter should be made to understand the serious hazards of heavy necking. The loss of reputation is the least of it. Tell her about pregnancy, VD and the loss of self-respect. And get busy, mother, you are several years late.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My grandfather used to say, "If you want to see what your sweetheart will look like in 25 years take a good look at her mother."

The girl I go with has always been honest and trustworthy. But I can't stand her mother. She is a liar, a gossip and of low moral character. Twice she has called to "warn" my parents. Both times I let her have the money. She has never paid me back. (Her daughter knows nothing of this.)

Sometimes the daughter will take on a certain look that reminds me of her mother. I keep wondering if the character traits will pop out later — like after marriage. What do you say? — BILL.

DEAR BILL — Character traits are not inherited in the same way a person inherits curly hair or a turned up nose. Environment, however, does play an important role in the shaping of our basic values. There are so many exceptions that I hesitate to turn thumbs down on this particular gal for fear of doing her an injustice.

Feeling as you do, however, I suggest you look elsewhere for a wife. You'd constantly keep searching for her mother's traits and Lord help her if you found one — real or imagined.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We are two red-blooded American boys who attend Michigan State. We would appreciate an answer to this question. — INQUISITIVE.

Recently you printed an interesting letter. A college guy spelled out the five things he and his buddies disliked most about girls:

1. Falsies
2. Girdles
3. False eyelashes
4. Wigs
5. White lipstick.

What we want to know is how does a guy find out about these things without getting his face slapped? — INQUISITIVE BUT TIMID.

DEAR I. BUT T. — Since your letter came from East Lansing and not from the New School For The Blind I would say the answers to at least three out of five questions should be quite obvious to you. As for the other two — well, they're darned good questions.

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen Ages and Sex" ($2.95) is now available at your book store.

Colorful Easter Dessert

by Mary Moore

Nearly two years ago I promised to give you variations of a popular Cheesecake Pie I made in June 1958 the two colorful versions were topped with fresh strawberries and with canned Mandarin oranges. Copies were requested time and time again by readers, relatives and friends.

Only now have I gotten around to making it again but this time using pineapple and green cherries as a topping for a truly Easter dessert.

You and your family and guests will enjoy its bright appearance and luscious flavor.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Polish Cabbage Rolls with Tomato Sauce; Fluffy Mashed or Riced Potatoes; Sliced Cucumbers in Sour Cream; Apfel Strudel; Tea.

FRIDAY

(Good)

Eggs Divan (see Monday); (If Baked Eggs — see Monday — are not served for breakfast); Julienne Carrots; Cauliflower; Strawberry (fresh frozen) Shortcake; Coffee.

EASTER PINEAPPLE CHEESECAKE PIE:

2 cups finely rolled graham wafer crumbs (half of one 13½-oz. box), 5 tablespoons melted butter, 11 oz. white cream cheese (room temperature. Buy one ½-lb. package and one 3-oz. package), 2 eggs, ½ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla or rum flavoring (or ½ tablespoon rum), 1½ cups dairy sour cream, 1/3 cup sugar.

Mix together the graham wafer crumbs and melted butter and pack firmly and neatly into a 9" glass pie plate, bringing crumbs well up the sides and pressing edge with fingertips to make it smooth. Beat white cream cheese (preferably in electric mixer) until smooth, then add whole eggs and beat. Gradually add sugar and flavoring until all is smoothly blended. Pour into prepared shell and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes. Meanwhile blend the 1½ cups sour cream with the 1/3 cup sugar. When pie is cooked spread this over filling. Turn off oven heat and return pie to oven for 4 minutes. Cool briefly. Then chill in refrigerator. Top with

Pineapple Topping: Drain one 15-oz. can juicy-quality pineapple slices. Dry them. Reserve juice. When Cheesecake Pie is chilled, place one ring in exact centre. Cut remaining rings in half to make crescents. Arrange these in a circle around edge of pie something like curved spokes of a wheel. In each small curve tuck a whole or half drained green maraschino cherry. Pour over Transparent Yellow Glaze: In top part of double boiler cook together until sugar dissolves, ¾ cup canned pineapple juice and ½ cup sugar. Stir in paste made of 1 2/3 tablespoons arrowroot flour (or cornstarch) and 2 tablespoons cold water and cook, stirring, over boiling water until thickened and clear. If desired, add enough yellow food colouring to make it bright yellow. Cool a little, pour all over pineapple and cherries on top of pie and chill. Beautiful.

Red Cross Society Hears Many Reports

At the regular meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Red Cross Society, Mr. N. Thompson, the president, read a letter from the United Appeal which outlined the situation of the Appeal in Belleville at the present time. It was the feeling of the members present that the Belleville Branch would remain a member of the appeal.

In making her report for the Homemakers' Services Mrs. Buchanan stated that 50 cases had received aid from this service and that 113 children had been cared for. The supervisor had made 100 calls during the month. She also reported that one family with two sick children had received emergency aid in the form of food.

Miss Tickell reported for the Loan Cupboard service and stated that most of the equipment was in use at the present time.

BLOOD DONOR CLINIC

Mr. A. Lewis said that a successful blood donor clinic had been held on February 27th at which time 300 bottles of blood had been collected. The next clinic will be held on April 9th.

From Mrs. H. McCabe's report as chairman of the Disaster Relief it was learned that two families had received assistance due to recent fires.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Division of the Red Cross will be held in Windsor on April 16th and 17th at which convention the Belleville Branch will be represented.

Successful Living

Religious Upbringing Will Withstand Threats

DEAR DORIS — For the past two years our son has associated with another boy about his age (eight) who is also in his classroom and lives about a block away from us.

Not too long ago our son refused to say his prayers at night, saying there was no God. I was quite upset over the incident and asked some one whom he had got the idea. Then he told me his friends family did not believe in God and had told him that only fools believed in such stupidity. Since then I have heard from their neighbors that this family are atheists and despise anything concerning religion.

DORIS CLARK

Now my husband says our son is not to play with this other boy again and that's that! But is that the best way to cope with this?

My husband and I are both interested in what your opinion is. — CONCERNED.

DEAR CONCERNED — Will your anchor hold? The solid assurance of your own beliefs can keep your boy's world right side up. He's trying you out when he refuses to say his prayers.

Sooner or later he'll learn that there are believers and unbelievers, even in a Christian country like Canada. He'll relax in your faith; especially if you keep alive spiritually talk with him regularly about the deep things of life, and live it out.

DEAR DORIS — For the past two weeks I have written fan mail to a certain hockey player. I've flipped over him like a seal for hair and woodpan what I should do. I am 18 years old and I have been out with many boys, but no boy as yet has meant so much to me as this stranger does.

If I should ever meet him I would die a thousand deaths. I bet all my standards in boys by him.

How do I discard him from my memory when he leaves, because I enter college next year and must have complete concentration on my future? — QUESTION MARK.

DEAR QUESTION MARK — Your dreamboat is just that — a mirage! At college, LIFE — in capitals — will be happening to you; leaving no room at all to keep a flesh (even a flying flesh) on ice!

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL TO NEW CANADIAN GIRL — Being a Canadian does not mean hiding your past, but you can take pride in your new citizenship as well. About the cut-ups, this is par for the course, for teen-agers. And you better stop making eyes at a boy of 12; he's more like a kid brother!

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL TO COIN COLLECTOR — You will have to write again, this time identifying yourself with name and address on a stamped envelope. I will then send you a private reply.

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL TO LONELY AND W.F.A.A. — What do you mean when you say "pretty wild"? Have the boys and girls now identified you as being "square"? Good-natured ridicule and some friendly belief in other people might help. Try talking it over with your mother.

DEAR DORIS — Quite a while ago my mother brought my attention to a letter you had answered for a girl who had the same problem as I have: being flat. She told me to write you for exercises that you were sending her. I was so embarrassed that I said I wouldn't dare.

All of my friends are well developed and are not just phoney. I have no faith in exercises, for I feel that at 18 you should have something and if you don't exercises will never help now. I hope you can help me. — CONFIDENTIAL.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL — Talk about a mixed up kid! It'll take exercises and faith in them — faith enough to work hard — to make a showing. And it'll take another letter from you, with envelope and name and address (not to mention a stamp) before I'll know where to send them!

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL TO UPSET — Please write again, this time identifying yourself with proper name and address.

DEAR DORIS — We invited summer acquaintances to our home for supper. Upon arriving they gave my husband, myself and our four children gifts costing up to $1.50 each. It was like Christmas all over again.

They have invited us back to their home which is quite a distance. We'll be lucky to afford gas, let alone gifts. I thought maybe we could get a pot of mums for the hostess.

Please advise me how far etiquette should go. — ETIQUETTE OR NOT.

DEAR ETIQUETTE — Say it with mums! A hostess gift like this can be enjoyed by the whole family.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I guess there are thousands of problems in Canada like ours. My sons work out summer time, spend all their money and come home to eat winter time when there is no work for them. I, as a father, mentioned to them that they should pay at least half of what they paid for board last summer when working out.

I think this would make responsible persons of them and honest citizens in future. My wife says I am cruel; who is right? Am I or she? — DISGUSTED.

DEAR DISGUSTED — Not cruel; kind. If your boys grow into disgruntled adults who believe the world owes them a living, you can thank their soft winters. Do they have to blow every cent they earn?

The amount they should pay ought to be related to what they can reasonably put by. The board they have no money for ought to be taken out in good works, cheerfully done.

DEAR DORIS — Could you tell me the effects of sunflower seeds on a teen-ager? This boy eats them in large quantities every day. — ANXIOUS.

• • •

DEAR ANXIOUS — Content is largely carbohydrate, oil and cellulose. Nothing harmful to a boy who is using up lots of energy every day. In Europe they are used ground up to make bread and cake. They are also roasted and used like coffee.

• • •

(Teen-agers — If you are shy or tongue-tied in company, write for Doris' "Tips on Talking" and "Don't Be Shy"; enclosing ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

U.C.W. Meeting

SCOTT'S U.C.W.

6TH SIDNEY — The ladies of Scott's U.C.W. met at the Manse on the 4th of Sidney with Mrs. J. Cooper as hostess, for their March meeting, with 11 present.

The president, Mrs. Maurice Dafoe, called the meeting to order and Mrs. Cameron Sine read the Scripture lesson pertaining to Pilate's trial of Jesus.

During the business period a sum of $2 was donated to the Stirling Festival of Sacred Praise; Mrs. Cooper announced the Retreat at Five Oaks on May 26 and 27; members were reminded of the invitation to meet with the Aiken's U.C.W. on the afternoon of March 25 at the home of Mrs. Ken Jones for their Easter meeting.

Several members had attended the U.C.W. Presbyterial in Napanee. Mrs. C. Sine reported on the panel discussion on Wednesday evening; Mrs. Edison Sine reported that the Bible study was "To what action God is calling us today?" The highlight of the afternoon was a discussion on the new curriculum. The book "God and His Purpose" may be used as a study book or an aid in Bible study.

Mrs. M. Dafoe stressed that meeting the allocation was members' first obligation as Women of the Church.

Mrs. George Pollard was in charge of the Bible study. The early church greeting "He is Risen" gave meaning to daily living; concern to the suffering and hope to the oppressed.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

The relations we have with others, and the ability we have to live with ourselves are largely determined by our emotional reactions. That is why the most brilliant minds are not always the happiest people. Intellectual training alone, without emotional control may produce good sciences, but never good humanity.

Angry young men may write fine plays and novels. Pity, however, the people who have to live with them.

Anger, of course, is one of the most fiendish of the human emotions. "Who is the hero" asked the ancient Rabbis. And they answered: He who controls his anger." One who is habitually angry will soon discover that people will fly away from him. If they cannot abide his personal wrath, even those who love him will be alienated.

MAKE ENEMIES

Envy, and jealousy are two other monstrous devils that drive a man out of his will. These not only leave us without friends but make us enemies of ourselves. They impair our health, dissipate vital energies and, in the aftermath, often deposit heavy loads of personal remorse and onerous burdens of guilt. These, in turn, cause us to thrash about even more, and in our irrational dash for a way out of the maze, we often become still more envious, still more jealous.

Yet, despite these effects of our emotional outbursts are negative and deforming, their constructive energy potential, perhaps, the best guarantee that our intelligence will, at some point, move in on emotions, and begin to exercise the necessary emotional control. For much of these emotional weaknesses has its antidote in the positive strengths available to us, when we exercise our rationality.

Unfortunately, however, most educated people miss the real purpose of education and culture. When they study the "humanities", too often it is for the abstract humanity of others which they learn. When they study such science and the scientific method, they master the techniques for the rational analysis of mind and matter — in general and in the abstract.

While these are basic to and necessary in the educational process when educated folk keep piling on more and more "ideas-in-general", and do not use them as instruments for dealing with their own lives — in specific and concrete ways — they miss out on a great opportunity. For the best way to handle our own rampant emotions is to subject them to regular, critical, scheduled analysis. For this, we need the sophistication which education provides. Our educated minds must make us aware of our points of weakness, points made tender and sore by our super-possessiveness of those aspects of our lives to which we have become overly-attached. Our scientific knowledge and understanding of the human nature formations "in general" can be a mighty weapon in our hands, not only if we learn the wisdom to apply them to our own particulars.

EDUCATED MIND

The emotional weaknesses we should like to control can be overcome if we are willing to apply rationality to irrationality, objectivity to subjectivity, detachment to over-attachment. Then we will find that each of these negative emotions can be controlled and put into proper place by positive intelligence. We will discover that anger can be overcome by peacefulness, patience and sympathy; that envy and jealousy can be overwhelmed by an awareness of the creative possibilities of our own love.

The educated mind, if it learns the true purpose of education, must seek to fashion "the informed heart."

Pr. Ed.-Belleville Ladies' Club Holds Easter Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Prince Edward-Belleville Ladies Club was held at the Recreation Centre with 32 members and three visitors present.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Baird.

The corresponding secretary reported that a sympathy card had been sent to Mrs. McCoy. Thank you notes were read from Mrs. Sharpe, Mrs. Burd and Mr. Herbert who have been ill, also a letter from the Lent family for flowers sent in memory of their mother, Mrs. Frank Lent. Mrs. Lent was president of the club for five years and was active in the club while living in Belleville. Later years she had lived in Port Hope. There was a two-minute silence observed in memory of Mrs. Lent.

Three members paid dues, and Mrs. Jose, Mrs. Morden and Mrs. McKinnon joined at this time.

The program was in charge of the convener, Mrs. White and the devotional period in keeping with Easter was conducted by Mrs. Farnsworth. Mrs. White gave a reading; Mrs. Townsend sang two Easter solos, and poems were read by Mrs. Garbutt and Mrs. Kingston.

Mrs. C. Holmes as guest speaker spoke on the theme "What Does Easter Mean to You."

Mrs. White expressed thanks to all who had helped with the program.

HOUSE HOME IMPROVEMENT GARDEN

Basement Columns Carry Large Part of House Load

Temporary supports are sometimes used to hold up the beam until permanent posts are installed. They must be well braced to prevent bowing or the beam will sag. As work on the house proceeds, they should be reinforced. In any event, permanent posts should be in place well before any plastering is done.

Permanent posts are usually made of steel or wood. They can also be built of brick, poured concrete or concrete blocks although this is not common practice because of the work involved.

Steel posts should be new material. Old boiler tubes should never be used, even if they are not badly corroded. The best safeguard is to deal only with reliable firms. Basement columns carry a large part of the weight of the house, plus whatever additional weight may be added when it is occupied. Only sound material is good enough for this purpose.

Wooden posts are commonly used as basement columns. They are serviceable and should last as long as the house itself if properly installed and protected.

A wooden basement column should never be placed directly on a concrete floor, no matter how dry the floor may appear to be and no matter how large the footing. Wood fibres absorb moisture and damp wood deteriorates rapidly, in fact, moisture in a building is wood's worst enemy.

For protection, wooden posts should be raised about three inches above the basement floor.

Sometimes laminated posts are used. These are made up of planks bolted or glued together. Their size depends on the width of the beam supported by the post. Each plank should extend the full length of the column, and if bolted should be held together with half inch bolts spaced not more than 18 inches apart.

Minimum requirements for basement columns in houses financed under the National Housing Act are explained in the book "Housing Standards" which may be obtained without charge from CMHC offices.

BEAM MAIN STRUCTURAL MEMBER

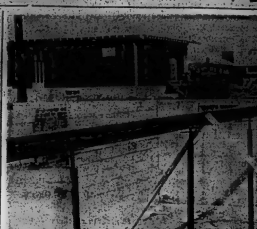
The beam, or girder, as it is sometimes called, is the largest and heaviest single member of the house's entire structure; in a sense it is the backbone of the house. Beams are usually of solid wood, laminated wood or steel. Reinforced concrete beams are also used but they are not common in house building.

When solid wood beams are used, high tensile strength wood is preferred. Other types of wood can also be employed but larger sizes are required for a given span. For NHA-financed houses the maximum beam spans allowed between supporting posts for the various species of Canadian woods are set out in "Housing Standards".

The most commonly used type of beam is the laminated wood beam, chiefly because it can be built with lumber in readily available dimensions. One of the advantages of lamination is that a beam of practically any length can be assembled by nailing together a number of planks.

A correctly assembled laminated beam can be as strong, or even stronger, than a solid wood beam of the same dimensions. However, if it is insufficiently nailed, or if the joints are not properly spaced the strength of the beam may be greatly impaired. Laminated beams can also be built in sections, in this case the ends of each section must be adequately supported. To provide sufficient bearing surface the supporting post should be as wide as the beam, or a heavy steel plate may be placed between the post and the beam to make up the required width.

When a wood beam rests on a foundation wall the bearing surface must be not less than six inches deep. A beam pocket should be provided around the beam to allow air to circulate on all sides. By keeping the end of the beam dry it will withstand decay much longer. An alternative method is to treat the beam ends with a suitable preservative.



Joints in the planks that make up the beam should be properly staggered. Above all, joints in the wood, or plank, should never be placed next to a joint in the layer immediately adjoining. In nailing planks together the nails should be staggered to avoid splitting.

Steel beams are referred to in the trade as "I" beams, because the end or cross section of the beam is shaped like the letter "I". Builders usually follow a simple engineering formula to determine the required size. This is based on the weight to be carried and the span between supporting columns.

Bearing partitions are sometimes substituted for basement posts and beams. There is little difference in cost and be a ring partitions may prove useful if the basement is to be divided into separate rooms or sections.

A raised footing running the full length of the partition must be provided to keep the structural lumber above the floor level. The partition is built on a wooden sill anchored to the footing with bolts.

In a single-storey house the basement bearing partition can be made of 2x4 lumber with cladding or covering on both sides. If the house is to have more than one storey, 2x6 lumber should be used to frame the bearing partitions. The basement windows should be located to give the greatest amount of daylight for each section on both sides of the partition.

BACKBONE OF HOUSE — Steel basement posts must be placed on raised footings, the same as wood posts. Steel beams require non-cumbustible supports, while wood beams may have either wood or steel supporting posts.

Cedar Shakes Make Attractive Homes

The handsplit shake goes back through the whole history of North America. The shake roof is as traditional as the pioneering spirit that built the West. It gives mellow beauty. It protects against all weather. It lasts.

During the past few years, there has been a shake "revival" — a rediscovering of its excellence for roofing. The trend began slowly, first with the more expensive homes which required quality material. Lately, and more significantly, it has spread to a wide range of homes whose owners want the best roof obtainable — and at homes, churches, schools, lodges and many other types of buildings feature cedar shake roofs that achieve a quality and pattern no other material is capable of giving.

The making of the handsplit cedar shake is simplicity itself. The shake-splitter takes a block (or "bolt") or red cedar, places his tapered-edge "froe" on the block with the cutting edge across the grain of the wood, and then taps the froe with his mallet to split off the shake. With each cut, he turns the bolt over, stripping a well-tapered shake, each individually fashioned with distinct grooves and ridges along the grain.

Although a great deal of effort has been expended on research, the industry has not been able to develop a mechanical method of producing handsplit shakes except by duplicating the action of the handsplitter in an hydraulically operated press. Here power is used to replace the blow of the mallet with a resulting saving of time.

The rugged heavily textured shake roof which is so popular with modern designers and architects is achieved by using the handsplit and resawn shake. By a careful selection of the cedar log the shake manufacturer can split double thickness blanks and with heavily striated faces. These blanks are then passed through a band saw diagonally to produce the taper shake with one smooth sawn face and one strongly marked face.

Finally, there is the straight-split shake, split by hand again but instead of turning the bolt over each time he makes a cut, the shake-splitter works from the same end of the bolt. This type is not tapered but is perfectly straight and when applied carefully produces an effect similar to the original taper-split.

Buying or Renting

To buy or to rent, that is the question. Is it more rewarding to live in a home of your own, or can the same satisfaction be achieved in a rented house or apartment? The answer cannot be the same for everyone. Some families may feel there is a decided advantage in renting over buying. No heavy down-payment — no financing charges — no major repair bills — no taxes — no tied-down feeling if your job requires you to move from time to time. Young married couples and senior citizens may also find it more convenient to live in rented quarters. But there is undoubtedly a great deal to say in favour of owning your own home, otherwise there would not be so many people doing it. Having your own home means pride of ownership, building up an estate and having certain municipal voting privileges. The final choice of owning or renting is one for the individual family, based on its particular needs and means.

Good Homes NHA Objective

The study of housing deals with one of man's basic needs — shelter. But housing is more than just shelter, more than just a roof over your head. It means providing decent living accommodation with all the additional things that modern ingenuity has added to the home and that we have come to expect: sanitary facilities, means of communication, automation in the kitchen, temperature control, entertainment facilities. Outside the house itself housing includes the building of streets, parks, playgrounds and parking areas. Providing decent accommodation for special groups such as university students, elderly people and low wage earners is also part of our country's housing program. Housing involves many and varied trades that provide work directly or indirectly to hundreds of thousands of wage earners. Building, selling and financing homes and furnishing homes with necessities keeps a large section of our Canadian work forces busy. Building good homes and well planned communities is the objective of the National Housing Act which is administered by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Ease Paint Plans With These Tips

When a can of paint is being stirred by an electric drill with paint mixing attachment, prevent spatter by making a temporary lid of heavy cardboard. Push mixing rod through hole punched in cardboard.

Spinning the handle of a paint brush between the hands after cleaning will remove excess solvent or thinner effectively.

IN THE HEART OF THE CITY

HOME OF THE WEEK

This pleasing design plus a convenient step-saving plan have combined to make this conservative Ranch home a leader in popularity. The floor plan including the entrance hall, living-dining area, three bedrooms and spacious kitchen with nearby stairs leading to basement, is all arranged for good traffic circulation. While the dining room has the appearance of being part of the living room, the built-in book case acts a separation between the two areas. Note the well sized bath with the built-in vanitory so appreciated by women, along with the abundance of closets and linen space. An extra washroom could be located in the basement handy to the back door.

Standard blueprints for this design No. 209 cost $15. for the first set and $5. for additional sets. They are available in Canada by return mail. (Ontario residents must remit 3% sales tax). Now available at this newspaper office (or from address below) is our new design book entitled "Suburban and Country Homes" designed for Canadians," price $1. tax free. This 1956 edition includes information on cost of building and financing in Canada, heating, insulation, constructional details, etc., plus many outstanding new designs — ranch, one and-half storey, split level, two storey colonial and duplex homes. Also included in this book are full details on how to order blueprints.

Distinctive Roof Applications

There are a number of interesting variations in the application of red cedar shingles which can be used simply and inexpensively to give the roof of a house a distinctive texture which cannot be duplicated in substitute materials.

One of the most popular of the different patterns is the Thatch or "staggered" roof, so called because the shingles are applied at varying distances above and below the course butts. The net result is a roof whose main feature is a rustic informality which avoids all semblance to factory-like repetition.

Another pattern often seen is the Dutch Weave, which is similar in appearance to the striking handsplit shake roof. The Dutch Weave is laid by over-laying the various courses of shingles with extra shingles set in occasionally. This achieves the effect of extra-deep shadow lines throughout the roof. No effort should be made at symmetry when the extra overlay shingles are applied. They should merely be added at random.

The Pyramid roof is a slight variation of the Dutch Weave. Here, extra shingles are doubled up in clumps or clusters, throughout the roof area. The first or lower extra shingle should be wider than the second one which is superimposed on it.

Another simple design to achieve is the Serrated roof, which is most appropriate for rambling ranch - style architecture. This design merely involves doubling the shingle courses, usually every fifth or sixth course. This accentuates the horizontal ground-hugging lines of the house. If every third course is doubled, the added advantage of a four-ply roof thickness is gained, as compared with the three-ply covering the standard shingle roof offers.

An attractive style which draws more than its share of attention is the Ocean Wave. At regular intervals through the roof, both laterally and vertically, combinations of four shingles are applied at right angles to the roof slope. The extra shingles are laid in pairs, one atop the other, and the pairs are butted against each other. The succeeding course forms a graceful roll or wave effect as it is laid over the laterally-applied extra shingles.

Many styles of roofs in cedar shingles are possible with a little imagination on the part of the applicator. With a minimum of extra material and labor, the most modest priced home can be given a luxurious, custom-built look.

Using Foil Helps in Keeping Paint Fresh

If you plan to use only part of a can of paint and store the remainder, keep can clean by wrapping aluminum foil around the outside and over the rim.

When job is done, foil can be removed and can sealed tight without difficulty or mess.

Steel Furniture Proves To Be Versatile Accessory

The wedding of iron and steel has created the perfect furniture for indoor and outdoor modern living.

This furniture — decorative, utilitarian and functional — is equally at home in sunshine or shade, according to a leading design director.

Baroque Spanish furniture, now enjoying great popularity, is superbly decorative with its light and airy feeling, according to Joseph Arkus of the Gallo Original Iron Works of New York. He pointed out that the Spanish were the originators of magnificent filigree work.

Unlike most wood, which can only be used indoors, iron and steel furniture can be moved outdoors at the first breath of a warm spring breeze.

Furniture of this type is a lifetime investment since it is indestructible. It is warp-proof, chip-proof and there's no worry about the glue drying out or veneer peeling as with wood. Modern iron and steel furniture is sandblasted and then flame-sprayed with molten zinc to give it a uniform coating that resists corrosion and rust.

Steel is used for extra strength without added weight, as in the steel mesh backs of chairs and steel tubing in the tables. The furniture has a delicate appearance, but it is constructed as strong as a bridge.

To exploit fully the beauty of iron and steel furniture, Arkus offered these decorating suggestions:

When used indoors or out, keep walls and fences either white or natural, such as brick or wood. Let the furniture and upholstery supply the color.

With iron and steel furniture color schemes can be changed at will. When the furniture is sandblasted by the manufacturer, it gives it an ideal surface for paint. Spray on a different coat of paint, change the fabric and your furniture is entirely different.

Table tops of glass, plastic or marble take the worry out of upholstery. Coordinate your mats or napkins to the upholstery. Try an impudent pink with "bullfighter" orange, luscious blue with summer green or a hot yellow with a flamboyant red.

To complete the setting, accessorize with iron and steel candelabras, bird cages, magazine racks and even lamps.

You can enjoy a lifetime of beauty, inexpensively, with sturdy, versatile iron and steel furniture.

Appliances Fit Remodeling Plan And Budget, Too

If you're remodeling your kitchen, investigate the many new work - saving appliances available. You'll find a wide choice of built-in or free - standing models to fit your budget and kitchen plan, and complement or accent the color and finish of your cabinetry.

Although the current trend is toward built-in appliances, you may prefer to have a built-in "look" with appliances that can be taken along if the family moves.

Color and decorative interest are increasingly important requirements in the modern kitchen. But before undertaking any change, remember that the large color areas of your kitchen should be versatile enough to outlive changes of mood, taste and occupant.

What Color Is Monday Now?

Monday, no longer "blue" thanks to modern home laundry equipment, is still the most popular wash day with over 50 percent of women. Blue, a quiet, calm, relaxing hue, is frequently chosen for the basic wall color of the laundry retreat. Another popular laundry area color is yellow, that golden tone that provides a feeling of sunshine on the dreariest day. And now, with an automatic dryer, the family laundry has 365 days of sunshine each year — dry, soft, fluffed, and sweet-smelling on the rainiest day.

Keep Kitchen Storage Handy to Work Areas

Storage is always a primary consideration in kitchen planning. Arrange cabinets and cupboards so that things are within easy reach of various work counter areas.

Small appliances can be out on counter tops if you use them often, but if the uncluttered look is preferred or more working area is needed, plan space for them in a cupboard close to the place where you use them most.

Construction Roundup

BUILDING PERMITS

Building is booming in Belleville and fourteen building permits have been issued by the building inspection office since last Wednesday. Six more were pending yesterday afternoon. M. R. Hollins Construction has taken out permits for three duplexes, two on Stanley Street and one on Sidney Street, and Charles Lambert Construction has permits for four new houses in West Park Village. The other permits pending are for houses to be built by Earl DeMille and the rest of the permits are for one-house-at-a-time builders and for alterations.

CARSEN - LAMBERT APARTMENTS

Bill Carsen and his men are working on a new 21-suite apartment building at 271 John Street. There was an old apartment building on the site with a long workhop on one side, perhaps 100 years old Carsen thinks. Anyway, someone lost a lot of tools around the site and they now are showing up in the excavation. Not many of them are usable.

Walls of the apartment are up to ground level now, and the floor plan of the building shows on the footings. Three floors and a basement are planned for the building, divided into one and two-room apartments.

Up at Sidney Court, the third six-plex is being insulated and the fourth will be ready for insulating about the end of the week. Both of these buildings will have electric heat, though the other two in the development are heated by gas and hot water. The electric heat is as specified by the purchaser. All four buildings have been sold, Carsen says.

CAR WASH

Most of the building is finished now, for the new car wash on Dundas at Pinnacle, and some of the machinery has been installed. Murray Reid Plumbing has the hot water system almost ready. Entry to the wash will be from Dundas St. down the west side of the building, a U-turn on the lot then back through the building to Dundas again. There's just one "production line" — the second door in the front leads only to a bay for use when cars are being waxed.

KEMP'S FOOD MARKET

Edward Cole of Belleville is building an extra bedroom into the top floor of Kemp's Food Market on Station St., under one of the alteration permits issued this week. He has it shingled now, so there's no danger of rain damage through the roof to the store below, and he expects it to be just about finished by the end of the week.

TRIPLEX

Percy Hodge of Trenton and a crew of three are pulling down an old stucco house at 290 Albert St. to make way for a triplex to be built by Big Mille Construction. The old house looks like it was an interesting place in its day, but Hodge says there were no unusual construction methods used.

BELL BUILDING

Hoarding is down and all forms are being stripped from the new office building going up for Bell Telephone at Pinnacle and Victoria. Window frames are being installed along the second floor, glass may be in place by the end of the week, and superintendent Charles Farmer says he may be finished about April. No floor is in yet at the bottom level, but that can be poured in a few days.

CAROUSEL MOTEL

Planners of the Carousel Motel, expected to be built beside the new Elliott Motors building up on North Front, have not yet contacted the city building department, according to officials at city hall. They have, however, contacted public works about drainage in the area. A crew of men is cutting brush and clearing land toward the rear of the area, though.

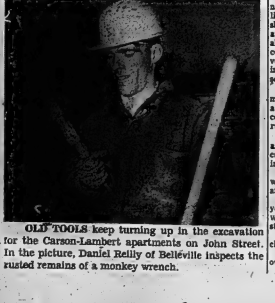
SMITH'S TRANSPORT BUILDING

Loading doors, 16 of them, have been installed at the new Smith Transport Terminal in the north end of town, and masons should have the east end of the building sealed in by the end of the week. Most of the warehouse is poured-in-place concrete, but the east wall is concrete block, so it can be knocked out easily for expansion. Doors are not yet operative and there is no floor yet in the warehouse. Work in the office is now concentrated mostly on the wiring. Partitions are framed, but dry-wall work is not done, and no floors are yet to be completed.

BLACK DIAMOND

On the Black Diamond shopping centre the south wall (facing highway 401) is finished except for trim. It shows as a brick wall with yellow and blue glazed insects and big windows. Interior work is going ahead fast and superintendent Gordon Hulman, (filling in for Lawrence Yuzwak), hopes to be through the job in about a month. The parking lot and other small jobs outside the building will take a little longer, Hulman says.

WATER MAIN



Only one crew is working so far for Lightfoot on the water main going down Sidney Street. Progress so far has been from W. Moira St. south about half way to Lewis Street. Digging was difficult at West Moira St., but has been getting better all the time. A drilling crew working ahead of the main group, though, has found rock almost right under the pavement across the Norm Lightfoot from Lewis St., right to the warehouse, he expects to have to blast all the way.

LAND FILL PROJECT

City Works Department has brought in a dragline shovel to the land fill project on the bay shore, and has hauled out more than a thousand yards of gravel so far. It turns out the shallow water area which will be built up is covering a good gravel deposit, so the city is hauling it out before the garbage and fill are dumped over it.

BAXTER CANNERY

The warehouse section of Baxter's Cannery in Bloomfield will be ready for the roof in about a week, according to Bill Tatham of The Tatham Co. Ltd., contractors. The roof won't be installed though, until mid-April, when the roof will go on almost the whole factory and warehouse complex at once. Some small sections with lower roofs will be covered earlier, but only because the roofs of these sections must be keyed into the walls of higher sections. Bradshaw, the masonry contractor, has about 15 men working on the site now under foreman Frank Edwards. Plans for the factory, including the boilerhouse, are complete now, and Tatham's engineers are working on the mechanical services. Because of the rush to get the factory into production, the engineers are working just a few weeks ahead of the builders.

OLD TOOLS keep turning up in the excavation for the Carson-Lambert apartments on John Street. In the picture, Daniel Reilly of Belleville inspects the rusted remains of a monkey wrench.

WITH HOARDINGS DOWN AND FORMS STRIPPED the new Bell Telephone office building at Victoria and Pinnacle is showing its face to the street. Glass may be in at the end of the week and the building will be finished during April.

Aromatic Red Cedar Mothproof Closets

Spring is the ideal time to moth-proof closets to help give more protection for valuable woolens and furs. Once these are taken out of their protective wraps they become fair game for pesky moths.

One of the most effective and economical ways to protect all clothing is to install aromatic red cedar lining in closets. This easy-to-handle material, available in pre-packaged bundles at local lumber dealers, can be installed right over closet walls. It also can be nailed over open framing in a new closet.

The natural fragrance of this distinctive southern wood, so pleasing to humans — is "death" to moths. It paralyzes them at an early stage.

Other qualities make cedar closets desirable as a home feature like attractiveness and easy upkeep. The beautiful rose and white coloring of the cedar grain presents a handsome appearance.

The wood requires very little care. In fact, only periodic finishing of red cedar closet lining is required. The only upkeep recommended is an occasional dusting.

Aromatic red cedar closet lining comes tongue-and-grooved at sides and ends so that pieces fit snugly. This not only facilitates application, but also makes for solid, unbroken surfaces.

Cedar closet lining can be applied to plastered or finished wallboard. Apply the lining, which comes in ¾" thick strips, horizontally on the walls. Begin at the bottom and work up.

Place the first piece with the groove edge on the floor and the groove edge against the adjacent wall in the corner. The tongue edges of this piece will be on the front and of the second piece. When you are finished with the first row, proceed on up the wall.

Only one nail at each stud is needed to secure cedar closet lining. The first row, however, should have nails near the top and bottom of each piece. Usually studs are located at the corner of an existing closet. To verify this, measure off 16 inches and drive in a nail to see if there is solid backing.

To realize the maximum moth-protection benefits from a closet lined with aromatic red cedar, follow these general rules:

Keep the closet as air - tight as possible. Close the door securely after storing or removing articles.

Wipe the cedar occasionally with a dry cloth to remove dust and dirt.

Sand the wood lightly every year or so to reopen any closed wood pores and renew the strength of the cedar fragrance.

Air dry or dry clean all articles before storing them.

An entire closet can be lined over a weekend for approximately $50. In addition to providing valuable moth-free storage space, a cedar-lined closet will increase the value of the house in today's competitive market.

Searching for a Home

Searching for a home is a universal occupation. Sooner or later we have to meet this problem of providing living accommodation for ourselves and our families, whether it be the leasing of an apartment, renting a house, or having a home built. We may be searching for a permanent place to live or just looking around for temporary quarters, still the same question must be answered — What part of town do we want to live in? Where will we find easy access to work, to schools, to church and shopping facilities? Is it more economical to rent a place than to invest in a home of our own at this stage? Eventually every adult is faced with one or more of these questions. For a contented home life much depends on how wisely we approach this problem of finding safe, sound, attractive and comfortable living accommodation at the right price and in a convenient location. Housing is also the concern of governments. Municipal, provincial and federal governments in Canada are actively engaged in providing better housing.

Crowded? Put Walls to Work

Need more space? Just put the walls to work! Here's how: Cover old walls with wood-grained hardboard panels, two feet wide, separated vertically by wood lockstrips which hold the panels securely. The strips serve also to support desks, dressing counters, cabinets, magazine and book racks, and many other objects.

Panels, lockstrips and wall accessories for a wall 12 feet long and eight feet high cost at retail approximately $70. Additional items needed are furring strips and nails.

Canadian Hardwood Flooring

A recent survey of project home builders, by the Canadian Lumbermen's Association, has again proved that home makers are emphatically in favor of hardwood flooring.

Many builders stated that their clients insist on attractive hardwood floors. When asked the reason, the most common reply was: that hardwood floors last a lifetime and complement any decorating scheme.

With reference to the charm and beauty of Canadian hardwood flooring, both men and women stated they preferred it because of its resilience and high shock absorbing qualities. Women considered this to be extremely important: foot comfort is indeed essential during a normal busy day. Mothers particularly preferred hardwood floors for their children because they're easy to clean.

Canadian yellow birch and hard sugar maple are popular for flooring, due to their long wearing qualities. Hardwood flooring is manufactured in strips or parquet blocks to strict specifications. These are accepted by the National Building Code and Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

NHA Benefits To Home-Owner

The National Housing Act, probably better known as the NHA, is, as its name implies, a law passed by the federal government to assist us in resolving our housing problems on a national scale. This act is administered by CMHC or Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation which has offices in all major Canadian cities. Many hundreds of thousands of homes have been built in Canada with the help of this legislation. More than a billion dollars have already been invested by government in helping Canadians obtain decent homes. The NHA insures loans made to home purchasers and where these loans are not available it provides for direct loans to qualified borrowers. But this represents only part of the NHA operations. Assisting our older citizens and families of lower-income — providing living accomodation for our university students — extending municipal sewage services — renewing those sections of our cities that have fallen into decay. All these things and many other benefits are made possible under the National Housing Act.

KILLED BY GAS

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Gas escaping at a broken connection in an ammonia line killed one man and overcame five others Tuesday at the Blue Ribbon Packing Company. Cordell McGee, 30, died before firemen wearing gas masks could carry him and a second worker from the loading area where the accident happened.

Commonwealth Prime Ministers May Hold Meet

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Plans are being made for a London conference of Commonwealth prime ministers in mid-July.

This became clear Wednesday although it is understood formal invitations have yet to be extended to the Commonwealth premiers.

Informal approaches have been made and Britain's Sir Alec Douglas-Home has spoken with leaders of the "old" and the "new" Commonwealth on the topic—Prime Ministers Lester B. Pearson of Canada and Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa of Nigeria.

Douglas-Home visited Canada last month and travelled last week to Nigeria where his talks with Sir Abubakar emphasized the Commonwealth's role in the modern world and the concept of "trade, not aid."

The British government earlier was reported lukewarm toward the idea of a meeting of the 18 premiers at this time but 10 Downing Street now takes the view that it is a good idea.

Sir Robert Menzies, the Australian prime minister, is known to favor a meeting.

IS INVITED

In New Delhi Wednesday, an Indian foreign office spokesman confirmed Prime Minister Nehru has been invited to attend. There was some doubt whether the ailing Nehru could make the trip or might instead send a deputy.

The project will inevitably be studied as a possible pointer to the timing of Britain's general election, expected either in June or October.

But officials insist the meeting has no bearing on the election. Harold Wilson, leader of the Labor party, has pressed for the conference and seizes every opportunity to emphasize that he is firmly a "Commonwealth man." The last such meeting was held in September, 1962, and a new one is considered overdue in some circles.

Douglas-Home, as a former Commonwealth secretary, engaged in Nigeria of Southern Rhodesia as briefly last and most difficult colonial problem in Africa. That troubled country, in which a minority of whites rules a majority of blacks, is certain to be a conference topic although the government now regards it as originally a bilateral problem between Britain and Southern Rhodesia itself.

Another is the guerrilla war being waged against Malaysia, the infant Commonwealth country, by Indonesia—a fight that has engaged British troops and worried Australia and New Zealand as well.

But the biggest subject is likely to be the changing Commonwealth itself. Douglas-Home has spoken of the opportunity offered by an easing of East-West tensions for new Commonwealth development and for a new co-operation between the industrialized countries of the north and the poorer countries of the south.

Parks and Recreation Committee Chairman Ald. Don Joss with Ald. Frank Murray, view Park Dale sign where new entranceway to park will be constructed.

Park Dale Community Park To Be Completely Renovated

Park Dale Community Park in the northwest section of the city is going to get a face-lifting — and a new entrance.

This week the city parks and recreation committee, headed by Alderman Donald Joss, announced its plans for park renovation in the city would be started this year at the Park Dale Park.

Planned are new stone gate, way pillars with a landscaped entranceway providing for increased parking facilities; revamping of the ball diamond, enlarging of the present outdoor natural ice skating rink, and the planting of trees to develop shade in different parts of the six-acre park area.

Park Dale Community Park is aptly named as it was originally developed as a community effort on the part of residents.

COMMUNITY EFFORT

The need of a community meeting place was soon realized and this too was realized mainly through community effort.

Now with the Park Dale area part of the city, the Parks and Recreation Committee has decided to inaugurate its parks improvement scheme at the Park Dale Park.

"For several years the Park Dale committee has shown a great sense of leadership and it is appropriate that our first major effort should be concentrated in this area," stated Alderman Joss.

The Park Dale we have an example of how people working together with civic authorities can achieve results in development and improvement of parks and recreation facilities."

During the past two months the city parks committee officials have been considering plans for city wide improvement of parks. Exhaustive studies of existing facilities have been made to determine park requirements.

FURTHER PROJECTS PLANNED

Alderman Joss said that within the next few weeks the parks board will be announcing further projects, some of which will be of rather ambitious nature.

But the board will continue to look for active citizen participation and support.

"It is our sincere hope that our efforts will result in providing needed park facilities for our citizens and for the children."

Emotional Conflicts Burst On B and B Commission At Meeting in Sudbury

SUDBURY (CP)—Averbet of emotional conflicts between Canadians with a wide variety of backgrounds burst on the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism at a public meeting attended by nearly 800 Wednesday.

Speakers clashed on issues of education, religion, language rights and cultural identification, but the mood gradually became more relaxed and cordial as the discussions wore.

A stirring plea for better treatment of Indians was made at the evening session by Stella Kinoshameg, an Ojibway teacher.

"Why is the Indian always pushed aside, always forgotten? Is he always going to be an alien in his own country?"

Indians wished to retain their ethnic identity and their cultural heritage, of which they were proud.

"I don't think we should be assimilated into one; this country is large enough for all of us," she said amid applause.

Coadjutor Co-Chairman Davidson Dunton said the commission is anxious to receive concrete proposals that would assist the preservation and development of all cultural groups.

The opposite view was argued on several occasions by James Simpson, a nickel miner and member official of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union (Ind).

"The dream I have is that we will all assimilate as Canadians," he said. "I resent the unwillingness of French - Canadians to assimilate. I believe this to be a unifying country."

Addressing his remarks to Quebec residents amid boos and scattered applause, he cried:

"For God's sake, separate from us. I'll help you, I'll fight for you so that the rest of the country can build a nation without religious and racial segregation.

"Get the French clergy off your back, get them out of the unions in Quebec . . . If there are any more concessions to Quebec, we will join the United States."

He complained that the royal commission is "stacked" in favor of French-Canadians because both Mr. Dunton and co-Chairman Andre Laurendeau had been raised in Quebec.

The federal government's program to hire more bilingual civil servants placed unilingual English-Canadians at a disadvantage. He charged that Trans-Canada Air Lines turned down his bilingual daughter when she applied for a job as a hostess because her mother tongue was not French.

French-Canadians, who number about 180,000 or 37 per cent of the population in Northern Ontario, contend that their survival as a distinct group is threatened by a predominantly English cultural environment.

"French - Canadians have always been treated as second-class citizens in this region," said a Timmins Capuchin priest, Father Celestin. "There is real discrimination."

He said the federal government should guarantee the preservation of any minority language group that accounts for 30 per cent or more of the population in any region across Canada.

Laurier Trahan, a student at the bilingual Laurentian University of Sudbury, called for public French high schools in regions in Ontario where there are substantial pockets of French-Canadians.

French-Canadians said English-only high schools contribute to cultural assimilation at worst and impose a handicap on them at exams at best. They called for wider use of French in the federal civil service and in mass media.

English-speaking delegates retorted that dual school systems are costly and breed prejudice and dissension. Since two-thirds of the Canadian population spoke English, it would be more practical and simple to make English the only official language.

Still another attitude was voiced by some immigrants.

"We're afraid that we will be caught in a power play, in a vise that is forming," said an Italian immigrant said. "The third element will be forced to make a choice between the English and the French . . . in four or five years, people like me will have no choice but to move to the United States."

Albert Ouellet said he was educated in a Quebec orphanage where religious teachers gave religious instruction in the morning and taught hatred of English-speaking Canadians in the afternoon.

He complained that French separate elementary schools in Ontario still teach hostility toward English-Canadians.

DO IT NOW! Barbara Hamilton and Bill Cole with mock concert polish set Labor Department slogan on its ear, in scene from last night's "Spring Thaw."

'Spring Thaw' Brought Flood Of Giggles, Titters, Guffaws To Crowded BCI Auditorium

By HARRY MULHALL

"Spring Thaw" came to Belleville last night —followed by an early morning of freezing rain.

However, for those who filled BCIVS auditorium, delight with the show today still likely took precedence over disgust with the weather as prime conversational material.

And there is much to talk about.

For "Spring Thaw" became an institution of Canadian theatre (long, long before Stratford) by the simple process of kicking Canadian institutions and conventions where it hurts most—delightfully — in the old laugher bag.

Such theatre attitudes became the accepted rage in North America only recently when this audience discovered the spidery satire of "Beyond the Fringe" and television vainly attempted to emulate "That Was The Week" etc. etc.

The much more senior "Spring Thaw," framing broadsides in more conventional revue settings, has been packed just as significant a sting for years and — as its one-night stand proved here — is as wasabish as ever for home audiences.

STARTS BEFORE CURTAIN

It launched its sallies even before the curtain went up, rounding on the national anthems controversy. With a lonely piano pounding out "The Queen" and a tremulous trumpet playing "O Canada" in antenna counterpoint, the musically bicultural row set the tone of the evening.

The topicality carried over into "Bienvenue" with the revue's leads, Barbara Hamilton and Dave Broadfoot, extending a bilingual welcome to the audience — en route losing something in the translation.

After that, national symbols, mores and conventions crumbled one by one, Hockey idols, intense ballad songsters, military officers, doctors and — naturally — politicians — were taken apart.

Topicality was the keynote for the show's mockery — with some projections in the future. One of the highpoints (as seen by the revue's script writers) showed Quebec in armed revolt with a brave band of die-hard Britishers holding out in Westmount.

The medical profession took a beating in a brief, but telling, sketch at a blase supervising surgeon chided an absent-minded staff member for leaving instruments in his patients.

SOME NUMBERS OLD

However, while it played to laughs throughout, the pot-pourri of satire wasn't always as topical as it might be.

In "Vancouver Parade" for instance, the punchline hangs on a parade of nude Doukhobors.

However, since it was written Agassiz has been built, and the situation has assumed a different public image.

Again, one of the cleverest combinations of words, music and situation, "The Didn't, Didn't Can-Can" evolved around the alleged indiscriminate of Canada's NATO inspection team in Paris two years ago. The incident, one of the more delicious sidelights in modern political history, has all but faded as a point of uproar.

Neilson for the song "Togetherness" does unity of the Christian churches appear so bright and beautiful as an original conception. Today, it is a matter of commonplace conversation. However, the delicious language of stock characters, a sardonic R.C. cardinal, a fussily-genial Anglican bishop, an intense United Church minister, and a menacing Makarios-like Orthodox prielate, rolled it along in good fun.

Ye, these are only petty criticisms. The combination of musical, dance, words and situations into a perfection of artistic cleverness is "Spring Thaw's" hallmark.

DON'T WAIT FOR SPRING

This is best demonstrated by what can be done with a simple little Department of Labor" sketch like "Don't Wait for Spring."

Dress it up in mock-Handelian recitative and arias, place it in the hands of Bill Cole as a concert baritone and Miss Hamilton as his befuddled accompanist, and it becomes funny by the point of outrage.

If it had a serious point, it came with "Indian Affairs," a monologue by Mr. Broadfoot. Somehow, what he had to say about Indians, and how they are done by, may have been closer to raw truth than will would disguise.

"Spring Thaw" was brought to Belleville through the sponsorship of the local Mental Health Association. It played to a packed house—something that should encourage local organizers to seek a return engagement next year.

Couple Freed On Charge of Abandonment

ST. THOMAS (CP) —An Ottawa couple, charged with abandoning their three small children in an unheated farm house here March 8, were acquitted Wednesday although the magistrate termed their conduct as "morally indefensible."

Magistrate F. R. Barnum said the children of Delbert Frederick Vernon Cofell, 34, and his 21-year-old wife Hildegarde Helena, were certainly exposed to the risk of injury or impairment of their health, but added:

"What gives me difficulty is that part of the charge that pertains to the likelihood of permanent injury or endangering health."

The children — Christopher, 3, Delbert, 18 months, and Douglas, one month — were found by farmer Ronald Alden, Cofell's employer, March 9. They were in a cottage Cofell had rented from Mr. Alden and were covered with sores and suffering from exposure and malnutrition when found.

The St. Thomas Branch of the Children's Aid Society has custody of the children.

SOLD CAR

Cofell told the court that he and his wife came to St. Thomas to work on the farm managed by Mr. Alden and on the way sold a car in nearby Lambeth for $20. There was still money owing on the car, he said.

He said that after reaching the farm he received a telephone call from the service station operator in Lambeth who had bought the car, demanding certain papers concerning the car. He said the man told him he would go to police if he did not receive these papers.

Cofell said he borrowed $45 from Mr. Alden, telling him he was going to Ottawa to secure furniture he had left there.

He said he later telephoned the Lambeth man and requested that he be allowed to buy his automobile back. When the request was refused, Cofell said he panicked in fear of the police and fled.

Mrs. Cofell said she accompanied her husband hoping to persuade him to return in a few hours and had not intended to leave the children alone for a long period.

She said they continued to flee when they learned through the newspapers that the children were being well looked after.

The couple was arrested in Windsor March 15.

Magistrate Barnum said he found reasonable doubt that the children were meant to be abandoned.

Three Gunmen Slain in Chicago After Ambush

MONTREAL (CP) — Real Caouette, leader of Le Ralliement des Creditistes, said Wednesday French-Canadians ought to point the finger at themselves if they wish to accuse anybody of retarding Quebec's economic development.

If Quebec lags 15 to 25 years behind other provinces economically, he said in a speech to the Montreal Junior Board of Trade, it is the fault "of the French Canadians from the province of Quebec, who sent to Parliament people with no guts instead of sending aggressive people to defend their interests."

Calling for a strengthening of provincial powers at the expense of the federal power, he said nevertheless: "Canada will remain Canada. It will experience a tremendous economic expansion through the development of the provinces, each in its own way."

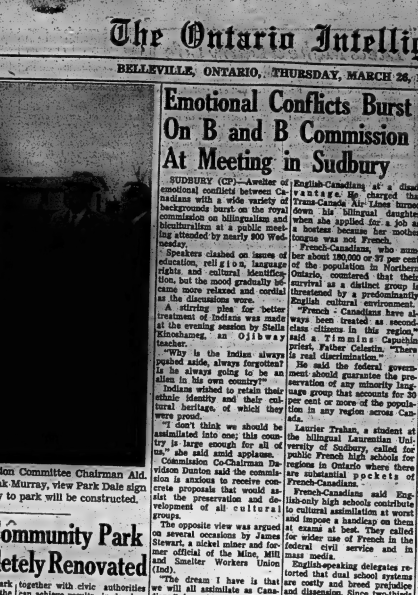
Continue Probe Of Sonny Liston

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators continue today their investigation of professional boxing spurred by reports of underworld figures still hanging around dethroned world heavyweight champion Sonny Liston.



Scheduled to appear before the Senate anti-trust subcommittee were Gordon B. Davidson, lawyer for the Louisville, Ky., citizens group that sponsors champion Cassius Clay, and Bob Nilon, brother of Jack Nilon, Liston's business adviser.

Jack Nilon told the hearing Wednesday that he asked no questions when Liston said he wanted to sign over valuable stock to Sam Margolis, a Philadelphia vending machine operator and close friend of Liston for years.

Margolis, according to previous testimony, once owned an apartment house jointly with racketeer Frank (Blinky) Palermo.

HUMAN SATELLITES

PARK PLANS — Local parks and recreation committee officials are seen going over plans for rejuvenation of Park Dale Community Park, work of which commenced yesterday. Left to right are committee chairman Ald. Donald Joss, Richard Ellis; Lloyd Syer, parks superintendent; Lloyd Doran, recreation director, and Ald. Frank Murray.

Melrose

MELROSE — Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Embury returned home recently from a two weeks' holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Mellor in Louisiana. Mr. Lloyd Embury and his wife were accompanied by his parents to the south, the youngest couple presented as a Mexico, returning to Louisiana to pick up Mr. and Mrs. Embury on their back to Toronto. The friends and former neighbors here of Mr. and Mrs. Embury are pleased to hear they are well and busy caring for a flock of 10,000 hens.

Newfie At Quebec Conference

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Premier Smallwood says Newfoundland has "no particular gripe" in its approach to the federal-provincial conference meeting in Quebec March 31.

But with shared-cost programs—those to which federal and provincial governments contribute—expected to be a major topic, Newfoundland can be counted on to have definite proposals.

Unemployment relief is one subject in this category. Mr. Smallwood favors putting jobless persons to work on public projects while they draw unemployment benefits. Present regulations permit benefits to be paid only while a worker is idle.

The premier says this amounts to paying a man to do nothing. Since Newfoundland has the highest seasonal unemployment ratio in the country, the question assumes added importance in this province.

SAYS OTHERS AGREE

Mr. Smallwood expressed his views at the Ottawa conference in November and at the Halifax conference of premiers last summer. He says some other premiers agree with him.

He wants to put recipients of unemployment benefits to work on such jobs as provincial park improvements, forest road construction and beautification of school grounds, without losing the federal payments.

Premier Smallwood has expressed "basic approval" of the proposed Canada Pension Plan. He has voiced his pleasure at Ottawa's decision to assume 50 per cent of the cost of building the Trans-Canada Highway in the Atlantic provinces.

Since the Pearson government took the latter step last year, Newfoundland has stepped up construction on its section of the highway, still only about one-third completed.

Diets Make a Daffy Life

By MAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks a man on a diet gets tired of hearing:

"Gee, George, have you been putting on more weight lately?"

"Wake up, George, you've been talking in your sleep again—and all you talked about was food."

"I don't see why you make such a fuss about losing weight. All it takes is a little strength—the strength to push yourself away from the table."

"My cousin went on a diet of nothing but turnips and soda water. She lost 15 pounds in two weeks—and then she collapsed and they had to take her to the hospital."

"If George ever did some real work, he wouldn't have all that blubber on him in the first place."

"Dieting won't do it alone. You ought to walk at least 10 miles a day, and go on the wagon, too."

"You should be like me. No matter how much I stuff myself I never seem to gain an ounce."

"My uncle went on a diet of nothing but canned sauerkraut juice. It was working wonders for him—until he came down with that ulcer."

"At night George is so hungry and restless he can't sleep. So guess what he does? He gets up and writes down the names of all the kinds of candy bars he can remember eating as a kid."

"I read in a medical journal that only two out of every 100 people who diet themselves slim stay that way—so it looks as though you're up against pretty hopeless odds."

"So on, George, have some gravy. No one's looking, and I promise not to tell a soul."

"George has the weirdest dreams lately. Last night, for example, he dreamed he was taking a bath in a tub full of mashed potatoes and coconut custard pudding."

"My brother went on a diet of taffy and yogurt, and guess what happened? All the stuffing came out of his teeth."

"I think I'll order the peach parfait for dessert. What'll you have, dear—another radish or a slice carrot?"

"I put the padlock on the refrigerator for your own sake, dear. It will cut down any temptation to cheat."

Throws Weight Around -- Executive Success Secret

TORONTO (CP) — Corporate executives who rule empires comfortably from plush chairs would gasp at the methods of 37-year-old Craig Rice, president of Royal Crown Cola Ltd.

Mr. Rice regular does a driver's uniform and delivers soft drinks to customers, heaving 65-pound cases with ease and wheeling trucks through traffic.

"I ride the trucks to keep up with many aspects of the business," he says. "And I also need to establish myself as a practical as well as theoretical man."

Craig Rice came to Royal Crown in Canada (it was established in 1960) after a stint as an account executive with Leo Burnett Co., an advertising agency, in Chicago. He was appointed assistant to president Norman Ranney in January, 1963, and made president upon Mr. Ranney's retirement six months later.

Royal Crown is owned by Royal Crown Cola International Ltd., which in turn is owned by Royal Crown Cola Co. in the United States. The Canadian arm operates a 44,000-square-foot plant in northeast Toronto and has 30 franchised bottlers across Canada.

AIDS JUDGMENT

"We expect to sell more than half a million 24-bottle cases of our product and this doesn't include our sales of canned cola," Mr. Rice says.

The president generally rides the trucks 20 times a year, sometimes for a full day, sometimes half a day.

Has it helped?

"I found that if you were slugging an occasional case of soft drinks, you had a chance to talk to a store manager on terms that were denied you if you came in in striped pants.

"We were able to judge retailer requirements which we have since been able to satisfy."

Mr. Rice's feeling about the company when he assumed the presidency was that it was too fat. He cut the number of executives and turned toward smaller, "less status-satisfying" automobiles. The president himself drives a 1961 Ford Falcon.

He now invites his executives to follow his example, at least on a modified scale, by riding the trucks, too, to see what goes on in the stores.

"I am not unorthodox by nature but simply progressively conservative," he says.

Last of Canadian Fishing Bank Schooners Laid up With Her Fate Uncertain

BY ED WALTERS

LUNENBURG, N.S. (CP) — The last of the Canadian fishing bank schooners lies in the sheltered harbor of this old port awaiting her 36th spring.

The fate of the Theresa E. Connor is as uncertain as the weather. Twicker and Company, Limited, say it has not decided what will be done with her.

In previous years dories were nested on her deck as the vessel was fitted out for the summer's fishing on the Grand Banks. Last year, Capt. Harry Oxner took her to Newfoundland to recruit a crew, but there were not enough men willing to go out in the old - style method.

The Theresa used the old-time dory fishing method, in which two men in a dory would spend the day fishing with trawlines and handlines, returning to the ship at dusk. She was the last Canadian schooner to use this method. Some Portuguese schooners still follow the system on the Grand Banks, probably the last in the world to do so.

VANISHED ERA

Failing to obtain a crew for the banks fishing the Theresa returned to Lunenburg last summer and then went to Labrador to fish with cod traps, anchored near that form long boxes. Her catch was "fair," the owners said.

Built in Lunenburg in 1938, the 185-ton schooner was one of the last of her kind designed for fishing. The power-driven trawler, carrying a bigger load and making quicker trips, had already begun to replace the tall, graceful banks schooners.

Among the first schooners from Lunenburg to the Grand Banks were five that went out in 1875. By 1888, there were 193 schooners sailing from this port.

These sailing vessels reached probably their highest popularity about 1921, the year the famed Bluenose was launched. Years later, the Second World War helped keep the banks schooners going, since the lean wartime years saw a good market for fish.

COST FACTOR

But no new schooners were built. High cost was one major factor. The Bluenose cost $50,000 in 1921, but to build and outfit a banks schooner today would cost around $250,000.

Lack of crews for the dory-equipped schooners became more and more acute. Most younger fishermen preferred the less arduous method of fishing from trawlers rather than by hand in a dory tossing in some of the world's most turbulent seas.

More and more schooners were retired from the fishing banks. Many were sold to skippers in Newfoundland, where the occasional schooner with her rigging cut down may still be seen carrying coal from North Sydney, N.S., or delivering general freight to isolated coastal communities. Others sank or wore out, and few were acquired by wealthy sportsmen.

The Theresa E. Connor seems to be the last.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Four clubs are going to win the Stanley Cup. I asked four people and got four different answers.

It all depends on whose hockey ox is being gored.

Montreal Canadiens' fans, highly elated over the championship success of their veteran-rookies organization that burst the balloons of pre-season league prophets, can see nothing but a victorious march to the Cup.

Those who fancy the Black Hawks brush aside the club's fall from grace when they blew a substantial lead and were nosed at the wire by a breath.

The faithful of the Toronto Maple Leafs, and they are legion down thisaway, can see nothing but a repeat for the Queen City crew despite the fact they finished in third slot.

Detroit Red Wings supporters, a minority in this neck of the woods have their fingers crossed but point to the great Gordie Howe and his qualities of playoff leadership.

In this agent's books Coach Toe Blake came up with the surest opinion. The Canadiens' coach, while confident of the chances of his National League champions, is not selling any of the foeman squads short.

"Any club can win the Cup this year," was Blake's statement when asked to make a selection.

But the boys in the back room who figure the odds, have installed the Habs to take all the gold and glory, at 8-5—at first—since then they have slipped to almost even money.

It was different in the other series. The Hawks were rated 13-5 favorites over Detroit, but that has probably changed. There are not a few laying it on the line that the Hawks will take it all.

It seems to me that a lot of people are whistling in the dark. Hockey writers of the National League centres are going all out on "quotes," records and whatnot. It is all grist for the mill and from here it looks as though interest in the annual Stanley Cup hassle is the highest in years.

The closeness of finish in schedule play has swept aside any possibility of any particular club being favored by lop-sided odds. League statistics are something to be studied, provide food for argument but are not to be used as a definite barometer.

The fact that the Black Hawks failed to win a game on Detroit ice and vice versa in league play does not, by a long shot, indicate this will happen in the chips-down playoffs.

Nor does the fact the Canadiens had a peerish win-less record in their last dozen league outings convey the idea the Habs will continue to be slumpish in the money series.

And the fact the Maple Leafs won the glitter last year doesn't mean they will repeat despite the fact they have been bolstered with goals-getting machinery.

The Detroit Red Wings, according to all and sundry, are the general underdogs—outside of the riverside faithful and themselves—but this does not mean they will be stepping-stones for the Hawks to the golden circle of the finals.

And the "if" leaguers are in their glory. These are the boys who won't go all out on predictions but temper their prophecies with the two-letter word.

"If the Wings can stifle Mikita and Hull."

"If the Big H be bet."

"If the Leafina defence can herd back the Habs' front fence."

"If Hawks' high scorers can be held to a minimum," and so on into the "if" night.

Well, here goes. The limb looms with no "ifs." It will be a series of "stays" with the Hawks taking the Wings in a half-dozen tilts. Canadiens ditto the Leafs in the same number of games and Chicago to take it all 4-2.

And remember, I picked Listen.

Our Mr. Alexander calls it this way: Leafs over Canadiens in five; Chicago to take Wings in six and the Hawks to grab the Cup from Leafs in seven.

Bunny Morganson Dies at 61

TORONTO (CP) — Austin J. (Bunny) Morganson, 61, a sports writer for 40 years with the Toronto Telegram, died Wednesday.

Morganson covered minor league sports for many years and wrote the Sports Slants column.

Imlach Picks Leafs, Wings For Final

CHICAGO (CP)—If it goes according to season form, the Chicago Black Hawks-Detroit Red Wings semi-final will be over in seven games with the Hawks the winners.

If it goes according to Punch Imlach's crystal ball the Red Wings will take it.

The Hawks, who wound up a point behind Montreal Canadiens in the league's final standings, dropped six games to the fourth-place Red Wings, won five and tied three. But Chicago's second-place finish gives them a home-ice edge.

They open the series in Chicago tonight with the Second match set there this weekend. The series then moves to Detroit for two games with other games as necessary alternating between the two cities.

Although the Red Wings had the edge over Chicago on the season, they didn't win a game in the Windy City. And Chicago never won one in Detroit.

CALLS LEAFS, WINGS

But Imlach, coach of Toronto Maple Leafs who finished in third position and tackle the pennant-winning Montreal Canadiens in Montreal tonight in the other half of the series, thinks Detroit and Toronto are the better teams.

Montreal got a break by meeting tail-end clubs in the last two scheduled games and this accounted for their one-point margin over the Hawks, Imlach commented.

And the Hawks? They started off too well and have been unable to get back in stride after a mid-season letdown, the Leaf leader says.

Consequently, he's picking Detroit and Toronto to tangle in the final for the Stanley Cup.

"See you in the finals," Imlach told Detroit coach Sid Abel Wednesday after his club finished a workout in the Olympic stadium for Montreal.

If Chicago coach Billy Reay is worried about Imlach's predictions he can at least rest easy on another score. The front office wants him back next season.

WANTS REAY BACK

Co-owner James D. Norris of Chicago said Wednesday "I hope Billy wants to come back next season. We certainly want him back."

The indication that his job is safe no matter what happens in the playoffs should be good news for Reay. Rudy Pilous got the gate last season after the Hawks finished second to Toronto by a point in the league race and were knocked out by Detroit in the semi-finals.

Abel and Detroit goalie Terry Sawchuk got some good news too. Terry's wife was taken to hospital for an emergency appendectomy performed early Wednesday. The operation turned out all right and Abel noted that Sawchuk, father of six children, was relieved.

The family problem has kept Terry from workouts since Saturday but Abel hopes to have him on for a warm-up before the series opener.

CALL UP TWO

The Wings have called up centre Alex Faulkner and goaltender Bob Champoux, who have finished the season with Cincinnati Wings of the Central Professional League, as extra bench depth.

Champoux, a 21-year-old Newfoundlander who has been playing himself into shape after an injury, fired three winning goals for the Wings in last year's playoffs.

Reay plans no lineup changes for Chicago. He feels the Hawks' down-to-the-wire battle with Canadiens for the league's top spot has left his team sharp and ready for the playoffs.

Wins Cause Traffic Jam In A.H.L.

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

A win by Cleveland Barons and a loss suffered by Pittsburgh Hornets Wednesday has created a bumper - to - bumper traffic jam in the Western Division of the American Hockey League.

The Barons blanked Providence Reds 5-0 to leap past the idle Rochester Americans into sole possession of second place. The victory left Cleveland just two points back of the Hornets, who were beaten 4-2 by Hershey Bears. Rochester is a slim point behind the Barons.

The only other scheduled outing saw Buffalo Bisons squeeze out a narrow 4-3 win over Springfield Indians in overtime.

The shutout was the first in the league for Cleveland goalie Jean Guy Morrissette, substituting for the injured Les Binkley.

Four of the five Barons' goals came when Providence was shorthanded through penalties. Bob Eliett, Ron Attwell, Guy Rousseau, Jim Mikol and Joe Smrs divided the goals for the winners.

Hershey goalie Ed Chadwick was sensational against his ex-teammates, stopping 47 drives and blanking the Hornets in the third period when the Bears scored twice.

OPEN PLAYOFFS

WINDSOR, N.S. (CP) — Two teams virtually untested in playoff hockey this season open the Eastern Canada Allan Cup quarter-finals tonight. Windsor Maple Leafs, Maritime representatives, reached the best-of-five quarter-finals on a flood of goals against their opposition. Montreal Bolsclair are in the round largely through default of other Quebec teams.

Rinks Had 94.5 Capacity
NHL Attendance Sets New Record

By MARVEN MOSS

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League, perhaps the most successful promotion in sport, set an attendance record of 2,753,654 in the 210-game schedule completed Sunday.

This was 94.5 per cent of the rated seating capacity at the six member rinks and a 142,066—or 5.49 per cent—increase compared with last year's record-setting season.

It works out to 13,013 fans a game against 12,850 in 1962-63.

Figures announced by league headquarters appear to refute the position of NHL president Clarence Campbell, who says that expansion at this stage would only weaken the operation.

Toronto was the only franchise to fall off in attendance in 1963-64. One explanation is that a re-allocation of seatings in Maple Leaf Gardens reduced the standing room accommodations.

Chicago Black Hawks' and New York Rangers were in the forefront of fits upsurge in the league's increase.

RECORD FOR HAWKS

Hawks drew 581,404 fans for their 35 home games, establishing a seasonal high for a single franchise with an increase of 43,076 over the team's mark of 1962-63.

At Madison Square Garden, the box office count was 435,531—up 13½ per cent from last year's figure for the Rangers—to give New York the largest individual advance, a jump of 49,000.

Despite their fourth consecutive last-place finish, Boston Bruins pulled in 29,600 more fans for an aggregate gain of 368,002.

Detroit Red Wings produced a 32,913 increase, upping the club's mark for the season to 364,219.

Like the other Canadian entry, Montreal Canadiens made no big attendance breakthrough. But Canadiens were on the plus side of the ledger, attracting 638,963 fans for an increase of .59 per cent, or depressed in a more personal vein, an additional 168 ticket-buyers.

Toronto's aggregate gain was higher than Montreal's at 694,634, but that represented a drop of 4,706—.94 per cent.

Dennis Hull May Be Out Of Playoffs

Montreal leads the best - of - seven series 3-0.

Dennis, younger brother of National Hockey League star Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks, missed the first game of the series Sunday because of badly bruised knee muscles. He was used sparingly in Tuesday's game and the knee stiffened up again later.

Bulldogs Clinch 4th Place

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chatham Maroons, who can finish no better than last in the International Hockey League, turned into spoilers Wednesday and stalled Toledo Blades' drive for the league pennant.

The Blades, who need one more victory to wrap up first place, saw the Maroons jump into a 3-0 lead and then coast to a 4-3 win for their first victory in five games.

Meanwhile, second-place Fort Wayne Komets moved within one point of Toledo by defeating Muskegon Zephyrs 8-2. The Komets have one game to go on the regular schedule while Toledo has three.

The only other scheduled league affair had Windsor Bulldogs clinching fourth place with a 6-2 triumph over Port Huron Flags. Port Huron holds a seven-point spread over the Bulldogs.

1963 1964
A year ago sales of O'Keefe Extra Old Stock Ale were doing quite nicely, thank you. Then we made the brew a blend of two great ales—and beerdrinkers loved it. Sales of Blended are now up 53.97% over last year. Only a blend of two great ales can give such a deeply satisfying flavour. O'Keefe Blended Ale.

Presentations Night Proves Success

Many Awards

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Hundreds of proud youngsters and parents flocked to Memorial Arena last night and watched three special presentations cap off a colorful evening as the Belleville Minor Hockey Association held its annual "Awards Night".

Exhibition hockey, a fine figure-skating display and dozens of presentations filled a program that ran from 8:30 until late into the evening.

Proudest and likely the most thrilled person at the affair was 10-year-old Daniel Chatterley, recipient of the coveted Tommy McNevin Memorial Award.

Two other highlights in the presentation department were the awarding of the new Bill Cook Memorial Trophy and of the Bobby Hull Trophy.

The Cook Trophy was presented to Grant Hagerman and Bobby Boyle, joint winners as the Belleville Junior "B" players best combining ability and sportsmanship for the 1963-64 season.

Stu Muirhead received the Hull Trophy as the Most Valuable Player on the same junior team.

Earlier in the evening, Jane and Peggy McCutcheon had thrilled those in attendance with a delightful and graceful figure skating demonstration. The young sister team is well known here in their home town and proved a popular change-of-pace act for the hockey-minded crowd.

His Worship Mayor J. R. Ellis presented the McNevin Trophy to Chatterley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chatterley, 74 Sidney Street.

Chatterley, a grade four student at Prince Charles School, was the third winner of the award, given annually to the boy in the B.M.H.A.'s Squirt Division who is thought to be the most deserving of recognition, not only in hockey and other fields of athletics but in school standing and in music appreciation.

The winner is selected from among six "Squirtsmanship Award" winners, one from each team in the Squirt Division.

Squirtsmanship awards were presented by the team coaches last night, just prior to the McNevin presentation, to Clifford Junitech of the Rangers; by E. Watkins, to Robert Foster of the Red Wings, by J. Cresswell; to Kenny McBride, of Canadiens, by J. Hamilton; to Mark Coates, of the Maple Leafs, by P. Hunt; to Peter Fralick, of the Black Hawks, by M. Warner, and to Daniel Chatterley, of the Bruins, by C. Powell.

A host of other presentations were made to individual and team champions in tyke, squirt, peewee, bantam, midget and juvenile divisions of the B.M.H.A. A list of these winners and the presentations was published in Tuesday's Ontario Intelligencer. David Gordon of the Tykes, received the Most Improved Player award from Norm Carter. This was omitted Tuesday.

Presentation of the two junior awards was an added attraction to this year's "Award Night".

Muirhead, backbone of Belleville's Junior "B" team for the past two seasons, received the Hull Trophy from Mrs. Robert Hull, mother of the NHL star. Hull donated the trophy several years ago in memory of Bill Foster and Art Culloden.

Muirhead piled up 15 goals, 21 assists in regulation play, although injuries allowed him to play in only half of his team's 24 scheduled games. He also scored six goals and two assists in three playoff encounters and was a popular winner of the Hull Trophy. It was his final year of junior hockey.

The selectors were unable to choose between Hagerman and Boyle for the Bill Cook Trophy so made the joint selection.

The beautiful trophy was donated to the memory of Bill Cook, this city's "Mr. Junior Hockey" who died during the past year.

Dick Beare made the presentation on behalf of the Cook family. Grant Hagerman played 22 league games, compiling a record of 19 goals, 17 assists and only 10 minutes in penalties, all minors. Bob Boyle took part in 14 games, scored eight goals and 20 assists and drew 23 penalty minutes. Neither player received a penalty during playoffs, Hagerman getting one goal and four assists, Boyle no goals and two assists.

Two special exhibition hockey games were also played, the results of which are elsewhere on these sports pages.

GET RECORD CROWDS

OTTAWA (CP) — Record crowds have been surging into the National Gallery of Canada this month to see the Tutankhamun treasures, a display of 32 small articles from the treasure hoard discovered 40 years ago in the Egyptian Pharoah's tomb. Up to Wednesday, more than 55,000 persons had visited the exhibition which opened March 5 and winds up Sunday, April 5.

MacCormack's Peewees Defeat Napanee

Oldtimers Rally To Edge CNR All-Stars

The B.M.H.A. "Oldtimers" Peewees chalked up hard-fought victories here last night in special exhibition games played as part of the gala "Awards Night" at Memorial Arena.

The "Oldtimers" pulled out a come-from-behind 8-6 win over the C.N.R. All-Stars in a battle of veterans and youngsters that brought back happy memories for many of the fans and players alike.

Earlier, MacCormack's scored early and late to clip Napanee Peewees in another spirited encounter. The score was 4-1.

Featuring the B.M.H.A. "Oldtimers" tilt was the sparkling play of a number of "Yesterday's stars" such as crafty Vern Coyne, Gordie Bell, Buck Reeves, Bob Taylor, Jerry Maher and a host of others.

Another special attraction was the appearance of Jim Crombie as referee for this tilt. It was the veteran officials's first time on Belleville ice in many years. He was well remembered from days of senior hockey here.

The C.N.R. boys flashing early scoring power to match their colorful new red, white and blue uniforms, jumped into a 4-1 lead in the first heat but the minor hockey crew fought back for a 5-5 score going into the third.

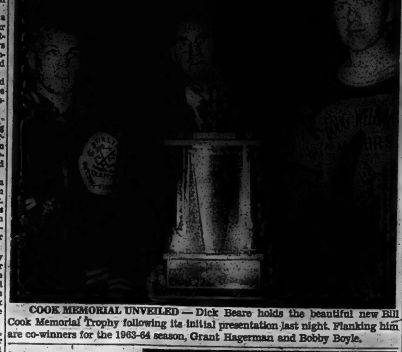
A couple of not-so-old vets, Moe Hunter and Bob Taylor clustered the C.N.R. by a 5-1 count in the third, Hunter getting two and Taylor one, to give the B.M.H.A. the win.

Moe Hunter paced the "Oldtimers" attack with three goals and a pair of assists. John "Shaker" Baker triggered two goals and helped on another, while Bob Boyle, Earl Cousins and Bob Taylor scored the other goals. Cousins also had an assist.

For the C.N.R., George Crabbe rapped home a pair of markers with singletons going to Don Bishop, Stu Muirhead, Vern Goyer and Junior Day. Assists were shared by Bill Coughlin, Bob Hurst, Goyer, Day, Muirhead and Ron Lupinette.

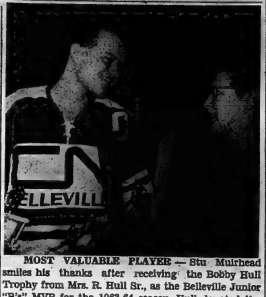
The losers collected three of the game's four minor penalties. Bob Dennis and Ted Hurst aided Crombie in linesmen's togs.

The teams:



C.N.R. All-Stars — Coach, Fred Bishop; manager, George Gleadhorn; goal, Ted Hurst; defence, Bob Dennis and Frank Pringle; Vern Goyer, Bill Nolan, Doug Mercer, Bob Hurst, Stu Muirhead, Bucky Ethier, George Crabbe, Don Bishop, Junior Day, Don Conway, Bill Coughlin, Jerry Maher and Ron Lupinette.

B.M.H.A. "Oldtimers" — Coach, Buzz Soucy; manager, Ed Adamson; goal, Gordie Bell and Brian Wilson; Earl Rivers, Dave Coates, Earl Cousins, Glen Enbery, Lionel Boily, Dick Stewart, Murph Warner, Bob Barrett, Bob Boyle, Bert Wilson, John Brunette, Paul Wall, Bob Taylor, Huck Reeves, "Shaker" Baker, Jim Woodcock, Moe Hunter.



In the Peewee tilt, Belleville took a 2-0 lead and Napanee came back to make it a tight 2-1 contest. MacCormack's scored another pair of goals in the final five minutes to wrap up the decision.

Darryl Demers scored two goals and helped on one for the winners. Steve Moore and Dennis MacCormack netted the other goals. Bill Storms, Terry Meagher and Bruce Latimer assisted on each.

Rick Todhunter scored for Napanee, assisted by Neil Paul.

COOK MEMORIAL UNVEILED — Dick Beare holds the beautiful new Bill Cook Memorial Trophy following its initial presentation last night. Flanking him are co-winners for the 1963-64 season, Grant Hagerman and Bobby Boyle.

MOST VALUABLE PLAYEE — Stu Muirhead smiles his thanks after receiving the Bobby Hull Trophy from Mrs. R. Hull Sr., as the Belleville Junior "B"ers SEVP for the 1963-64 season. Hull donated the trophy in memory of Art Culloden and Bill Foster.

PROUD YOUNG WINNER — Daniel Chatterley accepts the Tommy McNevin Memorial Trophy from His Worship Mayor J. R. Ellis during last night's annual Awards Night. The trophy is awarded for outstanding hockey, music and school ability.

McCredie Undergoes Surgery

TORONTO (CP)—Nancy McCredie of Brampton, Ont., one of Canada's main hopes in women's field events at the Olympics in Tokyo next October, had both cartilages removed from her left knee Wednesday. The shot-put and discus star will not be able to throw again for 10 weeks, surgeon says.

Coach Lloyd Percival said a series of therapeutic treatments have been set up for the 19-year-old athlete.

"Now, it all depends on these treatments and whether she is able to compete in the trials at St. Lambert, Que., in August."

Earlier this month, Miss McCredie won the Velma Springstead Rose Bowl as the outstanding woman amateur athlete in Canada and the Fred Rowell Trophy as the outstanding athlete in field events.

Overtime Thriller

Picton Nips Lindsay 5-4

By JACK FAWKES

PICTON (Staff) — With just four seconds showing on the clock and with some of the over 900 fans leaving the rink, Picton Juniors fired the winning marker and went on into the second overtime period before firing the tie breaker to defeat the Lindsay Lions by a close 5-4 score in the first of the best of seven in the quarter finals of the OHA Junior "C" league here last night.

Picton rattled by a 3-0 score going into the third period before George Sainsbury potted a pass from Gary McDonald to take away a shut -out from Wayne Jackett in the Lions nets. He scored at the 2.19 mark. Lindsay came right back and fired one just 13 seconds later. It was not until the 9.00 minute mark that Picton scored another. Bill Hopkins firing a bullet pass from Harold Haddock, Bob Brown set up the play.

With the score 4-3 against them, and the clock slowly running out of time, Wayne McConnell took passes from Sainsbury and MacDonald to put Picton within reach of tying it up and set the stage for the "Frank Morrivell" finish.

Goalie Jim Robson was pulled at 19.15 and again at 19.27.

With play raging around the Lions nets, and the clock slowly ticking away, McConnell got a loose puck and the light went on at 19.56. Sainsbury was given a well deserved assist on the goal.

The teams changed ends for the ten minute overtime session and Picton settled to the play off rules of the OHA, if no goal is scored, then the game continues after a short rest, with th first goal deciding the game.

The hero of the night was Bob Brown. He picked up the puck at his own blue line, went up the left wing, and laid a perfect pass on the stick of Harold Haddock, who made no mistake. The crowd went wild.

Penalties played an important part too. Lions took 11 out of the 13 called by referees Whitey Watton and Ken Parris, both of Kingston. The one that hurt them most was a five minute spearing "sit out" to Bill Horton at the 10.45 mark of the last period. While he was off, Picton fired a very important goal. Oddly enough, apart from this one, Picton only scored one goal while they had the odd man. There were no penalties in either overtime sessions.

These two teams go at it and again at Lindsay next and again at Lindsay next Tuesday. Home here on Thursday night, back there a week Friday and back to Picton the following Monday. If a seventh game is needed, it will be played at Lindsay on the Tuesday.

Cubs Clobber Giants

Braves Scalp Koufax; Yanks Lose Again

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reputations didn't bother the batters in a couple of exhibition baseball games Wednesday.

Sandy Koufax, the National League's most valuable player in 1963, was just another pitcher as far as the Milwaukee Braves were concerned. They jumped on him for three runs in the first three innings and breezed on to an 8-3 triumph over Los Angeles Dodgers in a grapefruit circuit contest.

Gary Peters, Chicago White Sox hurler who wrapped up the league's Rookie of the Year award last season, got tagged for five runs as he went the first three innings against Minnesota Twins. The Twins went on to put it away 7-5.

Walter Bond, a perennial minor leaguer, set out to force a reputation for himself at the plate. The 26-year-old gaming for a berth with Houston Colts came through with a two-run homer in the seventh inning that provided the margin as the Colts edged Detroit Tigers 4-3.

HOPES BAT HELPS

Bond, who played 40 games for Cleveland Indians in 1960, 38 in '61 and 12 in 1963, is hoping his batting prowess can earn him a starting position as an outfielder with the Colts.

He spent the bulk of last year with Jacksonville of the International League and posted an average of .276, his worst in the minors. However, he cracked 25 homers and believes he can duplicate this in the majors.

The Colts could use them. They got only 62 homers all last season.

Bond's winning round-tripper was one of several in exhibition actions.

Los Angeles Angels dumped Cleveland 2-0 on Dick Simpson's two-run blast in the sixth. Geno Petrae belted a two-run homer in the sixth inning that carried Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-4 victory over Baltimore Orioles.

There were some lopsided scores too—Chicago Cubs whipping San Francisco 12-4, Philadelphia Phillies white-aching New York Mets 10-0 and Kansas City downing St. Louis Cardinals 10-3. Cincinnati squeaked past New York Yankees 2-1 to hand the defending American League champs their fourth straight defeat.

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

Finley Has 'Stop-Yankees' Gimmick

The Dodger Pitchers Had A Better One

CHICAGO (AP) — Owner Charles Finley of Kansas City Athletics thinks the best way to silence New York Yankee bats is to build a screen around them.

He said in an interview Wednesday he has urged an immediate meeting of American League club owners to compel erecting of screens in Yankee Stadium's left and right field corners to make them equivalent to 325-foot foul lines.

Finley said he asked for the meeting in a March 30 letter to league President Joe Cronin, contending the Yankees' 296-foot right field and 301-foot left field foul lines were "grossly unfair" to the league's other nine clubs.

The letter included a Finley survey stating the Yankees have batted 3,140 home runs against 1,245 by opponents at Yankee Stadium in the past 28 years.

He inferred that short foul line homers had a lot to do with the Yankees compiling 1,459 victories against only 707 defeats in this span during which the Yankees won 21 pennants.

Finley said the baseball code required any new stadium built after 1958 to have a minimum of 325 feet from home plate to the nearest fence.

Although Baltimore's oval shaped Memorial Stadium has 309-foot foul lines, Finley said, the backing walls are 14 feet high.

"Through the years, the Yankees have had pull hitters to take advantage of those short foul lines—Ruth, Selkirk, Henrich, Mize, Berra, Mantle, Maris and Howard.

"The Yankees' playing field is one of the greatest injustices in the history of American sports."

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

An ideal line combination in hockey is three players who are frequently good at handling the puck and carrying it. That's what Toronto has in its new combination of Frank Mahovlich, Red Kelly and Andy Bathgate.

Actually, Punch Imlach has three good puck carriers in this trio, plus a pair of educated feet.

Red Kelly can do almost as well carrying and manoeuvering the puck with his feet as 80 per cent of the players in the National Hockey League can do with a stick.

Red can take a pass with his skate or foot and deflect it onto the blade of his stick. This in itself is quite an art.

I played with Kelly some 12 seasons. I've only played with Bathgate once, in an All Star game at Montreal.

Andy plays his position so well, he is very easy to find when you turn to make a pass to him or head-man the puck.

He is so rangy, and handles his stick with such authority that he will pick up bad passes equally as well as good ones.

Mahovlich, of course, has the biggest reach of any. He's 6 feet, 1. His linemates are both six-footers.

Mahovlich is long-legged, rangier than his linemates. Sometimes spectators will think a rangy player isn't working because his moves appear a little slower than those of shorter teammates.

Actually, they're probably going faster. Mahovlich accelerates quickly. When he gets in high gear he can swing around an oncoming opposing forward or defenseman with ease because of his speed.

The new line definitely has a wealth of fire power. Now our job is to find how to stop them.

advantage is one of the greatest injustices in the history of American sports."

Cantabs Boat Race Favorites

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — Cambridge are slight favorites to continue their 10-year domination over Oxford in Saturday's annual university boat race.

But the margin is so slight that bookmakers insist they will put up five to win four, no matter which crew you fancy.

Oxford held the betting edge two weeks ago, largely because Cambridge had failed to settle down in training. But Cambridge has made such headway since the two crews moved to the racing scene at Putney that the odds shifted sharply in Cambridge's favor.

River watchers came away impressed after Oxford's workout Wednesday, restoring what one paper called their supporters' "fast-fading" hopes.

Completing serious practice Wednesday, Cambridge went all-out in ideal conditions from the mile post to Putney Bridge. The time of four minutes was two seconds outside the record for the mile, however.

The big race Saturday is over the usual Putney-to-Mortlake course of about 4¼ miles.

A lanky Canadian, John Lecky of Vancouver, will row in No. 5 spot for Cambridge, and Richard Spry, son of the agent-general for Saskatchewan in London, Graham Spry, is at No. 3 in the reserve Oxford boat. Spry is a "spare" oar and will not take part unless someone is injured.

Lecky rowed for Canada in the 1960 Olympics at Rome and hopes to be back in Canada in time for this year's Olympic trials.

With John Kiely, an American from Amherst, Mass., "the strong-armed Canadian, a student at Jesus College, provides most of the power in the Cambridge boat. Standing well over six feet and weighing 205 pounds, he has won plaudits from river witnesses.

AFTER THE FOX, THEY HOPE — Major Field Marsham (left) leads hunters and hounds as the Kridge Hunt moves off in search of the fox. The scene has been part of the British way of life for centuries, but is now combined with the elements of sabotage and intrigue. A group known as the Hunt Saboteurs Association, led by 21-year-old John Prestidge of Brixham, Devon, are devising tactics to ruin the hunt and save the fox. (CP Photo)

Foxhuntin' Is Hounded

Oh! the Unspeakable Rotters!

By DOUG MARSHALL

LONDON (CP) — Oscar Wilde's unspeakable hunters are still pursuing unsuitable foxes but these days the quarry has an unpeaceable ally.

The Hunt Saboteurs Association, formed last year by John Prestidge, a 21-year-old free-lance journalist from Brixham, Devon, is determined to thwart foxhunting by every militant means available within the law.

How do the saboteurs work? Mainly by confusing the most vulnerable element in the hunting ritual—the hounds. Picture the scene:

It's a village inn somewhere in Sussex on a frosty January morning. Some 30 or 40 riders in bright hunting pink are passing around the stirrup cup, anticipating a two - hour canter across the hard green downs.

Around them mill 30 or 40 couple of hungry yapping keen-scented hounds — reared and trained to have little interest in life other than the detection and pursuit of wily foxes.

LAY FALSE TRAILS

Suddenly the hounds don't look so hungry any more. Forsooth, some cad has dumped 50 pounds of freshly butchered horse meat into their midst and even the most traditional of dogs can see the difference between an immediate meal and one he has to run several difficult miles for.

Appealing to a dog's stomach, the centre of canine reasoning, is just one tactic Prestidge and his cohorts have also laid false trails with aniseed into improbable hunting grounds—such as cemeteries — and pombed hounds' nostrils with acetone sprays.

"We're changing tactics all the time," says Prestidge. "There are several new ideas pouring in but they obviously have to be kept secret."

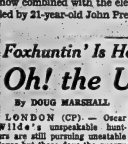
Prestidge started his association with a small legacy and 25 original members. Now the association claims more than 1,000 saboteurs operating in all parts of the country and its funds have been boosted by large donations from non-active well-wishers.

KILL 20,000 FOXES

The saboteurs are up against one of the most entrenched and powerful elements in English society. There are nearly 200 packs of hounds recognized by Britain's Masters of Foxhounds Association and running a pack costs about £5,000 a year.

Altogether about 20,000 people ride regularly to the hounds and succeed in killing about 20,000 foxes a year—a death toll that keeps the fox population roughly static. Vixen and their cubs are not pursued and as often as possible the trapped quarry is given a coup de grace with a gun before being torn to pieces.

Foxhunting had been causing a view - hullabaloo in Britain long before Wilde wittily registered his disgust. Today the rift between those who think hunting a "filthy ritual" and those who see it as "a golden thread running through the tapestry of our countryside" is as wide as ever.



The august Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is bitterly divided between hunters and anti-hunters. The League Against Cruel Sports has so far done little more than erect placards and picket hunting countries. Will sabotage succeed where words and reasoning have failed? Prestidge thinks so.

HUNTERS RETALIATED

"The work is done mostly by young people and wherever we've got a group we'll have a go. At the moment we are concentrating on training people, teaching them not to retaliate and to avoid fines."

Passive resistance has its drawbacks. Recently some frustrated Surrey huntsmen launched a cavalry charge with whips flailing at 30 saboteurs and are reported to have knocked some girls into a ditch before police intervened.

"Our basic aim is to end this scandal of tearing wild animals to pieces," says Prestidge. "If people want to ride and chase silly hounds they can lay false trails with aniseed and do the same thing without hurting anything."

Sebastian Cabot Is Host For New Suspense Series

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS's suspense got off to a start Wednesday that justified the title of the new series.

It was the good old bomb caper. I can recall off - hand having seen it with minor variations in the first television episode of Dragnet, and more recently in Naked City and Combat, as well as in assorted dramatic shows and old movies. Sometimes, it is a madman's bomb, sometimes it is a warring nation's torpedo to be rendered harmless.

Wednesday's story centred on a suspicious package left in a busy metropolitan hospital with a note saying "The world ends at 10 o'clock."

The bomb disposal business is a good dramatic gimmick even when the viewer knows from experience that all will end well.

Sebastian Cabot will serve as host for this anthology series. The series doesn't seem to be anything to get excited about, but it's only a stopgap to help CBS handle a trouble spot until fall. Two programs have failed there since September.

Also Televised Tonight:

Knight's Gambit, NBC, 10-11 EST—Suspense thrillers drama set in Majorca, with Chester Morris and Roger Smith, late of 77 Sunset Strip.

Handsome, Rich, Idolized R. Taylor Never 'Made It'

By DAVE SMITH

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Poor Robert Taylor.

He never really made it in Hollywood, somehow. He's handsome, rich, known all over the world, was idolized, even worshiped.

But he never really made it somehow. Never got an Oscar, never got an ulcer, and hasn't had his fans rip his duds off him since the 1930s.

Bob is so happy and normal that some might consider him an insensitive clod. Maybe that's why he's so relaxing to talk to.

Robert Taylor off - screen doesn't look much like Robert Taylor on-screen. That famous Taylor countenance is the same. But the handsomeness flows you.

Taylor has had his lady fans in a swivel for 30 years as the biggest box boosting, the darling of the drawing room, the suave city slicker. He always managed to keep every hair in place and a high shine on his shoes.

WEAR DUNGAREES

But in the seclusion of his 110-acre spread, Taylor slouches around in dungarees and rancher with gusto.

Bob's life is an unlikely pair of contrasts. As a star he was under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from 1934 to 1961—as long as any film star in history—and made more than 75 pictures.

In private life, Taylor, now 53, spends most of his time hunting, fishing, shooting and playing midwife to mares, rabbits and a flock of hens.

Helping with the chores is the former German model and actress Ursula Thiess, 30, who was cast in her brief film career, as "the most beautiful woman in the world." They were married in 1954, three years after he and actress Barbara Stanwyck were divorced.

Taylor's film career has slowed considerably but to hear him tell it, he couldn't care a whole lot less. "Frankly," he says, "I like to have the time to spend on the ranch."

"We expect you to show a LITTLE more confidence in your pupils, Morton!"

Experts Agree
Wings, Leafs Have Experience

By ARLIE KELLER

TORONTO (CP) — If, as the experts agree, experience is the big factor in Stanley Cup playoffs, defending champion Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings should meet in the finals.

These are the only two clubs in the National Hockey League showdown with players who have played 1,000 or more professional games — and both teams have four in this group.

As might be expected, superstar Gordie Howe of the Wings has played in more games than any other active player in pro hockey. When this year's regular season wound up, his total was 1,849 games, 1,206 of them in the NHL.

Totals include regular season and playoff contests.

Other Detroit players who have reached the 1,000 game plateau are defencemen Bill Gadsby with 1,173 (1,163 in the NHL) and Marcel Pronovost with 1,121 (985 in the NHL) and goalie Terry Sawchuk with 1,087 (863 in the NHL, a league record.)

1,151 FOR BOWER

Maple Leaf goalie, Johnny Bower, oldest performer in the NHL, also has taken part in more than 1,000 games. His total is 1,151, including 436 in the NHL.

Toronto defencemen Tim Horton with 1,046 and Allan Stanley with 1,153 and forward Red Kelly with 1,209 are the other Leafs who have appeared in 1,000 games. Kelly has played all his professional games in the NHL. Horton has been in 830 NHL contests and Stanley 943.

The other two playoff clubs, Montreal and Chicago, do not have a player in the 1,000-game club, although Jean Beliveau of Canadiens is close with 918.

Only two other active NHL players have appeared in 1,000 games, and both are with last-place Boston Bruins.

Defenceman Tom Johnson has been in 1,189 games, 1,038 in the NHL, while iron-man Andy Hebenton now has donned the skates 1,064 times, 652 in the National League.

TO STAY IN U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Turcotte, Canada's leading jockey for the last two racing seasons, will not be back in Canadian competition this year. Turcotte has been released from his contract as regular rider for the Addison-Hall stable of Toronto and will remain on the Maryland circuit where he led all jockeys at the Bowie meeting.

"We're Up", Says Blake

Healthy Habs Expect A Tough Series

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Toe Blake predicts a close battle for his fired-up Montreal Canadiens in their Stanley Cup semi - final playoff tonight against Toronto Maple Leafs at the Montreal Forum.

It's the second semi - final showdown in a row for the National Hockey League's only Canadian entries. When they met last year, Leafs were league champs, playing the first two games at home. Canadiens had ended up in third place, one point behind Chicago and two behind Toronto.

In the playoff Leafs humbled the Habs in five games and went on to win their second Stanley Cup in a row.

This time Canadiens are the league champions and Leafs are the third-place team.

"We're going into this series in a much better frame of mind," Blake said. "We're up for this series but it will be tough."

Coach Punch Imlach's Toronto Maple Leafs arrived Wednesday night by plane from their suburban Detroit stalwart. Team officials were unavailable to the press but a spokesman said the team was healthy and eager.

SHIFT TO TORONTO

After the second game of the best - of - seven series Saturday night in Montreal, the teams shift to Toronto for games Tuesday and Thursday nights and that the site alternates as extra games become necessary.

Both Blake and Imlach have vowed to keep their thoughts to themselves during the series. So far, they've maintained a stiff upper lip with the press.

Canadiens climaxed a brilliant season last Sunday night in New York by edging the Rangers 3-1 to win the league title. In that down-to-the-wire finish, goalie Charlie Hodge, a longtime minor leaguer called up by the Canadiens when the veteran Gump Worsley was injured in the eighth game of the season, won the Vezina Trophy. He ended up with a two-goal spread over Chicago's Glenn Hall, last year's winner.

Much of Hodge's success came at the expense of the Leafs. He scored four of his eight shutouts against them. At one point, he registered 217 minutes and 55 seconds in consecutive shutout time against the Leafs.

Reminded of this, Hodge shrugged amiably. "Yes, I know that. I had a little luck. They hit the post a few times. But you can't count too much on that sort of thing in playoffs. They'll be tough. I know that."

Blake's Habsgees are all healthy and supremely confident as they start on the trail of an unprecedented 13th Stanley Cup championship.

Leafs have won the trophy nine times.

Sport Snapshots

By DAVE SETH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It's the waiting that bothers the man in the black and white striped shirt.

As senior referee in the National Hockey League, 39-year-old Frank Udvari of Kitchener, Ont., knows a lot of tension filled hours of waiting during the next few weeks.

He'll travel alone between the cities of the four teams involved in the Stanley Cup playoffs. He'll sit alone in his hotel room. He'll be alone as he eats the pre-game steak.

Then to the boos and jeers of thousands of partisan spectators he'll skate onto the ice with two linesmen, with thousands of dollars and the happiness of millions of fans playing depending on the split-second decisions he must make during the next few hours.

"I have no different approach to playoff hockey," Udvari says, "but I can't deny that I am keyed up more. Consciously or unconsciously there's no doubt that you exert extra effort. The players go harder and you have to skate more to keep up on the play."

'I HAVE BUTTERFLIES'

The man who must appear immaculately fair while millions of others are being blatantly one - sided admits: "I have butterflies before a game and I can't sleep too well."

The worst part is the waiting.

"As I sit on the train and think about the game I become conscious of the importance of it so many people People often ask me: 'Why worry?' I think no matter how hard a referee tries to forget about the importance of the playoffs, it's bound to affect him."

Udvari came into hockey's top profession league when he was only 25. After a month of seasoning in the American Hockey League he was called up because of illness of one of the veterans in the fall of 1951.

Since then the man with the reputation for glass - climbing and signal - shooting has survived all the pressures of brawls, stringent league regulations, abuse from the fans, newspaper criticism and his own nervousness to become the sport's top official.

TWO OFFICIALS

Udvari looks back at the early days and admits he was too officious.

"It's a marvel I kept my job. I was always in trouble. It was strictly my own fault. I irritated players by giving them penalties sort of triumphantly. I sensed-hostility in the minute I stepped on the ice- I worried all the time—had two x-rays for ulcers."

Then he taught himself to calm down, after Montreal fans newspaper ists Irais one night dis detectives had to smuggle Udvari out a back door of the Forum.

He says he never goes into a game looking for trouble, but when he knows he must officiate a game between two clubs who are spoiling for a fight, he becomes more tense.

Udvari says no player has deliberately maimed him, although he once had a close call with Howe. Young, former "bad man" with Detroit Red Wings.

"Howie came after me and I know he intended to let me have it. Fortunately, Marcel Pronovost grabbed him."

In the ordinary course of business Udvari has been cut, bruised, tripped crushed in the corners, draped on the glass and slashed in the face. Once Lou Fontinato, former Montreal defenceman, accidentally elbed a stitched gash in his face.

Udvari has had his share of the tough ones. He holds the record for handing out the most penalties in a game—30 worth 60 minutes to Toronto Maple Leafs and Canadiens in Montreal in 1955. He was also the referee for the Chicago Black-Hawks-Toronto brawl last Dec. 1, worst in the history of the NHL.

"You have to work out of your own predicaments. There's a strict league rule that the referee must stand back and observe any altercation while the linesmen try to separate the players- Sometimes I tell the linesmen to let them go to it, so maybe they'll think twice the next time. Some players only pretend they're going to fight, hoping someone will hold them back."

During the playoffs, the league dictates that Udvari and his fellow referees must be lonely, never seen in the company of players, officials or anyone connected with hockey.

For Udvari, every April means a few hours of intense pressure and "a lifetime of waiting."

MORE TAKEOVERS

RANGOON (AP) — Burma's military government nationalized all timber shops in Rangoon Thursday as part of its continuing program to socialize the Burmese economy. Last week the government took over 3,000 shops of various kinds worth more than $100,000,000.

Despite Religious, Political Criticism 'The Open Grave' Scores Hit With Viewers

TORONTO (CP) — The controversial CBC television play The Open Grave, shown on schedule Wednesday despite religious and political criticism, scored a hit with Canadian viewers who said it was so real it was frightening.

CBC switchboards across the country were all jugged with phone calls from those who had mistaken the play, a modern-day allegory of the Easter story, for live coverage of a news event in Toronto.

Even some Toronto viewers who recognized local scenes had to call the CBC before they were convinced it was just a play.

Written by Charles Israel, produced by Mario Prizek and directed by Ron Kelly, the play was labelled sacrilegious earlier in the week by church leaders. Its planned showing was criticized in the Commons.

Presented in the form of an actual newscast prepared in haste, it portrays the events surrounding Joshua Corbett, a ban-the-bomb leader, who is hanged for the fictional shooting of an RCMP constable at a Peace in Action rally. Two days after the execution Corbett's grave is found open, empty and apparently untouched.

REACTIONS SOFTEN

Some church leaders had strongly criticized the program in advance but softened their reactions after it was presented. Some ministers found nothing offensive in the production.

CBC officials, after a special screening for top network executives in Ottawa Tuesday, decided the hour - long program was "in no way sacrilegious" and approved its transmission.

In Ottawa, a spokesman for Opposition Leader Diefenbaker was moved for a special debate on the show in the Commons earlier this week—said he had no comment.

Mr. Diefenbaker had said advance information on the program indicated it was "a flagrant, scandalous and sacrilegious insult to the majority of Canadians."

In Toronto, CBC officials said reaction from telephone callers was two-to-one in favor of the program and some described the realism in some segments of the play as "uncanny."

A father called and said his 15-year-old son "finally understood the meaning of the resurrection" after watching the program.

Rev. John Morgan of the First Unitarian Church in Toronto said the program was a masterful presentation of Easter. He watched it with his wife and four children and explained the Biblical parallels to them.

W. Wycliffe Booth, Salvation Army commissioner and president of the Canadian Council of Churches, said after the program he "regarded the film as a work of art . . . inadequate."

"Nothing that was in it could make one realize the wonder of the resurrection," he said. "After all, the resurrection is the central truth of Christendom."

WAS CRITICAL

The day before the public showing he had criticized the film. He personally was shown a rent, nightmarish treatment of a sacred theme."

Corbett was betrayed in the play's trial by Jerome Ingram (Judas Iscariot) who committed suicide after the "resurrection." He was prosecuted by Attorney-General Patrick Platt (Pontius Pilate) and the open grave was discovered by a reformed prostitute, Marian Morrison (Mary Magdalene).

Rt. Rev. F. H. Wilkinson, Anglican Bishop of Toronto, who Monday criticized the proposed showing of the film, was not available for comment Wednesday.

The film started in a Toronto graveyard and, following an open grave, a casket and crowds milling about in confusion. A CBC television news crew moves in on the scene. Rev. Emlyn Davies, former minister of Toronto's Yorkminster Baptist Church, said he wasn't offended.

BETTER THAN MOST

Rev. Charles Fielding, professor of moral theology at Trinity University, said "it was not a great play but probably better than most one sees."

Across the country, response to the film was overwhelmingly in favor. Hundreds of the viewers actually had to be convinced the play was fictional and not a live broadcast.

Some of the callers, after being told the play was pre-recorded, said the fact should have been better advertised to prevent alarm.

In London, Ont., two callers termed the show sacrilegious but Rev. George Cosh of the Aldersgate United Church said it was a "tremendous performance" and the CBC should be congratulated.

Massassaga

MASSASSAGA — Mrs. Guy Huyck of Bewley, spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Gwydion Brunnell. Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Montgomery and family of Niagara Falls, were weekend guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Riley of Simcoe, spent overnight with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Belmo, on their way home from a holiday in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Gernet Adams were Sunday guests of Mrs. Thompson's father, Mr. W. Thompson. They also visited with Mr. and Mrs. B. Thompson.

Mr. Morley Vallean and family were weekend guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Vallean.

Mrs. A. Wallbridge, Mrs. W. Jose, Mrs. E. Jose, Mrs. C. Thomlinson, Mrs. H. Adams, Mrs. Harry Wallbridge, Mrs. Welsh, Mrs. L. Revill and Mrs. H. Way were entertained at the home of Mrs. Clifford Dafoe on Monday evening to a Tupperware party.

DEDICATE ORGAN

The dedication of the new church organ, given by Mr. Jim Broad in memory of his sister, Hattie Broad, on Sunday was well attended. Rev. H. Lidster of Edmonton, Superintendent of Home Missions of the Bay of Quinte Conference, was guest speaker. Guests from the service at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Thomlinson for a turkey dinner were all members of the Broad family. Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Burley, Mr. and Mrs. Don Burley and boys of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dobbs and Mary of Oshawa, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Stevenson and friends of Newcastle, and Mrs. Stevenson who is teaching in Belleville hospital; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Reid and Mrs. Frank Linton of Shannonville, Mrs. B. Clark and Arthur of Newcastle, Mr. Jim Broad who is a brother of his sister, Mrs. Clark from Newcastle, Mrs. Alice Broad, Mrs. and Mrs. Ernest Thomlinson, Mr. Bill Kosthespaw of Demorestville, Mr. and Mrs. Hobert Ames and Mrs. G. Boyle, of Massassaga.

Mr. and Mrs. Doyle returned home with Mrs. Clark to spend a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Sims are leaving on Wednesday for Florida and taking a plane from there to Florida to spend a short holiday. They will stop in Cleveland to see Mr. Sims' brother and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Cook and family were Saturday evening guests with Mr. and Mrs. C. Cook. Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Giles and boys were Sunday guests at the same home.

Astrological Forecasts

By DEDOMIC OMARR

For March 27

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Full moon highlights relations with public. Spotlight on performance, ability. Keep guard up! Tempting offer may be subterfuge. Examine evidence. Take your time in deciding.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Quiet reflection necessary. Minor setback in the offing. Realize that additional preparation is necessary. Tonight, relax among harmonious associates. Pleasant surprises indicated.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Highlight resourcefulness. Full moon stresses romance, changes, opportunity. Much strength on your side. Know the and act accordingly. Check investment possibility.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Finish what you start. Offer aid to former "teacher." One who aided you in past may now need help. Be receptive rather than forceful. Tact wins admiration, respect.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Fortunate if you make new acquaintance. Break habit pattern. Try new dining place, kinds of entertainment. Experiment! Includes meeting new people. Turn on Leo charm, showmanship.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23): Full moon highlights method, approach, ways of conserving assets. Review past. Are you repeating same mistakes Base actions on honest answer. Tonight excellent for relaxation.

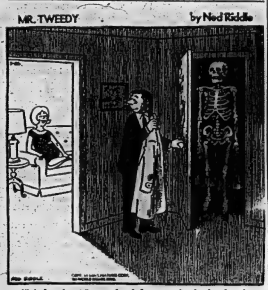
Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Reach out for added expression, knowledge. Don't commit yourself to one who wants much for nothing. Be discriminating! Avoid scattering forces. Have fun, but conserve strength.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Full moon points up need for degree of privacy. No time to exhaust yourself trying to be all things to all people. Now, stress your own needs Be specific and even a bit demanding.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22, to Dec. 21): Good for experimenting, making changes. Lunar position highlights deeper understanding of inner problems. Permit curiosity to come to fore. Ask pertinent questions.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Emphasis on career, ability to put across ideas. Inspiration gained at home. Listen to suggestions offered by family members. Don't roam too far afield. Obtain needed rest.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Time when you could experience "pulls" in many directions. Remain calm — no need for worry. Respond to inner feelings. Be true to basic convictions. Day to perfect techniques.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Recent pressures relieved. Make decision concerning income, security. Remember past experience. Apply present knowledge. Tonight fine for relaxing, overcoming recent tensions.

If today is your birthday . . . Full moon highlights partnerships. Decisions announced by higher-ups which have profound effect on public opinion.

PRINCE TO MARRY

TOKYO (AP)—Prince Yoshi, Emperor Hirohito's youngest son, will marry Miss Hanako Tsugara Sept. 30—shortly before the Tokyo Olympics, the imperial household agency announced Wednesday. The 28-year-old prince and the sports-loving Miss Hanako, 23, are to be formally engaged April 14.

FOOLS

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For March 26

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Emphasis on defining terms. Includes speech, written word, contracts. Be calm rather than sorry. Avoid jumping to conclusions. Self is caution. See situation in realistic light.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Key is being of service. Keep co-operate, offer aid. By so doing you project good will. This will be returned in numerous ways. Evening favors quiet relaxation, entertainment.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Be selective in choice of companions. Could be very special day and evening. Share it with one who means much to you. Avoid wasteful methods, or extravagance. Be simple, sincere, direct in actions.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Lunar position emphasizes home, relations with family members. Listen to suggestions aimed at bringing about greater security. Don't be afraid of new contacts, ideas.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Trust intuition. Your mind is active, alert, perceptive. Your inner feelings tell true story. Don't be misled by one who claims to know all. Maintain sense of humor, balance.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Fine for considering new interests, for promoting a more "adventurous" form of life. Financial questions indicated. If you are careful, observant, you will "turn out" in your favor.

Libra (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Previous efforts ripe to bear fruit. Your cycle is high. Fine for exhibiting talents, expressing ideas. Evening favors entertaining, being entertained. Attend to routine matters early.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Bring yourself out of emotional shell. Romance, other variety are now of special interest. Dig deep for added knowledge. Don't judge books by covers. Avoid superficial conclusions.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Pleasure is key word. Mean you can make discoveries which make life happier. Know truth, value when it is presented. Keep mind, heart open. Be with loved ones.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Don't force issues where work, aspirations are, otherwise. You can gain most by utilizing creative abilities. Find new ways of accomplishing goals. Taking time to think pays off.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Be sure of facts. Use extra care where legal matters enter picture. Read between lines. Day favors advertising, publication plans. Work out budget to get message across.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Emphasis on partners, agreements involving money. Day favors completing of projects. Not so good for starting new ones. Trust those with experience. Much can now be accomplished.

If today is your birthday ... you are dynamic, possess original methods and ideas. But you must learn to apply yourself. Means stick with projects through to completion.

Those Born Yesterday: Cycle high for Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius. Special word to Aries: Be sure of yourself before making commitments.

Swiss Doctor Gets 7 Years In Drug Death

LAUSANNE (AP)—A three-man panel of judges Tuesday convicted society physician Gerard Savoy in the Swiss town of the drug death of a wealthy Missouri-born widow, Marjorie Winnifred Bird, and sentenced him to seven years' solitary imprisonment. Two co - defendants got lesser sentences and an Egyptian defendant was acquitted.

Presiding Judge Bertrand de Haller called the 39-year-old Swiss nerve specialist a disgrace to humanity and to the medical profession. Savoy, Mrs. Bird's personal physician, was accused of conspiring with her secretary, Nicola Sturdza, to keep her in a permanently drugged state for nearly three years in an attempt to get control of her fortune.

Mrs. Bird, of Matteacock, N.Y., died July 22, 1961, in her Lausanne hotel suite of lethal dosages, the court found.

Sturdza, self-styled Rumanian prince, was found guilty of stealing jewelry worth $700,000 from Mrs. Bird's hotel safe on the day dying. He received four years' solitary imprisonment.

Yvette Labrosse, 49, Savoy's former secretary and mistress, was convicted of hiding property belonging to Savoy in her apartment to give the impression that he was penniless. She received a suspended sentence of one month.

Egyptian businessman Charles Abner, 49, was acquitted of a charge of receiving part of Mrs. Bird's stolen jewelry from Sturdza.

Sunday School Lesson
Two Roadblocks to Faith

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Two great roadblocks on the way to faith in God are sin and doubt. The first corrupts the heart. The second can corrode the mind. The best answer to both is not an argument, but a living example that makes plausible a belief in the living presence of God.

Of the two roadblocks, sin, of course, is the more serious. The honest doubter can say with Job, "Oh, that I knew where I might find Him!" (Job 23:3) He may want to find God, and cannot. The sinner, on the other hand, may not want to find God. He may be guilty of what may be called "moral atheism." That is, he disdains faith in God or at least participation in the church, because his life is open to question. The Psalmist said, "The fool has said in his heart, there is no God." (Psalm 14:1) But he goes on to define what he means by "fool". "They are corrupt, they have done abominable works, there is none that doeth good." In other words, their problem is moral, not intellectual. Their conduct leaves much to be desired, if they confessed to faith in God, they would have to change their ways, and this they are not willing to do.

THE FIRST ROADBLOCK

There is reason to believe that Mary Magdalene faced the first of these roadblocks in a very serious way. The Bible says she was possessed by "seven devils." (Luke 8:2) Whatever this means, there was evidently some evil in Mary's life that kept her from being the kind of person God wanted her to be. Jesus, by His compassion and power, cast these "evil spirits" out of her. In gratitude and love, Mary became one of the most devoted followers of Jesus. Her devotion to Him is indicated by her inclusion in the circle, including His mother and other relatives, close to Jesus, and by her presence with them at His tomb as soon as possible following the Jewish Sabbath after His crucifixion. Owing so much to Jesus, she was naturally heart-broken by His death. As sin for her had been the roadblock to wholesome living, now grief was the roadblock to the joy she had known through following Him. It is interesting that she should have been the first one to experience the presence of the Risen Christ. It was she who was first commissioned to tell the disciples of Jesus' own wonderful news of His risen glory.

SECOND ROADBLOCK DOUBT

Thomas, the disciple, was to face the other roadblock of doubt. He had been a courageous follower of Jesus. When the rest of the disciples cautioned Jesus against returning to Jerusalem lest some personal harm should befall Him, it was Thomas who said, "Let us also go, that we may die with Him." (John 11:16) But now Jesus was dead. Thomas' roadblock to continued discipleship became the intrusion of doubt. Thomas had a questioning mind. When Jesus said of His death, "And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know," (John 14:4) Thomas took issue with Him. "Lord," he said, "We know not whither Thou goest, and how can we know the way?" And when the rest of the disciples witnessed the resurrection, Thomas remained skeptical. Like many today, he would trust nothing except the testimony of his senses (John 20:25)

The Uniform [illegible] School Lesson for March 29: Thomas," John 20:1-29.

Jesus did not rebuke Thomas' doubts. On the contrary, He invited him to touch and see. (John 20:27) Jesus always encouraged the honest seeker after truth. We are not told whether Thomas actually tried to touch Jesus, but he did become satisfied that the resurrection was true, and he responded in faith. (John 20:28) Many have had their faith strengthened by Thomas' hesitancy to believe. That he finally overcame his doubts gives added validity to the story of the resurrection.

No one can explain, or even prove, the resurrection of Jesus. It is enough to know that something happened that opened Mary's eyes of grief, and overcame Thomas' inability to believe. Each had a dramatic experience that convinced him of the reality of Christ's risen presence.

There are many today who trust only what they can experience with the senses. But the most important things of life cannot be weighed or measured. They can only be felt. Who can measure love, or weigh faith? And yet these are what hold the world together. God waits to bless those who trust in Him. Perhaps there is no greater evidence of this than those roadblocks of sin and doubt, and have moved steadfastly on in their service to God.

TB Still Serious Problem Says Association Secretary

By RUSSELL ELMAN

OTTAWA (CP)—Tuberculosis is far from licked in Canada and public complacency is the greatest enemy in combatting it, health officials say.

"Our greatest problem is how to persuade the public that TB is still a serious problem," says Dr. C. W. L. Jeanes, executive secretary of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association.

"There were well over 6,000 new cases last year and there will be this number again this year. This is far more than from any other chronic, infectious disease."

Tuberculosis is the theme of World Health Day on April 7 and Dr. Jeanes and projects planned in Canada include publication of articles on TB and exhibits at medical meetings apart from continuing international research projects. The Canadian Tuberculosis Association is a member of the International Union Against Tuberculosis.

Dr. Jeanes said Canada is in the forefront of nations in controlling tuberculosis but, in spite of progress made, it is still necessary to attack the problem on all fronts.

CLAIMS FOIL DRUGS

One factor causing concern, he said, is an increase in drug-resistant TB strains, coupled with the lack of discovery of any really good new anti-TB drug since the early 1950s. About four per cent of new patients, with no previous TB record, are reported to have been hit by drug-resistant bacilli.

"If an individual is affected with a resistant strain, the standard drugs are no good in this person or in anyone he infects," Dr. Jeanes said.

Anne Grant, the association's health education consultant, says the infection rate is about two per cent among 14-year-old schoolchildren — the yardstick for measuring control of TB — in the best areas in Canada, which include parts of Ontario and Saskatchewan. Canada's average rate is four per cent, and it rises to between 10 and 12 in some parts of the Atlantic provinces. A one-per-cent rate is considered equivalent to having TB controlled.

She said the association's educational program is largely directed at schools but often it is found there is complacency among the parents. While anxious for their children to be looked after, parents frequently refuse to allow themselves to be tested.

Pre-Passover Message for The 'Season of Our Freedom'

By RABBI JOSEPH BERGLAS
Sons of Jacob, Belleville

The Festival of Passover begins at sundown on the fourteenth day of Nissan, March the 27th, Friday in the year being, and lasts for eight days, of which the first two days, the 28th and the 29th, are major holidays and the last two days, the 3rd and the 4th of April are the concluding major holidays of Passover, while the intervening four days are "Chol Hamoed"—half holidays. These intervening 4 days are March 30th and 31st and April 1st and 2nd. Special services will be held during the holidays in our synagogue. During these eight days of Passover celebrations, special food and dishes are prepared in special utensils. We eat unleavened bread called Matza, which is a very important meaning in the Jewish history and we are forbidden to eat any other kind of bread during this celebration.

This is a very happy and joyous holiday which unites families together in celebration of the Seder and reminds them of the Jewish traditions and laws, which is the most important, and high moral spirit in our religion.

Passover, the Jewish Festival of Freedom, commemorates a great and dramatic event in the history of the Jewish people—their deliverance from Egyptian bondage. Yet of a broader meaning as well. For men in all generations it has been a symbol of their own quest for liberty, and a promise that the freedom they desire can be won. King Pharaoh, so regarded, is not merely one ancient tyrant, he is all tyrants. From his defeat men take confidence that they can break the chains which bind them. The fact that it is God who sends Moses on his mission confirms the faith that it is the Divine will that all mankind shall enjoy liberty.

It is no accident then that freedom-loving men of all creeds and races have taken hope and courage from the Passover festival.

It was more than 33 centuries ago Moses led the children of Israel out of the bondage of Egypt into the free air of the Sinai desert. The inner strength of a people is the strength of its traditions. Of all the great traditions that gladden our hearts in times of joy, that fortify us in times of stress—none is more inspiring than the beautiful Feast of Passover, beloved festival of freedom.

With the coming of the First Passover, the world learned a new lesson. Liberty belonged to all men—this was the teaching that Passover brought with it. It was wrong to divide men into classes. All men are the children of one God. He is our Father; therefore all men are His children, and must be treated equally. When Israel left Egypt, God meant to teach the world for all time that no land has a right to make men live like slaves.

Today the world is engaged once more in the unending struggle for freedom—for the dignity of the individual, for freedom of conscience, for man's right to determine his own destiny, for the privilege of living in peace and true equality, each in the way of his choice.

May the words recited at the Seder table find speedy fulfillment: "This year there are men enslaved, next year may they be free!"

Canadian Troops Take Duties On Cease-Fire Line

Posted in Northern Nicosia Suburb

By DAVE McINTOSH

NICOSIA (CP) — Canadian soldiers took over the cease-fire line between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots in the northern Nicosia suburb of Trakhonas Good Friday in one of the most hazardous operations in Canadian military history.

Two companies — 280 men — left their tent camp for agreement living. Platoons of the 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment —the French - speaking Van Doos — moved into villas and apartment blocks along the streets they now will patrol for at least the next three months.

Lt.-Gen. Prem Singh Gyani of India took command of the United Nations peace - keeping force here at dawn, assuming operational control on behalf of the UN for keeping Greeks and Turkish-Cypriots from killing each other.

Gyani began his task with the addition of Canadian combat soldiers. About half the British force will be withdrawn as Irish, Finnish and Swedish soldiers join the UN force shortly.

Brazil Sailors Give Up

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Rebellious Brazilian sailors and marines surrendered to army troops Friday in response to a plea from President Joao Goulart after holding out for 40 hours on a stubborn strike.

In giving up, they made the final gesture of defiance, tossing away their caps, but the government said Friday they were forgiven.

Brazil's new navy minister put into office Thursday because his predecessor couldn't handle the crisis, urged the surrendered rebels to return to their posts Monday and ordered them to maintain discipline in the navy's ranks.

The rebels took over a downtown building Wednesday.

A navy ministry announcement said the new navy minister, Admiral Paulo Mario da Cunha Rodrigues, relieved the men of all responsibility for participation in the rebellion. He urged them to return to their duty posts Monday and asked them to maintain discipline in the navy's ranks.

The announcement came 36½ hours after the rebels — officially counted at 1,425 — gave up to the army.

Pope Bears Cross In Procession To Rome's Ancient Colosseum

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church turned today to the special rites of Holy Saturday and its prayers of promise for the coming Easter dawn of Christ's resurrection.

Pope Paul carried an eight-foot wooden cross in a penitential Good Friday procession at the ancient colosseum. Last night, Vatican history has no record of a Pope ever before bearing a cross in a religious procession.

In a speech Vatican experts called the strongest papal denunciation of communism in years, the Pope condemned Communist persecution of Roman Catholics as a modern-day crucifixion.

It was his most dramatic appearance in the solemn rituals of Holy Week, and 100,000 persons crowded into Colosseum Square in a light rain to see him. The pontiff scheduled no participation in public services here today.

A second but heavy crucifixion is still going on, the Pope declared, and Christ could ask His "modern and able prosecutors" of today why they are persecuting Him.

"The body of Christ is crucified even today, morally but heavily, in many parts of the world," he said. "Even churches of silence is still the suffering church, the patient church and, in some places, the suffocated church."

Merger Can Be Achieved Say Chiefs

OTTAWA (CP)—The heads of the air force and the army say that unification of the Canadian armed services will be difficult but can be achieved.

Both have called on their men to tackle the job proposed in the defence white paper of Defence Minister Hellyer.

Air Marshal C. R. Dunlap, chief of the air staff, issued a statement to all RCAF personnel, calling for fortitude, vigor and flexibility to adjust to the new circumstances.

A similar statement was issued by Lt.-Gen. Geoffrey Walsh, chief of the army's general staff, saying the army will react with vigor and dispatch to make the new organization as effective as possible.

But in Saskatoon, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker predicted that integration of the three forces into one unified service would seriously affect what he described as the already low morale of the armed forces.

SEES LOSS

Mr. Diefenbaker, flying home for Easter, said the unification plan could result in a loss of individuality. He said Mr. Hellyer's earlier action to demobilize some reserve forces had unfortunately weakened the navy and, generally speaking, there has been a very marked drop in morale."

Air Marshal Dunlap said the integration idea and other proposals in the white paper are sound in principle and are designed to achieve maximum efficiency effectiveness.

Gen. Walsh said he is convinced the navy - army - air advantages "will far outweigh the difficulties which one must anticipate in the changeover.

Both military leaders said career prospects will still be good.

"There will be no obstacles to any suitable qualified airman filling any position in the new and larger organization," said Air Marshal Dunlap.

"It will provide a greater incentive to the younger soldier and a challenge to all," said Gen. Walsh.

In Washington, Rear-Admiral Osmond Ples, chairman of the Canadian joint staff, expressed enthusiasm for the proposed integration and said he will do everything he can to help make the plan work.

The 50 - year - old admiral briefed American military authorities about the Canadian white paper on defence.

Cars Floated by Like Boats After Tidal Wave in B.C.

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) — The concentrated fury of a tidal wave from Alaska's death-dealing earthquake funnelled up a narrow inlet and into the heart of this Vancouver Island community early today.

The wild waters hit in a series of blows at Port Alberni, which with its twin city of Alberni, totals a total population of approximately 25,000.

No loss of life was reported but there were a number of minor injuries, in the confusion as accurate damage estimate was possible.

Cars floated by like boats in a flood surge down main thoroughfares.

The wild waters struck after rolling down from the Aleutian earthquake zone, grinding against the west coast of Vancouver Island leading its open Pacific and then taking a twisting course 40 miles inland through the Alberni inlet.

The waves grew in concentrated force as they sped through, the ever - narrowing channel. They sloshed through Port Alberni's logging industry complex and into the city centre.

Damage reports began to come in meanwhile from other west coast Vancouver Island communities.

At Port Alice, like Port Alberni at the end of an inlet leading inland from the open Pacific, the waves ripped away boat and seaplane moorings and flooded low-lying buildings.

At least 20 boats were reported washed into the bay as the highest tide on record rippled into the sheltered lumber town.

The flood damage occurred after points throughout British Columbia reported escaping without damage from the actual earthquake shock—although it gave many a person a scare.

Divergent areas where the tremors were felt included Port St. John, in northeastern B.C. near the Alberta border; in Prince George, in the geographical centre of B.C., and in the east Kootenays of southeastern B.C.

But most people in coastal Prince Rupert, 500 miles north of Vancouver and only 80 miles south of Ketchikan, Alaska, did not feel a thing.

Vancouver and Victoria were generally unaware of the earthquake — until the news was broadcast.

The tidal waves first crest struck the Alberni area shortly after midnight PST while the third and most devastating swept in at 2:35 a.m. PST.

It moved in shortly after the large wave, forcing police and rescue workers to wade through ankle - laden streets in

Canadians Forced to Mark Easter in Winter Garb

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Snow, strong winds and unseasonable cold are forcing Canadians from Manitoba to Nova Scotia to discard traditional Easter frills for fur hats and heavy coats this weekend.

Meanwhile, west coast residents basking in 80-degree temperatures were shaken up by an earthquake that caused tremors and some minor damage through British Columbia and Alberta rocking Alaska and causing widespread damage. It was also felt slightly in Alberta.

Heavy snow and bitter cold discouraged holiday travellers in the East but highways, airports, bus terminals and railway stations in western regions were swamped.

The Canadian Highway Safety councils prediction of 38 road deaths for the three-day holiday is running near accurate.

More than one-third of that total has been reached since 6 p.m. Thursday.

Manitobans are trudging through deep snow from a storm earlier this week but Alberta had temperatures near 30 degrees above zero Good Friday. Temperatures were to remain below freezing on the Prairies for the next two days. FACE SNOW

Ontario and the Maritimes face possible snow storms by Sunday.

Across the country Friday Canadians attended hundreds of special church services. Others participated in peace and anti-nuclear arms demonstrations.

Anchorage Hit Heavily, Hundreds Believed Dead As Buildings Collapse

Tidal Waves Bring Destruction, Death to Many Coastal Cities

JUNEAU, Alaska (CP-AP)— The heart of metropolitan Anchorage, a city of more than 48,000 was virtually destroyed by an earthquake that roared through Alaska Friday night, leaving a death toll that may reach several hundred.

The quake—stronger than the one that hit San Francisco in 1906—struck Anchorage at the height of the evening rush hour. Hundreds were caught out on the streets en route home in cars.

Huge cracks opened in the ground. Two in the downtown area were from six to 12 feet deep and ranged from six to 50 feet wide.

The city centre, three-storey concrete buildings —many of them quite new—tumbled or caved in upon themselves. Some were reported a total loss.

Anchorage stands at the head of Cook Inlet and as the shock and tidal waves rolled down the sound, they brought death and destruction to coastal cities.

In addition to Anchorage, Seward, Kodiak and Adak in the Aleutian island chain were believed hard hit, and Seward was reported on fire.

The earthquake started a series of tidal waves that swept down the coast of British Columbia, doing heavy damage to the Vancouver Island community of Port Alberni, and then causing havoc farther down the coastline of Washington State, Oregon and California. It spread to Hawaii and Japan.

Between 50 and 300 were reported dead at Anchorage, where buildings on Fourth Avenue — the main thoroughfare — reduced to rubble and more than 50 homes tumbled down a cliff.

HUNDREDS SAID HURT

The injured were reported in the hundreds.

The U.S. armed forces radio station in Greeley, Alaska, quoted the mayor's office at Anchorage as saying 50 to 300 persons were believed killed.

A Juneau radio station reported the death toll in Anchorage between 150 and 300.

Dick Behnke, news director at Ft. Greeley, said the Anchorage mayor's office estimate that a quarter of the city has been levelled.

Roy Bascal of radio station KINO in Juneau reported 150 to 300 persons dead in Anchorage.

In a report monitored in Vancouver by radio station CFUN, he said 50 per cent of the buildings on some streets and 90 per cent of others were destroyed.

Thirty persons were reported missing at Valdez, swept into the water when the dock upon which they were standing collapsed. Two others were reported killed in that town 150 miles due east of Anchorage on Prince William Sound.

REPORTED AFIRE

Across that sound to the west the town of Seward was reported afire.

The seismologists at the University of Washington in Seattle said the intense quake, recorded for four minutes on two hours, apparently centred in the bay east of Seward, about 1,500 miles northwest of Seattle.

Oil storage tanks at Seward ruptured and were burning through the night.

Radio station CJDC of Dawson Creek, B.C., reported that three docks were on fire and the railway was destroyed in Seward; that 26 men were missing and two were killed and a ship turned over at the dock.

Morse code reports from the Kodiak said two tidal waves hit the island, pushing buildings aside and leaving Kodiak awash.

A ham radio call monitored in Fort St. John, B.C., quoted civil defence officials at Adak as saying a "state of total confusion" existed. All services were destroyed on the island.

Cambridge Wins Easily Over 'Dark Blues'

LONDON (Reuters) — Cambridge, with Canadian John Lecky in the No. 5 position, today rowed to an easy victory over Oxford in the 110th annual running of the famed boat race on the Thames.

Lecky, the six-foot-4½ giant from Vancouver, and American John Roche Kiely of Jacksonville, Fla., in the No. 6 "engine room" spot, helped Cambridge lead from start to finish over the gruelling Putney-to-Mortlake course.

Cambridge rowed steadily down the four - mile, 374 - yard course to take victory by 6½ lengths over the Oxford University rivals.

With today's win, Cambridge has now won 61 of the last 110 races. Oxford has won 48 and one race, in 1877, was a "dead heat.

Quake Shock Waves Smash Harbors, Touch Off Blasts, Fires

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Death - dealing shock waves from the Alaskan earthquake smashed harbor facilities and touched off explosions and fires along the Pacific Coast from Canada to California Friday night and early today.

Hawaii was warned flooding in the mid-Pacific Hawaiian Islands and was noted even in distant Japan.

At Depoe Bay, Ore., a wave rolled over a Tacoma, Wash., fishing vessel on the shore at Beverly Beach State Park. One child was drowned and three persons were missing.

Short-circuit fires broke out in Crescent City, 20 miles south of the California - Oregon border, where water flowed five blocks inland, knocked down power lines and tore gas mains.

A Texaco Gulf gasoline plant in Crescent City blew up in a fiery explosion. Firemen who had been unable to reach the burning plant earlier because of high water.

A sheriff's officer at Crescent City said after five waves had hit the town: "We have a number of injuries and a number of fatalities, but I don't know how many at this time." All

May Not Get Bills Through

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has filed a notice of motion that could permit MPs to get away for a post-Easter holiday after what was believed to be an unprecedented Good Friday sitting.

The motion, placed on the order paper after the brief Friday sitting of the Commons, would allow adjournment of Parliament until April 6—provided the final spending estimates for the current fiscal year are approved by the Commons and the Senate, and given Royal assent.

The House meets at 2:30 p.m. EST Monday, with the Senate scheduled to sit at 8 p.m.

By filing the notice of motion Friday, the government met a deadline of 24 hours notice. If the $240,894,747 appropriations bill is cleared up Monday, it would permit the government to adjourn Parliament until April 6 without getting unanimous consent of all MPs.

Parliamentary observers aren't at all certain that MPs will put through the estimates bill quickly.

COULD TAKE WEEK

A government source said the debate could continue as long as MPs want—all week if necessary.

He indicated that the government had no plans to alter its delegation to Quebec City for a federal-provincial fiscal conference starting Tuesday—if the House remains in session. Prime Minister Pearson and seven of his cabinet ministers are scheduled to attend the conference.

This could leave the minority government in a precarious position if a vote was forced by the Opposition.

The Easter sittings were forced following a wrangle between the parties over the spending estimates for the fiscal year which ends March 31.

doctors and nurses in the community were summoned to Crescent City's hospital.

A series of six waves washed onto the shores of all major islands in the Hawaiian chain, doing occurred on Maui Island, 100 miles southeast of Honolulu, and at Kaneohe officials said that was minor. A wave swept into two small Maui towns and spread two to three inches of water over flat areas.

After hours of tension, the all-clear signal sounded for the islands at 1:40 a.m. HST (6:40 a.m. EST).

Wave waters heavily damaged the Vancouver Island community of Port Alberni. The wave surged 40 miles through the inlet known as the Alberni Canal and poured into the Canadian pulp and logging centre like a dam had burst," a radio station reported. The town's main hotel suffered water damage in its lobby, kitchen and dining areas.

Tidal surges 10 feet high rolled up onto Santa Catalina Island, 26 miles off the coast of Los Angeles, and caused minor damage.

Around the Tee

A rink of Rotarians, Bill Meagher, Bill Holroyd Jr., Fred McCorquodale with Bill Riley as skip journeyed to Oshawa on Wednesday for the game at the hospital and came home with the General Motors trophy and the accompanying prize, majestic blankets. The rink won their three games by scores of forfeiture margin and scored a seven-ender in their third game against Father Pyrnis of Oshawa. The boys reported the ice exceptionally keen and the competition real tough.

The final bonspiel, a mixed one, will follow the activities of the Quinte Curling Club for the season. It will start on Monday and finish on the next Saturday evening. At the conclusion of the play there will be a social evening with square dancing and all round good time. It will be the last time the members will get together for the season and the directorate is looking for a large crowd. The curling season has been a most successful one with many bonspiels being run by members of the club, the most notable one being the winning of provincial honors in mixed rink competition.

The draw has been completed for the bonspiel and it should prove a most interesting one from the standpoint of competition.

Planning Board Gets Definition Of Word Clinic

Following representations received at a special meeting Thursday evening, members of the Planning Board will decide at their next meeting what they should accept as the definition of the word "clinic."

Thursday evening fewer than a dozen members turned up at city hall for the special meeting, when only one letter and two representations were received on the question.

Proposed submission as to the meaning of the word "clinic" was given by G. Rod Cameron, solicitor for the board, who also has made application to the city to build a clinic on Dundas Street, opposite the hospital.

However, city building regulations do not spell out the definition of a clinic and the Planning Board deemed it advisable to invite submissions before specific definition was established by the city, building and zoning by-laws.

Elks Lodge Holds Initiation Ceremony

On Wednesday evening the Elks Lodge in Belleville held a special meeting and nine new members were initiated into the order. Seven others were initiated into the order. New members were William Anderson, Samuel Iverson, Donald Weeks, Edward Taylor, Robert Watson, Gilford Easton, William Hogan, Samuel Symons and Jack Moore.

This is the second initiation ceremony held by the Lodge and has held this year and brings the membership of the Lodge up to the highest it has enjoyed for several years.

Enthusiasm is high in the Belleville Lodge and the members are looking forward to a successful year and to establishing the Elks' Lodge of Belleville an asset to the city and community.

Anchorage Hit

wave struck Seward and the fire there could not be controlled. It said there were killed and more than 20 missing.

A radio report received in Fairbanks from Anchorage Seward was evacuated.

Anchorage was a stricken city. The 90 - foot - tall control tower at the airport collapsed, power went out, the submarine telephone cable to Seward went dead and for several hours there was no news from the city of 48,000, Alaska's largest.

One million gallons of jet fuel was ruptured in the huge tanks at the international airport and officials ordered Anchorage residents to stay away from the area.

The words "Anchorage is a sea of fire" were relayed by William J. Tobin, managing editor of the Anchorage Times, to the Seattle ham radio operator.

"Awaiting dawn to assess damage," the cryptic message said.

Jack Callum, the ham operator, said the message had been relayed by an emergency station at Elmendorf Air Force Base at Anchorage. Tobin asked it be relayed to The Associated Press.

CALLS OUT GUARD

The Dawson Creek radio had reported that Governor William A. Egan of Alaska had called out the National Guard and this was confirmed by Tobin.

Governor Egan has ordered the National Guard on continuous active duty, Tobin's message said. "National Guard troops have been sent home via Elmendorf Air Force Base. Donald Weeks, Edward Taylor, Robert Watson, Gilford Easton, William Hogan, Samuel Symons and Jack Moore.

Good Friday Good for Fire Department

Good Friday lived up to its name as far as the Belleville Fire Department was concerned.

There was little doing.

Two chimney fires and a false alarm provided the day's activities.

The one at 10:30 a.m. on Victoria Street was confined to the chimney and is survived by one cousin, George Keegan of this city, three brothers, Gerald Crowley, dead some years ago.

The funeral will be held from the Church of the Assumption on Monday with interment in Belleville cemetery.

The second chimney fire was at 5:30 p.m. at 20 Forbes Street and damage resulted in either case.

The false alarm run was to Meadowvale Road.

Kirkland Lake Man Held for Minister's Death

KITCHENER (CP) — Wayne Donald McKinney, 22, of Kirkland Lake has been charged with capital murder in the shooting death March 18 of an Anglican minister, police announced today.

Rev. Joseph Armstrong, 45 of neighboring Waterloo, a father of five, was found slumped in his car near the eastern limits of the city with three bullet wounds in the head.

Police did not release details leading to McKinney's arrest but said he would likely appear in court Thursday.

Mr. Armstrong left the ministry in nearby Milverton 18 months ago to sell insurance and police said he had not yet afford to keep his family on a clergyman's salary.

WAS MISSING

Earlier reports said police were searching for a hitchhiker believed responsible for Mr. Armstrong's death. A waller was missing from the slain man's hip pocket leading police to suspect that robbery was the motive for the killing.

Police said the victim was shot with a .22-calibre rifle.

Mr. McKinney was born in Windsor, Ont., graduated from Huron College, London, Ont., in 1962 and served with the Canadian navy for six years.

McKinney's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. McKinney, are both chiropractors and operate a McKinney General Health Clinic in Kirkland Lake.

McKinney was working in the Kitchener area as a magazine salesman. He left Kirkland Lake four years ago.

Britain with such force they almost broke the needle on the seismic measuring equipment in London's Science Museum.

The tremors did knock the needle off the seismograph at the St. Maur Observatory in Paris. A spokesman noted that "the recorders pick up seals only in the case of great disastrous quakes."

In Sweden, the Uppsala Seismological Institution reported that the shocks pushed its instrument to 9.5 on the Richter scale, among the strongest ever recorded.

The San Francisco quake registered 8.25 on the Richter scale.

The geophysical observatory in Pavia, Italy, said it recorded varying tremors for four hours.

Moscow's seismic station said its readings reached 11 on a 12-point scale.

Seismologists in Tokyo said they also recorded strong shocks.

HALST — In loving memory of a dear father, grandfather and great-grandfather, Halsted Ray Halst, who passed away March 27, 1962.
As the angels beckon their works are done.
Please God just let him know, That we do miss him so.
We loved and miss him so.
Sadly missed by daughter-in-law Jean and grandchildren.

MORTON — In loving memory of Mrs. Mary Ann Morton, who passed away two years ago, March 26, 1964.
Ever remembered and sadly missed by Ethel and Family.

ARNOTT — In loving memory of my dear husband and beloved father, Harold E. Arnott, who passed away March 28, 1962.
We little knew when we woke that morn,
The sorrow the day would bring.
The call was sudden, the shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear.
Wherefore it is hard to understand,
What blessings have to be,
In his wisdom he has planned,
Beyond our power to see.
—Always remembered by wife and family.

HEATH — In loving memory of a dear mother Susan J. Heath, who passed away March 27, 1964.
One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away.
—Always remembered by Ray and Hazel and Grandchildren.

RYAN — In loving memory of a dear brother, Lawrence Ryan, who passed away March 28, 1963.
While evening shades are falling,
And we sit in quiet alone,
Our heart's memory is longing,
If he only could come home.
Though we know we have lost him,
Yet we know he searches,
Our smiles hide all the while.
—Always remembered by Raymond and sister-in-law Ann.

Canadian Troops

Trakhonas, a frequent trouble-spot between the warring factions.

The remainder of the Canadians will move today to the Kyrenia area in a mountain range, 16 miles north of NO cosia.

The Canadians became operational exactly two weeks after approval by Parliament of Cyprus contingent and dispatch of an advance party.

Canadian officers said it is possible that Greeks and Turks on either side of the cease-fire line may try to test the nerves of the fresh troops, but that the Van Doos have been trained for three years not to cause any regrettable incident which might bring discredit on Canada and the UN.

The cease-fire or so-called green line runs through the heart of Nicosia's ancient, linear-walled city, a maze of narrow streets and crowded houses.

The Turks occupy the area north of the line; the Greeks occupy the main business section to the south of it.

TAKE OVER

The Canadians took over sandbagged firing position at street corners and on the roof-tops of houses. In one weapon pit were two sleeping dogs left by the vacating British 1st Parachute Battalion. At another they found boys loaned over the sandbags and passed the time of day with the soldier occupation.

The general reaction of the Van Doos privates was, "Did you ever see anything as crazy as this."

Home-made United Nations flags blossomed from gun emplacements as the change-over was accomplished without confusion.

Five armed Greeks watched the proceedings from behind a cement garden wall through which holes had been punched as rifle slits. They took their ease on benches set out under the orange and lemon trees in the garden.

The Turks did the same a block away. Neither Greeks nor Turks bothered to cry, or jeer from each other or to take cover.

The Canadians have authority from the UN to shoot to kill if attacked. But nothing seemed less likely than an attack on such a beautiful day. The British said tension along the line has declined recently.

'NOTHING TO IT'

Phil Plouffe of Quebec City, a company commander, puffed contentedly at his pipe. "Nothing to it," he said.

Pte. Richard Connor, 19, also of Quebec City, was the first man of his contingent to be on guard in an advance sandbag post between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot fortifications. Within minutes, a couple of curious Turkish-Cypriot boys came up to him and were delighted when he offered them some chewing gum.

At another point down the green line at Trakhonas a group of Greek-Cypriot policemen played host to Sgt. Maurice Sabourie of Quebec City. The Canadian sergeant was taken on an advanced Greek post by outgoing British paratroop Sgt. Bill Collins to be introduced.

The two sergeants sat in the sandbag surrounded by half-a-dozen Greek-Cypriot policemen with sub - machine - guns slung across their chests and sipped sweet Turkish coffee—the traditional Cypriot offering of welcome.

Everything appeared superficially peaceful in the warm spring sunshine.

WON'T TELL OTHERS

When the Canadians were asked what their orders were—whether they would have powers to disarmed or search and ropes, fire—they refused to answer, everyone claiming they had received strict instructions not to reveal their orders. But some of them said they could open fire in self-defence when fired upon themselves.

"We'd shoot back even if we don't have any orders on it," said L-Cpl. Claude Gravel, 24, of Montreal. Another Canadian said most of the contingent felt the same way.

A Canadian Lieutenant said the force needs more authority than the British had. "It won't solve anything if we don't get it," he said.

As the Canadians took over their duties Capt. Danny Day of Quebec City, a battalion intelligence officer who served at one time with the British parachute battalion said: "We are glad to be doing something at last."

Cpl. Edward Bourdon of Hamilton said "anything is better than that (tent) camp."

Some of the houses were left in a mess by the departing British. The Van Doors took delight in decluttering about the 11 French in front of the British soldiers who didn't understand a word they were saying.

On the roof of the four-storey apartment block which houses battalion headquarters were two sandbagged gun positions, one overlooking Greek-held territory and the other overlooking Turkish positions.

Two machine parties comprising a three-ton truck, armoured car and five jeeps and trailers left the camp here at 8 p.m. for the 40-mile drive to Trakhonas.

First reaction of the British on the Canadians' arrival was voiced by a British major with a wide grin. "We're delighted to see you take over."

The British pulled out their anti-tank platoon commanding the main road to Kyrenia where the Van Doos will send their third company later. It appeared the Canadians would have no such armament.

The two companies followed in jeeps and trucks and the takeover was finished well before the noon Friday deadline. The cooks had their stoves set up so that a hot lunch could be served. The trucks carried cartons of milk, bags of potatoes and meat as well as gas and ammunition.

The men jumped from the trucks with rifles, bazookas, camp cots and their personal kit and trudged to their new homes — a few tents and villas along the streets.

Some of the men had their pin-up pictures ready to put on the walls of their rooms. The general rule was one platoon—30 men—to a house, making for some cramped quarters. Most of the houses had tiled entrances, shutters on the windows and hardwood floors. But appearances were spoiled by the piles of sandbags at doors and windows.

A British major mentioned to Capt. Trefle Champagne of Quebec City that the latter's blue UN beret looked faded.

"Sure," the Congo's sun," Capt. Champagne replied.

Ross Striver, Accountant For Belleville Utilities for 48 Years, Retires Tuesday

The days back in 1916 when Hydro did its own house wiring and when there were less than 600 electrical customers in the entire city were recalled this week by Ross C. Stiver, accountant with the Belleville Utilities Commission, who retires March 31st after 48 years' service.

Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Stiver were guests of honor at a retirement banquet. Attending were Mayor John R. Ellis, Utility Commission officials, and more than 50 Utilities employees.

Half a century ago householders were just beginning to appreciate the convenience of electric stoves and other appliances, but hydro linemen had almost to wage a small war to get wires through the maze of trees and into homes.

In fact Mr. Stiver recalls one lineman having a warrant sworn out for his arrest for "butchering" shade trees on Victoria Ave.

The lineman hid out in Frankford until the heat was off, then returned in the night to trim the trees and run his wires—before the objector was up in the morning.

ANYTHING COULD HAPPEN

Those were the old days when almost anything could happen — and usually did.

For instance during the 'flu epidemic of 1919, when hydro repairmen were sick in bed, Mr. Stiver was utilities accountant on one occasion was actually called out to give emergency service.

Today the number of hydro users in the city has increased by nearly 10,500 and the utilities' monthly tab for power has increased from $1,200 to a whopping $90,000.

But over the years domestic hydro rates have steadily decreased and are now being only a fraction of those 50 years ago.

To illustrate Mr. Stiver compared his present electric bill of $8.45 for 1,200 kw. to $70.80 which would have been the bill at 1916 rates for the same amount of power.

Actually the Belleville Utilities Commission did not exist in 1916. The electric utility was then owned and operated by Ontario Hydro. The city purchased the distribution system in 1929 at a cost of $161,533.

Since 1916 city overhead lines have been rebuilt three times and there are now five sub-stations and plant and equipment is valued at four and a half million dollars.

The Utilities took over the city water distribution system and gas plant operation in the late 1930's. The gas plant long ago ceased operation but last year the utilities took over billing and collection of a portion of the expense in connection with the sewage disposal plan.

AWAY ONLY 34 DAYS

Mr. Stiver's 48 years with the Utilities has been almost full time. In fact, he feels he has established some kind of a record for being "on the job" and during the entire period has been away from work only 34 days due to illness.

A former Kiwanian and past chairman of the Belleville Navy League Branch, Mr. Stiver has no particular hobby to keep him busy in retirement although he admits to "doing a bit of woodcarving".

Also in the summer months he likes to do a spot of fishing.

He has two sons, Bert a conductor on the Nickle Plate Railway in Northern U.S.A. and Edwin, a corporation assessment on one occasion was actually called out to give emergency service.

Today the number of hydro users in the city has increased by nearly 10,500 and the utilities' monthly tab for power has increased from $1,200 to a whopping $90,000.

But over the years domestic hydro rates have steadily decreased and are now being only a fraction of those 50 years ago.

To illustrate Mr. Stiver compared his present electric bill of $8.45 for 1,200 kw. to $70.80 which would have been the bill at 1916 rates for the same amount of power.

The water knocked out fire MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Company operations.

Officials said the plants would be closed at least two days during mop-up operations.

The B.C. Packers Company wharf was heavily damaged while Port Alberni Engineering Works and the 70-room Barclay Hotel were severely flooded.

WATER RISES 18 FEET

Water rose to a level of 25 to 30 feet inside the engineering works, covering machinery. The main-floor lobby, kitchen and dining - room facilities of the four-floor hotel were heavily damaged.

Waters churning around a motel across the street from the hotel trapped a number of persons inside as water pressure kept doors closed.

Eyewitnesses reported hearing motel guests screaming for help as they woke up and found water swirling around their beds. They later escaped by smashing windows.

18 Killed In Mishaps Across Canada

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

At least 18 persons have been killed in accidents across Canada since the beginning of the Easter weekend, 14 of them in traffic.

Ontario accounts for more than half the total, reporting eight highway deaths, one fatal fall in a home and the death of a pilot in a small plane crash.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Thursday recorded two fatalities each in Nova Scotia, Quebec, Alberta and British Columbia.

The CP survey does not include natural or industrial deaths, known suicides or slayings.

Need instructions

In future, instructions to UN peacekeeping forces ought to be drafted more promptly. The Canadians, only members of the UN force at present on hand on Cyprus, have been without their terms of reference during their first days on the island. Until such instructions are received, the role of members of any peacekeeping force is made doubly difficult.

No matter how they act, it may be wrong.

In fact, until they get their instructions, their actions are almost certain to be out of time with their eventual role in some particulars.

The other day, for instance, Canadian troops rolled through several villages, stone-faced, firmly holding their arms.

Now this may be the way they should have acted, showing the UN flag, if they are expected eventually to take a tough no-nonsense line with both Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots.

This, though, seems to have been a second thought. Earlier an officer said they planned to visit different villages and make friends with both sides, drinking as much coffee with Greek as with Turk, as the officer put it.

That, too, would have been an excellent idea if they are expected to eventually act as conciliators, trusted by both sides and settling disputes more by diplomacy than by the threat of force.

What happened, though, was that they appeared stern-faced in villages and then picnicked on a sandy shore while British troops patiently tried to stop a new clash between Greeks and Turks in nearby village.

The picnic will have won few friends and the picnic will have taught nobody to view the UN with the proper respect.

Tempted too Early?

Moral values, says Sidney J. Harris, columnist on this page, cannot be taught in the formal sense of the term but can only be inherited.

If this be true, perhaps that decline in ethics which some people profess to see in today's youth is nothing more than another indication of the great increase in the pace of living.

When we are young, all of us have some moral values, or at least some standards of conduct to which we ourselves believe we should adhere, as distinguished from standards to which we adhere because we are afraid of adult disapproval.

All of us — well, most of us, anyway — are painfully aware of the manner in which these standards are eroded. In many cases we tell ourselves that these standards were too strict, puritanical, out of touch with today's way of life, unscientific. Even here, though, there is a nagging suspicion that in many cases we are just rationalizing, making ourselves believe what we want to believe, and aside altogether from those standards which we decide to abandon, there are those which we ignore for some immediate advantage, while still convinced in our own minds that in doing so we are thereby diminished.

Many children cheat at play. Some do not. This is not necessarily because they are upright and honest. Just as often it is the product of a keen insight and pride. It is evident that there is no real glory in a victory achieved by cheating, no proof to oneself of one's superiority. Too proud to cheat, the child continues in ways of righteousness until some black day when, in the heat of a game, the sting of repeated defeats proves too great a temptation. How bitter the victory!

And, we learn sadly, is only the beginning. As life progresses, we break our own standards time after time, or lower them permanently.

It is what life does to us — to almost all of us if we had any ethical standards to start with. And today young people face many problems, temptations and opportunities at a much earlier age than they did a generation or so ago. Let us not be too harsh if, being tempted earlier, they fall earlier.

CNR public relations at Montreal read the reference in this column to a CNR train and a CNR truck teaming up to block traffic on Pinnacle St. The CNR explanation — the truck driver tried to manoeuvre so traffic could squeeze between the train and parked cars but was unable to do so. The train, of course, could not move over. Being stuck in your right-of-ways has some advantages and saves one from being hauled up on the carpet.

There is no such thing as black magic, because there is nothing that is magic at all. Magic is the sworn foe of true religion. Magic is what you do with religion when you get rid of the intellectual and spiritual content, and you're left with the shell of superstition. — Methodist Minister Dr. Donald Soper.

From the French-Canadian Viewpoint

This is a selection of editorials or current topics, translated from the French-language press of Canada.

Quebec L'Action—President de Gaulle's visit to Mexico has been a triumph. The enthusiasm of the Mexican people can undoubtedly be explained by the exceptional character of the event; it is the first time France has come to Mexico officially. Besides, Paris has recently made $130,000,000 in credits available to the Mexicans, thus opening up economic possibilities for them.

But behind all that and in the background of the ritualistic speeches, there looms the historic fact: De Gaulle offers an alternative to the Latin American republics enclosed for so long, by now in the embrace of the United States and apparently unable to release themselves from it without falling into the arms of Moscow or Peking.

The latter visit is another stage in the grand political design of President de Gaulle, which for him sets more and more the outlines of a "third force" between the two great rival blocs, been sharing the hegemony of the world since the end of the war, Russia and the United States. In recent weeks France's "policy of delight" in international politics has been worked out at a rapid pace. Its intervention in the Laos and "neutralism". Southeast Asia, then the recognition of China and now this journey to the uncommitted world, broadcasted by the trip to Mexico.

Sherbrooke La Tribune—In recent years Canada has acquired the reputation of an effective peacefier. Its impartiality in the case of colonialism has earned it considerable prestige with other nations. Numerous United Nations peace missions have benefited by Canada's initiative and the co-operation of our country.

Our Canadians in Cyprus will have the task of maintaining peace and order. This is undoubtedly another task almost similar to that done by which can damage the liver and one of the chief ones. Note the repeated warnings about using various drugs, alcohol and solvents unless there is plenty of ventilation. Liver damage is one of the risks if you breathe the fumes in too great concentration.

Heavy drinkers often don't eat properly, so that adds to the risk to the liver damage from faulty nutrition.

But cirrhosis also sometimes attacks people who have never taken a drink in their lives, and have always been careful of diet. Some other form of poisoning, infection, or probably other less apparent factors account for these cases.

Dear Dr. Molner: At what elevation should one sleep with chronic high blood pressure? Should one live in a city near sea low, be at a 45 degree angle, or what? — Mrs. C. C. P.

This is largely a matter of personal pregnance and comfort with one important exception.

If there is a problem of morning headaches (as may be the case with people with high blood pressure) the head of the bed should be raised an inch or two.

This can best be done with small blocks of wood placed under the posts at the head of the bed, so that it slopes downward a little.

Mrs. E. K.: Since no physical cause can be found for your persistent headache at night, have you tried either a firmer mattress, or a "bed board" under the mattress? A piece of plywood, perhaps three or four feet square, placed between the springs and mattress. It sometimes helps amazingly.

Acne is one of the most terrible problems of growing up. If you are afflicted with this aggravation, or if you have children who are, write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 188, Dundee, Ill., for a copy of his helpful and comforting booklet, Acne — The Teen-Age Problem. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Cirrhosis of the Liver Not the Same as Cancer

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is cirrhosis of the liver? Is it a cancer? What causes it? — Mrs. J. O.

No, cirrhosis of the liver is not cancer. It is a hardening of the liver. Cancer of the liver is not very common. It is a form of the world, although it is in many parts of the Orient and Africa, where it can occur in a cirrhotic liver.

The liver does a complex variety of things. It provides certain digestive juices (bile; it helps filter waste products from the blood; it stores nutrients such as sugar and protein into readily available forms, and starch; it produces Vitamin A as well as forming, from iron, an important part of the blood required for healing wounds.

Destruction by any of the cells of the liver are put out of action. Fibrous tissue forms and contracts around the cells, further impairing its function.

It is surprising to realize how much of the liver can be damaged without disabling it or the patient. All the same, when the liver has reached a certain stage of this damage, there is nothing that can be done to reverse the process.

Do not let this be too discouraging, however. The problem is to prevent the damage from becoming any greater, because even a damaged liver can keep on serving you rather well for a long time. If you take care of it, that is. But abuse it, and you will pay a heavy price.

Causes of cirrhosis are varied. There also are different types of the disease, technically, but that does not change the principal pictures as I have outlined it. Cirrhosis is still liver damage, whether the immediate cause is obstruction of the blood supply, or of the bile passages, or direct infection of the cells.

Poisoning, faulty nutrition and infection are the main causes of cirrhosis, although other factors may add to the troubles.

Alcoholics sometimes get cirrhosis of the liver, and for that reason some people jump to the conclusion that "drinking is the cause of cirrhosis".

This is not always true. Alcohol is one of many poisons standing on guard, when he sings in his national anthem! (March 18).

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste—The formation of an international police force on the part of the United Nations constitutes one of this organism's first obligations: it has never been possible to achieve this objective because the UN mechanism has been defective from the beginning. The great powers have not wished to have part of their sovereignty in the hands of the Security Council.

We are still saddled with this rickety system of appealing to moral duty or allegedly neutral nations for forces to re-establish order and carry out missions of conciliation and pacification.

It is astonishing that the UN appealed to Britain to take part in the Cyprus peace mission. How can the Cypriots accept as independent and impartial soldiers the military representatives of the old occupying and imperialist power? The least that can be said is that the choice is far from being a happy one. Can this ought not to be associated itself with this manoeuvre, which strangely resembles a recrudescence of British colonialism. Canada ought not to be sending soldiers wherever the new office wants them any longer. Nevertheless that is just what has been happening. Mr. Heme's request preceded Mr. Thant's invitation. This misadventure demonstrates that it would be advantageous for the UN to possess its own international police force. The secretary-general of the UN could then carry out his peace-making work without relying on the goodwill or resents what has been most odious about colonialism for two centuries. (March 19)

Sherbrooke La Presse—Canada's troops will not be included in the UN force.

Montreal La Presse—Rumor in Ottawa is already beginning to depict Mr. Fred Martin as a hero of peace, a Nobel prize candidate, and Mr. Gilles Grégoire as a dementer of war. Grégoire would have let war break out in Cyprus, it is said in Ottawa. Thus, right away, we have the two familiar figures: The "good" Martin and the "wicked" Gregoire. We don't think things are quite that simple. Mr. Martin and Mr. Pearson have not yet won their Cyprus peace. And it has not been proved that the train of events will not vindicate Mr. Grégoire. There is less than brilliant procedures he thought it his duty to employ in his fight to block the dispatch of the Canadian contingent.

Surrounding this enterprise from the beginning, but especially since the Liberal Congress of the British prime minister, Sir Alec Douglas-Home, there has been a rather unwonted eagerness.

The striking thing in the Cyprus affair, however, remains on a question heavy with consequences for Canada and the unity of the country: that is the absence of any serious opposition in a matter that ought to be stimulated by the expression of strongly diverse opinions. One has the impression the members voted on a question about which they knew little. Three hundred and 50 members didn't vote. . . .

Once again it has been brought out how poorly equipped our Quebec members are for the great questions of foreign policy.

The UN risks coming to grief with its arms and impediments in the Cypriot adventure. . . .

Nobody thing in this story is that Greece and Turkey, the principal parties at stake, this costly drama, are linked by NATO. In Cyprus the UN is trying to the rescue of NATO!

All this, we are told, to save universal peace, six months after the signing of a nuclear treaty that Douglas-Home described as "a milestone in the human history. . . .

—Guy Cartier. (March 20)

Opening Not Mooted By Small Stores

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

We quote from a news item in your March 20th, "Major Department stores in the city have taken the lead and will remain closed on Victoria Day." This sentence could convey to your readers the impression that the small, or independently owned store was behind some movement to open on this religious holiday. Nothing could be further from the truth. In fact, it was the action of one of your so-called "major department stores" wanting to remain open that led to the opposition of the Ministerial Association and of "small" merchants, some of whom are members of the Association of Commerce in an endeavour in every way possible to discourage the opening attempt of another one.

Yours Truly,
A Small Independent Merchant.

Queen Ally Of Chaput?

Quebec City L'Action

On the surface of things and of words — beneath which to-day's emotional debate has not penetrated — an event is infinitely broader than the Atlantic lies between the Quebec separatist movement and the UN at bottom, and as always, the extremes meet.

Mr. Chaput spoke separatist with a concrete and realistic idea of its purpose, as well as of the adherence to achieve it, could consider the Queen an ally rather than enemy.

Thanks to the Crown — the only bond now uniting the confederation of many provinces, old civilizations and new-born nations within the sphere of influence of the Commonwealth — a new State of Quebec would find itself already installed in a world of several centuries old. In modern history, the French Canadians of the citizens of India are contemporaries born in the same era in the two-decade British Empire.

The kinship springing from common experiences and institutions seems to us to establish them when they meet.

Why should a Quebec separatist who dreams of a place for himself in the United Nations start out by trying to alienate a quarter of mankind and the leader of the port of some 15 nations representing all the continents? Let us greet the Queen and the Commonwealth is perhaps a pleasant student prank. It is not a policy. . . .

Besides, French Canadians have too much historical understanding to forget that the Crown's Privy Council never failed to heed the protection of Canadian Confederation in the direction of provincial autonomy.

Long before Ottawa was asked, as it is to-day, to the illogical or bicultural ferment the Crown was establishing in fact, in all its interventions in Canada, equality of the two languages beyond the letter of the constitution.

The Queen as ally of Quebec nationalism? And why not? In a sense she always has been.

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

March 26th, 1944.

Belleville Horticultural Society observed its 50th anniversary on Friday evening, when members of the organization met at the C.O.T.C. for their evening meeting. The society was formed back in 1906, fifty years ago with the late W. J. Reid acting as the first president. Since then many citizens of the city have served as officers and directors. That the society was in a sound financial condition was indicated by the report read at the meeting, which showed $378.82 as the balance on hand as of Dec. 31st, 1943. At the meeting a letter of thanks was read from Mrs. Tw. . . daughter, Enfield Manor, Orford, Eng., expressing thanks for vegetable seeds which had to be distributed throughout England. The society is sending seeds this year, as well.

A letter was read from the Horticultural section of the Hydro Electric Power expressing appreciation for the members judging gardens in this district. The winners were Mrs. J. C. Palmer of Sidley Avenue, and Mr. J. D. Mawsey of Gordon Street. A letter also was received from the Public Utilities Commission thanking the society for planting done at the Filtration Plant.

Officers elected for the year included Mrs. J. B. Findlay, Mr. A. B. Baird and Miss Helena Lynch as honorary presidents; Mr. A. R. Symons as president; Mr. J. Soyle and Mr. J. C. Palmer as vice presidents, with Mr. J. Watson as secretary-treasurer.

30 YEARS AGO

Mayor George H. Ellis and the relief committee have made arrangements for relief work to be resumed on Cockburn Island for an indefinite period, and about two hundred men were given time again on Monday morning. Thirty new men were called by the relief clerk at the city hall to replace men whose time had expired on Saturday, and the work for them was stopped last Wednesday. The Mayor cannot say how long the city can afford to keep on this relief program, but he hopes for the best.

Mrs. Walter Aselstine, Grove Street, entertained the members of Mrs. B. Colden's group of Christ Church Guild, at a most enjoyable euchre party on Thursday evening. The first prize was won by Mrs. Redfern.

A surprise party was held in honor of Miss L. W. Colgier, Madoc Road, to mark the occasion of her birthday on Saturday evening. About fifteen friends were present and the evening was passed in an enjoyable manner. Mrs. Colgier received numerous lovely gifts.

40 YEARS AGO

March 28th, 1924.

Here is an interesting item from our file copy at this time in 1904 which will be of interest to some older citizens who were boys and girls at the time. The Daisy Lyric Club held its weekly rehearsal in the Collegiate Institute evening. Evrything is favorable to a first class presentation of the operetta on the evening of April 18th in the opera house. Need Housing For Minor Hockey Players

TRENTON — Everything is shaping up nicely for the Trenton Lions' Club Midget All-Star Hockey Tournament to be held March 30, 31 and April 1 at the Trenton Community Gardens. Lions are arranging shifts to handle the influx of youthful athletes. Donald McPherson and his committee have been hard at work billeting the boys to private homes. The wives of the club members are co-operating and many other interested persons have offered to provide the outside team members with a place to sleep and breakfast. One kind lady has offered to put up eight or ten of the boys and while few have enough accommodation to do this, the Lions would appreciate more volunteer "parents" for the duration of the tournament.

In all, 384 boys and their accompanying adults are expected, but accommodation must only be found for 288. Some of the teams come from such centres as Orillia, Brampton, Kingston, Stamford, Welland and the Toronto area. Others come from Belleville, Cobourg and Kingston and these will be able to go home each night of the tournament. The boys' ages run from 14 to 16.

Man Dies at Wheel of Car

TRENTON — A retired civil servant Joseph Henry Nobes, 68, of 216 Byron Street, Trenton, suffered a heart seizure at the wheel of his car around 10.45 a.m. on Division Street in Trenton on Thursday and is thought to have died instantly. The vehicle went out of control and struck the back of a large utilities truck parked at the side of the road. Utilities workmen endeavored to render first aid treatment but Mr. Nobes was pronounced dead upon arrival at hospital.

Mr. Nobes, who had been boarding with Mrs. Florence Whitton on Byron St., is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Leo (Nora) Shoot and Mrs. John (Irene) Robb, both of Toronto; a son, William, also of Toronto and another son, Patrick of Whitehorse, Yukon Territory.

Raise Money For Red Cross

By schools — Mc.Innes Sr. Public School, $185.62; Dufferin, $162.75; Colborne, $100; Prince Charles, $94; Queen Elizabeth, $36.80; North Trenton, $16.15. A $5 donation was also received.

Expect Increase In Students

TRENTON — Public school enrollment for September is expected to total 2240, according to supervising principal V. P. Carswell. Present enrollment is 2140. Mr. Carswell said on Thursday that he had received no resignations from public school teachers, hence was looking for no replacements at this time.

Meanwhile, high school principal John Garrett expects an

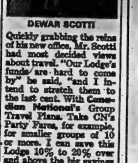
Mrs. A. Martin 103 Years Old Good Friday

PICTON (Staff) — On March 27, 1863, a baby girl was born in Bloomfield. On March 27, 1964, this little girl had her 103rd birthday, and had the usual cake with candles and a small party.



Mrs. Angelina Martin, who has lived with her son Bruce and Mrs. Martin, at Martin's Outlet Park since her husband died some 28 years ago, is a mighty spry "young" woman, that is for her age.

She still gets around by herself, and the stairs offer no problem for her. Her hearing has failed a little, but she claims her eyesight is better than it was when she reached the 100 mark, two years ago.

The last few days she has come down with a slight cold, and while it is not bothering her too much, her sons thought that she would be better without the party and all the well-wishers this year, so the immediate family gathered around at Bruce's home, and they all celebrated the birthday party quietly.

Mrs. Martin received congratulatory telegrams from the Prime Minister, Lester B. Pearson, and Premier John Robarts, plus a great number of

Assumes Responsibility for Group's Travel

DEWAR SCOTT!

Quickly grabbing the reins of his new office, Mr. Scotti had most decided views about travel. "Our Lodge's funds are hard to come by" he said. "And I intend to stretch them to the last cent. With Canadian Northeast's Group Travel Plans. Take CN's Party Fares, for example, for small groups of 10 or more. I can save this Lodge 10% to 20% over and above the big savings on Red 'Bargain' and White 'Economy' Days. And, for larger groups, I'm going to use CN's Charter Coach Plan. Think of it. We can enjoy a coach exclusively for the entire trip at a rock-bottom price. 50 Lodge members, travelling in their own CN coach, can save as much as 33⅓%. We've got ourselves a real bargain. We can even charter our 'own' sleeper for overnight trips. It keeps the group together — and solvent! See why I was elected Travel Officer!"

How much does it cost to heat this 6-room house electrically?

This 6-room home is owned by Mr. and Mrs. J. Ferren of Peterborough, Ontario. In his own words, here's what Mr. Ferren has to say about the cost of electric heating:

"Last winter, which I consider a severe winter, our electric heating cost us $155.00. Comparing that with friends who have other heating systems, I think I've done much better. We keep the living room and kitchen around 70 degrees (the bedrooms are sometimes set a little lower) and we are very comfortable all winter."

Electrically-heated homes insulated to Hydro standards cost no more to heat than homes with other systems. In fact, in many areas in Ontario it actually costs less to heat a home electrically.

AND LOOK AT THE COMFORT ADVANTAGES YOU ENJOY

Flameless electric heating is the cleanest heating possible. Since it doesn't burn fuel, it cannot possibly create dust, smoke or dirt.

With electric heating you can have a different temperature in every room because you can have a thermostat in every room. You enjoy even, comfortable, healthful warmth —always. Consider the extra living space you gain with electric heating because it needs no furnace . . . no bulky fuel storage tanks!

Maintenance is eliminated. Annual cleaning and inspection are not needed. No dirt is created and there are no filters to clean or replace. Electric heating is the most carefree heating system of all.

With all its advantages, is it any wonder so many people throughout Ontario are turning to electric heating for the comfort, convenience, and economy they want in a heating system.

ELECTRIC HEATING FOR YOUR PRESENT HOME

If you are planning home extensions or if parts of your home are not now properly heated, you can install supplementary electric heating for less than it costs to extend your present heating system.

Electric heating is one of the many comfort features of the famous Medallion all-electric homes. For full information, consult a qualified electric heating contractor or your Hydro.

Brief Marriage Does Not Call for Return of Gifts

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We have searched the etiquette books and can't find the answer. The situation is so unusual, however, perhaps the answer can be found only in a psychiatrist's text book.

Miss X and Mr. Y were married in a beautiful church ceremony after six months of pleasing. Six days later the bride returned to the home of her parents and announced that the marriage was finished. The groom is still honeymooning — by himself.

There is no chance of reconciliation. The girl has made that clear.

What we want to know is this: Should the wedding gifts be returned? The couple also received some sizable cheques from relatives. Thank you for your guidance. — THE INQUIRERS.

DEAR IN — Married people are not required to return wedding gifts. It matters not whether the marriage lasted five minutes or 50 years.

In our society the wedding gifts belong to the bride. If, for purely personal reasons, the bride wishes to return certain gifts which came from the groom's relatives she can do so, but it is up to her.

Consult a lawyer about the cheques. In some states this could be considered community property.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a bartender in a busy little club. My wife works there, too. She is a receptionist.

Rosie loves to dance and she is good at it. It seems that whenever I look up she is dancing with someone new and some girls. I've told her this looks cheap and I don't like it. She says it's good for business.

We have been married three months and can't get by without her income so please don't tell me she ought to quit her job and stay home.

Maybe I should tell you we met at this club and Rosie used to dance with the customers before we were married. I didn't mind then, but I do now. Thanks a lot for any help you can give me. — BIG RED.

DEAR RED — Rosie should stick to her receptionist duties. Giving up dancing with strangers is a small thing to ask in the interests of building a good marriage.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have read your column for many years and agree wholeheartedly with most of your ideas. I would like to respectfully suggest, however, that you reword one line of advice which you frequently write. It is:

"To the husband or wife who has lived through the trials and tribulations of a triangular affair you often say: "Forgive and forget." I believe it should be, "Forgive and learn from it." It is not possible to forget, even after many years.

There is something to be gained from every experience, even though it may appear to be a total disaster. I had a bitter and heartbreaking experience which involved an unfaithful husband and a friend. We confronted them, we took inward and do some serious soul-searching. I came out of it a whole person — and a better one.

Of course I still remember, but I forgave — and I learned from it. — MRS. VA.

DEAR VA — I agree that every experience can be a useful one if it teaches us something.

When I say "forget" I don't mean it literally. By "forgetting" I mean the incident should be thrown into the vault of the guilty person or used as a club with which to beat him over the head for the rest of his natural life.

Thank you for an excellent letter.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS — BY PATRICIA LAWES

ENTERTAINING ON THE PATIO

Question: I went into town the other day to do some shopping. Since I hadn't seen a particular friend in a long time, I called and suggested we have lunch. She named a good restaurant and we had a most pleasant time. When the waitress brought the check, however, I was dumbfounded when my friend ignored it and didn't even ask what her share was when I started groping in my bag for my wallet. I paid the check, even left the tip, and, when we got outside, she still made no motion to repay me for part of it. Believe me, I did not invite her to lunch, but only suggested we lunch together. I was flustered to say more than goodbye and then ran to catch my bus, but I certainly don't want to get into such a mag again. What should I have done under the circumstances? — Mrs. V. B., Tarrytown, N. Y.

Answer: Obviously your friend thought you had invited her to lunch, so next time you call be more specific. Underline "Dutch treat" if lunch is friend. If friend seems to think you're paying just because you're the first to examine the bill, you can just suggest "Let's split this down the middle," to eliminate any false impression that you're a check-grabber.

Question: My brother-in-law and his wife are coming to visit with us for a few weeks. They live on the West Coast, and we don't get a chance to see them. He's taking his vacation early this year, and they intend to spend it with us. In the nice time, though, friends have invited us to a big house party, and asked us to stay for the weekend. It would have to be a weekend during our relatives' visit. Would it be permissible for us to accept, anyway, and leave our guests alone for a few days? I'd love to go to the party, but my husband fears it would be rude to go off and leave our guests for even such a short time. What do you think? — Mrs. C. F., Wilmington, Del.

Answer: It would be quite inhospitable to invite guests to your home then go off and leave them on their own. Your first responsibility is to your own house guests, so, unless they can be included, outside invitations should be declined for the duration of their visit.

Sorority Chapter Elects New Officers

Xi Alpha Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held their March meeting in the home of Mrs. Robert Farquharson and Mrs. Albert Cunningham, with the president, Mrs. George Sadgrey, presiding.

Mrs. J. Joblin and Mrs. Farquharson spoke on the topic "India and Southwestern Asia" at the first meeting of the month, Mrs. M. Binnings and Mrs. Cunningham were in charge of the second meeting, speaking on the same subject. In connection with her speech, Mrs. Cunningham introduced her sister-in-law, Mrs. R. A. Elliott, who told the members about India where she and her husband had lived for some time. She showed most interesting slides to illustrate her talk.

The slate of officers for the coming year was accepted as presented by the nominating committee: president, Mrs. G. Thornton; vice-president, Mrs. J. Lo Acton; recording secretary, Mrs. J. R. Patrick; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. Smith and treasurer, Mrs. M. Binnings.

The president read a letter from the Hartford Sorority inviting the chapter to a theatre party in June at the Shakespearean Festival Theatre.

The first meeting in April is to be in the form of a luncheon at the Tops Motel.

Going Places

Long History of Genoa, Italy, Most Fascinating to Review

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

GENOA, Italy — Of all the famed and tourist-burgeoned cities of Italy, the last visited, and least spoiled is Genoa. It is also the least deserving of such slight.

Its history rings with such storied but notable names as Marco Polo, Paganini, Pizarro, Columbus, Lord Byron, and of course, the ubiquitous Columbus — by you guessed it — is said to be buried here, as he is said to be buried in at least three other places.

If Columbus is not buried here, he was at least born here, and the tiny crumbling house still stands on a downtown corner, reverently preserved only a stone's throw from a gantry new skyscraper. He certainly sailed from here, and so did Marco Polo hundreds of years before, laying the groundwork for the curiosity which inspired the Admiral.

Three thousand years ago Genoa was a city, and 2,000 years ago it was the seat of the mighty Ligurian merchant empire.

Past and present jumble together inextricably in what is still Italy's most important seaport, ah important corner in the booming southern industrial triangle formed with Turin and Milan. Its medieval and baroque ornaments form its setting for the palaces and villas of royal princes and ancient merchant princes still standing in haughty grandeur on its major streets.

CITY SPREAD AROUND

The city spreads around the hillsides of the Ligurian Apennines like an amphitheatre, San Francisco with Renaissance palazzos, ancient fortresses and more over the scene from the mountain - tops. In the city beneath, the endlessly winding cobbled streets twist over and around the hills, past gardens and villas and mansions, and open above broad hillside squares and promenades made for wandering.

Each building has its own style and history, such as the statue-lined gilt facade of the Gold Palace, the rosy stone of the Pink Palace, and the treasures of Paganini's violin and Columbus' letters (this is where his ashes are supposed to lie in an urn).

On the Via Cavour stands the Peroni Palace, a tiered-and-terraced classic example of a Renaissance villa.

Through the ancient Vaccha Gate Re-presides of the old city and San Giorgio Square appears. Here is the world's oldest bank, dating from Marco Polo's time, as well as the black and white striped stone turrets of the San Lorenzo church, where a British cannonball landed but did not explode during a 1941 naval bombardment.

The most breathtaking of all of Genoa's many sweeping views are from the Castello Doneso, made in the dignified old Mura delle Cappuccine section.

Ahead spreads the shining pool and wrought - iron - decorated roofs of the Porta de Millone historical section. To the left it sprawls vast Victoria Square and its display of the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria, Columbus' ships.

From the Spanata de Castelleto the tumbledown buildings and tortuous alleys of the old quarter are viewed from above, dominated by the modern tiers of the university building.

In the old quarter is what is known as the Black Market, which isn't a black market at all but a public market place offering everything from gold jewelry by the ounce to fresh fish.

In aromatic stalls on the Via Prie, a few lire buys a newspaper full of fried mackerel dosed in lemon and olive oil, a pizza made of ground chick peas and soaked over an open log fire, a spinach pie with cheese crust, or cakes of the famed Genoa salami.

Do-it-yourself gourmets can buy glistening Ravioli forms, garlic presses, espresso machines, and adjustable, spaghetti drapers of the type that were making square spaghetti from homemade dough hundreds of years before the Prince macaroni people "invented" it.

TOUGHEST STREET

Between the graded streets of the Old Port and the present waterfront lies Via Granscel, perhaps the oldest and toughest waterfront honky tonk street in the world. Often called the Europe that time forgot, today bear names like Zanzibar, Miami and Hawaii. But Columbus' sailors knew the street.

Genoa's preoccupation with the classic is summarized in the Staglieni Cemetery, probably unique in the world.

Surrounding a crowded burial ground from which remains are routinely transferred to make room after a given number of years, a perticued arcade holds some 2,500 memorial statues of affluent deceased citizens.

The monuments are among the finest and most exquisitely detailed examples of 19th Century baroque sculpture. Standing in front of each family vault, many monuments are groupings, often depicting the deceased's life's work and his grieving relatives, their sorrow frozen in marble for eternity.

Here are entombed, among others, members of the illustrious Grimaldi family (relatives of Monaco's Prince Rainier), the mighty Andrea Doria family, and others.

Most touching, however, is the monument to a peasant lady, a biscuit vender, who saved her pennies during her lifetime and posed for the statue. It is dated two years before she actually died because she wanted to see it complete.

Mrs. Keeble opened her home for the March meeting of Park Dale Women's Institute with Mrs. Brown in the chair. Business included payment of the Institute's share of the cost of the then stove for the community centre. A report on current events was given by Mrs. Stratton. A successful bake sale was held during the day and was concluded by playing euchre.

QUESTION: Many years ago my mother made Potato Cakes, using mashed potatoes, meat, flour — making a depression in the centre, placing therein a couple of pieces of salt pork, baking them until browned and the pork cooked. Unfortunately I do not know the ingredients used and would like to hear from someone of Yorkshire or Lincolnshire, England ancestry, who know these cakes. Any help will be appreciated. — Mrs. G. S. ANSWER: I am not familiar with the potato cakes with meat that you request. Yorkshire or Lincolnshire gals who recognize these potato cakes and have the recipe, please come to our rescue, writing it out and mailing it to me in care of this newspaper.

NOTE:

On March 13th I gave here a recipe for Egg Rolls for Finn Sance to be served with Egg Rolls. The reader offered me her tested Egg Roll recipe and I accepted.

Egg Rolls (chicken—tested by Mrs. H. G. H.) (makes 12 egg rolls).

Filling: 1 cup diced onion, 1 cup thinly sliced celery, 1 teaspoon cooking oil (preferably peanut), 1 tablespoon soy sauce, 2 cups diced cooked or canned chicken.

Batter (similar to French Crepes): Four eggs, 1¼ cup water, 1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon salt, peanut or cooking oil.

Filling Method: Combine onion, celery and oil in a small saucepan over. Cook over low heat 10 minutes, or until just soft. Stir in soy sauce; pour over chicken in a bowl and mix. Let rest while making pancakes.

Pancake Method: Beat eggs, add water and salt until well beat in flour and salt until smooth. (Batter is thin.) Heat an 8" frying pan slowly; test temperature by sprinkling in a few drops of water. When drops skip right. The theme and message was based on the verses, "Greater love hath no man." The singing was excellent and made pleasing by the harmonious blending of the voices. The matron, Mrs. H. Yorke thanked the members of the choir, individually and collectively, and in her words expressed the appreciation of the residents of the home.

Dinner Menus

SATURDAY

Beef Stew with Vegetables and Dumplings; Cole Slaw with Pineapple; Jelly Roll; Tea.

SUNDAY

(Easter)

Rhubarb (see Wednesday) or Grape Juice Cocktail (optional); Glazed Ham with Peach Glaze and Peach Halves (see Wednesday); Stuffed Baked Potatoes (see Wednesday); Savory Wiener Succotash (see Wednesday) or Fresh Frozen Asparagus; Spring Salad Bowl with French Dressing (see Wednesday); Pineapple Cheesecake Pie (see Thursday); Coffee.

To Fill: Spoon ¼ cup chicken mixture slightly off centre on baked side of each pancake. Fold short end over filling, then fold both sides toward centre and roll up, jelly - roll fashion, starting at open end, to completely enclose filling; fasten with 1 or 2 toothpicks. Place in shallow dish; cover, chill over night — very important for crispy "jacket". Heat peanut or cooking oil to depth of 1½" to 400 deg. in an electric or deep heavy frying pan. Drop in 2 rolled rolls, 2 or 3 at a time; fry, turning once, 3 to 5 minutes or until golden and crisp. Drain on paper towelling. Keep rolls hot in warm oven until all are cooked. Remove picks; serve rolls with Plum Sauce (March 19th).

ANSWER: Thanks, Mrs. H. G. H., from me and for our Chinese food fanciers.

Others who would like to have the recipe, please come to our rescue, writing it out and mailing it to me in care of this newspaper.

Egg Rolls (chicken—tested by Mrs. H. G. H.) (makes 12 egg rolls).

Filling: 1 cup diced onion, 1 cup thinly sliced celery, 1 teaspoon cooking oil (preferably peanut), 1 tablespoon soy sauce, 2 cups diced cooked or canned chicken.

Batter (similar to French Crepes): Four eggs, 1¼ cup water, 1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon salt, peanut or cooking oil.

Filling Method: Combine onion, celery and oil in a small saucepan over. Cook over low heat 10 minutes, or until just soft. Stir in soy sauce; pour over chicken in a bowl and mix. Let rest while making pancakes.

Pancake Method: Beat eggs, add water and salt until well beat in flour and salt until smooth. (Batter is thin.) Heat an 8" frying pan slowly; test temperature by sprinkling in a few drops of water. When drops skip right. The theme and message was based on the verses, "Greater love hath no man." The singing was excellent and made pleasing by the harmonious blending of the voices. The matron, Mrs. H. Yorke thanked the members of the choir, individually and collectively, and in her words expressed the appreciation of the residents of the home.

FROM THE HOLY LAND

"To awaken quite alone in a strange town is one of the pleasant sensations in the world. You are surrounded by adventure." — from "Baghdad Sketches" by Freya Stark.

Since this is the most considerable time of year in which to travel, I have just spent a day in the Holy Land in memories and "To Arise" writes Mary Boyce in the Trenton Times, who is a frequent visitor in Trenton, whom you may know: Mr. and Mrs. George Boyce, Boyce Road, managing Dentar Paper Mill and Mrs. Boyce is editor of the annual bulletin of University Women's "Chronicle", having a wide circle of friends in Belleville.

By their kindness, at this Association, we've given a glimpse of the Near East through Mary's eyes. A recent University of Toronto graduate in Philosophy, Mary is pursuing her desire to see and learn first hand more about Israel in general and the "kibbutz" in particular, which is comparable to Kingsway-by-the-Sea, originated by Owens in the 1930's. This is most interesting, and more of it later. But for today, we read:

"Actually I spent only one day in the latter place (Tel Aviv) as I didn't find it too interesting. That sounds a little meaningful, especially since it was the first time I'd been there; means that it didn't immediately interesting or beautiful to the visitors; it is entirely new(built in this century), the architecture is fairly uniform, it is large (pop. 200,000) and busy. . .

In Jerusalem, I kept wishing that I knew the Bible far better than I do. There is very much there dating back to Biblical times (or purporting to do so). My friend enlisted many Bible stories for me, some of these fabulous, and was appalled that I knew or could remember so little.

I visited Mount Zion and King David's Tomb and the Catacombs Tombs (where the 73 wise men members of the government of Israel were buried 1,800 years ago. The tombs look like catacombs.)

And I saw things of more recent historical interest, such as the Knesset (parliament) and the Mendelbaum Gate which is the only point of passage between Israel and the Arab countries via Jordan.

Also, I went to two places near Jerusalem, where there was a magnificent view of the surrounding countryside-Mt. Kerion where, from the Russian Orthodox monastery, top of which St. John (the Baptist was buried, one can see a great valley of olive groves and Arab villages of fine Arab architecture (in Israel). And to Ramat Rachel, a kibbutz which was destroyed seven times in this recurring history while defending Jerusalem against Arab attack. Here have been recently discovered and now partly unearthed, the complete remains of a Byzantine palace.

From an observation point, several hundred feet above the surrounding countryside and only a few yards from the border, one can see, on clear days, as far as the Dead Sea. When I was there it was hazy, but I could Bethlehem about seven kilometers away and the church there is the oldest one in Christendom (the oldest anywhere), and, beyond Bethlehem, the Hebron Hills and the Desert of Judah; in the opposite direction, the whole of Jerusalem, and Mount Scopus.

Jerusalem is also interesting in that it is three quarters surrounded by Jordan. The barrier consists of barbed wire, but that it is an unfriendly border is emphasized by the warning signs in four languages and the Jordian guns. (I couldn't see any Israeli guns but I'm sure they're there.) Beyond the barrier, there is a no-man's land or abandoned buildings. Beyond this, one can see clearly into Jordan; Old Jerusalem and Arab villages.

The contrast between the two sides is striking — the industry and careful use of land on the Israeli side and the barrenness and poverty of Jordan. Perhaps one shouldn't feel too sorry for the thousands of Arab refugees from Israel who do nothing but sit in their hovel or tents and collect U.N. ration cards. Of course, it requires fantastic idealism to do what the Israelis have done: build farms and towns in the waste land and desert which was once no different from what most of Jordan is now. . .

I am just beginning to get my geography of the Middle East straight. Israel is surrounded by (from the north, clockwise) Lebanon, Syria, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Egypt. . .I think that this plus the very smallness of Israel makes it seem quite oppressive in time, and may be a large reason why so many Jews leave Israel. . . .

The hospitality was fantastic, people were very friendly and warm, asked me all sorts of questions, especially about Canada. (Most had never met a Canadian before). . .

Also, my digestive system couldn't stand the immense quantities of food, some of it very exotic. As soon as we entered a house, out came the food; tangerines, apples, candies, pieces of cake, tea, coffee and hot chocolate. If it was close to the host's mealtime, a whole meal was prepared from crushed nuts, meat with aromatic spices, noodles with eggs and spices, Arab-type olives, potato pancakes, omelettes, etc.

In case the visitor is shy of saying 'yes' to any food and drink, and even when he says 'no thanks', everything available is set before everyone present. If he declines, the host feels hurt; if he accepts, more is brought. So there was no way of escaping the food.

The first two nights in Jerusalem, I stayed at the YMCA which is a beautiful building, one of the cultural centres of the city and one of its best hotels. However, many of the people I visited were shocked that I should pay $9.35 Is. pounds (about $2.80) per night for a hotel, (including breakfast), and I was offered about 20 private homes to which to stay. I began to wonder if I would ever be able to leave Jerusalem: people kept me eating and talking until it was too late in the day to return to Sarid.

Finally I put my foot down because I couldn't eat any more. At the last house I was at, the family insisted in filling every remaining space in my purse and light bag with fruit and cookies and bread. To the natives, a five-hour trip is a very long journey.

The people I met are wonderful — very simple and open, generous and hospitable. They are mostly unskilled or skilled workers; truck drivers, laborers, mechanics, etc. One is a Latin teacher, one does Persian silver filigree work, another is an officer in the Israeli army. . . They are not well educated, but bright. Also they are poor and live in tiny apartments or very old, crumbling houses. However, it is very difficult to find wealth in Israel. Even if one has money, there is a two or three year waiting list for apartments in the cities. . .Beyond the means of the average person are cars, electric ranges, refrigerators, phonograph records, washing machines, etc. Imported clothes are out of the question (except second-hand) and Israeli-made clothes are generally simple; substantial, made for use, without ornamentation. People here, except for the rich do not dress stylishly. They dress for working, e.g. few women wear bell heels, nor wear hats. Very sensible. . .

"I hope to return to Jerusalem; there is much there I didn't see at all or would like to see again. There is a Hebrew University and the exhibit of the Dead Sea Scrolls and Mount Herzl (Herzl was the founder and great leader of the Zionist Movement) It's too late now as I think I'd known it then: there was a display of Canadian books in Jerusalem while I was there."

May we wish all our readers a very Happy Easter!

Club Activities

WEDDING RING CLUB.

The Wedding Ring Club of College Hill United Church held their March meeting on Monday in the social hall of the church with 15 couples and two guests present.

The president, Lewis MacMinn opened the meeting and was in charge of business. The committee in charge of the new P.A. system reported on the progress. The treasurer's report showed two successful nights financially of the Variety Show.

Plans are being made for a car wash by the men and a bake sale by the ladies. It was announced that the Belleville Presbytery Club dance would be held at Club Canara on April 10th.

The meeting was turned over to Don and Muriel Dafoe's group. The theme of the devotions was in keeping with the Easter season, with Orlena Lott, Don Dafoe and Frayne MacDonald taking part.

Annie Dickens introduced Mr. and Mrs. John Parrott who showed slides on their trip to the Holy Land. These proved most interesting and appropriate especially at this season.

Refreshments were served by group in charge.

Successful Living

Erring Mother Is Weak, Cannot Depend on Her

DEAR DORIS — Just about two years ago my wife left me and our two teen-age girls. She is living in a shack with her unmarried male cousin.

For the last year and a half she has corresponded with us and always tells the girls: "Mommy loves and misses you and is coming home to look after you," but she never comes, except once a year. After taking quite a beating from this cousin, she came home. She had a black eye and a number of bruises. She stayed five days and then left with the ladies. It was announced that the Belleville Presbytery Club dance would be held at Club Canara on April 10th.

My daughters keep asking me if I think Mommy will come home. I tell them to keep loving her and praying for her and I think she will. Am I doing right? You see I have proved I can get along without her, but she is still my wife and the children's mother, and I still love her and want her to come home.

If you think I am living in hope and will die in despair, please tell me. — DESERTED.

* * *

DEAR DESERTED — Whatever the future holds, your wanderer didn't love you all enough to stay with you. Perhaps homemaking meant too much responsibility. Perhaps her age was the most moonlight and roses — a sort of adolescent glamor!

In the face of temptation a stronger personality would have stayed by the ship.

Help your daughters to understand what is happening and don't count on anything. If your wife does come back, it may be when she is a little worse for wear — and abuse. Which won't mean she wants to take over again but needs to be cared for herself.

Women's Institute

(HILLIER W.I.)

The Hillier Women's Institute meeting was held recently at Hillier hall at which time the president Mrs. Jordan opened the meeting in the usual manner.

Mrs. R. Cunningham read the minutes and correspondence. Mrs. W. Cunningham and Mrs. L. Jordan who had attended the District executive meeting at Picton reported on various items of business at this meeting. The district picnic will hold a convention at the Ontario Agriculture College in Guelph in June with Mrs. W. Cunningham delegated to attend. The F.W.I.C. convention will be held at Acadia University, Wolfville, Nova Scotia from June 23 to 26 and it was arranged for exhibits to be sent to this convention.

The nomination committee for the slate of officers for the annual meeting includes Mesdames W. Wright, H. Wiese and L. McCartney. It was decided to hold the next card party the first part of April in Hillier Hall.

Following the program which was based on current events and arranged by Mrs. S. Foster, refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

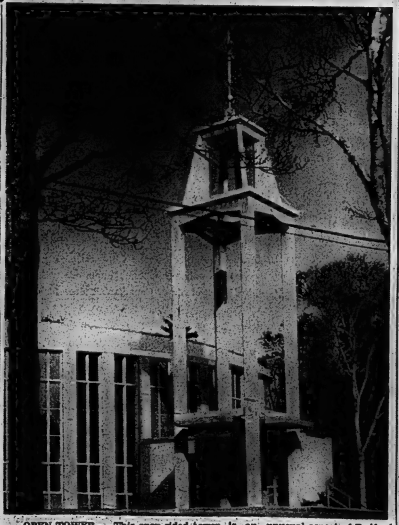
Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON



THE CHEERFUL SONG

Of all bright bird songs of spring, none is more cheerful than the song sparrow's. And what a thrill we get on hearing our "first" for the year! The robin actually seems to say "Cheer-up, cheerily"; but the true feeling of cheer is in the voice of the song sparrow. There are certain "rules" for the song. It should start with three identical notes followed by a trill and then a variety of notes. But even these rules are not always kept, and the variety of notes is assuredly a variety. No two song sparrows sing the same song. And the surprising thing is that in spite of all the differences this is one of the easiest birds to identify by its song. The voice is unmistakable.

SPECIAL VERSION

Clear and true the song rings out in the individual's own special version, which seems to intensify the feeling of cheerfulness. This is not just the song of a particular species, it belongs to the very bird we are listening to. And with scarcely a moment's pause, it is given over and over.

Then all we have to do is follow the voice until we come upon a small, sparrowlike bird, probably perching on a bare br nch somewhat above eye level, or possibly on a fence post, his little throat distended in songs so that the white feathers stand out and vibrate. If we get a front view, identification is sure and simple. A dark triangle is distinctly visible on the white breast with dark, broken lines on each side. The long, rounded tail hangs down as the bird sits in an upright position, in flight the tail is pumped up and down.

Few Churches Now Built in the Traditional Style Seen a Generation Ago

By ALEXANDER FARRELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Church architecture is breaking off the traditional forms in Canada.

There is a widespread desire for a break with traditionalism in buildings, according to a Cross-Canada Survey among clergymen and architects by The Canadian Press. But no one contemporary style has emerged.

"We are in a period of experiment," says William Goulding, architect, author of architectural texts at the University of Toronto. "There is no generally accepted ecclesiastical statement that embodies the idea of a church today. Few churches now are built in the traditional style in which they were built even a generation ago."

Architect Evan St. Golais of Montreal, Que., says a complete break with architectural tradition is in process, comparable in the Roman Catholic Church to the reform movement in the field of liturgy.

The Saguenay Valley, where Mr. St. Golais lives and works, is well on the way to becoming a showcase of contemporary Catholic church architecture, with such examples as St. Raphael's and Notre Dame de Fatima in Jonquiere, St. Marie in Bagotville and Notre Dame de la Baie in Port Alfred.

OLD IDEAS GO

The break with tradition, affecting Catholics and Protestants alike, often results in a building that looks like anything but a church or at least fails to fit inherited notions of what a church is supposed to look like.

To Prof. Goulding, modern church architects are "piling ideas in search of the appropriate style for the increasingly mobile and suburban society that exists today."

Warnett Kennedy of Vancouver, executive director of the British Columbia architectural institute, says contemporary church design in Canada tends to be "theatrical."

"Churches look to be built, not by architects, but by Hollywood stage-set designers striving for novel and bizarre effects. Designers have no particular beliefs; they seem to attempt dramatic effects with tricks of lighting, hidden windows, bizarre roof shapes. There is quite a bit of stunting with structural forms."

A dissenting view at the opposite end of the country is held by architect Bill Ryan of St. John's, Nfld., who says the slim Gothic church design is "not interesting outlandish designs for the sake of it, but an effort by the architect to say something, taking into account the wants and needs of the congregation."

Mr. St. Golais says form is dictated by the atmosphere we breathe.

LOOKS LIKE TENT

St Raphael's in Jonquiere is often compared to a tent, with its two sweeping sides that just fail to meet at the top. The parish priest, Rev. Roland Laroche, says the similar is appropriate, "for the first work of man was a tent."

Hamilton's Trinity United Church has no windows. Soft diffused light shines from opposite walls to give an unusual glow.

Architect James A. Strutt says Trinity United "reflects a concrete simplicity of design, approaching more nearly the purpose of traditional Gothic or Byzantine churches."

Mr. Kennedy is inclined to favor traditional styles because, to the modern eye, they express uniquely the idea of religion. "Churches should not be indistinguishable from a school hall or bingo club headquarters."

Rev. B. K. Crook, pastor of Applewood United Church, Port Credit, Ont., notes a trend "running dangerously close to ranch-style, practical types of buildings instead of reflecting religious inspiration and feeling in the community." His own church, built recently in a fast-growing suburban region, has been described as a ranch-style building.

Architect Charles Herman, designer of South End Mennonite Brethren Church in Winnipeg, says modern church architecture "is one time achieves features with more religious feeling, than traditional structures."

QUEBEC TESTS THEORY

Nowhere is this theory being put to the test more than in Quebec province, where many of the older Catholic churches are extremely ornate and give th impression of an imposingly vast and complex interior.

"Today we have new materials, new methods, new conceptions," says Jean Marie Roy, a Quebec City architect. "We must express ourselves."

Judging by the newer churches in Quebec, this means that architects' leaders first focus attention rigidly on the main altar and exteriors of an edifice are secondary.

Largest of them is St. Jean Baptiste Cathedral in Nicolet, laid out in the shape of a Maltese cross with the arms tapering sharply toward the centre. Designed by Gerard Malouin and consecrated in 1963 by Bishop Alberta Martin, it replaces a structure demolished after a 1955 landslide.

The 1,400-seat cathedral has no columns. At the altar the celebrant faces the congregation rather than the wall. The entire front wall is a stained-glass window dominated by the figure of the risen Christ, and, the rear wall is taken up by a mosaic depicting man's story from Adam to the astronauts.

In Montreal the first important departure from tradition was made in 1956 with the construction of Notre Dame de la Salette.

The essential feature of that church, a circular building where the first wedding of a Bloque quinquiet took place in 1962, is that the congregation faces the main altar from all sides.

Like other contemporary churches, Notre Dame de la Salette is designed to give the congregation a greater sense participation in worship.

Montreal church architect Alfred J. Hennessey says this goal is perhaps the key motive underlying modern church design. Two Catholic churches recently designed by him, St. Anne's in Hope River, P.E.I., and Holy Redeemer in Charlotte town, both concentrate on seating the congregation as close to the sanctuary as possible.

He said Holy Redeemer, still uncompleted, is intended to show the apostolic idea of gathering the people around the teacher. The church's plan is semi-circular, seating the congregation beside as well as in front of the altar.

Vancouver architect F. Walter Scott points to a Saskatoon United Church in that city as an example of a similar emphasis in Protestant worship. This church, again, features a "theatrical" seating arrangement, in a sense, a theatrical attitude toward corporate worship," Mr. Scott said. "This arrangement resulted in a standard rectangular building."

Contemporary church architecture is based on the centrality of the table, a family attitude toward worship."

This theme is also illustrated in the Bedford, N.S., United Church, designed by Allan F. Duffus of Halifax. Because of the revived emphasis on communion, says Mr. Duffus, the interior is designed to make the communion table as well as the pulpit a focal point.

BELL TOWER SEEN

The Bedford church has an unusual tower—an open-side structure suspended over the front entrance.

Howard Bouey of Edmonton, who has designed a number of Protestant churches, continues to use a rectangular plan but strives harder to focus attention on the centre aisle. A recent example is St. Stephen's United Church in Edmonton, where the architect used light-and-shadow effects to draw the eyes along the centre aisle to the chancel, with the communion table as the ultimate focal point.

Rev. Frank Smith, pastor of St. Stephen's, says the use of a variety of colors "that our grandfathers would never have allowed in the building" is one of the distinctive characteristics of new church construction. Long, narrow windows have also become common, providing an impression of greater should be approved before the scheduled recess for Easter from Thursday to April 6. Justice Minister Favreau, government House leader, proposed an overtime sitting Thursday night.

The Conservative opposition protested this move, so Mr. Favreau moved that the House adjourn until Monday. Terry Nugent, Conservative lawyer from Edmonton-Strathcona, refused to consent to this motion and, under rules, unanimous consent—and the house was adjourned until God Friday next week.

LASTS ONLY MINUTES

The Good Friday sitting lasted about seven minutes — just enough time to call MPs to their seats, recite the regular prayers and move adjournments until Monday. Fifty-three Liberals, 19 Conservatives, 16 New Democrats and eight Creditistes were present. There were no Social Credit members in the House.

Debate Thursday renewed the issue of the recent shuffle of agricultural responsibilities between Agriculture Minister Hays and Forestry Minister Sauve.

Transport Minister Pickersgill speaking in place of ailing Prime Minister Pearson, denied previous Opposition charges that laws had been broken in the transfer of powers between two ministers.

He said there had merely been a "technical error," which in no way affected the business, by which the government was 17 days alone in repealing a transfer of certain powers to Mr. Sauve from Mr. Hays.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said there had been a series of serious errors typical of government inexperience."

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), said the government was in a "very, very pretty sloppy way" of handling things, but said it wasn't guilty of "deliberate, calculated deception."

STORE IS AMPLE

Mr. Hays, during study of additional spending plans for his department, said that on March 16 there were 21,000,000 bushels of wheat, oats, barley and corn in farmers' storage for feed and this was both ample and a 47-per-cent increase on stocks a year earlier.

He also said the ARDA program has been going ahead under the Liberals and Deputy Fisher (NDP—Port Arthur) immediately attacked that statement.

The fact is, said Mr. Fisher with some heat, that ARDA has crept and limped along despite the initial enthusiasm it showed general, as a means to help wed forestry and farming to some degree.

A Lift for Living

Easter, Spring Remind Man Of God's Real Greatness

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

Now with spring's gay arrival the world is full of the promise of better things. Bees are busily about their work, trees bloom, flowers appear, lambs and tulips sprout and pledge that their blossoms will presently paint the earth in vibrant color and grand style. Frogs awaken from winter sleep and while shortly will be singing choruses from swamps and marshes.

Expectation, excitement and wonder are in motion, mankind. Something miraculous transpires before us, and man has little to do with it, except to respond to it with awe and appreciation. Man has no hand in bringing spring to the world, for spring comes with the equinox, when the earth moves into a certain, precise alignment with the sun, so that days and nights are of equal length; and man cannot push the earth into its proper relationship to the beneficient sun. Man cannot force a tulip to bud or compel a hyacinth to blossom. The best we can do is to commit bulbs to the good earth, trust the forces far beyond our ingenuity or strength to bring glorious life from the apparent darkness of bulbs. We cast grass seed on our lawns and leave it there, believing the faithfulness of earth and skies will transform somber, seemingly lifeless seed to green, gracious turf.

SERVES AS REMINDER

In a world that often seems to be a man's world, governed by man's ingenuity and purposes, springtime is a reminder of man's littleness and God's greatness, man's inadequacy to work the elemental wonders and God's all-sufficiency to provide the mighty miracles. Spring is God's doing. It is the new life that Merciful Heaven brings to earth.

Easter and springtime belong together, for Easter is the celebration of the new life that follows the winter of the soul—death. For twenty centuries a major theme of the Christian Church has been the helplessness of death to do permanent damage to the souls of God's children. On that first Good Friday death had secured a victory, it seemed possible. Death had hounded the steps of God's Best, the One the disciples had counted on to redeem their nation. Death had murdered him, disciples had Him, bullied and browbeat Him and had taken Him from them. And on that dreadful day death finish this strong Son of God then it could destroy anyone. So the disciples were disheartened Christ's worst enemies, went to their beds on that Friday night convinced that death was utterly done for—finished.

"HE HAS RISEN"

But on the first Easter morning, when the disciples went to the tomb to mourn, they were overcome with wonder and joy. The tomb was empty, save for a heavenly messenger who announced "He is not here; He has risen." Eleven depressed and disillusioned men, hiding in abject terror from their enemies, were transformed into courageous, heroic evangelists who proclaimed with joy the good news of Christ's resurrection. Death was no more the enemy of the faithful.

Easter henceforth disciples treated death as a friend perhaps bearing gifts. For the faithful death became a cordial messenger from God bringing liberty to the enslaved of body and mind, bringing welcome rest to the weary, the end of struggle to the embattled, fulfillment to the unfinished, home at last to the lonely sick and lonely, joyous reunion to those who had been separated and grieved over. The eternal company of God and of His Christ. Of all the differences Christ's coming to earth had made in the hearts of His disciples, none was more surprising than the transformation in their attitude toward death. Death became God's way of bringing men to New Life.

Easter is still the celebration of the New Life God gives.

Flaws Make it Beautiful

BBC London Letter

Stained glass for many churches and cathedrals in Britain and abroad is made at Sunderland in the north-east corner of England in a factory which stands only a few hundred yards from the spot, where it is believed, glass was first manufactured in England.

Speaking in the "English Magazine from the North" program broadcast in the BBC General Overseas Service, a partner in this glass-making firm, Mr. Alec Alder, told how back in the seventh century the abbot of a monastery then attached to St. Peter's Church nearby had sent to France for glass-makers to come over and make glass for his new monastery. Although glass of an earlier date had been found on the site of Roman camps, this was the first evidence of glass actually being made in England.

The beauty of medieval glass lay in its imperfections, Mr. Alder said. It was uneven and full of striations, or bubbles, so that light passing through it was refracted and made it sparkle with a jewel-like quality. Those imperfections were probably due to poor melting conditions and impure chemicals. A similar effect was produced in the perfect glass of today by "trick" methods. For instance, to obtain the striations which occurred in medieval glass, a harder glass was run into a soft molten glass, and his firm could match any of the medieval colors. The firm is the only one in Britain devoted solely to the manufacture of stained glass, and some forty per cent of its output is sent overseas, chiefly to the United States, Canada, New Zealand and Australia. They have for instance provided windows for St. Thomas's Church, New York, and some of the windows for Princeton University Chapel and are currently working on windows for a Roman Catholic church in Sydney. At home, they have provided glass for the Battle of Britain window in Westminster Abbey, for Canterbury Cathedral, and the windows of the nave of Coventry Cathedral.

COLONEL DIES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Col. John Fowler Haing, 88, oldest graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, died Wednesday. He suffered a stroke at Walter Reed army medical center two floors below the quarters now occupied by his last commander, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, 84, who is recovering from his second major operation in 11 days.

Christendom Hails Easter Festival

ITS ARCHITECTURE . . . The steeple surging powerfully — yet gracefully — upward is a traditional symbol of Christian churches, the figurative "Finger of God" pointing to the heavens. A fine example is seen in this Belleville church — St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church.

ITS MUSIC . . . Bridge Street United Church choir rehearses Handel's "Messiah."

ITS ART . . . Ancient, medieval and modern artists have drawn their inspiration from the Christian ethic, enriching it in their turn with a legacy in painting, illuminated manuscript and — perhaps most common of all — stained glass. Above are the altar windows dominating Christ Church.

THE CONTEMPORARY . . . St. Columba Presbyterian Church.

THE TRADITIONAL . . . St. Thomas' Anglican Church.

"...And He Shall Reign... For Ever and Ever..."

Tomorrow is the proudest moment in the history of mankind.

Easter is a Christian festival yet the event it symbolizes is basic to the very nature of mankind.

In that context, the Risen Christ of the New Testament was no gesture qualifying the jubilant triumph of any religious sect.

Its significance is inseparably bound to the whole story of Easter Week—to the betrayal, the agony and awful death of a man who was—as one anonymous Christian writer beautifully expressed it five centuries ago—Everyman.

His sufferings, symbolically, were those of mankind in adversity.

And at the end of that time of darkness and terror, after a brief quiescence, comes the sunburst of the Resurrection. Man and his spirit have triumphantly been reasserted.

In that sequel there is nothing sectarian, nothing personal. No enemies are stricken; no scores repaid. In truth, as related, it was an extraordinary quiet affair, noted only by a handful.

Yet the point is proven. And in the ensuing centuries those contemporary commentators of man's spirit—the artists, the poets, composers, architects —would draw again and again on that one incident and its ramifications for their inspiration.

It was such a one who wrote the most joyous music penned in Western civilization. And he used the text:

"AND HE SHALL REIGN FOR EVER AND EVER."

It is this eternal presence of man's potential for good, never fully understood by himself at the time, but eventually asserting itself over adversity, which imparts to the Resurrection its universal meaning.

And in this inexplicable common denominator of all men, Christians, in the name of God, renew their faith this Eastertide.

Conference to See Renewed Effort to Divest Ottawa Of Joint-Financial Schemes

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal-provincial conference, in Quebec City next week will see a renewed effort on both sides to divest Ottawa of what Manitoba Premier Duff Roblin has called "over-paternalism."

At issue are the jointly-financed welfare and other services fathered, in the main, by the King and St. Laurent governments in the flush of post-war prosperity. They now cost the federal treasury alone more than $900,000,000 a year.

The list is long. It ranges over hospital insurance—with all its stampeding costs — and health and hospital aid, various welfare payments, unemployment relief, road-building, and welter of minor schemes that include even premiums to breeders of purebred stallions, and language instruction for immigrants.

All of this is provincial territory, constitutionally.

Yet Ottawa not only set the priorities in the first place, it still keeps effective control of most of these programs. For example, federal "conditional grants"—such as for civil defence, or vocational training—mean just that: the money is the provinces' for the asking, bu. only if they spend it as Ottawa sees fit.

'TIDY FOR CHANGE'

e Pearson government has said it is ready to hand over to the provinces full responsibility for some of the well-established programs.

That would mean the end of the federal share. To compensate for it, the provinces likely would get a mixture of equalization-payment adjustments and added ability to tax personal and corporation incomes.

These appear to be the most likely candidates for such treatment:

Hospital insurance—First established in the fiscal year ending Tuesday, the federal 50-per-cent share was an estimated $385,000,000. The year ahead will push the figure up to about $420,000,000.

Old-age assistance—This has been available since 1948 to those aged 65 to 69, and now amounts to $73 monthly, on the basis of a means test. Ottawa pays half, and its share in the current year is forecast at $38,700,000, rising next year to nearly $45,000,000.

COSTS MILLIONS

Pensions for the blind and disabled—These are both $75 a month, subject to income limits. Combined costs to Ottawa will be $28,460,000 next year.

Unemployment assistance—Though the ground rules are complicated, in effect the federal government meets half of whatever amounts of relief the provinces pay to the unemployed. Federal costs this year were about $106,000,000 and the estimate for next year is $115,000,000.

As expressed last November, the chief concern of most provinces is that the formula under which they take full responsibility for these programs should include some provision for rising costs in the future.

With that qualification, most if not all the provinces seem willing to take the step.

Here are some snippets from the premiers' statements to the November conference:

Roberts of Ontario: "The conditions attached to the grants are too rigid. They create administrative difficulties, fail to recognize regional needs and peculiarities, and often result in some services being over-expanded to the detriment of other services of higher provincial priority."

CAN'T USE REVENUES

Lesage of Quebec: "Experience shows that, oftentimes, these conditional grants do not permit the provinces to use their own revenues as they see fit nor can they reckon sufficiently with local conditions."

Premier Robichaud dealt at length with the problem:

"Where the assistance proffered (by Ottawa) does not fit the priority given by a province nor conform to the long-term planning of a province, and where the program is imposed upon a province without regard to proper prior consultation and consideration, serious objections arise. . .

The problem has been one of over-paternalism through the imposition of federal measures not always adapted to the needs of the individual provinces."

Parliamentary Notebook

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government apparently is reconciled to continued frustration of its efforts to get the United Nations will one day set up a permanent peace-keeping force.

While its diplomatic efforts will be channelled towards ultimately resuming such a force, the defence department's domestic policies in case that such a step isn't likely in the next 10 years.

The defence white paper tabled in the House of Commons says failure of the big powers to agree on enforcement measures, as well as resistance of some UN members, "has rendered impracticable for the time being the establishment of a standing UN force."

As a result, the department in shaping a defence policy for the next decade has attempted to apply the experience and knowledge of past UN peace-keeping duties to the making and equiping of the armed forces.

The white paper says military observer teams have been one broad category of operations.

VERSATILITY NEEDED

Experience has shown the need for great versatility in preparing for any UN service. Success of UN peace-keeping operations depends on the speed with which the forces can be established in the place where they are needed.

Once there, they may have to exercise authority with unified command in broad areas.

"Thus, there is a need for mobility as regards deployment, method of operation and logistic support.

"In most situations which can be foreseen, there is likely to be a need for highly mobile forces for ground observation and surveillance, rapid transportation and reliable communications.

quired, either for UN duty or under other international arrangements.

Another requirement has been substantial national contingents such as in Korea, the Congo, and, more recently, Cyprus.

AIMS DIFFER

To understand what Sir Alec has in mind, it should be remembered that the Commonwealth currently must contend with a good deal of cynicism. The withdrawal of South Africa and the addition of half a dozen new members have tended to create a distinction between the old Commonwealth, comprising Britain, Canada, New Zealand and Australia, and the new Commonwealth whose aims are often different.

Idealists feel there is still something precious in the intangible Commonwealth link, something to be cherished even though Canada, to take one example, has little in common with Ghana, Sierra Leone or Zanzibar.

Prime Minister Nehru of In-Britain Reaching for Moon In Calling Conference

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

In calling for a conference of Commonwealth prime ministers, Britain in effect is reaching for the restoratives.

It is something akin to an emergency operation. The patient has been languishing for months, and political doctors feel it is high time the Commonwealth family gathered round the bedside to see whether anything can be done.

The initiative for the mid-July meeting almost certainly came from Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home, although his elbow may have been jogged by Prime Minister Menzies of Australia, who likes to come to England if there is any chance of getting to a cricket match on the side.

VERSATILITY NEEDED

Experience has shown the need for great versatility in preparing for any UN service. Success of UN peace-keeping operations depends on the speed with which the forces can be established in the place where they are needed.

Once there, they may have to exercise authority with unified command in broad areas.

"Thus, there is a need for mobility as regards deployment, method of operation and logistic support.

"In most situations which can be foreseen, there is likely to be a need for highly mobile forces for ground observation and surveillance, rapid transportation and reliable communications.

Prime Minister Nehru of India says the Commonwealth, however disparate, brings a touch of healing to a raw and inflamed world. Canadian ministers have strongly supported it as a bridge between East and West, or white and black.

A more brutal viewpoint, which some would merely call realistic, was expressed by Anglo - German writer Sebastian Haffner. Writing in the magazine Encounter, he described the post-1945, non-British Commonwealth as "a bastard child of guilt and vanity that had become simply a millstone round Britain's neck."

The sense of estrangement in Commonwealth affairs has been evident for some time. It is reflected in the slow decline of Commonwealth organizations, in the talk of a two-tiered commonwealth, in a growing concentration upon regional groupings. The sheer weight of numbers—there now are 18 members—makes for unwieldiness.

So Sir Alec, with a certain degree of urgency, is summoning ministers to London. He wants to see if the Commonwealth can pull itself together, find a new impulse. He hasn't any special formula, but he is open to ideas.

Lack of Hospital Bed May Have Caused Death

TORONTO (CP)—Coroner Dr. Rotstein Thursday said lack of a hospital bed may have caused the death of Andrew Kirpan, 58, of Toronto.

When Chief Coroner Dr. Morton Shulman learned of the death and the fact that a hospital bed could not be found for the man, he ordered the body removed from a funeral parlor. It was taken to the city morgue for an autopsy.

Mr. Kirpan, an angina sufferer, was an outpatient for several years at New Mount Sinai Hospital. He went to the hospital Tuesday and again Wednesday but no bed could be found for him.

Administrator Sidney Liswood said the hospital did everything it could, including calling other hospitals for a bed.

After treatment at emergency ward, Mr. Kirpan was dead on arrival at Toronto Western Hospital at 8:06 a.m. Thursday.

Dr. Rotstein said he is still investigating.

SAY NEW STARDSMAND

LONDON (Reuters)—A team of United States Astrophysicists claimed in a letter to the British science journal Nature Friday they had discovered two new stars which cannot be detected either by sight or by radio. One is in Scorpius and the other in the direction of the Crab Nebula and the scientists suggested they were "neutron long ago.

Rugged Battle In Montreal

Hawks, Habs Grab Playoffs Openers

By TED REEKIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A computer in the Montreal penalty box, a face-mask in the Detroit dressing room and a goal-scoring star in the Toronto lineup appeared to be the chief requirements as all hands prepared for the opening round of Stanley Cup activity.

The playing personnel in Montreal tonight will be Canadiens enjoying a 1-0 lead in their best-of-seven semi-final against Toronto Maple Leafs on the strength of a 3-0 victory Thursday night. Chicago Black Hawks, who defeated Detroit 6-1 Thursday, will try to increase their lead when they entertain the Red Wings Sunday.

Both losers ran into postseason superpower Thursday night.

Detroit coach Sid Abel, who had dressed only four defencemen in order to throw a fourth forward line at the Hawks, had to use Al Langlois throughout the game despite a broken forearm that left him intermittently from double vision after he was checked heavily into the boards by Chicago's Pat Stapleton early in the first period.

Langlois underwent surgery in Detroit Friday and Abel said he would be back if the Wings could borrow a special protective mask like the one Langlois wears at the University of Michigan.

The Leafs' shortage of personnel was of shorter duration but as painful in its own way as Langlois' fate as Terry Sawchuk arch.

A slipup by the penalty timekeeper cost them 25 seconds of time in the first minutes and Canadiens scored their first goal during the reprieve's absence.

CONFIRMS ERROR

The error by the overworked official, George Ogg of Detroit, was confirmed Friday night by president Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League, but Canadiens' General Manager Frank Udvari's decision to allow the goal by Bernie Geoffrion to stand.

Three Leafs and two Canadiens were in the box when Keon and Montreal defenceman Jean - Guy Talbot were thumbed off with minutes to go of the first period. To add to Ogg's bookkeeping chores, Udvari simultaneously awarded a misconduct sentence to Toronto's Frank Mahovlich, one of the earlier residents, for objecting to Keon's penalty.

With time added for delayed penalties, all the culprits except Mahovlich should have been back in circulation at 8:30. But Ogg, in the meantime, had to provide board and lodging for Montreal policeman J. C. Tremblay and Toronto right-winger Andy Bathgate, who had been sent off with majors for fighting.

When Keon started to return, the official made a rapid head-count and waved him back to his seat. The liberated Talbot promptly started the play on which Geoffrion scored while the Leafs were playing four men to Montreal's five.

Campbell said the goal counted because Canadiens were not "in default" since they were in no way responsible for Ogg's error.

BROKE TWO RECORDS

The circumstances contributed to the first two broken Stanley Cup records of the current series—18 penalties served by the two clubs in the period and 31 piled up by the two teams during the game.

Both marks were more than 10 years old. Toronto and Boston Burins put together 18 penalties in a period in 1951 while the Leafs and Detroit set the previous mark of 29 in a game the following year.

The scoring play came when Toronto goalkeeper Johnny Bower slid over to block Claude Provost, who had taken Talbot's pass at the right-hand side of the net. Provost relayed to Geoffrion, who had the entire left side to shoot at.

Centre Ralph Backstrom, scored Montreal's second goal from a position practically on the second period during one of the rare stretches in which both sides were at full strength.

Montreal netminder Charlie Hodge, whose save from Frank Mahovlich's apparent contributed heavily to his Vezina Trophy award this season, stopped only 26 shots to Bower's 23 but made several spectacular saves.

"I just hope it keeps up," the happy little goaltender said afterwards.

WINGS OUTSHOT HAWKS

The Hawks were outplayed for two periods by the scrappy Red Wings before owning it up with three third - period goals. The Wings, still seeking their first victory on Chicago ice this season, outshot the Hawks 10-6 on the way and forced goaltender Glenn Hall to stop six hard shots within 70 seconds in the second period.

Andre Pronovost gave the fourth-place Wings the lead early in the first period, firing home the rebound of rookie Pit Martin's blocked shot from about 15 feet out. But Ab McDonald tied it up less than a minute later when he drove into the corner on a pass from defenceman Pierre Pilote.

Detroit goalie Terry Sawchuk, who stopped 26 shots to Hall's 24, robbed Pilote, Bobby Hull and Bill Hay in close succession. Sawyer but finally missed Pilote's 20-footer early in the third period.

Murray Balfour, the veteran Chicago right winger who couldn't play Friday night, scored the clincher less than two minutes later, tipping in Red Hay's goalmouth pass. Hull then made it 4-1 on a power play while Detroit defenceman Al Langlay was serving a tripping penalty.

Once again there was a post-game complaint by Hawks' defencing goal. Abel said referee Art Skov should have halted play to penalize Bill Gadsby of the Wings because Gadsby had possession of the puck after his interfaction and before Pilote scored.

Chicago coach Billy Reay praised the Hawks' defensive work but expressed concern over the condition of Balfour and John McKenzie, who underwent surgery earlier this season. Reay said he may platoon the two right wingers with Hay and Hull Sunday night.

Omaha Wins Over Bruins Braves Tied

Omaha Knights, regular - season champions of the Central Professional Hockey League, meet Minneapolis Bruins.

Omaha tonight with a healthy two-game lead in their best-of-seven semi-final series.

Omaha defeated third - place Minneapolis 6-1 Thursday to take a 3-2 lead in the series. St. Louis Braves defeated St. Paul Rangers Thursday to tie their best-of-seven series 3-3.

Al Caron, the league's leading goal scorer during the regular season, led the St. Louis attack Thursday with two goals, both in the second period while St. Paul was short - handed.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carter, Sports Editor

The decision of organized minor hockey—and there are many in this city—should have been present at the "Presentations Night" on Wednesday.

Those people who fear to venture any further than the "T" set out, would or should have been impressed by a show that could only please the finest leather of achievement in the eye of these good fellows of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association.

They would have been impressed with the shining eyed youngsters, particularly those of the "tyke" and "novice" divisions as they shyly stepped forward to receive their awards.

And surely they would not have missed the glow by pride and achievement that sparkled in the eyes of the parents, bananas, midgets and juveniles.

And piercing the armor of their diabolical would have been the generous warm-hearted and staunch encouragement given the young champions by those of their team-mates who gave their best and hid fair to emulate championship efforts in the future.

Parental pride was there too.

Fathers and mothers of not only the awards winners, but also youngsters who gave their all to the team effort, gazed through eyes glinted with pride, and in a few cases tears, had their moments.

It was easily, in this agent's opinion, the best "Presentations Night" staged by the Minor Hockey Association. It had variety, by hockey games, clowns and the outstanding figure-skating exhibitions by Peg and Jane McCutcheon.

And, aside to the Arena Commission, the only fly in the entertainment ointment was the inefficiency of operation of the public address system. Also we put the inexperience of these under the microphone, gentlemen, your P.A. badly needs an overhauling.

To these gentlemen of the Minor Hockey Association and Belleville Recreation Commission, Lloyd Cooke, Jack Hammond, Ken Hawkins, etc., the coaches, managers and sponsors and all others associated with the "Night" goes a columner pat on the back.

To Mr. Adamson and others of the Youth Centre project, another accolade.

And to them "Thinking" veterans and hard-driving youngsters of the CNE All-Stars and RCMA Old-timers' Association an extra special thank you. Not forgetting the Belleville and Napanee peewees whose fine competitive action in itself should be a kick in the figurative pants to the aforementioned minor hockey sceptics.

Post-game comment and subsequent remarks heard and received by this column revealed that the "Oldtimers-CNE All-Stars game was a revelation not to mention surprise.

There was more than a touch of senior "B" and "A" nostalgia flooding the memories of a lot of sidelines oldtimers. Gordie Bell hasn't lost his old tricks. Big Vern Geyer looked almost—well, almost—as supple and effective as he did ten or eleven years ago.

The addition of younger blood to the veterans of both clubs gave the game the speed and effect that sometimes is missing in most "oldtimer" games.

It was comparatively fast with the veterans tossing in a lot of "head stuff" to offset the speed and better manoeuvrability of the young players.

They played it clean and hard. It was fine hockey entertainment throughout the three periods. And we'll venture a guess that if these expanda play again they'll think the arena is housing a political convention.

Bill May Pass Up '1,000'

Kidd, Crothers In London

LONDON (CP) — Canadian runners Bill Crothers and Bruce Kidd arrived Friday for a weekend Amateur Athletic Association meeting without their coach, Fred Foot, who stayed in Toronto nursing an ear infection.

Crothers who won the AAA titles in the 800 and 1,000 yards last year, said he may not defend his title in the 1,000 yards event at Wembley on Monday.

"This will be my 15th meet this season and I am afraid I'm running too much," he said. "I have been in five meets in five weekends."

He said, however, that he has not definitely made up his mind and will decide after the 800-yard event Saturday.

The 25-year-old pharmacist from Hamilton, Ont., who won the event last year, said he and Kidd were "very disappointed" that Foot had to cancel his trip to London.

Kidd, a University of Toronto student, runs in the two mile event Monday. Two years ago he lost by one second to Britain's Bruce Tulloh in the three-mile.

Open Negotiations With Mets

Giants Need The Duke's Homers

By TED REEKIE
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Duke, one of the few active major leaguers with more than 400 homers to his credit and now in the twilight of his baseball career, was sold to the Mets by Los Angeles Dodgers a year ago.

The Giants need a left-handed pinch hitter who can hit the long ball to replace the southpaw hitting of catcher Ed Bailey, traded to Milwaukee during the off-season. And the 37-year-old Snider was still dangerous enough at the plate to hit 14 homers, three triples and eight doubles in 264 times at bat last season.

What sort of deal the Giants offered Mets for Snider was not known and there was no immediate reaction from the New York club.

GOT HOMER

The Duke, starting his 18th year in the majors, walloped a home run off Bobbs Roberts in one of two exhibition games played on Good Friday.

The Mets eventually beat Y-3 in Baltimore when the Orioles came up with five runs in the eighth inning. In the other game, Houston Astros scored two runs in the first inning and beat Kansas City Athletics 6-4 at Daytona Beach.

Baltimore catcher Dick Brown led the Orioles attack with three hits—a homer, double and a two-run single in the decisive eighth.

The Athletics fared better Thursday, pounding Chicago White Sox 10-5 while the Mets were beaten 5-1 by New York Yankees.

In other Thursday games Washington Senators humiliated Pittsburgh Pirates 9-3, Los Angeles Dodgers downed Detroit Tigers 9-6, Cleveland Indians slipped Los Angeles Angels 9-8, Chicago Cubs outlasted Boston Red Sox 10-9 in 15 innings and Milwaukee Braves whipped Cincinnati Reds 6-1.

Traffic Jam In Quinte Puck Loop

The four clubs involved in the Quinte Hockey League semi-final series are pulling nowhere fast.

After five games completed, each of the best-of-five series, both series are tied at two wins and one tie per club.

Wednesday night, Horlock's Electric edged Belch Construction 3-2 to knot that series while Belleville and Twin-East Deshers played to a 3-3 deadlock.

Both games in both series will be played next Thursday night. Game times are 8:15 and 9:30 at Memorial Arena.

Horlock's built a 2-0 lead with single goals in each of the first two periods against Belch's. The latter scored Horlock's 2-1 in the third but still fell one goal short of a tie and victory.

E. Wannamaker, R. Lambert and L. McBride scored for Horlock's. Belch's 2-1 for SACO scoring the third.

H. Poirier and D. Moore potted Twin-Star goals. R. Poirier and R. Jeffrey drawing assists. Ray Lucas and Barry Porteous drew Sculler a goal and Gerald Webb an assist for Belch's.

Ter-Haar scored the only goal of the final period to grab the 3-3 tie with SACO. It was 1-1 at the end of the first period, 2-1 for SACO entering the third.

H. Poirier and D. Moore potted Twin-Star goals. R. Poirier and R. Jeffrey drawing assists. Ray Lucas and Barry Porteous drew Sculler a goal and Gerald Webb an assist for Belch's.

Next Thursday's winners will meet for the league champion ship.

Kingston Jrs. Take 2-0 Lead

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP)—Kingston Junior Frontenacs moved into a 3-0 lead in their Ontario Hockey Association best-of-seven quarter-final Friday with a 7-6 victory over Burlington Mohawks.

Joe Mercer and Harold Connerty each scored two goals for the winners. Other Kingston goal-getters were Mike McMahon, Ron Earl and Gary McLellan.

Ron Alala led Burlington with three goals and Colin Chedore and Al Hampi scored one each.

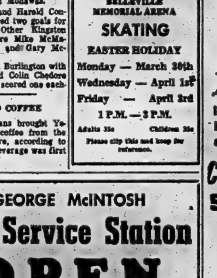
Toronto Runner Wins Vets Race

HAMILTON (CP)—Dave Kills of Toronto romped to the front of the pack and came home the winner of the annual Firestone War Veterans 25,000 metres road race here Friday in one hour, 20 minutes and 25 seconds.



A field of 71 started the 15-mile race over city streets in 25 degree weather. Fifty-nine finished.

Bruce Kidd of Toronto set the record of 1:17:36 in 1962. He did not compete this year.

Find 'Subterfuge' In Rematch Clause

Clay Agreed

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Athletic Commission has announced plans for a three-man elimination tournament to pick an opponent for heavyweight champion Cassius Clay, but without the No. 1 contender.

Doug Jones of New York, ranked No. 1 by the World Boxing Association and No. 2 by Ring Magazine, refused to go along with the deal.

"I already have earned the right to fight Clay," Jones said. "I have fought my way to the top. I don't see any reason for entering this thing."

The commission, in what it calls a move to stimulate boxing interest, announced the blueprint Thursday for an elimination tournament involving former champion Floyd Patterson, Eddie Machen, Cleveland Williams and Ernie Terrell.

All agreed to take part, Two others, Zora Folley and Ahrold Johnson, sought to get in but were rejected.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cassius Clay agreed on "subterfuge" in settling a rematch with Sonny Liston and posted half his purse from their heavyweight title fight as a guarantee, Senate investigators have been told.

"We didn't like it, we don't like it, but we had to swallow it . . . because Clay wanted to fight Liston," Jack Nilo, aide to Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Mo.), group sponsoring the Clay-Liston fight, testified Thursday before the Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee. Davidson said Clay agreed orally to the deal.

In third place was Dolly Young of London with 1,198, followed by Micky Fox, Hamilton, 1,196, Judy Whittmarch, Toronto, 1,194, Rose Church, Toronto, 1,159, and Dot Matthews, Marathon, 1,130.

The International team play Toronto Central tied with 5,912. The Niagara district was third with 5,772.

Leo Lucciola Seventh In Bowls Tourney

NORTH BAY (CP) — Billy Soult of Toronto and Chatham's Ruth Grant are the halfway leaders in men's and women's singles competition after opening action Friday in the Eastern Canada five - pin bowling championships.

Soult put together a five-game total of 1,319 pins, 12 ahead of Primo Vagnini of Toronto.

In third place was Paul Joseph of Marathon with 1,297 followed by John Scholes, Welland, 1,293, Dunc Rink, Sudbury, 1,270; Al Kitunen, Sarnia, 1,259, Doug Whitfield, Hamilton, 1,178, and Leo Lucciola, Belleville, 1,178.

Mrs. Grant finished the day with 1,315 pins, a comfortable 74-pin margin over Joanne Benoit of Port Erie.

"Step In Right Direction"

Likes Indoor Age-Class Meet

KITCHENER (CP) — Kaye Twigg, a member of the Amateur Athletic Union's Olympic selection committee, says the Canadian indoor age-class track and field championships here today is a "step in the right direction."

About 875 athletes 18 years old and under from eight of Canada's 10 provinces are competing in the one-day affair, sanctioned by the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada. Only provinces not represented are Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

"The problem with track and field in Canada is that there is not enough competition," Twigg, former manager of Canadian teams in the Pan-American and British Empire Games, said Friday.

"There are just not enough indoor track meets to keep the athletes going all year round.

"This is the first national indoor age-class competition in Canada. It's a step in the right direction because it could lead to an expansion of a program to run all year round."

Double Winners In Both

Minor Hockey Tourneys

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Double winners featured three minor hockey tournaments in Ontario Friday.

Eighty-seven teams are taking part in a Young Canada Week peewee tournament at Goderich, 41 teams are entered in the intermediate-juniors tournament at Georgetown, while 30 teams are playing in the Brampton novice hockey tournament.

At Goderich, Ayr defeated Turnberry 7-0 and Arthur 8-1 while Edward downed Mitchell 3-2 and Durham 3-0.

Teams there now entered from Detroit, Port Huron, Mich., Winnipeg and Cote St. Luc, Que. The tournament is made up of five series, according to populations.

Toronto and Peterborough took two games each at the bantam tournament at Georgetown, with both now tied Saturday.

Toronto defeated Hamilton twice by 5-0 scores while Peterborough defeated Oakville 7-2 and 10-3 to become Friday's winners. Teams are entered from as far west as Winnipeg and as far east as Kentville, N.S.

Milton, Woodbridge and Kinvale all took two games in the Brampton tournament, involving teams from as far west as Winnipeg and including teams from Point Clair, Sault Ste. Marie and Port Huron, all in Michigan, and St. Michel, Que. It ends next Saturday.

Milton defeated Orrville 10-1 and 10-0, Woodbridge defeated Ayr 6-3 and 5-2 while Kinvale defeated Cox, Hope 7-3 and 5-0.

Other scores:

At Goderich—Arthur 1 Kincardine 0; Durham 4, Kiora 1; Sarnia Indian Rosers 4 Clinton RCAF 2;

At Georgetown—Camp Borden 2 Delhi 0; Delhi 5 Camp Borden 1; Woodstock 5 Waterloo 3; Waterloo 3 Woodstock 2; At Milton—Unionville 1 Weitona 0; Winona 2 Unionville 0.

Bobo Olson Wins Over Thornton

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cagey veteran Bobo Olson, former middleweight champion, battled his way into the lightheavyweight boxing title picture Friday with a split 10-round decision over young Wayne Thornton.

To all but judge Bob Mitchell, the tabrizad fight seemed clearly Bobo's but Mitchell ruled it a draw. Referee Vern Bybee scored it 7-3 and Judge Jack Downey 6-3, under the California system of giving the winner of each round from one to five points.

The Associated press scored it 7-2 for the 35-year-old boxer who lost his middleweight title nine years ago.

JOCKEY PARALYZED

SOUTHPORT (AP) — Paddy Farrell, the jockey who suffered a broken back in Britain's Grand National Steeplechase last Saturday, was told by doctors Friday he is unlikely to walk again. The 23-year-old Irishman has been in hospital since the race. His horse, Border Flight, fell at Aintree's chaic fence, highest on the course.

No Trenton Entries

Curtains For Softball?

A reliable source in the Trenton area has pounded another nail in the Belleville and District Softball League coffin.

It was learned earlier this week that the Trenton RCAF Flyer team has disbanded, with all three players staying in one group and Trenton two players going in another direction.

It is reported that the RCAF Flyers will form a strictly air force team and seek entry in the Trenton Valley Softball League, with Picton, Madog, and other small centres of this district.

Rumor has it that Trenton town players will split up and play on different teams in a commercial-type league in Trenton.

The B. and D. League will likely be forced to disband if no entry comes forward from Trenton or other surrounding centres. At present only three teams, Trudeaus, Joyces and a junior club, have shown interest.

An official announcement as to the team's intentions is expected at a B. and D. league meeting on Sunday, April 12.

A league official was also quoted this week as saying that the "city may be quite willing to put floodlights on a ball diamond if Madoc will build, but not in time for this season".

Blades Win IHL Title

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toledo Blades wrapped up the International Hockey League title Friday when they defeated third-place Port Huron Flags 6-1.

In other league action, Muskegon Zephyrs moved into a fifth-place tie with Des Moines Oak Leafs when they defeated Chatham Maroons 5-4 Friday night. Des Moines downed Windsor Bulldogs 6-3 in Windsor Thursday.

Chuck Chalmers led Toledo's attack Friday with two goals and Moe Morisette, Moe Benoit, Walter Bradley and Don Currie scored the others.

Marcel Goyette got the only Port Huron goal.

In Muskegon, Ken Campbell paced the winners with a three-goal effort. Don McLeod, Stan Konrad, Joe Kastelac, Lyle Porter and Bryan McLay each scored once.

Dave Andrichuk and George Attken each scored two for Chatham. Tom Clark and Al Cleary got the others.

In Thursday's contest at Windsor, Shorty Melanchuk, Laurie Langrell, Bruce Lea, Nels Leclair, Cy Whiteside and Patty Ginnell scored for Des Moines. Tom Walker, Rod Cherrville and Irwin Gross scored for Windsor.

Trenton Juves. Defeat Hull In Tourney

MILTON, Ont. (CP) — Three juvenile hockey teams — from Toronto, Ottawa and Stamford — carry 3-0 win-loss records into the final day of the tri-county juvenile hockey tournament here today.

Thursday, Stamford posted a 4-3 win over Guelph, and Toronto defeated Scarborough 5-1. Ottawa's first win came Friday when it downed Weston 3-1 and earned a win-by default when St. Mary's failed to show up for the game.

Also in Friday play, Toronto defeated Riverside 7-0 and Stamford edged Hull 4-3.

Mount Hamilton defeated Brantford by default, Guelph edged Brampton 3-3 and Dunville posted an 8-1 victory over Acton, all in consolation play Friday.

In regular rounds, Fergus defeated Petrolia 5-1, Riverside downed Peterborough 4-3 and Trenton defeated Hull 4-2.

Other Thursday scores: Aldewood 3 Hespeler 1, Georgetown 5, Dunville 1.

BRANTFORD SCORES DECISION

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Carlos Duran of Argentina turned jeers to cheers Friday as he won a 10-round decision over Johnny Angelo of Nigeria. Three weeks earlier in Rome, Duran won a world welterweight champion Emile Griffith of New York in a non-title bout that was stopped in the fourth round and called no contest when the fans threw shoes and bottles into the ring protesting the lack of action.

Campbell Tops Field At Azalea

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)—Chunky Gene Campbell, using 67 strokes and six cigars, shot a five-under-par 67 Friday to take a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $20,000 Azalea Open golf tournament.

Campbell, 27, toured the 6,744-yard Cape Fear Country Club course in 33-34 to open a lead from veteran Bob Gajda of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., partime tourney pro.

Five men shared third place at 69. Among them were two surprises, Ed Justa, 18, an amateur from Rocky Mount, N.C., and Dutch Harrison, who will be 54 years old Sunday. He won here in 1950.

Picton Ints. Take First From Delhi

PICTON (Staff) — Ontacorp the opposition in every period, Picton Intermediates trounced Delhi 20's 9-2 Friday 612 fans here last night in the first game of their OHA Intermediate "B" playdown set.

Second game in the best-of-five series is slated for Delhi on Tuesday night with the third back here next Friday.

Picton outdid the high scoring Delhi team by a 43-29 total and outplayed the visitors by a wider margin in each period. It was a tight 2-1 game after one beat and 5-2 going into the third when Picton blasted four unanswered markers to win going away.

Evenly "Fig" Kellar paced the winners up front, scoring three goals for a well - deserved hat-trick. Flankers Dave Jones and Roland Barry each potted two goals with Jim Guernsey and Keith MacNeil netting the others.

Chuck Brimmer accounted for both of the 20's goals, one in each of the first two periods.

19 penalties testify to the game's roughness and Delhi grabbed more than their share of the sentences. The losers got 11 penalties in all and two of them were ten-minute misconducts.

CRASH KILLS FIVE

JACKSONVILLE, Ark. (AP) A U.S. Air Force B-47 bomber crashed into a barn and burned near here Friday, killing the four crew members aboard and a nine-year-old boy who was playing near the barn. A pregnate of the boy was critically burned.

Lindsay Jrs. Even Series With Picton

PICTON (Staff) — Lindsay Lions completely outplayed the Picton Merchants in Lindsay last night and evened their best-of-seven OHA Junior "C" series at one game apiece by whipping 7-3 at Picton.

The Merchants were totally shorganized as Lindsay outshot Picton 46-36, including a big 20-4 margin in the first period.

Lindsay scored a single goal in each period and it was not until 5:20 of the third frame that Gary Hammond got the shutout with Picton's lone tally.

Craig Garthobore was a two-goal performer for Lindsay while Ray McCabe fired his 20th goal of the season.

Picton returns to Lindsay for the third game on Tuesday night while the fourth tilt is slated for Picton next Thursday.

"Y" Basketball

The "Y" men's basketball league wound up play for this season Thursday night when the championship Quints Teachers dropped a 61-45 decision to a strengthened Pollock's club.

The other scheduled game was won by the C.N.R. by default when Holloway was unable to secure enough players for the game.

The Teachers compiled by far the best record over the season and thus copped the league's championship despite Thursday's defeat.

Gord Smith, playing his first game for Pollock's, paced the winners with 26 points. Ian Houchin hopped 15, Gary Williams 12 and Graham Geldart added. Bruce Wallbridge was held scoreless.

Max Woolley was top scorer for Teachers with 16 points, aided by Wally Uhrynuk with 11. Murray Bryden had eight, Jack Sleeth six and Paul Breese four.

It is hoped that the league will be organized on an even stronger basis in the fall.

MONTREAL SWAMPED

WINDSOR-N.S. (CP)—Windsor Maple Leafs, the powerhouse of Maritime hockey, Thursday swamped Montreal Bolsclair 11-3 in the opening game of the Eastern Canadian Allan Cup quarter-finals. Second game in the best-of-five series will be played in Halifax Saturday.

"The Boat Race"
'Dark Blues' Favorites

LONDON (AP) — Oxford's twilight evening sight remains the favorite Friday to best Cambridge on the third straight time today over the 110th race on the Thames River.

Oxford dazzled critics with its final training performance during the last week.

Thursday the Oxford eight rowed from Hammersmith Bridge to the Mile Post—roughly half the traditional 4¼-mile course—two minutes, 42 seconds, equalling the record for that distance.

Earlier in the week Oxford had been established as a 2-to-1 favorite because of excellent performances in rough waters.

Meanwhile, Cambridge had appeared to be taking things easy in training and only in the last few days have the Canbabe shown signs of real strength.

The Oxford crew averages 12 ½ pounds and is believed to be the heaviest since the race was first held in 1829. In that 91 heavy crews usually have won the long race from Putney to Mortlake.

Biggest man on either team is Vancouver's John Lecky, a former student at the University of British Columbia. Lecky stands six feet, 4¼ inches and weighs 204 pounds. He will be pulling from No. 5 position for Cambridge.

Cambridge has won the race 60 times, Oxford 48 and there was one dead heat.

Woodstock Nips Galt, Leads 3-2

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Woodstock Athletics took the lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series for the first time by downing Galt Hornets 3-2 Friday.

A crowd of 1,850 saw the game.

The Athletics' victory gives them a 4-3 lead in the best-of-seven final. The series resumes Sunday in Galt.

Toby Black's fourth goal of the series, in the final minute of the second period, was the winner.

Gerry Striagle and defenceman Ron Cauduro, with his fourth goal in two games, were the other goal scorers.

Jim Dahmar and Bob McKnight fired the Galt goals.

Americans Shade Clippers

BALTIMORE (AP) — Wally Beyer's goal on a breakaway early in the third period gave Rochester Americans a 2-1 victory over Baltimore Clippers Thursday in the American Hockey League.

The Clippers gave 6,436 home fans something to cheer about when Gordon Labossiere scored at 13.18 of the first period.

But Rochester tied the score in the second period on Lou Angotti's goal and Beyer won it.

The loss practically eliminated Baltimore from the playoffs. Clippers trail third-place Providence by four points with but two games to play.

Rochester is now one point behind Western Division-leading Pittsburgh Hornets and one point ahead of Cleveland Barons in the bitter three-way fight for the division title.

LANGUAGE EXPERT DIES
TORONTO (CP)—Prof. Rivers Keith Hicks, 83, one of Canada's top authorities on modern languages, died Friday after a fall in his home. Prof. Hicks taught at Dartmouth College in New Hampshire and Queen's University before joining the University of Toronto staff in 1927. He retired in 1953.

What's This, Cricket on Texas Campus?

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)—Anyone who has ever attended Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College or who has followed any collection of Aggies at a sporting event will swear it will not work.

A few mossback old grads may become a little ill.

The problem is: How do you instill British manners into strong-lunged and exuberant Aggies?

The question arose when John F. Griffiths, London-born weather expert at A and M, sent out printed invitations to the cricket game between A and M and the University of Texas April 11.

Among other things, the game will stop for luncheon, and tea—if it continues that long.

"The cricket club requests the pleasure of your company . . ." the invitation began.

Griffiths, who has been around A and M long enough to see trouble coming for this kind of cricket tradition, advised that spectators do not yell or whoop.

"The acknowledgment of a good piece of play is clapping," the invitation read.

"Oh, well, that is the appropriate comment when the batsman gets off the equivalent of a home run.

"There will be a luncheon interval at half-past 12, and, if the match goes on long enough, a tea interval."

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

Parker MacDonald of Detroit and Camille Henry of New York are two of the most gifted players in the National Hockey League when it comes to deflecting flying pucks into the net.

As a puck comes whizzing toward the goal mouth . . . or even to one side of it . . . they'll get their blade up as it comes figure enough the net.

The puck will ricochet off the blade into the goal mouth, making a sudden change in the direction that will make it practically impossible for the goalie to screen it just when he thought he had it judged right.

After studying Parker and Camille, I've decided that the whole secret is in letting the puck come to you. You don't swing at the puck.

It is something like a bunt in baseball, meeting the puck rather than hitting it. It is a matter of timing, getting the blade of the stick on the right plane and at the right angle to deflect the puck past the goalie.

First player I ever noticed of the net.

doing this was Sid Abel, now the manager-coach of the Red Wings, back in the days when he was Detroit's captain some 15 years ago.

Sid was very adept at moving in front of the net. Anytime we got in shooting range and Sid got in front, he could turn a shot that was off the Parker can pick a spot out of the air at any legal height. That's anything below the shoulders.

However, if the puck is coming along the ice, if he wants to put the puck in the corner he will hold the blade square to the ice.

If he wants to deflect the puck high into the upper reaches of the net, he will turn the blade at a 30 to 45 degree angle.

Parker and I often stay out for 15 minutes after team workouts and practice deflecting shots. We'll take turns shooting and standing in front of the net.

At the Park

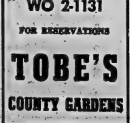
Opens Monday — "The Cardinal" 6 Academy Award Nominations.

Otto Preminger's "The Cardinal", the absorbing and spectacular new motion picture filmed in such varied places as New England, Rome and Vienna, opens Monday at the Park Theatre in Panavision and Technicolor. Based on Henry Morton Robinson's best-selling novel, "The Cardinal" stars Tom Tryon in the title role, with an international cast appearing in co-starring support.

Others in "The Cardinal" include Romy Schneider, Carol Lynley, Jill Haworth, Raf Vallone, John Saxon, Josef Meinrad, Burgess Meredith, Ossie Davis, Dorothy Gish, Tullio Carminati, Maggie McNamara, Bill Hayes, Cecil Kellaway and director-turned-actor John Huston, as Cardinal Glennon. Also in the film are Bobby (Morse) and his Adore-Belles.

"The Cardinal" traces the rise of a young American Catholic priest to the eminence of Prince of the Church, in the period between the two World Wars, culminating in his ordination as a priest, in 1917. "The Cardinal" follows Tryon's personal life, and his career in the Church, with absorbing and sympathetic attention. It shows his defeats, his triumphs, his appointments, his triumphs. It traces his spiritual struggles with himself, his doubts of his qualifications for the self-sacrificing vocation he has chosen, his final realization that devotion to his religion is a stronger emotion in himself than even love and desire.

These personal conflicts reportedly are set against a moving background of intense dramatic experiences. There is, for example, the young priest's need for wisdom when his own sister, played by Carol Lynley, fails in love and wants to marry a boy of a different faith. There is the effort of the priest to discover for himself what religious and racial prejudices he knows exist in some parts of the country. There is the time when, out of his priestly rainments, he is fascinated by lovely Viennese actress Romy Schneider; his decision to resume his priestly garb marks a turning point in their lives.



All the players in "The Cardinal" are superbly cast and, despite their varied backgrounds, perform together with grounds, perform together with the fluid assurance of professionals of long standing and deep-rooted convictions that Hollywood happily proclaims, is especially true of John Huston, the Academy Award winning director who was persuaded by Otto Preminger to play the role of Cardinal Glennon.

Robert Donier penned the screenplay for "The Cardinal" and three-time Academy Award winner Leon Shamroy served as cinematographer.

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—St. Catharines Black Hawks spotted Montreal Junior Canadiens two goals and then fired five in succession Friday on the way to a 6-3 victory, their first in three games of the best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association Junior A semi-final.

The largest crowd of the season—3,628—watched the game at Garden City Arena which has a seating capacity of 3,158.

Yvan Cournoyer sparked the early Montreal attack, scoring a goal midway in the first period and giving the Canadiens a 2-0 lead early in the second period. The Hawks were shorthanded for both goals.

Jim Hodge and Chuck Kelly tied it up before the end of the second period.

Then Doug Jarrett, Fred Stanfield, Brian McDonald and Bill Kelly, with his second goal, wrapped up the win for St. Catharines in the third period.

Movie Column

John Huston Likely to Win Oscar for Supporting Actor

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Odds-on favorite to win this year's Oscar as best supporting actor is a lean, lanky Irishman who acts for free and couldn't care less whether he ever acts again.

And the Oscar? If he wins—as most experts predict—it will be no novelty. He won in 1948 for best director and best screenwriter. He also helped his father win an Oscar for the same movie—The Treasure of the Sierra Madre.

How did director John Huston get cast as the cardinal-archbishop of Boston in Otto Preminger's The Cardinal?

"My agent is Ingo Preminger. Otto's brother," says Huston. "He is also his brother's agent."

"Otto told Ingo that he wanted a John Huston type to play the part. Ingo said there is no such thing as a John Huston type except John Huston. So Ingo suggested to his brother that he cast me. It was all very simple."

When the picture came out, one important critic wrote that Huston's father couldn't have played the role better. His father, of course, was the late Walter Huston whom the Russian director Stanislavsky once called the greatest actor in the world.

CAN'T AGREE

"I can't say I agree with that critic," says the son.

Huston took no money for the role.

"Some day I'll need an Otto Preminger type in one of my pictures and I hope to get Otto —who used to be an actor—for the same price," he said.

Huston recently renounced his U.S. citizenship for Irish nationality. He makes his permanent home in county Galway.

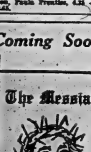
"I believe a person should be a citizen of the country where he lives," he argues. He has lived in Ireland for 13 years. He is a big man in Galway where he is master of fox hounds.

But he will be even bigger when The Cardinal plays in that predominantly Roman Catholic country.

"I'm afraid some of my Irish drinking companions can't see me as the cardinal type—but it was nice that Otto did," said Huston.

"I'm really amazed at all the favors the role caused. I thought I was just helping out a fellow director."

SETS SWIM MARK



MOSCOW (AP)—Georgi Prokopenko of the Ukraine shattered the listed world record for the 100-metre breaststroke by one-tenth of a second with a time of 1:07.4 in a swim meet in Baku, the Soviet news agency Tass reported Thursday. The record of 1:07.5 was set in 1961 by Chet Jastremski of Indianapolis.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Although the letters "FHA" have gained household familiarity over the years, there are a persistent confusions as to the role played by the Federal Housing Administration in the process of buying, selling and mortgaging houses. Many people are not aware that the FHA does not itself advance funds to borrowers, but only guarantees mortgage funds that are advanced by lenders.

The amount guaranteed, of course, is based on the value as appraised by the FHA. This is not as some believe, however, price setting, nor is buyer or seller bound by this value estimate — although either may choose to use it as a guide in bargaining. The following letter is typical of the confusions that arise.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am confused, disturbed and downright mad. I have just sold my house and the buyer signed an agreement of sale for $18,000. He is buying it under an FHA guaranteed mortgage, however, and the FHA has appraised it for only $17,000.

I know it's worth $18,000 and won't accept a penny less. The man buying obviously agrees with me because he is willing to pay my price.

My question is can FHA force me to sell at the lower figure? — Mr. S. J. W.

Answer: No. The FHA cannot force you to sell at a lower price, for it does not set or determine the selling price of a house. It merely issues a mortgage guarantee to a lender who will advance funds on your home based on a set schedule.

The schedule of mortgage guarantees applicable is: 97 per cent of the first $15,000 of appraised value; 90 percent of the next $5,000 after and 75 percent for appraised values of over $20,000 — with a maximum guarantee for non-profit residential properties of $25,000.

Therefore, since your property was appraised at $17,000, the FHA will guarantee an amount of $16,350. The buyer will need a down payment of $1,650.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Can I be forced to pay a real estate broker a commission on a house I sold myself? I had my house listed with a broker who brought several people to see it. One particularly liked it, but we couldn't get together on a price.

A few weeks later — after my listing agreement expired with the broker — I called this man and gave it to him at the lower price, figuring I could afford to, since I didn't have to pay a commission.

Now the broker is demanding his commission, even though I handled all the negotiations myself. Is this fair?

Answer: Among many situations in which a real estate broker is entitled to commission is when a deal results from his bringing together the buyer and seller. In this situation there is a clear relationship between the performance of the broker and the sale of your house.

In my experience I would believe he can enforce his claim and yes, I think it is fair. If you do not agree — or if there are facts I am not aware of, do not hesitate to refer it to your local Realtor Board, for an impartial adjudication.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: After a period of illness, I finally lost my job and, being over 50 years old, can find no one willing to hire me. I know this is a common problem and I am much more fortunate than other men in that I have a wonderful family and a brother with financial resources who is willing to back me in a hardware business.

"He is purchasing a property that I will lease from him. The property costs $45,000. He is putting up $15,000 and taking a mortgage of $30,000. He is willing to take anything I can afford to pay but to save my own wanting pride I want to pay him a fair rental figure. What do you think would be a proper amount? — Mr. L. E. D.

Answer: On the basis of the information I have I cannot give you an actual figure. I can, however, help you to compute a fair rental.

After taxes, operating expenses for the property (that must be paid by the owner) and mortgage payments are made, the net return to your brother should be approximately 12 per cent per year on his cash investment of $15,000.

That is roughly $1,350 in addition to an amount equal to the costs itemized above.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: A number of years ago we bought a house in the country. It was an old house but in fair condition and, since we used it only in summers, mainly, it was quite satisfactory.

Now I have retired and my wife and I are living in it year-round. We enjoy the house, as do the grandchildren that visit us regularly, but there is one thing wrong — we can't heat it properly.

On cold winter days we are unable to get the temperature in the second floor bedrooms on the far side of the house over 50 degrees and are unable to keep the temperature of the living room directly over the heater below 85-degrees. The house has a huge hot air heater — old but in good condition.

Is there anything we can do to fix it to heat the bedrooms adequately? Something inexpensive (I hope) because retirement income are not very big. — Mr. H. M. T.

Answer: Your problem of uneven heating is common to older houses having old fashioned gravity, hot air heating systems but can be solved with the installation of two relatively inexpensive improvements.

A blower, installed on top of your present heater will force the hot air to the distant parts of the house.

Dampers installed in the duct system will permit control of the amount of this air going to each room. A local heating contractor will be glad to do this work for you.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

Ivanhoe

IVANHOE — St. Andrew's W.M.S. and Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. Harry Benson on Wednesday evening with Mrs. Lindsay Sills presiding.

The worship service taken from "Glad Tidings" was conducted by Mrs. Arthur Hassell, assisted by Mrs. J. McInroy and Mrs. Milton Shaw. Mrs. William Doeman contributed a solo. A chapter in the study book was reviewed by Mrs. Harold Thompson and Mrs. Barton Haggerty.

Plans were made for four members to attend the W.M.S. anniversary which is to be held in Montreal in May.

There's phoney in minding pooches during the summer, Teen-Age Canada discloses today. People going on vacation will pay you to care for their pets while they are away.

Students Have Difficulty Finding Jobs in Summer

By JACK BUTTON

How's the summer job situation? Well, don't get despondent because a great number of high school students are having trouble finding jobs too.

I have received several letters from correspondents who claim the parental brow is darkening because of the absolute failures at finding summer work.

Well, have you ever thought of minding people's dogs and cats while they are on vacation (this obviously takes a great deal of parental understanding-) Or finding a "string" of neighborhood pets to walk for people who find exercising their dogs a chore?

Perhaps pet - walking isn't your cup of tea. But there are other offbeat jobs — the secret is to find a need and fill it.

Here's an example:

A 15-year-old friend was feeling blue because he hadn't found a summer job when he took the family motor boat to get mail at a nearby resort town last July.

Halfway across the bay, he suddenly slowed the boat's motor, whistling softly.

When I met him in September my friend was whistling more than "Dixie." He had decided that cottage owners living close to his needed mail delivery service — and sold it to them.

This summer he expects to do the same thing, except that he's wondering about expanding once-a-day mail delivery to include groceries or other supplies which cottagers need.

"Joe" claims he earned more money at his family's summer cottage than most friends who found jobs back home.

We drew up a list of potential off-beat jobs you won't find anywhere else. Some may give you at least an idea.

1 — My friend's idea of mail delivery isn't bad, although I'd only want a resort or cottage area with a central post office. You can find potential customers with a simple notice.

2 — Ever thought of being a "plant-sitter"? Some people I know won't even take a holiday because their plants might die. You could water the plants in their absence.

3 — Going to the family's summer cottage doesn't mean you've given up chances of a job. Leave a note in the local general store mentioning that you're available for baby-sitting.

4 — This summer is also the chance to set up the baby-sitting organization you've thought about all winter. Decide with several friends that one of you will be the telephone contact, assigning the others to jobs.

5 — Summer is the season for gardening. Investing in a small advertisement will probably find you several customers who want their lawns mowed and flower beds turned.

6 — The number of parents who give birthday parties for pre-school children is increasing. But many of them worry about what interests the youngsters. A few library books can supply the party games and know-how to make you an expert.

7 — These same mothers often find it difficult to get away from home for shopping. You can do this chore for an hourly rate or a percentage of the total bill.

8 —If you're a scholastic whiz you may find pocket money in tutoring others who either plan to write supplemental examinations or want to improve in a subject.

Those are only a few ideas. Let us know if you have others that might help readers of this column.

BEATLES BANNED

Well, it had to come.

The Beatles have finally been banned somewhere. Tel Aviv authorities in Israel have decided the young gentlemen from Great Britain could have a bad influence on their younger generation.

What may surprise some of you is that I don't agree with this verdict.

I don't think the Beatles are the greatest musical group to appear since the Bach family. But I think the surest way to guarantee that a musical group will be heard is to ban it.

And, surprise of all surprises, I'm starting to like some of the Beatles' recordings more as I hear them.

THE TOP TWENTY TUNES

1 She Loves You, Beatles; 2 I Want To Hold Your Hand, Beatles; 3 Please, Please, Me, Beatles; 4 Dawn, Four Seasons; 5 Java, Al Hirt; 6 Navy Blue, Diane Renay; 7 California Sun, Riviera; 8 You Don't Own Me, Lesley Gore; 9 Fun, Fun, Fun, Beach Boys; 10 Good News, Sam Cooke; 11 Stop And Think It Over, Dale and Grace; 12 See The Funny Little Clown, Bobby Goldsboro; 13 Penetration, Pyramids; 14 Only Want To Be With You, Dusty Springfield; 15 High Heel Sneakers, Tommy Tucker; 16 Kissin' Cousins, Elvis Presley; 17 I Love You More and More Every Day, Al Martino; 18 What Kind of Fool Tame; 19 Shelter of Your Arms, Sammy Davis; 20 Um, Um, Um, Um, Um, Um, Major Lance.

The Golden Years

Retired Father Pulls Switch On His Neglectful Children

By THOMAS COLLINS

"I have just come through a shocking experience with a retired man and his money. . .

"It has been a tragedy, in a way. But it also has been very funny. I pass it along for what guidance it may be to other retired men, and to their children . . ."

This is a woman speaking, the daughter-in-law of the "shocking" retired man.

"My husband is one of four children in his family. There are two boys and two girls, all of them married now. Their father — we all called him Papa — was left a widower nine years ago.

"He decided to remain alone at the old homeplace, a large and rather valuable farm he had inherited from his own father. He did what farming he could, but rented out most of his acres to neighbors. He settled down to a quiet, independent way of life.

"He hired the wife of a neighboring farmer to come in three times a week to clean up things and cook for him.

"He seemed to be getting along all right, so the four children who had been very attentive just after their mother died began drifting away to their own affairs. . .

"The daughter-in-law says she warned her husband and his sister and brother that this wasn't a good situation. That they should keep in closer touch with Papa. They assured her things were well with Papa. They tried to visit him about once a year (all of them lived some distance away), and they wrote now and then.

The years went by. The daughter-in-law continued her warnings. Papa began growing infirm.

"Then, two years ago the four children decided they had better look into things and agreed to meet together during their summer vacations, go to the farm and have a talk with Papa. . .

"There was some concern about Papa, naturally. But the main concern — and I accused them of it — was to make sure Papa had drawn a will and would be leaving the homeplace to them. . ."

Papa had designated the four children as equal beneficiaries to all his worldly possessions. But in the will he had made a strong point of the fact that he could not go to meet his Maker if he left any unpaid debts or obligations behind. He let the children read his will.

"I didn't think Papa was as dumb as his children thought he was," the daughter-in-law continues. "I didn't know what he might do, but that farm was worth about $25,000 and I just didn't believe he would ever let his children get such a reward for the indifference they had shown him all these years.

"Well, he didn't.

"He died 14 months after the memorial meeting his four children had with him. The will was still just as they had been it. A lawyer Papa had named as executor of the will began unraveling the estate.

FIRST IMPRESSION

"Everything seemed in good order when the lawyer reported that Papa had left an estate of about $5,500. They began bickering to see whether they would sell the farm and cash in, or whether one or more of the others would buy the others out. . ."

Then came the shock. The pastor of a small religious sect which had a church not far from the homeplace made a claim against the estate for $12,000. It was accompanied by a pledge Papa had made to the church three years before his death. And attached to the pledge were two notarized statements — one signed by two medical men saying Papa was in sound mental and physical condition at the time he signed the pledge, the other a statement from Papa saying the church had given him such comfort and happiness in his late years that the $12,500 was small payment in return.

Significantly, at the bottom of the pledge, Papa had stated that if he could not pay the $12, [illegible] want it considered a legitimate claim against his estate. . .

Two days later the wife of the neighboring farmer filed papers [illegible] duplicates. The claim: [illegible]ing his head," says the daugh- [illegible] four children sue in a state of sh-ck. And me? I am a witch, naturally."

British Soldier Answers Shots Outside Nicosia

Canadians Not Involved In 40-Minute Exchange

CP from Reuters-AP

NICOSIA—A United Nations spokesman said today British soldiers of the UN force twice opened fire in self-defence during a 40-minute shooting exchange early today in the Nicosia suburb of Omorphita.

The spokesman said a British soldier fired a total of 17 shots on two occasions when he returned fire directed at him. No casualties were reported.

Officers of the UN force visited the area and brought about a cease-fire.

Omorphita, where Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities are the most intermingled in Nicosia, was the scene of some of the fiercest fighting during pre-Christmas clashes.

A unit of the Sherwood Foresters recently stationed in Omorphita suburb.

LASTS 10 MINUTES

UN officials said the firing across the "green line" separating the rival communities lasted about 10 minutes.

Canadian troops who moved into no man's land between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots on Friday apparently were not involved in the new incident.

The UN officials in Cyprus in Nicosia, was the scene of some does not to talk with reporters and they referred all questions to the UN information office.

The Greek - controlled police manned the Turks fired first, but the Turks and civil defence headquarters.

The Canadian aircraft carrier Canadian contingent of Cyprus Tenacious, carrying personnel, vehicles and stores for the Canadian Army contingent of the UN force, arrived at the east coast port of Famagusta early in the day. The 95 officers and men aboard were disembarked—and unloading of 34 vehicles and 35 tons of stores was begun.

ALL ARRIVE

This marks completion of the Canadian contingent for Cyprus. The bulk of nearly 1,000 men making up the contingent arrived by plane. Arrival of their vehicles will make the Canadians fully mobile and independent.

The troubled island remained relatively calm after more than two months of open and sporadic fare between the traditionally hostile Greek and Turkish communities.

Only a few minor incidents marred the Easter weekend as dead.

Canadians Have First Test Case

By DAVE McINTOSH

KYRENIA, Cyprus (CP) — Canadian troops escorted a Turkish Cypriot through a heavily guarded Greek roadblock here Easter Sunday in a test case which may lead to restoration of normal traffic on Cyprus.

The Greeks made no attempt to stop a United Nations jeep and truck carrying 10 Canadian soldiers and Fouad Ismail, a Turk who had been unable to travel the 16 miles from Nicosia to this northern port city since Dec. 25. A Greek policeman armed with a rifle looked long and hard at Ismail but made no attempt to halt the small convoy entering or leaving Kyrenia.

Cyprus commanders have been hopeful that removal of the roadblocks throughout the island.

Greeks are often arrested at Turkish roadblocks and Turks at Greek barriers.

Ismail spent the weekend with in Kyrenia which the Royal 22nd Regiment has taken over from the British Army as a company headquarters. He drove from Nicosia with the Canadians and returned immediately after inspecting his property.

Easter Sunday was a normal working day for the Canadian troops. There has been no major incident in the Nicosia-Kyrenia area since the Canadians went "into the line" Good Friday.

HOLD SERVICES

Protestant and Roman Catholic services were held at the Canadian base camp near Nicosia.

Then Rev. Fernand Fortier of Drummondville, Que., Roman Catholic padre, said prayers indoors in the field positions of the three Van Doos companies. One of these locations is on a wide mountain perch overlooking Kyrenia.

It was a warm day and the Canadians were glad to get out of their heavy battledress fin-

Almost Hundred Are Sent to Jail After Ban-Bomb March in England

LONDON (Reuters) — An elderly clergyman and an expectant mother were among almost 100 persons jailed following a ban-the-bomb demonstration Saturday at the U.S. air force base at Ruislip, England.

A spokesman for the anti-nuclear "Committee of 100," which organized the demonstration, said more than 75 persons drew jail terms of between one and six months.

"This is believed to be the largest number ever to be committed to prison by magistrates as a result of Committee of 100

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Winds and somewhat blustery activity should diminish markedly tonight. However, another weather disturbance moving southward through Manitoba towards the Great Lakes will very likely cause renewed unsettled activity on Tuesday. Temperatures will continue unseasonably cold.

Today's Chuckle

The modern-day miser is anyone who can live within his income.

demonstrations," the spokesman said.

He said the sentences varied "either because people didn't enough money on them to pay their fines or because they refused to be bound over (to pledge) not to take part in similar activities."

Rev. Charles Simpson, 74, and Mrs. Hazel McGee, who is pregnant, were among those jailed. Mrs. McGee, wife of the Committee's secretary, Michael, was transferred to the hospital wing of Holloway Prison. She received a six-week sentence.

Mr. Simpson was one of four persons who drew six - month sentences. The committee spokesman identified the other three as Miss Lillian Lee, vicar's assistant and Brian Borden.

Another elderly demonstrator, Evelyn Poppleton, 74, "was given two months," the spokesman said.

About 600 persons took part in the Ruislip demonstration. Police arrested a total of about 300.

Only one of the demonstrators succeeded in getting onto the base—a teen-aged girl who then fainted.

Start Survey Of Loss

PORT ALBERNIE, B.C. (CP) Provincial officials began a survey of flood-stricken sections of Vancouver Island today while residents counted their blessings that no lives were lost in the after - effects of the Alaska earthquake.

It was expected to be days before the full extent of the damage in terms of dollars would be known," but Mayor Fred Bishop of Alberni said it would total "a good many millions."

Dan Campbell, provincial municipal affairs minister, said he would seek to have Alberni and its twin city of Port Alberni declared a disaster area.

A gurgling sound, like water emptying from a gigantic bathtub, signalled the start of a weekend ordeal for residents on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The tide rolled up a 40-mile stretch from the sea in successive giant waves, inundating low-lying areas of the twin cities where 20,000 people live, of floated houses from their foundations, upended cars and sent bathroom readings into buildings with the force of giant battering rams.

LASTS 10 MINUTES

The first big wave rolled ashore at 12:10 a.m. PST Saturday and the terrified people of the twin cities realized they had survived—and survived without death or serious injury — the first recorded major tidal wave on Canada's West Coast. Churches were reported jammed Easter Sunday.

The waves were set up by successive shocks from the massive earthquake that caused widespread havoc in Alaska.

Laurie Wallace, deputy provincial secretary who also heads the civil defence organization, said the survey will be aimed at determining financial aid. A report will be put before the provincial and federal cabinets to decide what extent the governments will provide financial aid.

Premier Bennett and Mayor Lex Hammer of Port Alberni sent a telegram to Northern Affairs Minister Laing expressing the Alberni valley is a serious disaster area and requesting fast assistance.

The tidal surges were felt at other Vancouver Island coastal communities including the Pacific Ocean. One of the worst hit was the Indian village of Hot Springs Cove, north of the Alberni, where inhabitants were evacuated by the rescue vessel from 17 flooded homes.

But the Albernis took the brunt of the tidal wave crest. Of the four successive tidal waves, the first was of lesser force but it gave the first warning of the second giant wall of water which was surging their way.

Communications in the T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, toured the Alberni valley Sunday, saying he will ask Ottawa to send in army engineers from Camp Chilliwack to help in repair, pile-clearing and rebuilding.

Mr. Bishop said the destruction to approach $5,000,000 "but handicap these people are operating under," said Mr. Douglas after seeing scores of wrecked homes and stores.

MIGHTY QUAKE RIPS STREET APART — This was the scene that confronted citizens of Anchorage, Alaska, a half hour after Good Friday's mighty earthquake brough ruin to a two-and-one-half block area on the north side of Fourth Avenue. The buildings and part of the street were dropped some 10 feet below their former position. Many structures in other sections of the city were heavily damaged. (AP Wirephoto)

Millions Troop to Churches To Celebrate Resurrection

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In all corners of the earth, Christians celebrated the resurrection of Christ on Easter Sunday.

Millions trooped to their respective churches and others attended sunrise services.

Following the religious observances came the afternoon strolls in traditional Easter finery.

Observance of this most holy day on the Christian calendar ranged from the annual centuries-old gathering in St. Peter's Basilica, Vatican City, to a football field in South Korea.

In Vatican City, Pope Paul VI, observing his first Easter as Roman Catholic Pontiff, addressed a crowd of 200,000 standing in a light drizzle.

The pope's message included the themes of both religious tolerance and religious awakening—with a plea to atheists to become aware of religion and accept it.

And far across the globe in South South Korea, most men and officers of the United States 1st Cavalry Division huddled on football field bleachers under cloudy skies for a sunrise inter-denominational service.

In Madrid, the Spanish capital's churches were jammed to capacity for special Easter observance while thousands flocked to religious sites and centres throughout predominantly - Roman Catholic Spain.

Londoners flocked to their houses of worship bundled up against the coldest Easter day since 1953. The temperature was 43 degrees and there was no sunshine.

In Jerusalem, Jordan, some 10,000 persons — many pilgrims from Europe — took part in Easter day services.

Easter morning masses began shortly after midnight in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre and Western churches throughout Jordan.

In Budapest, leaden skies also prevailed as church bells rang out the message of Easter. But the man who once led the rituals, Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, celebrated his eighth easter Sunday—and his 72nd birthday weekend—behind the doors of the U.S. legation. The Roman Catholic prelate has been in American asylum since the 1956 revolution which freed him from a Communist jail.

At Frankfurt, West Germany, an estimated 24,000 persons took part in ban-the-bomb Easter marches.

In Moscow, it was just another Sunday for most Russians —since the Russian orthodox Easter comes May 3. Thousands strolled the Soviet capital's slushy streets to do their usual Sunday shopping.

In North America, millions poured into their hordes of worship and sunrise services held in every time zone on the continent.

In New York City, a capacity crowd of 6,200 persons jammed Radio City Music Hall for the annual sunrise service.

For the 38th straight year, about 15,000 persons gathered near Azusa in southern hillsides. On Bald Knob, the state's highest hill, an 11-storey cross was dedicated.

MAKES SECOND TRIP

BRUNSWICK (Reuters) — A daring 18-year-old East German refugee who fled to West Germany early this year returned to East Germany last week. Then he brought his mother, brother and sister to West Germany in a boat he had cut in the barber wire border fence, West Germany police reported.

Teen-age Gangs Run Wild

CLACTON (Reuters) — Fights broke out again today between rampaging, leather - jacketed teen-age gangs who terrorized this Essex seaside vacation town during Easter weekend.

Police said seven or eight youths were arrested, but warned further teen - age violence was possible tonight.

A spokesman for the hotel-keepers of this Essex County seaside resort said Clacton had been "like a wild west town" Sunday.

The biggest fight today involved between 20 and 30 of the gang members after the management of a waterfront cafe refused to serve them. Police broke up the fight before anyone was badly injured.

Police in neighboring Southend stationed extra patrolmen at key points after receiving word that about 100 youths and their girl friends were expected to arrive at nightfall.

Police here set up a patrol with Alsatian dogs following the teen - age terror that gripped Clacton during the week-end.

Police said at mid-afternoon today that Clacton was "quiet at the moment."

CHARGE MANY

Forty-three of 102 youths arrested were charged with crimes ranging from drunkenness, larceny and assaults on police and civilians to burglary and wreckage of property worth thousands of pounds.

The remaining 59 boys and girls were given a warning to behave themselves before being released.

Police reinforcements had to be called from nearby towns after midnight at the moment."

New Vatican Policy Emerges

Pope Takes Tough Line Against Reds

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The framework of a tough new Vatican policy toward communism stood out today after the first Holy Week of Pope Paul's reign.

The hardening emerged in speeches delivered by the pontiff during the week. He also again stressed the search for Christian unity and closer ties between the Roman Catholics and other Christians.

After a Good Friday procession in which the 66-year-old pontiff carried a cross, he condemned Communist treatment of Roman Catholics as another crucifixion.

In his first Easter speech as Pope, Paul urged atheists and those who oppose religion to accept God.

His Good Friday speech was the strongest papal condemnation of communism since the reign of Pope Pius XII, who died in 1958.

Paul's Easter speech from the loggia of St. Peter's Basilica was taken as both an appeal and a demand to Communists to mend their ways.

His predecessor, Pope John XXIII, never wavered on doctrinal opposition to communist philosophy and dictatorial methods. But John sought to ease world tension and improve the situation of Catholics in iron Curtain countries by showing patience and charity in dealing with communism.

There was some speculation in Vatican circles that new measures against Catholicism by Red regimes was responsible for the Pope's attitude.

Some Vatican sources considered that the Pope's speeches, particularly his words on atheism, were aimed against a new Soviet campaign to promote atheism.

Other sources thought the Pope might be reacting to setbacks that many have arisen in negotiations to settle the cases of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty of Hungary and Archbishop Jozef Beran of Czechoslovakia. The two prelates can't perform pastoral duties because of conflict with the Communist regimes.

Other sources thought the pontiff's new policy might be more concerned with halting the growth of Italy's flourishing Communist party, largest in Western, Europe. Italian Communists gained 1,000,000 votes in last year's general election and many conservatives blamed Pope John.

His encyclical Pacem in Terris (peace on earth), which was issued before the election, said it was possible for Catholics and Communists to work together.

Damage Climbs As Alaskans Dig Out Of Rubble

Population Stunned By Economic Ruin

By MURLIN SPENCER

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Alaska shuddered through siccessive strong after-shocks today as it laboriously dug out of the ruins of an earthquake disaster.

The death toll from Friday's record quake was approximately 70, an amazingly low figure, but the grim realization of economic ruin was only beginning to sink in upon a stunned population.

Governor William A. Egan revised his estimate of property damage upward to $350,000,000, and other unofficial estimates were higher.

The governor raised his estimate after visiting his home town of Valdez, which had 32 dead and suffered heavy destruction.

Edward A. McDermott, President Johnson's personal representative on the scene, was flying back to Washington today to recommend special relief legislation.

The president already has declared the 40th state a major disaster area. McDermott said it was obvious the full disaster damage could not be assessed at present law would not be enough.

At best, he said, it would take two to four months to get Alaskan economy into any workable pace.

WILL ASK AID

Alaska senators Ernest Gruening and E. L. (Bob) Bartlett, Democrats — bound, indicated they would press for an immediate aid grant in Congress today.

"Please make it simple, with no red tape," pleaded James Fitzgerald, a city engineer of the shattered city of Seward.

"This town is not going to fold up, but we couldn't float a bond issue on peanut butter right now."

Seward, 60 miles south of Anchorage, lost only a few dozen dead, but its business was 95 per cent destroyed and few of

Tidal Wave Kills 11, 15 Missing

CRESCENT CITY, Calif. (AP) — With the death toll at 11 and another 15 missing, sodden Crescent City residents today faced the grim job of cleaning up their homes and businesses the hardest hit victim of the Alaska earthquake outside the stricken state.

Fifteen persons were still missing in the aftermath of the quake-triggered tidal waves that destroyed 29 blocks of this northern California seaport.

Dozens of men marched Easter finery for grimy work clothes Sunday and dug into the rubble of some 300 buildings destroyed or knocked askew. Damage was estimated as high as $50,000,000.

Many were still stunned by the evidence of the watery rage.

A 25-ton tetrapod, used in construction of seawalls, was lifted off its cement base and dropped six feet away. That was the power of the force that slammed the city early Saturday.

Huge waves, propelled across the sea from Alaska at hundreds of miles an hour, struck

Cool Weather, Heavy Storms Curtail Events in Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was more like Christmas than Easter across most of Canada during the weekend holiday as cool temperatures and heavy snowstorms limited most commemorative events to church services.

Exceptions were in British Columbia, especially Vancouver Island, where churchgoers basked in summer-like skies under blue sunny skies, and in southern Alberta where temperatures in the 60s were recorded.

While poor driving conditions from the Maritimes to Manitoba cut down holiday traffic, the grim prediction of 38 deaths by the Canadian Highway Safety Council for the three-day holiday was surpassed.

Little change in weather conditions is expected today as the weatherman predicts more snow from the southern Prairies through to Newfoundland.

Across Canada Sunday, special Easter services were packed but no Easter parades were reported.

Peace marches by the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament were held in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Saskatoon and Vancouver where placards were displayed calling for removal of nuclear weapons from Canada.

In the Toronto march of 400 people a sheet crepe - paper dinosaur trundled along bearing the words "once armed to the teeth: now extinct".

In Kingston, a group of 24 peace marchers, mostly Queen's University students, kept a cold and lonely four-hour vigil around a war memorial.

In Halifax, a sunrise service on Citadel Hill drew a large crowd despite foggy, damp weather. It was the second day with only an occasional glimpse of sunshine.

In Newfoundland, sunny skies over the province Sunday and darkening winds allowed temperatures to rise to the mid-teens from overnight lows in the 20s. Activities were limited to church services.

In New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, rain and snow discouraged fashion displays but churches were crowded for regular and special services, including some at sunrise. Roman Catholic churches also had traditional Holy Saturday ceremonies.

In Montreal, no special activities were held. Weather was partly cloudy with temperatures in the high 30s.

Ontario had below average temperatures and snowflurries throughout the province and, in Windsor, a fresh surge of cold air moving over the already chilled southern Prairies dropped temperatures to 10-below zero Sunday night.

Slightly warmer conditions in Alberta and Saskatchewan for the final portion of the holiday weekend increased the flow of traffic on highways.

British Columbia was bathed in spring sunshine Sunday, with flowers vied with Easter contests for color. Churches were packed and highways jammed.

Need 25,000 More Riders A Month to Make Buses Pay

Why don't Belleville people make more use of the city buses? That is the question that is puzzling the Belleville Transit Commission. The people are paying for the bus service with a subsidy, which is expected to reach over $50,000 this year.

The convenience and benefits are obvious to people who make use of the service. There is the ease of having someone else do the driving and coping with the traffic. There is no search for a parking place, and a shopper does not have to keep one eye on the parking meter to be sure time does not run out. It costs no more to buy a bus ticket than to pay for a parking space, and there is no gas to buy.

If a woman has to get her hair done at the hairdresser's, or has a dental appointment, she does not have to worry about her parking time. A business man who does not run his car during the day would be further ahead to take the bus. In spite of this a horde of cars, many carrying only the driver, can be seen coming downtown any day.

It would take 25,000 passengers a month more to make the break even. The present average is about 67,000 a month, although January of this year had the highest passenger rate of any month since the Commission took over the buses with 77,000 using the service.

RAYDON SURVEY

In a random survey comments were invited from people who used the buses and from some who did not. Not one thing they were all agreed on—the city should keep the buses quick whatever it cost them, the benefit not only of the particular users, but for the elderly, those without cars, or who do not drive, for children going to the arena, YMCA, dancing and music lessons, nursery school, etc., or those who do not want to go home at bad weather.

Suggestions were asked for and there were some complaints. One suggestion was that Christ died and at His forgiveness, and love.

After the closing prayer read by Rev. Mr. Hall, the meeting turned to the "T" for a breakfast of pancakes, gym and swim activities, a short business session and a social evening.

Police checking the much discussed "no parking" signs on Bridge street have been surprised to find that in many cases the signs are not where they should rotate routes so the driving does not become monotonous. The city has been asked to change routes at the end of six months if they wish, as it is not compulsory.

FARE 15 CENTS

Not one person complained that the 15c fare was too high. The transit Commission is composed of chairman Ken Pinder, R. G. Garnett, and Mayor Ireland. The meetings are attended also by City Treasurer C. J. Bender, Commission Manager Ken McMillan and secretary Miss Muriel Jobson.

In 33 years the buses have never failed to run. They have been slowed down by heavy traffic or slippery roads, but have always managed to keep going.

Any information about bus service will be cheerfully given if one calls the office of the Belleville Transit Commission.

The Commission would like to ... the buses pay their own way, or, failing that, would like to cut down on the deficit, but there is only one way this can be done, by increasing the number of bus users, and this, of course, is up to Belleville people themselves.

SUN-RISE SERVICE

About 50 boys and girls of the Y.M.C.A.'s Junior Corps met early on Good Friday morning and attended a Sun-Rise Service at 6:00 a.m. on Bleecker's Island. Even though we did not deter the wonderful day, we thought it was a source of revenue each year. Gen... man complained that so few have been a success. Those accepted by the driver. A woman said the distance travelled by one line was too great and took a passenger all over town before arrived downtown. Gen. MacArthur Critically Ill, Turn for Worse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur, fighting for his life, developed a kidney condition of "grave concern" during the night, doctors at Walter Reed Hospital reported today. They said his condition remained critical.

The doctors also reported that the general had "unfortunately" developed a recurrence of intermittent bleeding from his esophagus, the condition that prompted his second operation more than a week ago.

In a bulletin issued at 9:45 a.m. EST today, the hospital reported:

"Gen. MacArthur's condition remains critical. His heart condition remains strong. His blood pressure is stabilized around 120-60 and his pulse at 80.

"There has been decreased kidney action since last evening.

"This is a matter of grave concern and appropriate measures to correct it are being pursued.

BLEEDING RECURS

"Unfortunately, there has been a recurrence of intermittent bleeding from the esophagus which is being controlled by the sengstaken tube (a tube inserted into the esophagus) . . . .

MacArthur is attempting to weather the impact of his third major operation in 24 days. He has been receiving bedside aid of an arsenal of life-supporting equipment.

Hospital spokesmen said that Mrs. MacArthur saw her husband several times Easter Sunday.

The latest emergency came early Easter morning and doctors had to operate for a third time — the second emergency surgery in seven days.

They removed about eight feet of small intestine after a portion of it had become entrapped in an old hernia. It had literally strangled for lack of blood.

MacArthur entered hospital 28 days ago today, suffering from severe jaundice and March 8 underwent his first operation. Doctors removed gallstones and his gall bladder to relieve a bile obstruction causing the jaundice.

Last Monday, he was struck with the rupture and bleeding of a varicose vein in his esophagus. Doctors operated again, this time under emergency conditions, to stop the bleeding.

Grocer Is Slain At Smiths Falls

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Police are investigating the death of 37-year-old Walter Giff who was found shot to death Sunday in his grocery store.

Police declined to answer any questions concerning the shooting. Smiths Falls is about 30 miles south of Ottawa.

Many buildings had a look of oozing mud on their floors, left by the receding waters.

The giant MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River sawmill-paper mill operation employing 4,000 men was damaged and closed down. Night shift workers fled early morning tried to stem the tide of disaster as great logs crashed through windows from the booming grounds and salt water surged over plant machinery.

The men finally used high lumber carriers to escape.

The Red Cross set up a special bureau in Vancouver. Alberni relief and shipped lumber, diapers and pillows to the area. The main body of flood victims were being cared for temporarily in the Catholic church hall in Port Alberni. Food supplied by local stores will be paid for by the Red Cross. Investigation showed there was no appreciable hazard.

When the first wave struck, off-duty RCMP and Alberni relief search and rescue squad and civil defence workers established a mobile headquarters.

ASSEMBLE BOATS

Officers and volunteers worked in the quiet from all directions, bringing an assortment of police cars, fire trucks, boats, searchlights and radio equipment.

Officers took off in boats to comb a half-square-mile area along the seafront, coping with darkness—there was a power failure—and the strange problems of water navigation over areas where there should have been gardens, trees and playgrounds.

They found at least 60 houses in the immediate area heavily damaged, and perhaps 200 more were evacuated in the face of rising water.

Cars, runaway boats, houses and log booms floated about. A small church in the area left its foundations, floated away and came to rest in the centre of a recreation ground.

At the confluence of the Kitsuksis Creek and the Somass River, at the head of which lies an Indian reserve, Kurt Nellsen shepherded his family on to the roof of his home. A car floated by, crashing into a tree.

WAS FANTASTIC

Said Nellsen later:

"It was pretty fantastic. But somehow we kept assuring it would get better. Then it got worse (when the second tidal wave hit). The house started moving off its foundations. Somebody was shouting through a loudspeaker telling us to evacuate. My dad and I sent the family away in a passing boat. Then we got out a little later in our own boat."

Next door at an auto court evacuating guests found doors jammed as water surged about. Many broke windows to escape across the street in waist-deep and even chest-high water.

A dozen teen-agers had to swim for their lives when they were swamped and swept off their feet by a tidal wave that struck them from behind near Bamfield at the mouth of Barkley Sound.

Child Rescued From Gorge, Not Injured

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Wayne Stadnyk, 3, fell 150 feet into the Niagara River gorge three miles below the falls Sunday and was rescued from a precarious perch without serious injury.

The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Stadnyk who live about a block from the river bank, was brought to safety by members of the Greater Niagara Rescue Squad.

Wayne was playing with his sister Evelyn, 5, when a passerby saw him climb over a four-foot wall and disappear.

Searchers found the child clinging to a tree trunk 150 feet from the top of the bank. The bank falls another 100 feet to the river.

Bruce Kidd Sets Two-Mile U. K. Record

LONDON (CP) — Canada's Bruce Kidd today won the two-mile event at the English Amateur Athletic Association indoor championships at Wembley Stadium.

Kidd clocked up a United Kingdom all-comers record of eight minutes, 39 seconds, winning easily after leading most of the way.

Irish-born Peter McArdle of the United States was second in a time of 8:40.8 and Ireland's Tom O'Riordan third in 8:47.4.

Kidd, a University of Toronto student, had the stadium on its feet and cheering as he turned on a final burst of speed to draw away from McArdle. The Irishman had taken the lead at the beginning and held it until McArdle passed him, on the 13th lap of the 24-lap race.

Kidd paddled in the American's footsteps until the 21st lap when he moved into the pressure, overtaking McArdle and speeding well-into the lead.

"I was worried about O'Riordan," he said. "When he faded I knew I had won. I've never lost to McArdle."

Kidd and middle distance runner Bill Crothers, both members of Toronto's East York Track club, pulled a flying trip to Paris Sunday.

Crothers, who won the 600-yard title Saturday, dropped out of the 1,000-yard event today.

He said that he thought one race was enough for this meet and the energy needed to prepare for the 1,000-yard race wasn't worth it.

BANS SMOKING

TWO MEN DIED after this car went out of control Saturday night on Highway 2 near Brighton. Carl Free, 30 years old, of Toronto, died in Trenton Memorial Hospital soon after the car rolled over several times, coming to rest against a tree. James Free, 21 years old, of Trenton, died Sunday night in Kingston General Hospital. Ontario Provincial Police are uncertain which of the brothers was driving the car.

James Free, Trenton, Dies Day After Brother Carl; Their Car Struck Tree

TRENTON — A 21-year-old Trenton man, James Free of 214 Dundas Street East, died in Kingston General Hospital Sunday night from injuries received in an accident on Highway 2, half a mile east of Brighton, Saturday night. His 30-year-old brother, Carl Free of Toronto died at Trenton Memorial Hospital a short time after the accident.

The OPP investigating officer, Constable James Graham of Brighton, said, following the accident, that the Free car evidently went out of control, rolled over a number of times, and struck a tree, throwing the two occupants out onto the roadway. Both men were taken to Trenton hospital where Carl died soon after admittance. James Free, suffering from head injuries, was taken to Kingston hospital by Rumbell Ambulance an hour after he was admitted at the Trenton hospital.

Carl Free was unmarried. James Free was married with two small children. Both are survived by their mother, Mrs. Luther Free, a widow, living at Smithfield.

The car, a 1963 Valiant, sustained extensive damages.

Police have not yet established which of the brothers was driving the car at the time of the accident. James Free, a one-time employee of Central Bridge, following a period of unemployment had been working at a body repair shop in Brighton.

Sun-Rise Service Held To Greet Easter Morn

TRENTON — Easter Day services in Trenton started off with the King Street United Church Hi-C group service on Mount Pelion at 6 a.m. in spite of chilly temperatures, a fair attendance was on hand to greet the Easter Morn with songs of praise.

Special Easter Masses were offered in Roman Catholic churches and chapels in the Trenton area.

Four morning Easter Communions were offered at St. George's Anglican Church with the rector, Canon K. F. Blachford and the curate, Rev. D. F. Dunning taking part. Music for the Easter Festival was under the direction of the organist, A. J. Boyce.

At the Trenton Salvation Army citadel, an Easter drama, The Symbol of the Cross, was presented at the evening service on Sunday.

Special services were held at the Trenton Baptist Church, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and in the other, small er congregations throughout the town. Congregations of King St. and Grace United Churches joined at Grace Church Sunday evening to celebrate Eastertide.

At the Ebenezer Christian Reformed Church, Rev. R. Kooistra preached his farewell sermon to the congregation on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Kooistra will leave Trenton April 1 to take up duties in Toronto of the First Christian Reformed Church.

Slight Quake Jolts Massena

MASSENA, N.Y. (AP) — The rumble and jolt of a slight earth tremor awakened residents of this St. Lawrence Seaway city early Sunday. No damage was reported. Such tremors are considered unusual in this area, which suffered damage by an earthquake in 1944.

Bethel Temple Celebrates 5th Anniversary

TRENTON — The congregation at Bethel Temple where Rev. Ronald Reid is the pastor, marked the fifth anniversary of the opening of the new church at the corner of Herman and Heber Sts. over the weekend.

Good Friday evening services were taken by guest preacher, Rev. Douglas Hall of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Saturday night, a Quinte Area Youth Rally was held in the church with the Rev. H. Bronson, Principal of the Peterborough Bible College as guest speaker.

At the Gospel Rally Sunday evening, music by the Revelaires Quartet from Napanee was featured and the highlight of this service was a piano duet, The Hallelujah Chorus, with Isobel Williamson and Wayne Vance. Mrs. Jean Reid at the Lowery Organ accompanied the choruses. The church was filled to capacity at all week end services.

The Bethel Temple congregation was formed in Trenton more than 40 years ago. At first, meetings were held in the members' homes. As the numbers grew, meetings were held over the Johnson drygoods store on King St. First ministers were two Italian men, converted to the Pentecostal conviction. One was a Roman Catholic faith, Brother Charlie Pavia and Brother Frank Rapiello. A long-time member of the congregation, Mrs. Cox, recalls Rev. Mackin, Rev. King and Rev. Easter as some of the present pastor's predecessors.

Meetings were held in what is now a shoe repair store near the municipal office on Dundas St. Later, the congregation moved to a re-converted factory on Dundas St. East and on Easter Sunday, 1959, moved to the present church.

ally and into lighter bush clothing.

The Canadians were able to help ease matters in a couple of spots.

In the Nicosia suburb of Trikhomo they were able to persuade the Greeks to release a Turk they were holding.

In the village of Kazaphani, east of Kyrenia, 30-man platoon led by Lieut. Michel Bernard of Valcartier, Que., was able to make life a little easier for Turkish children and women.

The women and children have been frightened by the presence of Greek policemen who have permission to make patrols through the Turkish section of the village. Bernard arranged for some of his men to accompany the Greeks on their patrols.

GET ACQUAINTED

Canadian soldiers on sentry posts and on jeep patrols were rapidly becoming acquainted with Greek and Turkish military and civilians authorities with the local populace.

In Kazaphani, Sgt. Normand Lacoste of Montreal dropped in on an ancient building of which molasses was being made from cane pods. At the invitation of the owner he dipped his finger into the molasses and tasted it.

"Number one" he announced to approving smiles from the Cypriots.

The men were eating on the verandah of the mosque in which some of them stayed. Faint breeze attired the leaves of the olive, lemon, orange, pomegranate and tangerine trees.

On the cliffs overlooking Kazaphani are the ruins of the 12th century Bellapais Abbey where Shakespeare's wife Anne Hathaway was born. The village of the same name wait vainly for tourists who now never come. The interior of the mosque now is a Greek orthodox church.

In trabhouse the Greek guard within a mile of the line of the Van Doos headquarters was festooned with vases of wild flowers.

CYPRIOTS PICNIC

On the Nicosia-Kyrenia road many Cypriot families stopped for picnic in fields blooming with wild poppies and daisies. Nothing could seem more peaceful. But the wreckage of barbed wire and old oil drums filled with concrete were still there.

At Lefka, 34 miles west of Nicosia there was a shooting incident. It was the first in more than a week.

Meanwhile the UN was making plans for publication of a newspaper for the force. Its name will be the Blue Beret, taken from the name of the UN men's canteen at Camp Rabih in Egypt.

The Cyprus Broadcasting Corporation has offered the UN half an hour of radio time a week to play musical requests. Later it will broadcast messages from home for soldiers in the force for an hour a week.

The UN Association in Cyprus, which includes Greeks and Turks, has decided to invite UN soldiers into Cypriot homes.

SEARCH FOR PROOF

SHOREHAM, England (CP) Residents of The Avenue, a road in this Sussex town are searching the British Museum and local archives to try to prove that their road is an ancient Roman shepherds' path. If it is, they will fight the local council's paving charges and may save themselves £150 each.

40 Members Of Quinte Area Attend Meet

TRENTON — More than 40 members of the Quinte area Bahai congregation gathered at Kingston last week to celebrate the Bahai New Year, set to coincide with the Spring Equinox by the founder of the faith, Baha-Ullah. With the introduction of a new religion, the founder established a new calendar. Each month has 19 days, hence feast days fall on the same day each year.

At Kingston, New Year celebrations were led by lecturer Mike Mahoney. The Feast of the New Year was celebrated after sundown.

Attending from Trenton were: Mr. and Mrs. Bert Curtis and from Shannonville, Mr. and Mrs. James Loft and family.

The Gaglardian Approach

"The fast driver is the safe driver because he is more alert."

Safety campaign directors who are already in a state of shock had better get somebody to fasten their seat belts. There is more to come.

Safety campaigns "are not only a bore, they are a menace."

"Lowering speed limits tends to create accidents, raising the limit prevents them."

What kind of a reckless man is this speaking?

This is a provincial minister of highways, a minister, though, who has made unusual statements before, and who will probably do so again many times in the future.

He is Hon. Philip Gaglardi, who divides his time about equally between supervising British Columbia's highways program, preaching and collecting tickets for speeding.

His views on safety campaigns and policemen who "drag out their radar on the big weekends and catch a few hundred drivers doing five or ten miles over the limit" were given in an interview in Los Angeles. Not that Gaglardi is too timid to voice his views in his homeland, mind you, but in California he was a novelty. B. C. is used to him.

We have a sneaking sympathy with part of what he says. We share, for instance, his reaction to slow drivers—they get his dander up more than anything else. We are not at all sure that he has not performed a brilliant piece of analysis when he aims a brickbat our way: "Newspapers dramatize the big holiday weekends which probably would not happen if fewer accidents per miles driven than any other time."

Still, we cannot help wondering why, if British Columbia's minister of highways holds these views, things are not different in B.C.—why B.C. laws still permit policemen to hand out tickets for speeding; why, indeed, there are in B.C. any speed limits under 150—that seems to be about as safe as one can get at the present stage of development of even the best mass-produced automobiles; why safety campaigns in B.C. are not outlawed.

Can it be that the Minister of Highways has been unable to win all his Cabinet colleagues over to his point of view? In this case, what price Cabinet solidarity? Or is the Cabinet convinced but lacking the courage of its convictions? Is it permitting Gaglardi to go on dying on the highways because it believes the public might not take kindly to the Gaglardi safety program to abolish safety programs? For shame.

Come to think of it, though, we'll bet that more Californians find the name of British Columbia's minister on their lips after Gaglardi's visit than after a courtesy call by any previous tourist trade promoter. That's the role Gaglardi was filling when he gave his interview. He wants to watch out or somebody may accuse him of false pretences. Any Los Angeles residents who clock on a B.C. holiday jaunt will survive the fight to get out of the city are likely to find things pretty tame in B.C., by comparison.

Pride and Falls

Quebec Separatists have threatened insult or injury to the Queen if she comes to Quebec this summer, and the Canadian government has decided she will come anyway. "I think it would be shameful to surrender to this kind of minority and vicious propaganda," Prime Minister Pearson has said to the Liberals. Charity demands we assume he would be as willing to put his own life in danger as he is to expose the Queen.

But the fact remains that the Queen has been threatened with insult and danger if she tours Quebec, and the government has ignored the threats because "it would be shameful to do otherwise." Hari Kari, the traditional and slightly messy Japanese standard form of protest, is one result of a similar sort of pride.

The Queen, of course, has little or no say in the matter. A word from her would settle the matter one way or the other, but because of her position there will be no such word.

The plans for the tour and the threats of the separatists present a problem of no mean dimension, and only those who will bear the responsibility have the right to decide the matter. One can hope, however, that the men who will make the decision will consider the safety of the Queen and the good of Canada more important than the pride or shame of politicians.

There is no more miserable human being than one in whom nothing is habitual but indecision.—William James.

When Moderate Mike Starr Speaks, It's Time to Listen

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Former Conservative Labor Minister Michael Starr, no swinging political partisan, is a man of quiet competence, of the Caldwell stature built emotionally and intellectually after the fashion of the late Liberal Sarsfield Minister Lapointe.

Personal popularity with this kind of men, reasonable, understanding, tolerant, middle of the road politicians, crosses all party lines.

They speak with the calm voice of reason.

So when Mike Starr comes out swinging — that is, swing for him as a mild and moderate man — his words could be worth some attention.

He has defended what he views as a change of Government attitude on the bilingual and bicultural issue that has been building slowly, but not surprisingly, into something of a politically explosive question, especially across the Prairies, as the Privy Council, its some sections of the Maritimes, and even — to have certain worried Liberal Backbenchers in Ontario.

With such Liberal MPs as Ottawa's Lucien Cardin, and Toronto's Ralph Cowan and Stephen Otto publicly kicking over the bilingual traces, the Government seems to be shying away from the issue and looking for a convenient scapegoat.

Seems that, sided and abetted by, of all Government agencies, the CBC, the Administration has been discovering just such a scapegoat.

LOOK WHO'S TALKING:

The CBC itself, in its National Evening News, with reporter - announcer Ken Mason pointing the finger, elected what it called "the newspapers" for the role.

Government spokesmen, not excluding Pearson himself, have seen himself and other members of the Cabinet, had been speaking, in various public appearances, about the press "playing up" what they have called the Extremists" to the detriment of the Administration - initiated Bilingual Dialogue.

But it remained for the CBC federal agency — and even the CBC can't deny that it is a Crown Corporation — to, at last, in a firm up, the innuendo about the supposed "sensation - seeking" daily press.

As the Royal Commission on Bicult urism and Bilingualism has been hearing witness after witness listening to the voice of the people, intoned Mason on the CBC program, the extremists, the show, the nuts, the crackpots, the screwballs, in short, "The Extremists" would seem to monopolize the newspaper headlines. The Ukrainians are among the whole thing would be distorted by the Big Type on the Front Page, the Black Type, the sensational and "way out" opinions magnified out of all reasonable proportion.

As Mike Starr says: "Look who's talking!"

What's left for the CBC that put Separatist Marcel Chaput on nationwide TV network to air his views of the Queen, and gave coast - to - coast television and radio broadcasting time to clips and set and formal interviews to other "quiet revolutionaries" including the Quebec goal-a-day-ers?

Yet, the CBC and none other, BILINGUALISM IN ACTION.

Shoulder flashes on the uniforms of Parliament's own "Protective Service," the private police force that guards the House of Commons, used to be in English only. Now they're French on the other. Now, to keep everybody happy, they're in both languages on both shoulders.

State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne, Minister of Agriculture, in the Cabinet, insisted that the little brass plate on his Carnes Block office door be scrapped and a new one prepared with French on top and English beneath.

When he switched from Privy Council to State Secretary, the plate in required Frenchiften-English sequence, of course, could be made to order.

French Senators from Quebec who, since Confederation began, never went on any available Parliamentary record with objections to being called "Senator," recently have had a change of heart. Brass plates on their Centre Block doors now set out the names in French: "L'honorable Senateur."

Not that it makes any real difference, one way or the other, except that it is an indication of the way the wind is blowing across Parliament Hill from La Belle Province.

HOW'S SHE DOING

It was just a year ago this very week that Health Minister Judy LaMarsh, a self-confessed three-sache-a-day girl, took the pledge.

Happened quite by accident. A newsman, scrutching one dead afternoon for a bit of live copy, put the sweat-off-smoke proposition, not really serious-ly, up to Miss Judy.

Quick, like, La Judy replied, sizing it up at once: "If I say I'm quitting or even think of quitting then I'm stuck. Every body in the country will be watching and I couldn't possibly even sneak a smoke, could I?"

No, she couldn't, and that was sure.

"Okay, if it might have even the slightest influence on the kids," grinned Judy gamely, "then I'll quit."

And she did.

So how's she doing?

Just dandy, thanks. Never missed ten, fifteen badly that she might have hurt Ontario's tobacco industry. For she doesn't only smoke the stuff, she means only made up to take care of them-selves and make up their own minds.

Outside of that aspect of it, Judy's pretty well convinced or at least hoping that it has been the kids, mainly, who took her cue.

Personally she's looking fine and feeling great.

Even getting her weight — which climbed alarmingly after seven off — under control again.

She's confessed that in her weak moments — when she wanted to reach for a smoke but hasn't — Prime Minister Pearson was her inspiration and chief cheering section.

He quit six years ago.

And how was it with him?

No sweat, his man Friday, Dick O'Hagan, has reported, "he just quit, period. No strain."

Never really inhaled. Just burned, not really smoked his way through two packs a day. Nervous habit more than an actual addiction. Decided it was not a useful habit. So just dropped it. Like that.

Perplexing Inducement

Montreal Gazette

One of the perplexing features of this week's budget is the continuing effort of indoce foreign-owned companies to set up a certain percentage of their shares available to Canadian investors. For it would appear, though they would increase the degree of Canadian participation in foreign - owned enterprises, would do nothing to increase Canadian control.

These minority shares would enable Canadians to share the benefits as the dividends are concerned, of foreign-owned companies in this country. But the difficulty is that the scattering Canadian capital in small amounts in companies that Canadians will not control, Canadian capital is being dissipated from what is supposed by the more important objective: that of creating enterprises that Canadians would control.

In fact, this persistent effort to gain for Canadians the right to hold a certain percentage of shares in foreign enterprises seems to be somewhat self-frustrating. For the very condition that is said to be unfortunate: the dependent position of this country.

It must be remembered that if the efforts being made in the last two federal budgets are successful, and Canadians become minority owners in many instances, then an immense amount of Canadian capital would be drained away from really Canadian investment.

Can this country afford this kind of distraction, on the scale on which it is to be encouraged? Would it not be better if Canadian business were encouraged, instead, to expand existing foreign - owned companies into expanding the minority role of Canadian investment?

March 30th, 1944

Shire Hall in Picton presented an interesting display of Red Cross work on Saturday. The articles were those to be sent in the next shipment to Red Cross headquarters and were the work of members of the various War Emergency Committees throughout Prince Edward County.

Nearly 300 quilts were displayed with a variety of patterns. The ladies take great pride in their work and the quilts are very attractive as well as useful. Many tables were covered with knitted goods for all branches of the services, and a wide list of hospital supplies and clothing was also shown.

Picton Collegiate Junior Red Cross featured layettes and baby blankets and afghans in their display. Wives of officers of the R.A.F. and the Home and School Club also contributed articles. This is an annual display and reveals the outstanding work being done by Prince Edward women.

The Fire Department submitted a report for the year ending Dec. 31, 1943, having responded to 267 calls classified as follows: dwellings, 89; business places, 44; factories, 3; pipes and chimneys, 61; hospital, 2; hotels, 5; electric motors and wiring, 7; grass, 59; churches, 4; cars and trucks, 16; miscellaneous, 2; tar, 4; city dump, 6; theatres 2; smoke investigation, 13; false alarms, 3; calls out of the city, 11; dry cleaners, 2; oil burners, 2; gasoline, 2; calls to drowning accidents, 2; inhalator calls, 2; calls to rescue people, 3.

Mrs. John J. McCabe and daughter, Miss Kathleen, have returned home after spending a few days in Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. Fred Carlaw has returned to her home in Carroll, Man., after visiting her sister, Mrs. Jones and her brother-in-law, her brother, Mr. William Leslie, in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. John Spencer, George Street, have returned home after spending some time in Miami, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Corrigan and Miss Betty Corrigan have left for Peterborough where they will reside. They have resided here for the past five years and many friends regret their departure from the city.

Mr. W. E. Adams and his son, Mr. W. O. Adams, are celebrating the 52nd anniversary of the opening of their shoe store in this city.

At the Recreation Bowling Alleys last night a double header was rolled in which the K. of C. team defeated the National Castings team, the scores being 2429 to 2305, and the Aristocrats defeated the Mays, the score being 2430 to 2172. The following composed the teams: Knights of Columbus: Manley, Bawden, Goodwin, Martin, Easton; National Castings: Higgs, Hall, Henn, Potter, Turner; Aristocrats: Hurley, Kelly, Roe, Sewell, Hall; Mays: Hickson, Gilroy, Milley, Saylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Keffen-son of Madoc Village were recently visited by friends who presented them with an address and a handsome gift, prior to their departure from Madoc to reside in Belleville.

His Queries Range Widely

Sherbrooke Record

Some members of the Canadian House of Commons apparently are planning to compile an encyclopaedia of useless information addressed to various Cabinet ministers.

And one of the best-informed men in this respect must be the Creditiste MP from Compton-Frontenac, Henri Latulippe, who in a single day recorded answers to such a variety of questions that a university professor with a whole list of degrees might grasp with astonishment.

On Wednesday, for instance, he was informed as to the number of Canadian Navy, Army and Air Force attaches serving in Canadian embassies abroad; their salaries, ranks, seniority, their duties, pay and allowances.

The number of armories established in Compton-Frontenac and their cost of operation.

The number and value of loans made by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

State of commercial relations between Canada and Southeast Asia countries.

Nature and value of Canadian exports to and imports from Japan during each of the past four years;

Monthly variation in the price of bread in Canada and Montreal over the past two years and the variations in the price of flour, sugar, milk powder and other commodities entering into the baking of bread;

How many boys have been oil was imported and exported to the United States, Peru and Spain in 1962 and 1963;

The number of Canadians living in the Panama Canal Zone;

The state of Canadian diplomatic relations with Cyprus; also with Indonesia, Malaysia, Sumatra, Borneo and the Philippines;

Production and export of apples in the past year;

Possible Canadian representations to Russia over the treatment of Jews;

Possible Canadian action against South Africa at the ILO conference and the number of women in the Canadian labor force.

With all due respect to the intelligence of the Compton-Frontenac voters, it is doubtful if many of them have any serious interest in the information obtained by their representatives at Ottawa.

Electrical Gadgets Are Used to Diagnose Ailments

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What about electric treatments? I am getting for a condition which has been diagnosed as gall bladder, liver and kidney trouble? I have gone to this diagnostic clinic for several weeks and the treatment is quite expensive. I am also thinking of the possibility of cancer. This city does not have a cancer clinic. Would any doctor be able to give me a test? — E. M.

I don't know what "electric treatment" for a combination of gall bladder, liver and kidney trouble.

But I do know that electrical gadgets that are supposed to diagnose (and treat) all kinds of ailments are a favorite trick of medical quacks and fakers, some of whom are so convincing that they collect large sums of money before being caught.

For your own safety (not to mention pocketbook) find out whether this "diagnostic clinic" is legitimate. You can inquire at many places: health department, medical society, city hospital, Better Business Bureau. They can tell you whether this clinic is properly licensed to practice medicine. If it is not the authorities can take action.

It is unusual for anyone to have diseases of the gall bladder, liver and kidney all at once without prior symptoms. However, it is another trick of the quack to tell people that they have such diseases and to start expensive "treatments."

As to your cancer worries, clinics are fine but individual doctors can do an excellent job of examining too.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 64 and one eye has been tearing for some time. Now both of them do. I look like I am crying all the time. Can anything be done? — Mrs. M. R.

This is usually because small ducts have become plugged.

Normally a slight amount of moisture leaves the ducts in the eyes to clean and lubricate them, it then drains away through the ducts.

If the ducts are plugged, the moisture escapes in the form of tears.

This trouble often can be corrected by inserting a tiny probe to clear whatever particles have plugged the tear ducts. Consult an eye specialist.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is horsemeat's issue? — Mrs. B. C.

It is burrits — irritation of the burrs on the horse's rump. Relieving it from pressure (not kneeling on it) may let the fluid recede and the swelling and pain subside. Otherwise drainage (with a hollow needle) or surgery may be necessary. Medicallous help in some cases. But eliminating pressure on the joint is of prime importance.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 50 years old, 6 feet, 1 inch tall, and have weighed 220 pounds for the last 10 years. I can jump in the centre of my chest bone. It is now one inch in diameter and was five and a half when I do something strenuous. Is this a natural growth? — B. H.

This is a good example of the type of question to which I can only reply: I don't know. I don't know. The lump isn't natural. Consult a doctor who can look at it. Feel it. Test it. Cut it. And then tell you how to correct it.

• • •

Mrs. D. C.: A "lipped uterus" is indeed interfering with your coming pregnant. It usually can be corrected surgically.

Strictly Personal Attitude, Not Aptitude Most Important

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A friend of mine who needed a partner, and who couldn't afford to be too particular at the last moment, called and invited me to play with him in a regional bridge tournament a few weeks ago.

I accepted, and largely because of his skill and experience we placed second in the event. In looking over the scores, I saw that we would have been a first except for one bad session on my part — one of those wild hands, the other I would guess.

What impressed me about this was the obvious fact that it was temperament, rather than inexhibility alone, that knocked us into second place. Both of my bad calls were made out of impatience, annoyance, and arrogance. I "knew" better, but I didn't "think" better.

It is the subjective factors that divide the winners from the losers more than the objective ones. In a recent book on "The Personality of Chess," for instance, the authors rate the traits that make a champion. Three are: "Fighting will to win," "Reliability of memory," and "Power of visualization." All the top experts have these in common, and they all play equally well in a technical sense. These have never are not the decisive traits in tournaments.

The other three characteristics are: "Sustained alertness," "Calmness in crisis," and "Psychological fighting spirit." And it is these latter three that determine the ultimate winners.

What is true for chess, of course, is also true for bridge or any other, competitive endeavor. There are many "brilliant" masters of profound theoretical knowledge who rarely win tournaments — for under the tension of coping with other people, and a whole list of emotions they grasp with astonishment.

On Wednesday, for instance, he was informed as to the number of Canadian Navy, Army and Air Force attaches serving in Canadian embassies abroad; their salaries, ranks, seniority, their duties, pay and allowances.

My own partner was extremely kind toward my lapses. "You are just not seasoned enough," he murmured soothingly. But I suspect it is more than a matter of experience. It is a matter of grace under pressure that only a handful of persons naturally possess. Nor is it limited to mental pursuits, like bridge or chess — one can see the same forces operating in tennis matches and golf tournaments.

Attitude is more important than aptitudes. Aptitudes can be learned and improved, and there is little to choose between the skill of two experts in any field But attitudes come from deep and are shaped by one's whole personal history. We reenact the past through our present attitudes and reactions, when we call a wild bid "childish" we are being more literal and accurate than we realize.

Valdez Took Hardest Knock Of Earthquake

By DALE NELSON

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP)—"It was as though the bottom had dropped out of the ocean."

A steamship company representative thus described the violent earthquake and tsunami waves that flattened and charred this seaport town and killed a reported 22 persons.

The community of 1,000 on the Gulf of Alaska 150 miles southeast of Anchorage took one of the worst beatings from Friday's violent shock.

Mayor Bruce Woodford said it could be several months before residents — evacuated to higher ground—can return to their homes.

Quake Briefs

LONDON (AP) — Cable circuits between London and Australia were out of action Sunday, presumably as a result of the Alaska earthquake.

A spokesman for the post office said there seemed to be a break in the new Commonwealth cable about 1½ miles off the Canadian Pacific coast. He said it was believed to have been caused by the quake.

ŁAITAIA (Reuters) — The spectacular tidal waves" from the Alaskan earthquake were reported in the far north of New Zealand Sunday with strong currents, which affected vessels in the area, being reported at Port Maungaruí.

SYDNEY (Reuters) — Startling tide changes along Australia's New South Wales coast Sunday were believed to have been caused by the Alaskan earthquake. At one point in Sydney harbor, the tide rose and fell through a range of 21 feet in two hours, according to harbor sources.

Scouting Activities

The 3rd Belleville ladies' auxiliary recently held their monthly meeting in St. Michael's R.C. school with a good attendance. Mrs. J. Farrell, president opened with the Mothers' Promise and the minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. D. Jones.

The main topic of the evening was the annual father and son banquet. It was decided to hold it on April 8 in St. Michael's auditorium. Mrs. Sheila Wright consented to convene.

Mrs. E. Marbey gave a reading from "The Canadian Boy" magazine on Baden Powell Sunday and various ways to hold Scout week.

The ear injury aggravated Glenn's sense of balance and curtailed his plans to retire from the Marine Corps March 1 to enter the Senate race in Ohio.

SMOKES PIPE

TORONTO (CP)—Joyce Gillilan of Regina says pipe smoking is ideal for busy housewives with their hands full because they "can just clutch it in their teeth and puff away for half an hour." Miss Gillilan, who smokes a plain small pipe, is executive secretary of the Canadian Arthritis Society in Saskatchewan. Here for a conference, she said "people get used to it quickly."

ALCOHOLIC EGGS?

"Then I saw the men running down the street as the second wave came up and into the street.

"The wave was like a surge. One minute the river surface was rippling. The next minute it was over the bank. . . .

"The wave toppled a power line tower somewhere.

"Then a section of the sky was lit up with sparks and flashes, just like a lightning storm.

"When the wave rolled down the main street it covered cars and trucks and hit buildings.

"I could see it hit a row of about six auto cabins on the river bank. It lifted them all simultaneously—I thought my eyes were playing a trick and the cabins were not moving, that everything else was moving. But the cabs came up, and crunched into one another.

"It was fantastic."

Glenn Quits Senate Race Due to Injury

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Former astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., withdrew today from the Ohio U.S. Senate campaign because of injuries from a hard-run fall last month.

"No man has a right to ask for a seat in either house of the (U.S.) Congress merely because of a specific event such as orbiting the earth in a space craft," Glenn told reporters after one of his physicians said participating in the election campaign would be detrimental to his health and recovery.

Tidal Wave Was Fantastic To Watch Says Witness

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) — Larry Reynolds, 18, lives on high ground in Port Alberni. When he saw the spectacle of an earthquake tidal wave rippling into the Vancouver Island city he hurried to the scene.

This was his description:

"I was standing in a foot of water on the road after the first wave hit, when suddenly the second one surged up and into the street.

"I heard people screaming and men running back and forth across the street in front of the wave.

"It covered cars, crashed into stores and buildings, and lifted a row of auto cabins off their foundations.

"It was fantastic to watch.

"But then I was running, too, to get away. . . .

"There was water everywhere . . . I was amazed to see two big houses—30 feet by 50 feet and two floors high—floating out in the Domase River.

"They gradually broke up and sank. They'd been lifted right off their foundations on the river bank. People had been living in them, too.

What is a Volkswagen, really?

A Volkswagen is a car.
A different kind of car.
It has its engine in the rear instead of the front. We do it that way to get weight over the drive wheels and improve the traction. That's why a Volkswagen keeps going on sand, mud, snow and ice.
And the engine is cooled with air instead of water. So there's no radiator to boil over in summer or freeze in winter. Or anti-freeze to buy. Or water pumps to fix. Or hoses to replace.
The 1500 Station Wagon (shown above) is a Volkswagen.
A new kind of Volkswagen. Even though it has all the features just mentioned.
It has a great new engine that will take you from a standing start to 50 miles per hour in twelve seconds. It's like driving a sports car. Or an expensive touring car.
There's no secret to the outstanding road holding qualities of the 1500. We use independent torsion-bar suspension. And an anti-sway bar. And a low mounted engine.
A Volkswagen is one more thing.
Economical.
And that's not a phrase with us. We're ready to prove it. Anytime.

Mr. Mort's Newsmaking Team Sleeveless Coat, Sleeved Dress

by Mr. Mort

PRINTED PATTERN

THIS SPRING'S NEWSMAKING TEAM is the sleeveless coat and long-sleeved dress — both shaped along lean, relaxed lines by the famous Mr. Mort. Wear them together and when you wish divide dress from coat and let each go their separate ways. Note the two long seams that curve down the front of the dress — they indicate the new closer-to-the-body fit. They also do marvelously "thinning" things for waist and hipline. Note too, the softly draped bow and cuffed sleeves. The original combines emerald wool for the coat and navy-and-emerald polka dot silk. Make your version in double knit wool, linen and silk or homespun and lighter cotton.

Printed Pattern A517 is available in Misses' Sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 16 coat requires 2¼ yards of 54-inch fabric; dress requires 3¾ yards 39-inch fabric.

Send ONE DOLLAR for Printed Pattern A517 to THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER, 60 FRONT STREET WEST, TORONTO 1, Pattern Department. Please print plainly your NAME, ADDRESS with STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Association for Retarded To Hold Campaign in April

John M. Ross, finance chairman of the Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children, announced, at the March meeting that April 29 would be the date for the 1964 campaign for operating expenses. In selecting this date, Mr. Ross pointed out that it was the same time used last year. Last year's operating expenses were reported at $14,000, of which the Ontario Government contributed $5,000 and the city of Belleville $500. The remainder was raised by subscription and generous donations from a number of organizations and individuals. The province's declared intention to undertake full operating costs of the school from January, 1963, was noted and an objective of $4,000 was set for the April campaign, which it was hoped would carry the school until 1965.

NEED MORE ACTIVITY

A recommendation by Miss Butler, Inspector of Special Education for the Department of Education, concerning the school's emphasis for the retarded was discussed. She feels that these pupils need a program enriched by much more physical activity than our school can give them with its present facilities. A special activities room is thought to be the answer to this need, and a study of available types and possibilities for construction was initiated.

Mrs. D. Maddocks, Education Committee chairman, reported on several new enquiries from families concerning admission of children to the school. Some of these children live in remote communities in the district, but the meeting agreed unanimously that resources should be stretched to the limit to make schooling available to all, regardless of distance.

Ann Landers

Fashion Wigs for Children Revolting and Nausiating

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Several months ago you delivered a well-deserved knock to the idea of "little diamond rings for your steady girl." Apparently teen-agers have so much money these days they are able to spend $15.98 on "a little ring to show her you care."

Well, I almost threw up at that one, but attached to this letter, Ann, is something that really made me sick. As you can see it's an advertisement which appeared in our newspaper — "Fashion wigs for little girls from 3 to 9 years of age."

The ad pictures a dimpled, smiling five-year-old wearing a intricate braided hair-do, which, of course is a wig. Under the picture it says:

"Give your little princess a thrill she'll never forget. These fashion wigs will change her personality in an instant. As a blonde she is breathtaking; as a brunette, delicious; as a redhead, stunning. She will enjoy being the centre of attention at all the little parties, as she flaunts her new coiffure."

The wig stays on without pins, will fit any little girl from 3 to 9 years of age. It is made of vinyl and looks like real hair. The price? Only $3.98 plus postage."

Now, Ann Landers, what do you think of that? — STOP THE WORLD, I WANNA GET OFF.

DEAR S.T.W. — I think it's nauseating. The notion that a vinyl mop on a youngster's head will "change her personality in an instant" and "make her the centre of attraction" is revolting beyond description.

Any mother who would do this to her child is so kooked up that I feel sorry for her children.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—I gather from reading your column that you don't think much of people who drop in without an invitation.

My friends are welcome to come and see me anytime. I was raised in Vermont by just plain folks. Who raised you? — GRASSY ARE MY ROOTS.

DEAR GRASSY — I was raised by just plain folks in Iowa. And I'll wager plain folks in Iowa are just about as plain as you can get.

If you welcome uninvited guests, bully for you, Doll. I don't want 'em. And neither do the vast majority of the folks (both plain and fancy) who write to me.

People who are even remotely sensitive will give you a fighting chance and telephone first. They won't fail in when you have other guests, a basket full of laundry waiting to be ironed, a kid down with the flu — or a column to write.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our daughter who will soon be 19 is in her second year at a local college. She plans to be a teacher.

YesteNday she told us the history club of her college is planning a weekend excursion out of town. There are boys in the club. She says she has a date and her mother but since she started college she has become head-strong and difficult. I've just about decided to tell her, "You're not going and I don't want to hear any more about it."

I fail to see how a weekend of this kind can help her be a better teacher. Her college education is costing us a lot of money and I don't want her to use it as an excuse to tear around with loose males.

How can I make her see this is not meanness on my part, but mother love? Please help me. I feel utterly lost. — NOT COPING.

DEAR NOT — There is a difference between mother love and smother love. A 19-year-old college girl has a chaperone — her conscience.

This girl's standards are well established and if you have done your job you need not worry about her. If you have not done your job, worrying now will not help. I say let her go— with your blessings.

U.C.W. Meeting

THOMASBURG U.C.W. AFTERNOON GROUP

The March meeting of the Afternoon Group of Thomasburg U.C.W. took place on Wednesday afternoon, March 25, at the home of Mrs. Eden Brough with 12 members present.

Mrs. Mabel Prindle, president, was in charge of the meeting. The theme of the Bible study period presented by Mrs. Marion Morton, was "Resurrection". Mrs. Edna Brough and Mrs. Nettie Morton read portions of Scripture, after which a discussion about the theme took place.

A short program was presented by Mrs. Mabel Prindle who also gave a reading.

Plans were made for a spring tea and sale of home goods and home baking on May 20. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Cora Robinson.

A dainty lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants.

BONARLAW W.I.

BONARLAW — Mrs. Everett Heath was hostess for the W.I. meeting on Wednesday afternoon, March 26th with 15 members in attendance.

Following the opening, Mrs. C. Ray showed films of many places of interest in the north country and Niagara Falls. Mrs. Ray was presented with a gift.

The spring money was handed in and a quilt was completed. A quilt was donated to a family who met with a loss by fire. A quilting is to be held at the home of Mrs. L. Cassidy on April 7th. Mrs. A. Burkitt gave the report of District Directors' meeting held at Madoc.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Cyril McKeown and Mrs. A. Reid, conveners for Canadian Tourist and Industries.

GIVES ADDRESS

Mrs. McKeown gave a splendid address on Canadian tourists and many historic places, the beautiful parks such as Algonquin Park and many more that the tourists enjoy.

Mrs. Arthur Reid gave a humorous reading. Mrs. McKeown put on a contest pertaining to Industries.

Mrs. Heath and assistant hostesses served a dainty lunch and a social time was enjoyed.

Woman Raises 20 Children For C.A.S.

WINNIPEG (CP)—A Winnipeg housewife has helped raise 20 children of various ethnic origins and says she plans on five more.

Mrs. Gordon Burnell has served as a foster mother for the Children's Aid Society for the last eight years.

She is one of 1100 foster parents in Winnipeg who care for about 1,000 children.

The homeless children remained with the Burnells for periods ranging from seven months to six years before more permanent arrangements were made for them.

Mrs. Burnell, whose foster children have included Negroes, Orientals and those with Indian blood, says "the babies are the ones I enjoy most."

All the children have fitted into her family and the neighborhood.

"Everyone is so kind to them; they cannot help feeling loved."

She explained that usually her own three children were in school, she and her husband "had plenty of time and space for younger ones, so it seemed the natural thing to do."

TOTAL SPENDING

Total expenditure on formal education and vocational training in Canada was estimated at more than $2,250,000,000 four 1963.

DO YOU SELECT YOUR HUSBAND'S CLOTHES?

Do you buy your husband's clothes? Well, of course you realized. A quilt was donated to a family who met with a loss by fire. A quilting is to be held at the home of Mrs. L. Cassidy on April 7th. Mrs. A. Burkitt gave the report of District Directors' meeting held at Madoc.

not buy his suits, topcoats or jackets. But there is many a wife who selects her spouse's sports shirts and ties. Then too, she influences his selection of sports jackets as well as other items.

Paul Roth, fashion show editor of Esquire Magazine, recently presented the Bristol of Rome collection of men's wear to the ladies in Montreal and Toronto. It was emphasized that women are the final arbitrators when it comes to men's fashions. For instance, the new trend to "grooming" casual comfort can be directly traced to the average woman's dislike of the clothes' "off-the-worn outside the trousers" appearance. Which has been so prevalent for suburban weekends.

SPECIAL MENTION

Although trousers are slim, without being extreme and most jackets still have collars, there are several items which deserve special mention. Something called a sweater-jacket looked wearable and practical. A sweater-jacket resembles the regulation cardigan, but it is constructed as a sports jacket with cuffs, buttons and pockets. One outstanding example of grey double knit had side buttons with darker grey bandings, outlining the tapered waist-line, closing, cuffs and the bottom of the jacket. It was shown over a thin turtle-neck in white with the sweater-jacket was of navy and white checks, banded over the hips, again side-buttoned with the neckline fastening high over the throat in the Ben Casey fashion.

In an interview after the show, Mr. Roth confirmed that many men are interested in all new style trends, but that they are hesitant about taking the plunge to become leaders with the new fashions. The traditional, he said, will, it is expected, accept the new turtle-neck, reasoning that a turtle-necked sweater will remind people of the late Clark Gable — and what a pleasant memory that is!

According to Mr. Roth, the placing of pockets in the design of a pair of slacks is of prime importance. Moving the pocket away from the side of the figure, even as little as 2 inches, will assure a slimmer waistline.

INTERESTING SWEATERS

Many interesting sweaters and sports shirts were shown, some trimmed with satin — one in an unlikely shade of pink. As this was a trend show, Mr. Roth pointed out that pink shirts were popular a few years ago and predicted that pink will once again hit the news, but this time confined to casual wear. The satin banding will be replaced by a knit trim, as it is believed that few Canadian men would willingly accept such an avant-garde fabric.

Shorts of denim were shown, modelled on the Tyrolian lederhosen, complete with cuffed legs and practical patch pockets. Just the thing for our summer campers.

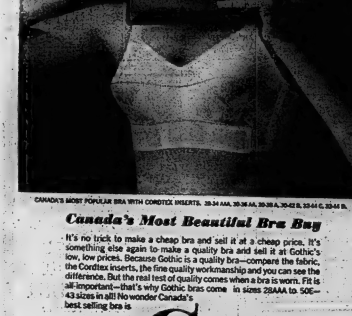
Negro Spiritual Songs Mark Church Service

On Sunday evening March 22 at the Emmanuel Baptist Church a Negro spiritual evening was held with Mr. Bud Campion well known soloist of Toronto.

Mr. Campion led in a hymn sing to open the service and Rev. E. Quirk conducted the prayer. Mr. Quirk introduced and welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Bud Campion on behalf of the church.

The Young People's Group of Tabernacle United Church and the congregation of Sidney Baptist Church, as well as many visitors from the other churches in the city worshipped together.

Mrs. Campion narrated the story of the Negro life from slavery to freedom, leading up to each spiritual song. It is interesting to note that the word "hate" or anything to suggest hatred was never used in any of songs of the Negro people.



All the children have fitted Mr. Campion rendered the following selected solos by the church choir; solos by Mrs. Paul Weigand, Mrs. Max Woolley and Mr. Bud Campion. These songs of life and hope of the Negro people were most beautifully sung to the glory of God.

Successful Living

Even Small Children Can Perform Useful Chores

DEAR READERS — Remember "Nightmare"? Two mothers (if she who was slowly but surely becoming a new woes wrestle! Here's help for her and others like her from two veterans of the Housemaking Squad!

1. DEAR DORIS — I had four chil- dren in three years. Since the day we brought home the first one (twin) I think I have washed, ironed and cleaned every single day, except during my hospital stays.

When my little girl (the last baby) was four days old, I came home from hospital and the very next day did six months' loads of wash. True, there was no dried help, but there were three tiny but willing helpers.

DORIS CLARKE

My little boy, just 17 months, would sit by his baby sister and talk to her when she stirred. I kept her in a car-bed in the dining room which saved running up and down stairs. I also kept diapers upstairs and down (plus diaper pail) (I), extra shirt and a few nighties always close at hand.)

Now the three older ones (at 5 and 3 years) dress themselves, make their beds (Mommy smooths out the lumps after), hang up clothes. Treat the baby gets into the act, taking soiled laundry to the hamper, putting her cuddle toys in her crib and handing Mommy the decorator cushions for the beds. The children enjoy the responsibility.

Downstairs, one twin gets out the cereal and bowls, another gets the silverware. After breakfast, Mommy does the dishes and the children wash and dry children's TV show.

The morning is spent in playing together, exercising together, dusting, sweeping, all the little jobs. (In the summer months the children go outside with instructions to stay within Mommy's sight). About 10 a.m. the children have cookies, and usually a piece of fruit.

Noon is lunchtime, then naptime for the wee ones. As I iron, I watch for mending, setting it aside to be done before supper or in the evening.

At 3 p.m. we try to have our bald done by nine or shortly after, take a half hour to make sure all finger nails are clipped and clean, etc., and one morning a week we have a "wednesday" bath week, and then all we girls put curlers in our locks, taking them out, if possible, just before Daddy comes home.

Sure, there are days when I could scream — the children aren't always kind to "commanding officer" Mommy, but all in all it's a pretty good life. So you see, "Nightmare", hands may be small but willing; and underneath it all are hearts full of love and thoughtfulness. Sometimes we must be stern and even uncompromising, but we must also play a little, laugh a little, and love a great deal.

Also, we have one more who is a very big part of all we do, and unless every day in every way into our lives. The most remarkable thing of all — "dad". I am finding a daily routine for many housekeepers. Perhaps "Nightmare" can profit from my ideas to become "Hopeful", and her days a little easier. — THANKFUL.

2. DEAR DORIS — "Nightmare's" letter took me back to the nightmarish time a few years ago when her problems were mine, exactly. If she is anywhere near the "nervous wreck" I was she'll not be able to do anything efficiently until she calms her nerves down first . . .

Once I overcame my own personal problem (with the help of my doctor) the rest was so much easier to handle. In time it all my children changed from miniature monsters into my greatest joy. When nerves are on edge the tiniest problems take on enormous proportions, and the big problems we just aren't able to handle at all. — NO MORE NIGHTMARES.

Our thanks to both for sharing secrets of success! Write in, Ladies of the Litter and Sitter League, for Thankful's practical schedule. There might just be an idea in it you could use. Enclose a self-addressed, five-cent-stamped envelope.

DEAR DORIS — I am a second year student nurse in a hospital teaching school. I would suggest to "Student" that her decision be based upon the type of nursing she wishes to do, and not entirely on her marks. If she would rather teach student nurses or work in the field of public health nursing, then the university course is for her.

If, however, she wants the satisfaction of doing things for patients directly, then the hospital course should be her choice. I would urge this student to think a little more deeply about her decision, and to write for information to several universities and hospitals. — NURSIE.

DEAR NURSIE — I agree that bedside nursing takes a special skill and kind of sympathy. It's a noble job. But I still hold out for getting all the education you can absorb and afford! Then finding your niche follows: whether in practical work or administration or teaching.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — Is it all right to refuse to dance if you think the boy did not ask you the right way? — JENNY.

• • •

DEAR JENNY — Yes, if he acted smart; and if you know what the right way is! But don't risk being thought snobbish. It pays to be easy to get along with.

• • •

Confidential to BROKEN HEART — They do love you; and would want to think you cried yourself to sleep. Your mother is busy, tired — and human. Look for some thoughtful act to do for her and she will see that her little girl is growing up. Tell her your side of things when you are alone with her.

DEAR DORIS — I am an elderly widow of 76. My apartment is situated across from a middle-aged couple. Every day the husband leaves for work early in the morning at about 7.30. As soon as he leaves another man comes. And he leaves shortly before the husband returns.

From what I see, she is having an affair with him, but her husband is unaware of this. Now I'm not a person who likes to pry into others' affairs, but should I notify this husband and tell him what is going on or should I remain silent? — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING — Mind you own business. Things are not always what they seem. Find new, fascinating things to do to keep you from your daily visit at the window or keyhole. Oh yes you can, if you try!

• • •

(Doris will be glad to help you with your problem. Write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

THOMASBURG U.C.W. EVENING GROUP

The March meeting of the Evening Group took place at the home of Mrs. Freda Morton on Wednesday evening, March 25 with nine members present.

The leader, Mrs. Ruth Seeking opened the meeting with a hymn, followed by prayers and the reading of an Easter poem.

Mrs. Marion Morton was in charge of the devotional period on the theme of which was "Missions". Mrs. Freda Morton read the Scripture and Mrs. Marion Morton gave an interesting paper on "Missions in India".

The report of the baking sale on Saturday, March 21 at Whitby's Corner service was received and the undertaking had been a great success. The other showing tables eligible for prizes reported certain pet ducks were passed out as were slips showing what each pet son is asked to contribute to the catering at the sales barn in April. Members are to help with the tea and sale sponsored by the Afternoon Group in May. A meeting will take place on Tuesday evening, March 31 at the home of the leader, Mrs. Ruth Seekings to handle the various labels for the Book for Charity. Mr. George Dyson closed the meeting with prayer.

A social half-hour was enjoyed during which those members who had previously not received instructions for making the smocked cushions which the group is selling, were shown the method involved.

PLANS RETIREMENT

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP)—Gladys West will retire in June after more than 52 years as a teacher in Wolfville schools. Miss West joined the staff in 1911 and has been on the job continuously, except for the 1931-32 school year when she was ill.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: I wish most would be a little more dressed when they ask a girl for a date. Often I'll accept a dinner date, for instance, and then have the young man ask where I'd like to dine when he comes to pick me up. I always get nitpicked when this happens, because I'm afraid I might suggest a place he doesn't like, or that is too expensive. I'd much prefer that a fellow have the evening planned and know where he intends to ready picked out before he rings the doorbell. Usually, when I'm asked to select a place I say I'd rather leave it up to him, but this always sounds insincere and sort of disinterested. What is the proper way to handle such a situation when it occurs? — V. C., Boston, Mass.

ANSWER: I serve the evening is off to an easier start when the evening has already had the entertainment stopped out. If he wants to offer a choice, it's wiser on his part to name a few restaurants he can afford and let his date make the final selection. However, if he leaves it entirely up to you, you'd be smart to have the names of a few restaurants on the tip of her tongue, preferably in different price ranges so he can take it from there. Often a fellow sincerely wants the girl to pick out a place she's sure to enjoy. So, when you're asked to choose where you'll eat, it's more courteous to comply without making a big fuss about it.

Question: When dinner is served buffet - style, may a guest pass up a food he doesn't care for, or must he take a slight portion for fear of hurting the hostess' feelings? I'm a light eater and actually prefer to take only a helping of meat and salad. Some friends with whom I was discussing this point felt it is the guest's duty to sample of every thing, so as not to offend the hostess. What is correct in this instance? — Mrs. B., Kew Gardens, N.Y.

Answer: At a buffet, a guest may select as much or as little as he wants and is free to choose only those foods he actually enjoys. At a sit-down dinner, where the hostess serves, it's polite to accept a bit of everything that is offered. But at a buffet, since there's usually a wider variety of food set out, the hostess will not feel offended if guests do not take a sampling of each.

QUESTION: My husband invited a friend of his to join us for dinner at a restaurant last Saturday. His wife is out of town and he was at loose ends. Luckily, he met me at our apartment first for a cocktail. I say luckily, because he showed up without a tie. The restaurant we had picked out definitely required one, so I suggested he pick out one of my husband's and put it on. He accepted the suggestion and a tie, but my husband seemed to think I should have ignored his appearance and let him go tieless to the restaurant. Do you agree with this? — Mrs. C. B., Stamford, Conn.

ANSWER: No. Since he was improperly dressed for the type of restaurant you were going to, it was sensible to offer him a tie to wear. It might have been more embarrassing for him — and for you — in the long run if your party were turned away at the door because your guest wasn't complete enough to do the proper thing and wear a tie.

Question: I've been asked to help take up a collection for a well-known charitable cause. The agency assigned me to several roads in our area. I'm supposed to call on each family and ask for a donation. This is a job I've never done this sort of thing before, I'd like to know how I should go about it. Should I call first for an appointment, or, since the drive has been announced in the local paper, may I simply stop by each house without further advance notice? — Mrs. L. Hartford, Conn.

Answer: Since you have a list of the families you are supposed to cover, it would be more polite — as well as timesaving on your part — to call for an appointment first. If you don't know several of the neighbors well, an advance call will serve as introduction and let them know the purpose of your visit. It also will save your making several trips in case you don't find someone home the first time and have to make a return call.

Requested Apple Squares: Delicious

by Mary Moore

This simple request for Apple Squares . . . the kind that have a pastry on bottom layer, apple filling or applesauce filling and a "topping" sent me to the kitchen on Saturday morning to work it out. They are so good I predict they will be among our all-time highs.

Here is an excellent request for I used Spys for the filling and they are coming out of storage in lovely shape this spring.

APPLE SQUARES:

Pastry: 2 cups sifted but not sifted flour; ¾ teaspoon salt, 2/3 cup shortening, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 egg yolk, ⅓ cup cold water.

In mixing bowl add salt to flour and cut in shortening and butter with pastry blender until size of peas. Mix egg yolk with water. Drizzle over flour mixture, mixing it in with fork until all liquid is just blended in. Turn out on floured board. Press into ball. Divide into 2 portions. Roll out one to ¼" thickness. Line bottom and sides (to height of ¼") of 8 x 12" shallow pan (or one of equivalent area). Chill while you make

Apple Filling: 2 cups pared, cored, chopped Spy apples, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¼ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ cup boiling water.

Put chopped apples (roughly the size of raisins) in saucepan and at once sprinkle the lemon juice over them to prevent browning. Mix together dry the sugar, cornstarch and nutmeg. Add to apples, mix well, then add to boiling water and cook, stirring, until thickened. Remove from heat and cool.

Spread evenly in pastry-lined pan.

Roll out remaining half of pastry, prick at even intervals with forks, fold over to make it easy for you to pick up, and transfer to half-cover apple filling. Unfold to cover other half. Pat cut edges of dough together to seal as well as possible.

Bake in moderate oven (350°) for first 10 minutes to quickly bake cold bottom crust, then raise to centre rack in oven to finish baking. Mine required 20 minutes baking in all but you must watch these closely because the sugary top could brown too much.

Eighths best leftover egg whites and brush top of pastry gently with it. Now sprinkle top all over with about 2 tablespoons granulated sugar. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr., having pan on bottom rack of oven for first 10 minutes to quickly bake cold bottom crust, then raise to centre rack in oven to finish baking. Mine required 20 minutes baking in all but you must watch these closely because the sugary top could brown too much.

"Guesswork is no substitute for accurate measurement"

Unlike some rating services, there's nothing hit or miss about an ABC audit of daily newspaper circulation. They count noses. People who buy the paper regularly because they like to read it. No projections. No guesswork.

An ABC audit shows where every newspaper goes. They don't count free copies. They don't count the fellow who comes in for 20 copies because his picture was in the paper. That's not normal circulation. They audit a newspaper's books, check branch offices, delivery men and news boys. The figure they come up with is an accurate count of the people you can expect to see and read your ad.

That's the way it should be. That's the audience you're paying for. And that's the audience you reach when you advertise in daily newspapers. If you'd like to know exactly what audience your advertising dollars will buy in this newspaper, ask for a copy of our current Audit Bureau of Circulations report.

Damage

ter side-bodied men still had jobs.

The Alaskan Railroad, vital route from Seward to the interior, was a jumble of wrecked cars and twisted rails. A rolling wasteland area collapsed into the sea.

All along the ring of the Gulf of Alaska where the great quake struck in fury at 5:36 p.m. Alaska time Friday (10:36 p.m. EST), it was a similar story of low casualties but mighty ruin.

Anchorage, the sprawl-city of the state with an area population of 100,000 counted 12 dead, but its business district and its best residential sections were tottering heaps of awesome wreckage.

Kodiak Island counted 12 dead but its fishing fleet and canning plants were wrecked.

WERE ON DOCK

One hundred and fifth miles southeast of Anchorage, reports from the small town of Valdez (pronounced Valdeez) said many of the 32 dead were on a dock that collapsed when hit by a huge sea wave.

The sea waves also worked terrible and deadly destruction on thousands of miles away, killing at least 16 persons in California and Oregon. Worst of these surfers was Crescent City, Calif., more than 2,000 miles from the quake's epicentre. There 11 persons died and 15 are missing.

Anchorage, centre of the Alaskan recovery effort, went sobrely about its business, flinching at successive after-shocks.

One shake, felt strongly in Anchorage at Easter night, registered at 7.5 on the Richter scale of energy by the University of Washington at Seattle, 1,500 miles away. University scientists said it was a separate quake, in the Aleutian trench 400 miles northwest of Friday's epicentre, but Anchorages felt it with jittery apprehension.

An earlier mid - afternoon shock led to a civil defence warning of a new tidal wave headed for Seward. It was called off quickly, but people who had lived through Friday's terror fled to high ground.

RATED HIGH

The Friday quake was rated by experts at 8.2 to 8.7 on the Richter scale. This scale, measuring the release of energy, has never before rated a quake higher than 8.6 and then only rarely and in unpopulated places.

The massive problems of housing, food and shelter were being solved rapidly, but temporarily.

Anchorage wholesale grocers estimated they had about a 30-day stock of essential foods on hand — mostly in warehouses, but still usable.

Electrical power was being restored slowly, but many homes and buildings were without light, heat or power.

Drinking water had to be boiled or melted from snow.

The Red Cross, Salvation Army and other volunteer groups guaranteed at least one hot meal a day for everyone.

Hundreds in Anchorage were given sleeping space on floors in large buildings.

Bars and liquor stores, normally open seven days a week, were closed by police order. Banks remained closed.

Police, soldiers and national guards men, patrolling downtown Anchorage, reported no cases of attempted looting.

PULL DOWN WRECK

Workers started pulling down teetering four-ton slabs of concrete five-storey J. C. Penney store and other dangerous ruins. Dynamiting was considered and rejected.

A civil defence official said: "It is still possible some victims are in the rubble. We might not get to some for quite a while."

About half of Anchorage was estimated to have suffered from the quake, and new cracks appeared steadily in standing structures as the after - shocks continued.

Fire, which raged in spectacular fury from oil storage tanks at Seward and Valdez, spared Anchorage, but remained an ever-present danger.

Temporary toilets and metal receptacles replaced broken plumbing facilities. Mass typhoid inoculations were arranged.

President Johnson's emissary, McDermott, who flew for six hours over the entire stricken zone Sunday, ranked Seward as "the worst yet."

At Kodiak, where he landed, he saw the signs of a 45-foot sea wave that destroyed the fishing fleet.

He estimated that Alaska's important fish processing industry was about 50 per cent destroyed.

Alaskans stoically vowed to rebuild everything bigger and better than ever. To the average citizen the disaster was still

Hepburn Bros. Start Erection Of 14-Unit Motel

PICTON (Staff) — The Hepburn Bros. Charlie, Barney and Jay, are starting the erection of the only motel inside the town limits on Monday, as the blocks will be laid for a 14-roomed motel on their property on Bridge Street.

It is expected that there will be a small coffee shop in connection with the new motel, but it will be opened for breakfasts only.

The brothers are hopeful that erection will be completed in time for summer (tourist operation.

Navigation Opens on Bay On Good Friday

PICTON (Staff) — Navigation on the Bay of Quinte opened on Good Friday as the C.S.L. freighter Glenelg pulled into the dock at the Lake Ontario Portland Cement Company about 7:30 p.m.

Town of Picton officials had been alerted and were standing by for a 3 p.m. arrival, but Captain Harvey Ambeau and his Glenelg ran into ice conditions on the north side of Amherst Island en route from Kingston, and were forced to turn around and come in on the south side of the island.

The first vessel, usually the Glenelg, has not docked this early since the cement plant opened. It is usually about April 20-10th before the ice will allow them to get to the dock. A week ago the ice breaker came through, and had almost no ice to break through.

Captain Ambeau loaded immediately with 3,000 tons of cement and sailed for Toronto at 8.30 a.m. Saturday without waiting for the Provincial "Top Hat" presentation which is given annually to the captain docking the first boat of the year at the cement plant.

The boat usually carries 4,000 tons but the low water plus the fact that the cement was a type that is fluffier than normal, accounted for the lesser tonnage.

The Glenelg is expected back for another load on Monday.

Brakes Fail On Steep Hill, No Injury

PICTON Special — Canadian Guardsman Joseph Sullivan escaped injury Sunday when his car brakes failed as he drove down a hill from Camp Picton.

His automobile veered across Lake Street and ended up 200 yards from the road in a field of mud.

Early Sunday morning a car driven by Paul Heffernan, of Oshawa, went out of control on Talbot Street, near Anderson's Corners, snapped off a hydro pole and caused a total of $200 damage. Heffernan was unhurt.

Easter Saturday, police charged Mrs. Margaret Lacroque of Kitchener, with drunk driving after her car went into a ditch and struck a culvert on Highway 33 east of the Mallory crossroad.

Saskatchewan's Lloyd Says Tax-Sharing Not Equitable

By RON MacDONALD

REGINA (CP) — Premier Lloyd of Saskatchewan goes to the federal - provincial conference in Quebec March 31 determined to press his view that the federal government's latest proposals for sharing tax revenues are inequitable.

Saskatchewan officials at the conference also will work for a change from the present conditional federal grants programs in health and welfare to a "block" grant system with general guidelines rather than specific conditions.

Mr. Lloyd, who faces an April 22 provincial election, has said the latest tax-sharing proposals by the federal government were a retreat from the principle of equalization.

The Saskatchewan government has proposed that the federal government make equalization payments to the provinces to bring the revenues of all provinces from income and corporation taxes and succession duties up to the level of the province getting the most on a per capita basis from these three tax fields.

The three tax fields are shared by provinces and the federal government.

HEALTH PLANS HIGH

Saskatchewan, which introduced the first hospital insurance plan and the first medical care insurance scheme in Canada, will be particularly interested in the question of federal cost-sharing on health and welfare programs. Cost-sharing in this field is expected by Mr. Lloyd to occupy much of the coming conference.

Under present arrangements the federal government makes payments to the provinces to cover part of the cost of various health and welfare programs. Certain conditions are attached to the payments made for each program.

Premier Lloyd has said this makes administration of the various programs unnecessarily complicated and may deter provinces from improving certain health and welfare programs because they fear they will find themselves no longer eligible for federal cost-sharing.

Health Minister A. E. Blakeney says: "We favor, in the health field, converting specific grant programs such as National Health Grants to a block grant program.

"We do not advocate the immediate termination of existing cost - sharing programs but rather a gradual change to one with only general guide lines rather than detailed conditions."

Premier Lloyd also may ask the federal government for revisions in the proposed Canada Pension Plan, particularly to allow the self-employed to participate.

New Wheel Balancer Should Help

By EUGENE R. MILNOE

Following a recent column on the subject of maintaining proper wheel balance, a new product — designed to assure this — was brought to our attention.

As pointed out, unbalance is caused by heavy tight spots in the wheel assembly, and can be especially serious at high speeds. Steering difficulties, a shimmy and shake, and rapid tire wear result. Thus, this condition must not only be corrected but proper balance must be maintained.

The new product said to achieve this is actually a metal ring with weight clips. When installed on the wheel rim (by merely tapping several times with a hammer) it is designed to act as a stabilizer to keep the wheel in a balanced state. Should a new tire be needed the balancer ring is easily removed and reinstalled on the rim. This a new wheel balancer that comes in sizes to fit 13", 14" and 15" wheels, and will be available from service stations at approximately $6 each.

From P. L.: "When my engine idles I get a very rough and I can distinctly hear a thump-thump noise. One mechanic suggested to me it could be the distributor."

He may be right. A worn or out-of-round distributor shaft will bring on these symptoms.

L. J. writes: "I have a gripe against automotive writers who point out that 'personal safety' is harmful to a new engine. This has to be an exaggeration — and then some. Please tell us facts so I can be better treatment than this!"

But during idle, oil pressure is not thrown enough to fully cushion and lubricate vital parts. When new, therefore, there is a greater danger of scuffing — and, at any time, excessive wearing of parts taken during the engine idles for long periods.

I asked "How do you explain tired wheel shimmy that always occurs except when car speed hits over 60 or 70 mph?"

You probably only think the shimmy disappears at 60 m.p.h. or so . . . because the increased wind noise, sway, vibration, tire rumble, etc. make it virtually unnoticeable.

From Mrs. T. G.: "My husband thinks I am imagining things because I have noticed that our car almost stalls when turning a corner or making a U turn. He doesn't drive, so it's difficult for me to see when this could be due to my imagination?"

You probably absolutely right. A carburetor defect such as a binding float or a loose mounting can cause stalling or engine faltering on turns.

the English-language newspaper Cyprus Mail reported Greek-Cypriots manned parades Wednesday to mark the ninth anniversary of the anti-British terrorist campaign which led to independence in 1960.

Sporadic firing was reported late Saturday in the Southwest village of Koukla but it stopped when a British patrol under UN command arrived early Sunday.

A UN spokesman said reports were also received of shooting at the village of Vroisha in northwest Cyprus where recently evacuated by Turkish-Cypriots.

On Easter Sunday Canadian and British troops, who form the UN force so far operational, held church parades at camps and outposts throughout the island.

Rev. Fernand Forcier of Drummondville, Que., Roman Catholic padre, said mass at three command posts North of the capital where the Canadians took over duties Friday and Saturday.

A special news bulletin issued by the Turkish - Cypriot communal chamber said the UN must stop "illegal practices" by Greek-Cypriots who were stopping and searching Turkish-Cypriot villagers.

The bulletin said it hoped UN commander Gyani would review the position of his troops' relations with the former anti-British guerrillas which it said were now disguised as "legal forces of the state."

Using Planes To Search Out Tribesmen

NEW DELHI-(AP) — Indian Army spotter planes and helicopters will join action Sunday in searching out Christian tribesmen hunting Moslem victims in the brush-covered hills of eastern India.

Home Minister Gulzari Lal Nanda expressed confidence in New Delhi that this aerial reconnaissance, coupled with use of troops would contain religious strife that has raged for 14 days in four eastern states.

Officially the death toll is 120, with most victims members of the Moslem minority community. Unofficial estimates, however, range as high as twice that number and the Moslem government of neighboring Pakistan has charged that as many as 2,000 Moslems may have been killed in one massacre at Rourkela in Orissa state.

Nanda told reporters that since the tribesmen, members of the tribesmen, members of the tribes of the tribesmen, members of the tribes of the tribesmen, members of the tribes

Alberta to Seek Revamps Of Federal Cost-Sharing

EDMONTON (CP)—Premier Manning says Alberta will continue to press for a study which could lead to a completely new method of sharing costs between the federal and provincial governments.

The premier, who will head the Alberta delegation to the federal - provincial conference opening at Quebec March 31, says present equalization and cost-sharing schemes must be thoroughly reviewed and new plans developed to replace them when they expire in two years.

The study he proposes could lead to establishment of a fund from which all provinces would receive a share. It would be pooled from personal and corporation income taxes, succession duties and what he describes as a retail turnover tax.

This proposed new tax would be a type of sales tax applied to a retailer's gross annual receipts rather than on each item sold.

The fund would be aimed at enabling all provinces to achieve basic standards of health, education and welfare, the premier said recently.

HAS CRITICISM

The premier said the present shared-cost programs in such fields as these will be the key topic of the Quebec sessions. There were several criticisms of the present arrangements.

These included inability of the poorer provinces to participate fully, provinces being taken unawares by an Ottawa decision after they have prepared budgets and the entry of the federal government into fields that are the provinces' under the constitution.

The premier also said that Ottawa might designate a general field, rather than a specific purpose, for the spending of grants by the provinces. Needs in health and education varied so much from province to province that each should decide how money could best be spent within a general framework laid down by Ottawa.

Mr. Manning also was hopeful that a formula might be devised under which a province could contract out of cost-sharing agreements.

Teen-agers Carry Cross At Sharbot Lake

SHARBOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) About 30 hymn-singing teen-agers carried a 100 - pound wooden cross for a mile Friday to re-enact Christ's walk to Calvary.

Alternating pairs carried the nine - foot - high cross from a school, through this village and along a highway to a church. Across the six - foot crossbar were the words: "Jesus Christ, King of the Jews."

Rev. R. C. Smeaton, who organized the marchers from his United Church congregations at Sharbot Lake and nearby Moberly, 30 miles north of Kingston, said it was to commemorate the religious aspect of Good Friday.

He said commercial interests have taken over Christmas and are trying to take over Easter "but there isn't much they can do with Good Friday."

Rev. Smeaton, assisted by Ralph C. Cope, an Anglican minister, celebrated communion around the cross in the church.

Garden Notes

Exploring for New Ideas

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

It is a good idea to explore the garden centre for new ideas in garden helps each year. All kind of tools and chemical aids are being improved to make plants bigger and healthier.

Wilson's have a new granular systemic poison for insect pests. This is spread around the plant, shrub or tree or shaken into the furrow as you plant vegetables and flowers. When the granules are sprinkled on the top of the soil they must be worked in with a trowel. Water thoroughly to dissolve the granules. The roots take up the poison from the soil and it is absorbed into the sap and tissues of the plant. Sucking insects such as aphids and chewing insects such as leaf-hoppers are poisoned.

Cygon 2-E was a new systemic last year and proved very good. This can be painted on the bark or sprayed on the leaves. The chemical is absorbed into the sap and carries the protection throughout the plant. This effective poison cannot be washed away by rainstorm or hose water. Two paint on or spray applications are considered enough for the whole season. Apply as leaves emerge and again early in July.

INVITES INFECTION

When you cut off a rose cane, top raspberry plants, prune vine tree or shrub you leave an open wound that invites infection. Borer and fungus spores find free entry to cause die-back or any number of diseases. A pruning paint bomb will put a plastic skin over the open surface. Use after grafting, to cover damage done by gnawing animals, mechanical injury and broken limbs.

Do you grow blue Hydrangeas, blue berries, Azaleas or Rhododendrons? Keep them healthy with aluminum sulphate. This acidifies the soil. Three tablespoons per gallon of water at three week intervals through the summer is recommended. One gallon treats one large size plant.

If you have young trees or are buying new ones this year for spring planting guard against sun scald, rabbits and mice with plastic tree guards. This heavy gauge will last for many years. Easy to apply and it expands with the growth of the tree.

GOOD PROTECTION

Wilt-pruf forms a colorless plastic film that will stop water loss through transpiration. This is a good winter protection for roses evergreens both conifers and broad leaf. It is also a fine aid in transplanting seedlings, shrubs, and perennials during the summer, storing bulbs and tubers and makes an excellent sticker for pesticides.

Rose collars are made of heavy green plastic. They are good for planting out new roses and winter protection. Requires less soil and offers better protection than hilling with soil. Neat appearance is another point in their favor. They are practically a life-time investment, easily stored flat until needed for winter use.

Look over the pruning knives, shears, dusters spray mixers and hose fog nozzles for additional aids in better gardening.

FIRE LOSS HIGH

PORT MENIER, Que. (CP) Fire swept by high winds burned out of control for more than five hours Saturday, destroying a Roman Catholic church, the presbytery, a general store and two houses in this community on Anticosti Island, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence 400 miles northeast of Quebec City. No one was injured but 11 persons, including seven children, were left homeless, a spokesman for Consolad Paper Company, owner of the island, said the damage was about $500,000.

OPPORTUNITIES TO ADOPT CHILDREN

BONNIE is a bright and active baby available for adoption. She is a year and a half old, with deep blue eyes and brown hair. She has a heart condition but is otherwise in good health. As Bonnie is Roman Catholic, parents of that faith would find her a delightful daughter.

CLARENCE wants to become part of a family; that is his one wish for the future. He is an attractive Protestant child of eight years of age. His racial origin is unknown. Clarence is bright and intelligent, in Grade 3 this year, a tall boy of wiry build with brown eyes and hair. This healthy lad is badly in need of a home and parents to call his own.

If you can offer Bonnie or Clarence—or some other child —a permanent home, please consult your local Children's Aid Society, or write to:

Castro in Middle of Grim Struggle to Keep His Red Regime From Breaking Up

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press
Special Correspondent

Fidel Castro appears to be in the middle of a grim struggle to keep his Communist regime from breaking into two hostile factions.

His crisis revolves about the role of old-guard Communists in Cuba before 1959. Castro, badly in need of Soviet economic and military aid to keep him in power, can hardly afford an explosive purge—but a showdown may bring one.

The Cuban premier has implored the two factions to avoid a situation in which his revolution—He so many Communist revolutions before it — would "devour its own children."

The crisis was touched off by disclosures in the total of a Communist accused of helping Fulgencio (El Batista's dictatorship, which collapsed before Castro's "26th of July" movement five years ago.

Before the 26th of July triumph and this is common knowledge—the old guard Communists, comfortable in Havana, played ball with the Batista regime. There is no evidence since that Batista dickered with the Moscow or Peiping Communists to let them dominate the Cuban labor movement in return for keeping communist pressures against his regime.

THERE'S NEW CHAPTER

The new chapter concerns a 36-year-old Communist named Marcos Rodriguez Alfonso, who was a member of the party executive Committee in 1957. He was arrested in 1958, accused of having told Batista police the names of the revolutionary student directorate who attacked the presidential palace in March, 1957. The betrayed students were killed by Batista police.

Rodriguez Alfonso apparently had friends up high. His case was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Subsequently, Rodriguez Alfonso was re-arrested. He was sentenced to death this month.

By implication, the trial struck at old-guard Communists. The press carried indictations about concealed guilt of others.

Castro ordered the Rodriguez trial reopened, so that insinuations could be answered—though he opined the doomed man was guilty.

GIVING THEM CHANCE

This seemed an effort to give the old guard a chance to get off the hook. Castro appeared desperate to keep a semblance of unity between the Moscow Communists and his own "new" Communists.

Castro is furious. He has denounced Maj. Faure Chomon, a party official, for making the trial a political one, airing matters which should have been taken up in secret party councils, and allowing an internal party enemy to try "to use" to attack the old Communists.

The trial therefore seems destined to become the battleground for a bitter factional struggle. The old Communists have been trying to do anything the new ones — notably Ernesto (Che) Guevara who has been touring Africa and Europe — bear to the Chinese brand of violence as the proper strategy for Latin America.

Canada Stands Ready to Aid Alaska Says Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson assured President Johnson Saturday that Canada was ready to do anything it could for the earthquake victims of Alaska.

His telegram to the U.S. president said:

"On behalf of the government and the people of Canada I wish to express our great distress over the tragedy which occurred in many communities of Alaska last night. I should be grateful if you would convey our deep sympathy to those in Alaska who have suffered such heavy and painful loss.

"Since early this morning officers of the Canadian government have been in close touch with agencies of the United States government to determine what help we might best be able to supply and have been making preparatory arrangements in the event our assistance is called for.

"I know that I speak for all Canadians when I assure you that we stand ready to do whatever we can to assist the people of Alaska at this tragic time."

OFFER AID

The army and air force offered their assistance to the United States armed forces in helping victims of the Alaska earthquake, an army spokesman said.

Representatives of the two Canadian services met in Ottawa with a military attache from the U.S. embassy and asked that the offer be conveyed to the Pentagon. The RCAF has aircraft on standby at Trenton, Ont., in case they are needed, and the army has blankets and medical supplies ready at western command headquarters in Edmonton.

The Emergency Measures Organization, which controls civil defence, has worked out plans to assist the earthquake victims if helped is asked for.

In Toronto, Maj.-Gen. Arthur E. Wrinch, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society, offered emergency assistance to earthquake victims in Alaska.

He said Red Cross units in British Columbia have notified the society's headquarters here they are providing about 50 families—victims of the tidal wave in Port Alberni on Vancouver Island—with shelter and food.

The Most Rev. Howard H. Clark, Anglican Primate of all Canada, sent a telegram to Rt. Rev. W. J. Gordon Jr., Bishop of Alaska, expressing the concern of Canadian Anglicans at the earthquake disaster.

37 Arrested In Racial Outbreak

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Thirty-seven young persons, including a Yale University chaplain, face court hearings today on charges of disturbing the peace and integration demonstrations in St. Augustine, the oldest city in the United States.

Police feared more demonstrations. Among those who have announced plans to put the test segregation was Mrs. Malcolm Peabody, 72, mother of Governor Endicott Peabody of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Peabody was accompanied by Mrs. Donald Campbell, wife of the dean of the Episcopal (Anglican) Theological Seminary at Cambridge, and Mrs. John Burgess, wife of the first Negro ever elected an Episcopal bishop in the United States. Mrs. Peabody said they would protest like "three nice peaceful women."

The trio flew to Florida Sunday to join some 20 other members of the Massachusetts chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, of the St. Augustine demonstrations.

Civil rights groups say St. Augustine restaurants, theatres, hotels, motels and even public schools are almost wholly segregated.

Noting St. Augustine Mayor Joseph Shelley's statement, "I have no fight with the policies of the president of the United States; if she violates the law she will be arrested," Mrs. Peabody said:

"I'm not out to be a crusader and get myself in jail."

With a smile, she added: "I don't think in a democracy like ours they'd dare to put three nice women in jail."

She explained: "If one has Christian convictions and believes in the worth of every individual, one feels deeply because of the indignities suffered by Negroes.

"Be it well understood the North is far from guiltless in this matter."

Twenty - seven demonstrators, 18 of them from out of state and mostly New England students, were arrested on charges of trespassing during sit-in demonstrations in three downtown lunch counters Saturday.

Million Submit to Surgery To Cut Down India's Crop Of Babies, but Population Up

NEW DELHI (AP) — A million persons have submitted to surgery to cut down India's crop of babies.

This official figure seems impressive, but the government isn't impressed. Its arithmetic shows:

A 4.5-per-cent annual birth rate minus a death rate of 2.3 per cent equals a net population increase every year of 2.2 per cent.

"It means 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 new, hungry mouths to feed every year," says D. S. Raju, deputy health minister.

"It means that India's population (of about 480,000,000) will reach between 900,000,000 and 1,000,000,000 by the end of the century."

The 1,000,000 milestone was reached last week in the program of voluntary sterilization.

"It's not enough," Raju said. "But it's our only hope."

OPERATIONS FREE

Sterilization is a major part of India's effort to cut its birth rate in half. The government finances operations for any man or woman who has three children and feels economically incapable of supporting more.

Noting St. Augustine Mayor Joseph Shelley's statement, "I have no fight with the policies of the president of the United States; if she violates the law she will be arrested," Mrs. Peabody said:

"I'm not out to be a crusader and get myself in jail."

With a smile, she added: "I don't think in a democracy like ours they'd dare to put three nice women in jail."

She explained: "If one has Christian convictions and believes in the worth of every individual, one feels deeply because of the indignities suffered by Negroes.

52 Fatalities Across Canada Over Holiday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

At least 52 persons met accidental death in Canada during the three-day Easter weekend—five more than the average since a record 70 persons died during Easter weekend in 1957.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Thursday to midnight Sunday local times recorded 42 deaths from traffic. The Canadian Highway Safety Council had predicted the toll would reach 38.

Both new figures — traffic and total—were lower than last year when 58 persons died, 43 of them on the road.

Ontario led the 1964 list by provinces with 19 Easter weekend road deaths. Two other accidents—the crash of a light aircraft and a fall at a home—brought the province's total to 20.

Quebec recorded 13 deaths, 11 in traffic and two, by asphyxiation.

Only Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island remained fatality free.

Five died in traffic accidents in Nova Scotia and three in New Brunswick.

Manitoba also had three fatalities, all by fire. Saskatchewan recorded its first one highway death each, with Alberta also reporting two deaths by fire. The two B.C. deaths each one by drowning in British Columbia.

The CP survey does not include natural or industrial deaths, slayings or known suicides.

The Ontario dead:

SUNDAY

Joseph Beaudry, 48, Hawkesbury, in a two-car collision near Hawkesbury, 60 miles east of Ottawa.

Gordon J. Clarke, 44, North Bay, in a car-truck collision near Cache Creek, about 30 miles east of North Bay.

SATURDAY

Fred Diotte, 56, Sudbury, when struck by a car on a city street.

Douglas Edward Calhoun, 31, Shepperton, when his car crashed on Highway 8 near Owen Sound.

Lewis Roy Gratton, 67, Thedford, when struck by a car on Highway 82 near Sarnia.

David Campbell, 7, Oshawa, when hit by a car while crossing a street.

George Wayne Hall, 22, Lakefield, when his car crashed on a country road near Peterborough.

Kenneth Bushnell, 22, Oshawa, in a two-car collision on a city street.

Carl Free, 31, Toronto, and his brother, James, 21, of Trenton, Ont., when their car crashed near Belleville.

Horace F. Weeks, 71, Oshawa, when struck by a car while crossing an intersection.

10 Million Times More Energy Released by Quake Than Bomb Which Destroyed Hiroshima

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Alaska earthquake released 10,000,000 times more energy than the atomic bomb which destroyed Hiroshima near the end of the Second World War, the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey reported.

The survey's director of seismology, Leonard Murphy, gave this comparison Saturday in a preliminary analysis of reports from Alaska and reports from more than 100 stations on all the continents.

The Hiroshima bomb's energy release was equivalent to that of 2,000 tons of TNT.

The survey chief, Rear-Admiral H. Arnold Karo, rated the Good Friday quake as the worst in over-all intensity ever to hit Alaska. He and the chief seismologist told a press conference that until fuller study and additional reports are received, the survey rates the quake as "eight plus" on the Richter scale that measures magnitude of power and shock.

MAKES COMPARISONS

This is the same magnitude area, Murphy said, as the San Francisco quake of 1906, is slightly under the 8.3 Richter readings for the Chile disaster of May, 1960, and equally-rated quakes in Assam, India, in 1950 and in Ecuador in 1906.

The Richter scale has no upper limit.

Murphy located the probable origin of the Alaska quake at from 30 to 40 miles below the surface at 61 north latitude and 147.5 west longitude. He said this centre could have been from 10 to 20 miles across, meaning that it could have been under the waters of Prince William Sound or under land near Cordova.

Karo calculated that the water wave from Alaska travelled at between 400 to 600 miles an hour.

Murphy said the highest water waves recorded from the quake were 30 feet at both Kodiak and Cordova. This compared with waves of from 90 to 100 feet measured during the 1946 earthquake at Scotch Cap, near the point where the Alaska peninsula stretches out into the Aleutian chain.

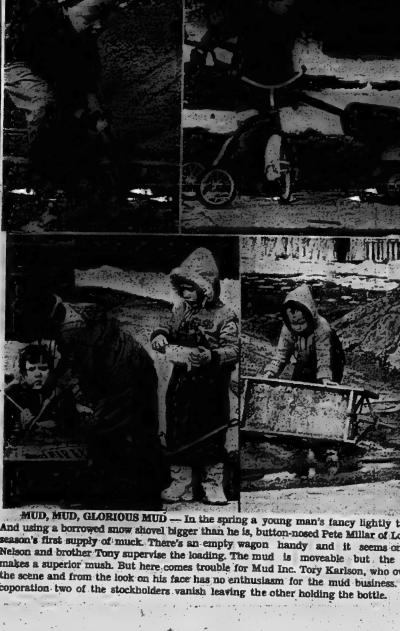
OSLO, Norway (AP) — The Alaska earthquake may represent a greater energy release than all the nuclear bombs exploded to date combined, a spokesman for the seismological station at the Norwegian west coast city of Bergen said in a radio interview.

He said Saturday his station believes the force of the Alaska quake to be between 8.3 and 8.6 on the Richter scale and added that an 8.6 quake represents an energy release equivalent to 10,000 megatons of nuclear explosions. A megaton is 1,000,000 tons.

Johnson Will Not Leave United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has reached a "firm decision" not to leave the United States while the office of vice-president is vacant unless some unforeseen crisis dictates otherwise, Congress has been told.

The state department gave this information to a group of congressmen who wrote State Secretary Dean Rusk suggesting Johnson arrange a meeting with President de Gaulle to smooth U.S.-French differences.



Assistant State Secretary Frederick Dutton, who replied for Rusk, said Johnson had invited de Gaulle to the United States but the French leader turned down the invitation so a meeting between the two leaders is unlikely this year.

Dutton said Johnson's decision to plan no trips outside the United States "is based on a sound regard for our constitutional system."

Johnson or his successor will be sworn in office in January under the normal process after the November presidential election.

FIVE RESCUED

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — James L. Knight, president of the Miami Herald, and four other persons were rescued Sunday when his yacht, Jimiana, sank about 40 miles east of Miami off Cat Cay the U.S. Coast Guard reported. The 60-foot yacht sprung a leak and the coast guard sent a plane to the scene and dropped a pump, but the craft could not be saved.

MUD, MUD, GLORIOUS MUD — In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of mud. And using a borrowed snow shovel bigger than he is, button-nosed Pete Miller of London, Ont., tears into the season's first supply of muck. There's an empty wagon handy and it seems only natural to fill it. Then Nelson and brother Tony supervise the loading. The mud is moveable but the addition of a little water makes a superior mush. But here comes trouble for Mud Inc. Tory Karlson, who owns the wagon, arrives on the scene and from the look on his face has no enthusiasm for the mud business. While Tory dissolves the corporation two of the stockholders vanish leaving the other holding the bottle. (CP Photo)

Johnson Calls For Probe of Meat Prices

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson has called for an investigation of the gap in food prices in the United States — the spread between what producers get and consumers pay. The emphasis would be on meat prices.

At one of his surprise Saturday press conferences, Johnson also:

—Took issue with Senator J. W. Fulbright's critical views of administration policy toward Cuba and Panama.

—Said he is planning to visit pockets of poverty and unemployment at some time not yet set. But he does not intend to make a flying trip to view Alaska's earthquake damage.

—Hailed the release of two American pilots who were shot down by the Russians over East Germany.

Johnson covered these and an array other topics in the 1½ hour-office of the big LBJ ranchhouse.

One announcement was that the president was preparing to ask Congress for legislation to create a bipartisan commission of 15 members to study changes he said are taking place in the food industry.

Johnston said the problem pertains particularly to meat because meat prices have dropped for the farmer but not for the consumer.

Suspect Says Sergeant Was The Thief

TORONTO (CP) — Det.-Sgt. Herbert Gahagan, who caught a suspect after his home was broken into Saturday while he was off duty, found himself accused of being a thief.

The off-duty detective said he heard someone trying the door of his Toronto home after he had turned off the lights at about 11:30 p.m. He heard glass break and went outside to investigate.

He spotted a man in a nearby alley, jumped on him and held him until police arrived.

However, when police arrived the suspect told them: "I caught this guy. I'm holding him. He's a thief."

George Finn, 41, was charged with breaking and entering.

Outbattle Hawks In 5-4 Victory ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Ullman, Rookie Goalie Spark Wings

By TOM WILLIAMS

CHICAGO (CP) — "You say sham-poo, like the stuff you put in your hair," said the quiet little man in the sweaty undersweat.

That was Bob Champoux, 21, the goaltender almost nobody had heard of before Sunday night, telling reporters in the stanley Detroit Red Wings dressing room how to pronounce his name.

Minutes before, he had been out on the ice in smoke-filled Chicago Stadium, living up to his name by pulling into the hair of Chicago Black Hawks as a pinch-hitter for Terry Sawchuk.

With the untried rookie in the nets the Red Wings outbattled the Hawks 5-4 to tie their best-of-seven Stanley Cup series at one victory each. The Hawks won the opener 4-1 Thursday.

Norm Ullman scored three goals for the Detroit club and checked defensively. Gord Howe played a powerful game, scoring once and earning an assist, and Frank Mahovlich counted the other Detroit goal. his second of the season.

SCORES FIRST GOALS

Bill (Red) Hay scored two goals 47 seconds apart in the second period, and Ullman broke out within 33 seconds in the third to wrap up Chicago's scoring.

The series goes to Detroit for the third and fourth games Tuesday and Thursday. After that the teams meet here Sunday April 5 and, if necessary, at Detroit Tuesday April 7 and at Chicago Thursday, April 9.

Champoux, a five-foot-10 165-pounder in his first year of professional hockey, was regular goaltender this season for Cincinnati Wings of the Central Professional League. He had an unspectacular record with the last-place club, allowing an average of 3.34 goals in 60 games.

His starting assignment came after five minutes and 23 seconds of the first period. Sawchuk, 34, who has clinched nerve in his left shoulder as he reached for a shot by Hawks' Ken Wharram in the fourth minute of the game.

Sawchuk left the ice briefly, then returned after slightly more than a minute of play while Champoux circled from the stands, dressed hurriedly.

STOPS HULL FIRST

Moments after he replaced Sawchuk, the Hawks' No. 1 scorer goalie who, like Sawchuk, wears a protective mask, got his first shot when Bobby Hull, goal-scoring leader Bobby Hull fired a slap shot from just inside the blue line. Champoux swung out a leg and stopped it away.

He got excellent protection—except for one brief lapse—from the Wings' defence and stopped 14 shots in all. Sawchuk, regarded as best before he left, with the score 0-0.

Chicago's Glenn Hall stopped 30 shots from the first-cup Wings.

"I just made up my mind not to worry about who was shooting, whether it be Bobby Hull, Stan Mikita or anybody," Champoux said. "I just wanted to stop all the shots."

"Gordie Howe came up to me and said 'do your best' and that gave me a lift. Then after Chicago scored two goals in the second period, all the players told me not to worry, that I really didn't have a chance on the shots."

Wings' coach Sid Whel said after, the game he expected to have Sawchuk ready for the third game. The veteran's arm was placed in traction and it was expected his condition would be normal by Tuesday.

WON'T PLAY AGAIN?

Abel said he would not use Champoux again if Sawchuk is not ready, but would call up Roger Crozier from Pittsburgh of the American League, a goaltender with several games' experiences in the NHL.

However, NHL president Clarence Campbell said after the game that Crozier could not be used except in case of emergency. He said Detroit's situation could not be considered such an emergency with Champoux on hand to replace Sawchuk.

Ullman started Wings on the way with a power-play goal at 9:45 of the first period, deflecting Alex Delvecchio's shot behind Hall while Chicago's Ron Murphy served an elbowing penalty. Ullman made it 2-0 for Wings before the period ended, cashing in Larry Jeffrey's goalmouth pass.

Andre Pronovost made it 3-0 early in the second, scoring while the Wings were shorthanded with Jeffrey in the penalty box. Bruce MacGregor broke away from the Hawks' power play after Mikita missed a pass at the Detroit blue line, and skated in close to test Hall.

Chicago defenceman Pierre Pilote plied MacGregor on top of Hall and Pronovost picked up the loose puck and shot it into the unguarded net.

Hay scored his goals at 16:39 and 17:26 of the second to narrow Wings' lead to 3-2. The first came when Pilote stole the puck from Delvecchio at the Detroit blue line and fired a shot that Hay deflected past Champoux.

SLAPS IN REBOUND

The second came when defenceman Doug Barkley overshated the puck in front of the Detroit net. Hull poked a shot that Champoux stopped but he slapped in the rebound.

Howe counted three seconds before the period ended to make it 4-2 for Detroit, tripping Hill Gadsby's goal-line shot behind Hall.

Ullman restored Wings' three-goal lead early in the third when he took Jeffrey's pass from behind the net and drove a short shot past Hall.

Nesterenko's first came on a pass from Murphy, who stole the puck from Delvecchio. He cut the margin to 5-4 when John McKenzie shirted the Detroit defenceman and bounced a shot off the goal post after beating Champoux. Nesterenko drove the puck into the net.

Pilote was credited with three assists in the game, giving him six points for the two games and the lead in scoring in this year's Stanley Cup play.

The Wings left for Detroit by train immediately after the game. The Hawks planned to fly there this afternoon.

Within Game Of Winning Semi-Finals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Paul Rangers and Omaha Knights each came within a game of clinching their Central Professional Hockey League best-of-seven semi-final series during the weekend.

St. Paul defeated St. Louis Braves 5-4 Saturday and took a 3-1 lead in the series with a 5-3 win over the Braves Sunday.

The Knights, after edging Minneapolis Bruins 5-4 Saturday, lost their chance at sweeping the series in four games by losing 5-4 Sunday.

Hornets Win American West. Title

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A pair of weekend victories gave Pittsburgh Hornets the championship of the American Hockey League's Western Division by a narrow one-point margin over Rochester Americans.

Pittsburgh blanked Providence Reds 5-0 Saturday night and dumped Springfield Indians 4-1 Sunday. Rochester's 3-1 win over Hershey Bears Saturday and a 4-3 victory over Cleveland Barons Sunday gave them the only other perfect weekend.

In other games Saturday Cleveland defeated Quebec Aces 4-1 and Springfield edged Baltimore Clippers 5-4.

All the league wound up its 72-game schedule Sunday. Buffalo Bisons edged Quebec 5-4 and Baltimore defeated Providence Reds 4-3.

The Aces, despite their two weekend setbacks, wound up the season with 82 points, six ahead of Hershey Bears in the eastern division.

Woodstock Nips Galt For Title

GALT (CP) — A goal with only 18 seconds left in the game gave Woodstock Athletics a 3-2 victory over Galt Hornets and the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A championship Saturday.

Gord Sampson swatted a high rebound into the net to break the tie and give Athletics a four-games-to-two victory in the best-of-seven series.

Howard dominated the first period with goals by Jim Dahmer and Ron Hergott, but Athletics rallied in the second when Tommy Wilson and Don Simmer scored.

PICKERING WINS $600

SASKATOON (CP) — Bob Pickering of Milestone, Sask., won top prize of $500 Saturday by defeating Harold Worth of Bellale, Sask., 8-6 in the final round of the Masters World Series of Curling. Pickering ended the round - robin competition with a 7-0 record. Hec Gervais of Edmonton took second place.

CHICAGO (AP)—Bob Champoux, a 21-year-old goalkeeper who turned professional only four months ago, was the centre of attention in the victorious Detroit Red Wings' dressing room Sunday night.

Never having played a National Hockey League game, Champoux was dragged out of the stands when goaltender Terry Sawchuk pinched a nerve in his left shoulder. The hapless Red Wings went on to a 5-4 Stanley Cup victory over Chicago, tying the semi-final series at one game each.

"What an experience," said Champoux, a quiet-spoken native of Montreal. "Worried? Yes. Scared? I guess a little."

Champoux didn't turn in what could be called a spectacular effort. But he proved that he was in the nets put a charge into the Red Wings who shot ahead and stayed there all Norm Ullman scored three goals—two of them in the first period and what stood for the winning marker in the final period.

But Ullman and all the other Detroit stalwarts were lost in the shadow of the unexpected question after question at Champoux, who said "you pronounce it shampoo, like the stuff you put in your hair."

While that was the first NHL game for Champoux, it probably was his last at least for this season.

WON'T PLAY AGAIN

"No, I will not use him again," said coach Sid Abel. "We can't take the chance. He did a great job but I expect Sawchuk to be ready Monday. If not, we'll recall Roger Crozier from Pittsburgh in an emergency move."

Abel, who asked for and received clearance from NHL president Clarence Campbell to bring Sawchuk back into action if the goalie felt up to it late in the game, said he would have used Sawchuk if he had been ready, despite the charge the Red Winger put on when Champoux was their last line of defence.

"What I really needed was confidence," said Champoux. "Gordie Howe came up to me and said 'do your best' and that gave me a lift.

"After Chicago scored two goals in that second period all the players told me not to worry. They said I didn't really have a chance on the shots.

"Yes, I'm familiar with all of the Black Hawks. After all, I'm from Montreal. I just made up my mind not to worry about who was shooting, be it be Bobby Hull, Stan Mikita or anybody. I just wanted to stop all the shots."

Bulldogs Finish In Fourth

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Des Moines Oak Leafs racked up a pair of weekend wins over Windsor Bulldogs but the Bulldogs managed to finish the 72-game schedule in fourth spot in the International Hockey League, one point ahead of the Oak Leafs.

Des Moines defeated the Bulldogs 5-1 Saturday then walloped the Windsor crew 9-3 Sunday.

In other Saturday games, Toledo Blades and Fort Wayne Komets battled in a 3-3 overtime tie and Muskegon Zephyrs defeated Fort Huron Flags 8-4.

Sunday, Flags defeated the Blades 8-3 and Chatham Maroons battled Zephyrs to a 10-10 overtime tie.

Juvenile Title Won By Sarnia

SARNIA (CP)—Sarnia Black Hawks won the Ontario Hockey Association Juvenile A championship, defeating Kingston 4-3 in the second game of a two-game series Saturday.

Sarnia won the opener 5-3 for a 9-6 total-goals victory.

They meet Kirkland Lake Legion in Sarnia for the Ontario juvenile championship next weekend.

Tom Barr, Rick Deguire, Bill Neal and Rick Carlton got one each for Sarnia Saturday. Brian Cox, Pat Catlin and Dave Carr-Harris replied for Kingston.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Once upon a time, say ten or twelve years ago, there dwelt in the minds of a large number of the burghers of a river-spilt village fondly dubbed the "Old Lady of the Moira," an ardent yen to view a sport called hockey.

It was so strong that on nights when the team representing the village battled with proud upstarts from outside centres, the burghers reckoned between 2,500 and 3,000, thronged the arena.

On special occasions known as playoffs or playdowns the burghers forsook all other things and as many as 3,500 forced the venerable—even at that time—building to crack in protest as its heavy walls were shrieked to the breaking point.

At the rare times when the occupants of the pews numbered less than 2,000, arena officials dispatched couriers abroad in city streets to locate a serious fire or to ascertain what foreign royalty was expected to arrive.

Nor did the almost unanimous loyalty of the hockey-saluted burghers confine itself to city jousttings. On some occasions when their senior "B" gladiators were scheduled to perform within the castle-walls of such bitter foemen as those that represented a luxurious community some fifty miles east of here, in they secured special railroad coaches to cheer their heroes to victory.

Success begat success. The hockey fever mounted. The "Old Lady" boasted an her hockey scene, oldest and shortest of "adoptions" targeted the high places. Came the group and Ontario titles, the Allan Cup and the crowning glory of all the world championship.

Then the bubble burst. The prize of glory had been too high. A day of reckoning came and to the surprise of many the cost of the burghers' finest hockey hours, was the least of all, an inquiry uncovered.

Jim Cromie of Bowmanville, who with a sweater-and-slacks attire, "Mac" Hollingsworth of the best officiating teams ever to operate in the halycon senior "B" and "A" days, recalled many hectic and pleasant hours spent here.

Jim, Father Time's silver dusting his hair, was here for the other night to witness the Oldtimers' game played at the minor hockey awards' night.

"Belleville," Jim recalled, "was one of the best cities in the old senior "B" circuits and a long way from the worst in the subsequent "A" days.

"We were well treated here at all times by town and arena officials, and fans as well," Jim said. "True, there were times when the fans would not nominate me for popularity contest. Their vocabularies were as good as any, less virulent than most but we were never deserted out of town sacrale a rail coated with tar and feathers."

"In fact all the towns in the circuit were good: Kingston, Pembroke, Cornwall, Clinton and the Whitby and Cornwall fans gave me a little trouble at times but on the whole it ruled the best loop of its kind in the province.

Jim is still refereeing in season and "presidenting" a large baseball association in summer. I asked him what was wrong with the hockey situation. Why the fan lethargy in all except junior "A" and the NHL. Why Eastern Ontario pro hockey, senior "A" and senior "B" had departed, despite some effort to revive it in the Ottawa Valley district.

"Hockey is merely through cycle," he said. "There is a long way from being dead. In some centres junior "B" is doing well. Up around London way it is a huge success. The London juniors is a brand new million-dollar arena, averaged 2,500 in their last six home games. On some occasions they neared the 6,000 mark. I'm told St. Mary's, St. Thomas, and Stratford Senior "B" squads are playing to packed houses. And the hockey is no better than that in other parts of the province."

He was told junior "B" hockey was doing fairly well fazwise in some Eastern Ontario centres, particularly in playoffs and playdowns. He has any remedy for the lack of interest in senior "B" and intermediate hockey?

"At the moment," laughed Jim as he went out the door, "I can think of only two things—five-cent beer and green stamps."

Baby Habs, Hawks Split

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Catharines Black Hawks and Montreal Junior Canadiens wound up the weekend in the same positions they started, with the baby Habs leading their best - of - seven Ontario Hockey Association Junior A semi-final layoff by one game.

But the weekend split means the Canadiens now lead the series 2-2 and are just one game away from entering the finals against Toronto Marlboros.

St. Catharines evened the series at 2-2 Saturday in St. Catharines with a 5-3 victory, but the Can diens rallied in Montreal Sunday for a victory by the same score.

Canadiens needed four goals in a seven-minute span in the third period Sunday. Ryan Cournoyer, Andre Boudrias, Andre Lacroix, Bob Lemieux and Lee Thiffault supplied the scoring punch, while Fred Stanfield, with two, and Dennis Hull tallied for St. Catharines.

Saturday, Ron Richter, Mike Cheravaty, Chuck Kelly, Ken Laidlaw and Hull scored for the Black Hawks while Jacques Lemaire, Boudrias and Cournoyer provided the Montreal goals.

The series resumes in St. Catharines Wednesday.

Big M Brilliant In Leafs' Victory

Habs Underdogs

By TED BLACKMAN

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Canadiens fans finally have seen what their Toronto counterparts sometimes call the eighth wonder of the world—the real Frank Mahovlich.

For years these Canadiens partizans have heard and read rave notices of the celebrated Toronto Maple Leaf but seldom has he performed with any distinction on Forum ice. The Big M might have been marvelous elsewhere but has been rated mediocre here.

Until Saturday night.

SCORED ONE

He scored one goal, set up another and just missed on three other chances as he led the Leafs to a 2-1 victory over the Canadiens that squared the series at one game apiece. The third and fourth games are scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday in Toronto.

"Mahovlich played his best game in the last two or three years," coach Punch Imlach said afterwards. "It took him a long time to find desire but when he did the Canadiens couldn't catch him."

It could be that Imlach found it for him when he switched the sometimes - spiritless Mahovlich from left wing to centre near the tail end of the regular schedule. Mahovlich credits this change for his improvement.

"It's playing centre that does it," the tall 26-year-old explained. "You're not standing still as much or waiting for anything. You've got freedom to skate around."

Mahovlich did just that. He was circling in the Canadiens' end, just waiting, when the play was there and backchecking, in his fashion too often foreign to him, when Montreal was on the attack.

He dug out the puck and passed out to Kelly for the opener at 8:50 of the first period and was in position when Kelly returned the favor at 12:03, whipping home a 20-footer. Twice he hit the goalpost in that frame and only an awesome save by Charlie Hodge robbed him of a second-period goal.

The Canadiens made an aborted comeback attempt on Jean Beliveau's goal at 15:20 of the second frame on a power play but the Leafs' brawny defence held, with the result that the Canadiens were outshot 25-22, a rare occurrence.

THE lion on home ice made the Habs underdogs to take the series, a sharp contrast to the 11-to-5 choices they had been after beating the Leafs 3-0 in the opening game. The Canadiens, as Toe Blake sees it, must win one of the two Toronto games.

TREMBLAY OUT

Left winger Gilles Tremblay won't be aboard when the Canadiens travel to Toronto by train today. He's out for the rest of the season with a fractured ankle he suffered when Leaf defenceman Carl Brewer sat on him in the early minutes.

"Brewer is trying to end the same way he did last year," Blake said. "He's due for another broken arm."

Tremblay won't be replaced immediately because the Canadiens still have 11 forwards and can't bring in an emergency recruit unless the bench strength is reduced further. Red Berenson took his place on the Henri Richard-Bobby Rousseau line and Blake said he played "fairly well."

Koufax Loses Five-Hitter

'The Mick' Comes Back; Hits 2 Homers

By MIKE RATHBY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The good news from New York Yankees' camp is that they've got back to using tape on Mickey Mantle's prodigious biceps runs instead of wrapping it around his legs.

The smiling dollar slinger with the dime-store grin took a four-day layoff last week, complaining that his left knee ached where torn cartilage had been removed during the winter. On Sunday he hit his first two homers of the exhibition baseball season as the Yanks defeated Cincinnati Reds 6-4.

His first shot travelled 350 feet in the first inning and the second, in the fifth, reached 420 feet.

Sandy Koufax of the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers turned in his sharpest pitching performance in a 3-1 loss to Minnesota Twins.

Koufax became the first pitcher to go all the way this spring as he limited the Twins to five hits. Jimmie Hall ruined the effort with a two-run homer in the fourth and the Twins added an unearned run in the fifth.

Other hitting stars were Detroit rookie Willie Horton, Julio Gotay of Pittsburgh Pirates, Tim Harkness of New York Mets and Tony Conigliaro, a pickup from Boston Red Sox who may be compiling one of the oddest hitting records ever produced.

HIT TWO HOMERS

Horton connected for a pinch-hit homer in the ninth inning of the Tigers' 3-2 triumph over Chicago White Sox in the opener of a doubleheader, then homered in the third inning of Detroit's 3-0 nightcap victory. Horton now has five homers.

Gotay collected two homers and two singles for five runs batted in as the Pirates walloped Philadelphia Phillies 13-4 while Harkness, the first baseman from Lachine, Que., broke a hitless string that had extended to 16 at-bats by slamming a homer, double and single in the Mets' 8-3 belting of Washington Senators.

Conigliaro led the Red Sox to a 6-4, 13-inning victory over Los Angeles Angels with a homer, two triples and a double. The 19-year-old outfielder now has collected 15 hits, 13 for extra bases. His batting average is .288; his slugging average .750.

In other games, St. Louis Cardinals edged Milwaukee Braves 8-5 in 11 innings, Kansas City Athletics defeated Houston Colts 2-1, Chicago Cubs outslugged San Francisco Giants 11-7, Baltimore Orioles nipped the Colts' B team 2-1, and Cleveland Indians downed the Angels' squad 7-6.

On Saturday the Giants whipped the Tribe 7-4, the Red Sox topped the Angels 13-10 the Mets shaded Baltimore 3-2, Pittsburgh defeated Houston 8-5, Washington blanked the Orioles' B team 6-0 and the Cubs hammered the Angel Bs 10-6.

GRAB AND GRIN — Toronto defenceman Allan Stanley apparently sports two extra legs as he grabs a high-flying puck and grins in triumph during Saturday night's Stanley Cup semi-final with Montreal Canadiens. Maple Leaf goalie Johnny Bower gazes expectantly up at action while unidentified Canadien provides Stanley's extra legs and a wrap-around stick. (CP Wirephoto)

Wanted Birdie, Hooked Ball Got Fish

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP) — What golfer Dr. Harry Goldner wanted when he played the seventh hole at the Panama City Country Club was a birdie.

What he got was a fish. Goldner, a visitor from Birmingham, Ala., hooked an iron shot into a lake Friday and his ball struck a three-pound bass swimming near the surface.

He lost the ball, but he recovered the stunned fish and had it baked for his dinner.

Trenton Wins Bantam Tourney

Belleville Bantams were knocked out of the annual Trenton Bantam hockey tournament on Saturday in their second game after registering one earlier victory.

Oshawa blanked Belleville Oddfellows 3-0 to eliminate them from the tourney, won by the host Trenton club. Trenton beat Ottawa in the final.

The Oddfellows opened the tournament with an early-morning 3-1 victory over Picton.

Picton held Belleville to a 1-1 tie in the first heat but the winners triggered two goals in the middle frame, one each by Cal Wilson and David Looker, to grab the decision.

John Holgate scored Belleville's first goal. Single assists went to Wilson, Holgate, L. Moore and P. Fleming.

A. Frederick was the lone Picton marksman, assisted by G. Jones and J. McConnell.

Belleville drew the only two penalties of the contest.

Oddfellows held Oshawa through two scoreless periods before the motor-city lads clicked for three third-period goals.

D. Blanchford scored twice and D. Scott once.

There were seven penalties in this game, Belleville having four.

Belleville midgets are taking part in the annual midget tournament in Trenton starting today. It is a three-day affair.

National Hockey Team

Ottawa Permanent Base

REGINA (CP) — Secretary-manager Gordon Juckes of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association says he will recommend at the May CAHA annual meeting a permanent base for Canada's national hockey team be established in Ottawa.

In an interview, Juckes said Ottawa would provide an ideal base for a national hockey team because: It is a bilingual centre; there are ideal playing surfaces in Ottawa and adjacent Hull, Que.; Ottawa is close to top-flight competition; education facilities are excellent; the federal civil service likely would provide good off-season employment; there would be no conflict in Ottawa with professional or Junior A teams; professional teams could keep close tab on players' progress; and location

Invaded Dressing Room

NHL Governor Drew Fine

MONTREAL (CP) — National Hockey League governors are subject to discipline just as the players are, league president Clarence Campbell said Saturday.

He said it was to illustrate this point that he disclosed, during a television panel show prepared Friday, that he fined NHL governor William Jennings, president of New York Rangers, $500 for invading a referee's dressing room.

The incident took place during a game in New York last December, when Jennings entered the dressing room of referee Vern Buffey and criticized him for alleged inadequate refereeing.

Campbell said no disciplinary action could be taken in advance of the next governors' meeting. However, at the meeting, Jennings admitted the breach of a league bylaw and the fine was imposed.

"In the course of the program, I was quite aware governors and players are treated differently," Campbell said.

"I said they are not treated differently—only that discipline (of a governor) must be imposed by the governors themselves."

The Tracks

NEW YORK (CP) — Manuel Yeaza kept Cedar Key close to the front runners and brought him along fast, in the last stages Saturday to win the $25,780 Bonus Handicap at Gulfstream Park in Miami, Fla.

Cedar Key, slight favorite with the crowd of 16,140 ran the 1⅛ miles on the grass in 2:38, only one-fifth of a second slower than the mile track record. He won by 3¼ lengths.

Parks was second, Suspicious third and Sunrise Flight fourth.

Cedar Key, owned by Jerry Basta of Cedarhurst, N.Y., ran the biggest race of his brief career. He was fourth in the early running but moved up after a mile and never was threatened.

Cedar Key carried high weight of 122 pounds and paid $8.40 $4.80 and $3.80. Parks returned $4.20 and $3.60. While show price on Suspicious was $6.60.

The four-year-old Cedar Key, who earned $59,850 in a successful California campaign, picked up $33,750.

ROCKY LINK WINS

In New York, Rocky Link, a four-year-old, dropped his nose in front just at the wire to win the 60½ running of the $29,150 Westchester Stakes at Aqueduct.

Don Pierce brought Rocky Link down the middle of the stretch, after trailing during the early part of the one-mile route for the colt's second straight victory. Rocky Link covered the length over Merry E., third in the field of 12.

Carrying 114 pounds, Rocky Link was clocked in 1:53 1-5 and paid $22.20, $11 and $7.40. Boniface returned $9 and $5.80 and Merry E. was $5 to show.

The victory was worth $18,-947 to the Golden Triangle Stable.

At Hot Springs, Ark., Gomer Tyrne' Jr. was the only threaded his way out of the pack and streaked to victory in the $25,-000-added Oaklawn Handicap at Oaklawn Park.

The six-year-old gelding, piloted by Ronnie Campbell, moved from 11th place in a field of 13 in the stretch to win by a neck in the 1 1-16-mile test.

Top Boy III was the 2-to-1 favorite but finished 1¼ lengths back for show.

The winner ran the distance at a slow track in 1:43 4-5, paying $14.20, $8 and $4.80. Country Squire returned $6.20 and $4.80 and Bob Roy III paid $3.80.

RICHEST RACE

In event grossed $29,725, the richest race in Oaklawn history. Winner's share was $19,221.

At Laurel, Md., Jaclyn Stable's Alsoy streaked to a three-length victory in track record time of 1:10 3-5 for six furlongs in the $12,500 Capitol Handicap.

Alsoy, carrying 120 pounds and ridden by Jaclyn's wife, Ted Atkinson, and Jaclyn's daughter, Jeanne Jacobs, finished third in a seven furlong affair.

Dorothy Richard's Country Squire finished a close second, a length behind Reply Mail and Special Prince.

SUGGESTS ENVOY

PARIS (Reuters) — The French government has asked Peking to accept as leading foreign ministry economist, Olivier Wormser, as France's first ambassador to Communist China, usually well informed quarters said Saturday. Wormser, 51, has served in the economic department of the French foreign ministry since 1948 and 1961, has been its chief since 1964.

Lucciola Seventh In Finals

NORTH BAY (CP) — Bill Soult of Toronto and Midge Foley of Hamilton won the men's and women's singles title Saturday after tough battles in the 1964 Ontario Badminton Championships.

Soult, a first-round leader, had to go all out to defeat unruly Dune Rick of Creighton Mines, near Sudbury, to win by 15-12, 15-12 scores. Miss Foley battled her way from fourth place to edge Joanne Bennett of Kitchener by the same scores.

Rick, formerly of North Bay, came up with scores of 227, 229, 247, 201 and 262 Saturday but a couple of head-pins in the middle frames of his last game hurt his chances considerably, leaving him with a 10-game total of 2,206.

Soult started with a 209 Saturday, slumped to a 174, but came battling back with scores of 256, 245, and 246 for a total of 2,570.

TORRID BATTLE

Miss Foley put together scores of 203, 229, 203, 213, and 213 to give her 2,457 pins for the two days.

Miss Bennett bowled 22, 215, 220, 224, and 254 to finish with 2,435.

First-round leader Ruth Grant of Chatham dropped to ninth spot.

In the ladies team event, Toronto finished first as Theda Procher, Nora Oakley, Millie Mc-Donald and Mary Tipoff and Anne Storey joined forces for a 12,186 total.

Second team honors went to York-Simcoe's Peter Semchuk, Ernie Highes, Al Richardson, Ken Hall, Jerry Melnichuk and Mario Malnielli with 12,331 points.

All winners and their coaches left Sunday for the Canadian finals at Regina today and Tuesday.

Following are the top 10 in each division:—

Men's singles — 1. Bill Hoult, Toronto 2,570; 2. Dune Rick, Creighton Mines 2,502; 3. Primo Vaquini, Toronto 2,496; 4. John Scholes, Welland 2,465; 5. Al Kitunen, Hamilton 2,461; 6. Ken Hall, Toronto 2,433; 7. Leo Lucciola, Belleville 2,400; 8. Earl Jones, York West 2,400; 9. Paul Joseph, Marathon 2,382; 10. Holly Leet, Erindale 2,381.

Anaheim Bids For Franchise Of L. A. Angels

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Fred Haney, general manager of Los Angeles Angels, says the American League baseball club has received an attractive offer to move its franchise to Anaheim, Calif., in 1966.

Anaheim is 40 miles south of Los Angeles.

"If they come through with everything they say they will, we will certainly give it further consideration," Haney said Saturday.

Gene Autry, board chairman of the Angels, acknowledged the offer but said the club has not accepted.

Keith Murdoch, Anaheim city attorney, said he has discussed with Angels officials, prospects of building a 50,000-seat, $20,000,000 stadium on a 144-acre site, not designated. Angels have seven years to go on their lease at Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles. They have an option to buy the Dodger management a years, notice.

Besselink Leads Pack At Azalea

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)—Al Besselink of Merchantville, N.J., carded a four-under-par 68 a two-stroke lead in the $20,000 Azalea Open golf tournament Sunday. His 209 gave him a three-round total of 207.

Joe Campbell, first - round leader, bounced back onto second place at 209 going into today's final round. The tournament ends in one day late because rain delayed the start.

Lionel Hebert, Larry Mowry and Tommy Jacobs were three strokes off the pace at 210.

Will Wlosowski of Winnipeg was well behind with 74-70-75-219.

Jerry Maggs of Toronto, Jack Blessger of Val Morin, Que., and Al Johnston of Montreal each finished in the six-man cut-off point of 145. Maggs was at 150-73, Blessger 149 and Johnstone 158.

Senate Boxing Probe

Liston Gave Stock To Hood's Associate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators have more questions today about reports that underworld figures hung around Sonny Liston's training camp for his heavyweight championship fight with Cassius Clay.

They also want to know why Liston gave away stock, which brought $100,000 in quick profits, the Clay fight, to a man identified as a former associate of mobster Frank (Buddy) Ryan.

Those questions came up as the Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee sought to wind up its hearings into circumstances surrounding the Feb. 25 fight won by Clay when Liston failed to come out for the seventh round.

In the new development, Senator Kenneth B. Keating (Rep., N.Y.) asked the Senate investigators to find out whether the Socialite of Frankie Carbo had Florida training camps. Carbo, now in prison, is former underworld czar of boxing.

Keating, a member of the sub-committee making the boxing inquiry, said he has information about a Washington meeting six years ago between Carbo and fight world figures.

LINKED TO GAMBLING

Keating said he had been told there is evidence from New York investigations linking figures in the Liston-Clay fight with the Carbo combine. He added:

"It is most essential that we discover whether Frank Carbo has reached out from behind prison bars and placed his cohorts in both the Liston and Clay camps."

Witnesses last week testified that Liston signed over, apparently getting nothing in return, 375 shares of his 500-share, 50 per cent control in Inter-Continental Promotions Inc. to Sam Margolis, Philadelphia vending machine operator identified as once owning an apartment house with Ryan.

Margolis has said he got the stock for helping Liston set up the deal to get a share of the fight's promotional profits, something fighters normally don't get.

Margolis was identified last week as a close friend of Liston. one the former heavyweight champion trusted greatly.

Margolis also was identified as having owned a restaurant with Palermo's not-to-be-KITCHENER (CP) — Toronto's Don Mills Track Club, paced by 16 - year - old Cathy Chapman, came through as expected to dominate the first Canadian indoor age-class track and field championships Saturday.

The club, with more of its athletes sweeping the running events, accumulated 140 points to win the Individual team award. British Columbia finished second with 84 points while Quebec was third with 66.

Miss Chapman, rated in a class by herself in the women's juvenile 50-yard hurdles opened the early heats with a time of 6.7 seconds in the finals, equalling her own Canadian juvenile record set at Toronto in January. She stepped up the pace in the night's finals to shave a fifth of a second off the mark. Her time also bettered the Canadian women's open mark established by Jenny Mitcham of Toronto at a February meet at Baltimore.

The world record of 6.4 is owned by Karen Kraft of Frederick, Md., and was set at the Baltimore meet. Miss Wilgerson ran second to Miss Da vis while Cathy finished third.

NOT IN TOP FORM

"I was happy with my time but I wasn't in top shape," said Miss Chapman after Saturday's final.

Right now I'm aiming for the Olympics' competition in Grade 11 student. "I'm working out six times a week and I hopeit won't be too long before I'm in the right condition."

The listed Canadian juvenile record for the 50-yard dash was broken five times in the courses of the meet with Yvonne Breden of Vancouver, the overall winner, achieving the fastest time of 5.8 seconds in a heat.

The old mark of 6.1 was surpassed by Miss Breeden, Judy Daltroff of Ottawa and Miss Chapman, the first three finishers in the final, all of whom were timed in 6.0. Miss Breeden achieved the same time in a heat.

Miss Breeden, a 17-year-old member of Canada's last Pan-American and British Empire Games teams, holds a number of Canadian open and juvenile records and is expected to be a top spring candidate for the Olympics at Tokyo next October.

Abigail Hoffman, who was expected to stir up the crowd, won the 1,000-yard run but in a disappointingly slow 2:21.3.

WRITING EXAMS

"I've been writing exams the last few weeks," explained the 17-year-old gold medal winner at the 1963 Pan-American Games. All I'm interested in is working myself back into shape."

John Reynolds, 19, of Galt, chalked up a record in the junior men's 880-yard run, winning in an impressive 1:14.3. The old mark of 1:15.6 was set in 1960 by W. Spoules of Hamilton.

The only other record was set by Eddie Hearns, a Toronto-Scarboro Toronto star. He chopped one-tenth of a second off the previous mark in the 3,000-metre walk in 13:44.4.

Earlier in the day, Graham Crowell of Vancouver and Kitchener's Mike Lackey tied for the boy's midget 50-yard dash record of 4.7 set by Bill Williams in 1961 and equalled again by Ontario's Ted Resnick a year later.

Individual award winners were Peter Lowan, Winnipeg, junior men; Ray Rokastinski, Yorkton, Sask., juvenile men; Lackey and Crowell, midget men; Miss Chapman, juvenile women and Carol Martin, Toronto, midget girls.

High Scores Feature Tournament

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

High scoring was featured in several games played in the minor hockey tournaments in Ontario Sunday.

A total of 67 teams are to take part in a Young Canada Week tournament opening at Goderich before it ends Saturday. And 50 teams are entered in the Barrie week Brampton novice hockey tournament.

The highest score of the two tournaments so far was in Brampton when a hometown team handed visiting Preston a 23-0 defeat in exhibition play. Bill Purvis led the list of scorers with seven goals.

High scoring games at Goderich included Lion's Head defeating Atlas Craig 11-0, Hanover outscoring Southampton 9-1, Winona downing Mount Forest 10-0 and Mount Forest defeating Port Stanley 9-1. The later games were in regular tournament play.

At Brampton, teams from Kitchener, New Hamburg and Port Perry all chalked up shutouts. Kitchener posted successive wins 7-2 and 8-0 over Burlington, New Hamburg downed Winona 3-2 and 2-1 and Port Perry scored 8-3 and 3-0 victories over Erin.

Other scores at Goderich: Harriston 7, Dunnville 1; Ripley 7 Sarnia Indian Reserve 5; Norwich 1 Ridgetown 0; Norwich 3 Wingham 0; Thornhill 7 Watford 0; Midway 3 Port Perry 1.

At Owen Sound: Durham 4 Exeter 4; Milton 3 Exeter 0; Harriston 2 Cannington 1; Cannington 3 Durham 2; Bracebridge 3 Aurora 2; Aurora 5 Bracebridge 3.

Tournaments at both centres resume today and end Tuesday.

Income Tax Explained

A widow or widower who is left with school age children to support and who does not wish to break up the home, will employ a house - keeper to take charge of the home while he works. In such cases the taxpayer is often at a loss to know what claim to make on the income tax return.

In the first place, there is no exemption allowable for a housekeeper, nor can the wages paid be claimed as a deduction. This does not mean that the taxpayer receives no benefit at all by maintaining the home. The benefit is derived by claiming the equivalent to married exains ($1,000) on one child and the first child at full time housekeeper is employed. The same child on which $1,000 exemption is claimed may not be claimed again for the ordinary child's allowance. Then a special provided for this on the return, and the full time housekeeper's name must be shown.

A full time housekeeper does not necessarily have to be the same one for the full year, as long as a housekeeper was employed for the full year is all that is required. Such a housekeeper must be employed for the full year and not just for certain periods. As an example, a farmer employing a cook-housekeeper, just for the harvest time would not qualify for this added exemption.

Taxpayer who paid a neighbor to mind the children while he worked, or had the children in a day nursery would also not have any added exemption, as in such cases these persons would not qualify as a full time housekeeper.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems please enclose a self-addressed five cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

Question: I am a widower. I have two girls, 8 and 10 years. I maintain my home with the assistance of a full time housekeeper, who also has one girl, 4. What exemption can I claim on these dependants? I pay the housekeeper $20 per week and supply all food for her and the child.

ANSWER: — Your total exemption is $2,600. That is $1,000 for yourself, $1,000 on one child and $600 for you employ a housekeeper full time; that child may be claimed again for $300 plus the $300 for your other child. There is no exemption for the housekeeper or her child. Her wages are not deductible on your return.

QUESTION: — I am a school teacher and a widow with 3 children all under 16. I employ the same housekeeper each year while I teach. During the summer holidays, when I am at home, I let my housekeeper have that time off. Does she qualify as a full time housekeeper?

ANSWER:—Is the writer's opinion that she would qualify as the income tax regulations recognize a school teacher's year as being only of 10 months and your income tax deductions are based on that period.

CAN'T HEAL SPLIT

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—The president of the Fellowship Baptist Young Peoples Association in Canada said Saturday the split in the Baptist church is too wide to heal. Rev. Robert W. Irwin, associate pastor of the Temple Baptist Church in Sarnia, said "the Baptist church has been split into many splinter groups and there is little hope for union or merger in future."

TV's 'Let's Sing Out' Hit 30 Years in Idea Stage

By DAVE PIKE

TORONTO (CP)—"How did it all start?" mused Sydney Banks, an independent television producer, in response to one of Canadian TV's most successful shows.

"Well, it's a long story. As a matter of fact, it starts back on a summer evening in 1935 when I first became exposed to folk and jazz music."

It took nearly 30 years for the ideas generated by that exposure to crystallize as Let's Sing Out, the weekly half-hour folksinging show which first appeared on the CTV network in October of 1963.

Banks was writing radio drama for BBC in the late 1930s when it summoned him to New York to determine why Canada had any network program ideas. He thought it would make a good radio series to enter regional areas and explore their mores and habits through their songs. He toyed with the idea, decided to launch it in South America, but "unfortunately the war came along and cancelled out such frivolous things."

Mothballing his ideas for the duration, Banks joined the army. Five and a half years later, with a long look at the potentials of television—"it seemed to me that folk music had a place there."

COULDN'T SELL IDEA

With this conclusion tucked in the back of his mind, Banks entered TV in 1953 as a script writer on a U.S. border station and eventually joined an advertising agency.

Then he went to work for Spence Caldwell, now CTV president, and helped build the organization involved in such broadcasting activities as film distribution and production.

"About four years ago, I felt I had arrived in my own mind at the kind of show that would be good for TV and folk music." He created on paper a show called Hootenanny, but was unsuccessful in his attempts to peddle it either to the three U.S. networks or the CBC.

"Lo and behold, in April of 1963 a show appears on ABC-TV called Hootenany. Just a coincidence. I was really delighted because, God bless 'em, somebody had opened that cotton-pickin' door."

Banks left Caldwell's organization as vice - president in charge of production and set up his own small outfit late than year ago. He hired a couple of Let's Sing Out pilots "and an advertiser had confidence in my ability to open forth this kind of show."

He hired Winnipeg-born folksinger Oscar Brand as host and started videotaping the show on Canadian university campuses —only in Ontario and Quebec so far, but he hopes to visit other provinces next season.

AUDIENCE TAKES PART

Let's Sing Out differs in content and style from Hootenanny, although both are done on campuses.

"We are doing a true hootenanny performer and artists getting together and swapping songs and involving the student audience in the spirit of it. Our performers are always on stage —it generates a spontaneity up to the last minute when we might change a number at a performer's request. If there is a stamp on the show, it's pure integrity. Hootenanny is more a variety show, but I'm not knocking it. That's their concept."

Many of the better - known U.S. and Canadian performers have appeared on the show, although some, such as Peta Seegar and Ian and Sylvia, have been too busy to make it yet. Banks makes a point of finding unknown performers in universities and coffee houses and putting them on his show.

Brand, one of the more popular folksingers in North America today, has made about 56 albums, written three books on folksinging, is recording on a Broadway musical and has his own weekly New York radio show carried by 1,500 stations under sponsorship of a U.S. government agency.

GOES TO AUSTRALIA

G. Banks (in Television) Limited, the Banks production company—"I'm just a little guy in this business"—already has sold the show to the Australian Broadcasting Commission. Banks is international a New York firm, has taken over distribution and hopes to sell the show in at least 20 countries. No attempt has been made to push it seriously in the U.S. because it has Hootenanny.

His chances of gaining fairly extensive world - wide distribution are good because folksongs aren't confined to one country or region by language barriers, as evinced by a Seegar concert in Rome. He sang in English and a singing interpreter translated in Italian. The audience began stamping its feet, not at Seegar but at the interpreter's interruptions. Seegar continued the concert in English and was a great success.

Banks, a Toronto native, also produces To Tell the Truth, a panel show, for CTV. He's currently touring country and western show and has another panel show in the works.

His Hobby Has Strings

MONCTON (CP) — Gordon Ritchie's collection of violins, which he has been assembling for 44 years, totals 22 instruments ranging from research makes to one made in Germany in 1728.

The 69 - year - old Moncton has never sold one and doesn't intend to.

But he once gave one away to a Moncton youngster who wanted to play violin but whose family couldn't afford to buy one.

He has made a standing offer to any young musician in the same situation.

Mr. Ritchie plays the violin "only a bit." He's never taken lessons.

He became interested in violins as a youth and obtained his first instrument from a Moncton man in 1920. About the same time he began repairing them for friends. He has repaired about 100 since then.

A retired CNR employee, he estimates the value of a few of his violins at $200, others at much less.

Still active as a travelling salesman for a building supply firm, he often keeps a particularly interesting violin with them tracks it down to satisfy his curiosity.

Britain's Second Satellite Put Into Orbit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Space Agency announced Britain's second satellite into orbit Friday.

A Scout rocket carrying the 150 - pound spacecraft was launched at 12:23 p.m. from Wallops Island, Va. It climbed to a 900-mile altitude where the satellite went into its orbital path.

The payload consists of British-built instruments to take scientific measurements of and above the ionosphere, the electrically-charged upper layer of the atmosphere that serves as a reflecting belt for radio and radar signals from the earth.

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russian Friday launched another earth satellite packed with scientific equipment, Tass news agency reported. The satellite was code-named Cosmos 27.

Natalie Wood Takes Friends To See Her Likeness in Wax

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—People from all over the world flock to nearby Buena Park—near Disneyland—to see movie stars in wax.

But up set the Hollywood crowd to take the 45 - minute freeway trip, it takes a personal invite from Natalie Wood, a chimpanzee baffle and a premiere complete with exploding fireworks in the sky.

Natalie invited two busloads of her friends to attend the unveiling of her likeness the other night at the moveland wax museum.

As the buses droned over the freeway, someone suggested that Natalie and fiance Arthur Loew Jr., should get married by the bus driver—and that the captain on a ship. It went over real big.

But even Natalie was overwhelmed when the Buena Park police department told the bus escorted her into a gold Rolls-Royce to the museum where she was greeted by the mayor and a couple of thousand fans, plus fireworks.

LIKE LIKENESS

She was happy with her likeness, set in the mock wedding scene from West Side Story, but a little sad when the glamed nearby and saw James Dean in a scene from Rebel Without a Cause.

Natalie, at 18, co-starred with the late Jame-legend in that picture. It made her a star and got her the first of three Oscar nominations. The others were for Splendor in the Grass and currently Love with a Proper Stranger.

Some of the exhibits in the museum are so lifelike they are eerie. Gary Cooper, in a scene from High Noon, looks as if he is about to holler "hi" at his old friends.

Cooper's 90-year-old mother, Mrs. Alice Cooper, in a scene has made a number of visits to the exhibit, sitting there by the hour.

AT THE BELLE — Rita Lee adds glamour to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's lining show hall musical, "Hootenanny Hoot" which headlines the country's top music stars, Joby Baker and Pam Austin are part of the romantic interest in the film, now at the Belle Theatre. Dolores Hart and Karl Boehm form a new romantic team in M.G.M.'s 2nd color feature "Come Fly With Me". Others in the sparkling cast include Hugh O'Brian and Pamela Tiffin.

"The Cardinal"
Opens Today

Nominated for Six Academy Awards
Director Acts

Producer-director Otto Preminger tries to come up with a cunning surprise on each of his pictures. It may be an actor playing a role completely foreign to his former appearances; it may be someone outside the usual profession. In "Exodus," for example, he had Sal Mineo playing an earnest young Jewish refugee; "Anatomy of Murder," he cast the late Joseph Welch, famous as the "Boston Strangler" and former Senator McCarthy, as the judge in a murder trial. And in "The Cardinal" Preminger included the first intentional engagement in "The Cardinal," Preminger included some big stars one of the world's greatest directors: John Huston who has been nominated for Academy Award best supporting actor.

Huston, who once made a very brief appearance in an Academy Award-winning film he himself had directed, "The Treasure of Sierra Madre," appears importantly in "The Cardinal" as Monsignor Cardinal Glennon, who helps and advises Tom Tryon, playing the title role of the Catholic "Pictures" release, in Panavision and Technicolor.

The screenplay for "The Cardinal" was written by Robert Dozier and tells the story of a young American who rises to the eminence of Prince of the Church in the period encompassed by the two World Wars. Co-starring with Tryon and Huston are Romy Schneider, Carol Lynley, Jill Haworth, Raf Vallone, John Saxon, Josie Meredith, Dorothy Gish, Maggie McNamara, Bill Hayes and Cecil Kellaway. Also in the film are Bobby (Morse) and his Adora-Belles. A special matinee on Wednesday, April 1st will be shown for the grand attraction. See "The Cardinal" from the beginning.

Matinee 2.00 p.m. Evenings at 8.15 p.m.

INNER SANCTUM

It cost $30,000 to redecorate what is probably the most sumptuous dressing room in Hollywood—that of Vince Edwards, TV's Ben Casey.

Many Medical Miracles In Experimental Stages

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Plastic surgeons are known for adding syes, plastic glue instead of surgical stitches and a deep-freeze unit for cases among medical miracles in experimental stages.

NBC, in one of its occasional Breakthrough programs, devoted a stimulating hour Sunday to explain in layman's language some of the more dramatic and promising advances in medicine.

Highlights of three delicate operations were shown. One was a kidney transplant, another demonstrated use of the new glue — instead of thread and needle—in a skin graft.

ABC's Saga of Western Man series of four programs wound up impressively Sunday.

Writer-narrator John Secondari noted that Americans spend some $33,000,000,000 for each year on gambling—more than they spend on education — and there are more bookies in the country than physicians. They spend $22,000,000,000 every year on vacations—while 20 per cent of the people are poor and one house in six is substandard.

Recommended Tonight: Earl Side, West Side, CBS 10-11 EST with a drama dealing with hardcore poverty and slum - living, with Montreal - born Colleen Dewhurst.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League — Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We are going to Halifax next month, and would like to know the best route and quickest. Also if the ferry at Pictaubaigh is open this time of year if we wish to come back through Vermont. — O. W., Belleville.

ANSWER: Belleville to Montreal via No. 401 and No. 2 Highways, then on to Quebec, cross the St. Lawrence to No. 20 Levis, and continue east on No. 2 to Riviere-du-Loup, then south-east to Edmundston, N.B., Leonard, Grand Falls, continue on No. 2 to Freedom, cross over to highway No. 2 and drive on No. 2 until you blend in with No. 2 and continue on No. 2 until you come to Amherst, from Amherst take No. 2 and No. 4, and then No. 4 to Truro, and then No. 2 to Halifax. The ferry from Burlington, Lake Champlain, opens April 6.

QUESTION: We are driving to Chicago next month, and would like maps, and any information you could give us for this motor trip. Also any accommodation books you have for this area. — R. G., Belleville.

ANSWER: If you would like contact your local Ontario Motor League Office we would be pleased to give you maps of Chicago and any information you require. Accommodation books and routings are for members only, but if you write to the Chamber of Commerce of Chicago, it will send you brochures and maps.

QUESTION: We are visiting New York City next week, and we would like to know the most direct route down, and if you could give us some information regarding a visit to the New York Stock Exchange and what are the hours? Also information on the Empire State Building. — C. G., Trenton.

ANSWER: Drive to Watertown and then to Syracuse on No. 81 and turn east on to the New York Thruway to Albany. From Albany continue on to Saratoga and then on No. 287 east, to Newark and again on No. 97 to New York via 9A.

The New York Stock Exchange is at 10 Broad Street near Wall Street. It is the largest organized securities market in the U.S. Visitors gallery overlooks trading floor. Animated displays tell story of investment and auction's growth. Color motion picture shown in Exhibit Hall every half hour. Electronics explain function of Exchange. Open to Friday 10 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. The Empire State Building at Avenue and 34th Street, tallest building in the world, 102 storeys, 1,472 feet, 74 elevators. Observation terraces on 86th and 102 floors annually attract two million visitors. Daily 9.30 a.m. to midnight, $1.40, 5-11 years 70 cents.

QUESTION: We are travelling to Dayton, Ohio, next month, and wondered if you could tell us something about the Ohio Caverns and how far they are from Dayton? — Mr. Smith, Belleville.

ANSWER: The Ohio Caverns are in West Liberty, Ohio, about 50 miles north of Dayton, Ohio. The Caverns open all year, 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. and are considered the carved fairyland of nature. There are thousands of large and small beautiful stalactites studded with natures coloring brilliant crystals, and glistening white stalactite chandeliers, a sight well worth seeing.

QUESTION: We are considering going to Myrtle Beach next month and would like information on how far it is, how long it will take to drive there, and what it has to offer at this time of year. — Mrs. M. W., Belleville.

ANSWER: Myrtle Beach is a favorite vacation place for Canadians at this time of year.

The temperature for South Carolina are very moderate with a mean temperature of 61 degrees. Summer days average 80-90 degrees, the temperature 67 degrees.

Myrtle Beach is approximately 800 miles from Belleville; at an average speed of 50 miles an hour it should take 17 hours or about two days' driving.

There is not too much detail as of November at this time of the year, but would suggest you write for brochures to South Carolina Industrial Development Board, P.O. Box 167 TP, Columbia, South Carolina.

Do you know that your headlights should be put on at dusk?

Do you know that if you have your gas tank full, you prevent water forming in your gas tank? (Condensation).

Do you know that you only have your gas filler cleaned every three months?

Do you know that you can stop condensation of your windows overnight, if you lower your windows about ¼-inch?

Do you know that your car will start quicker in the morning if you depress the gas pedal two or three times before putting the car away?

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

FOR MARCH 31

Aries (Mar. 21 - April 19)—Review resolutions which concern budget, new projects. You gain most by taking direct action. Avoid muddled delay, worry. Check with partner. Then full steam ahead!

Taurus (April 20 - May 20)—Cycle indicates caution is best course. Dealings involving public reaction need special attention. If you are careless your "image" could be tarnished. Stress objective approach.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21)—Wise for meeting new people. Reach out with confidence. Display talent, abilities, humor. Be gracious. Highlight versatility. Smile wins the day—and points to future benefits.

Cancer (June 22 - July 21)—Favorable lunar aspect spotlights romance, opportunity for creative endeavors. Fine also for dealing with children, planning entertainment program. Greater happiness in store.

Leo (July 22 - Aug. 21)—Obtain hint from Cancer message. Be alive to opportunities. There will be obstacles, but you are capable of overcoming them. Attend to details concerning security, home, family.

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22)—Catch up on correspondence. Express yourself. Don't be in too much of a hurry. Applies especially to driving, making notes. One slip to offer hand of friendship is sincere.

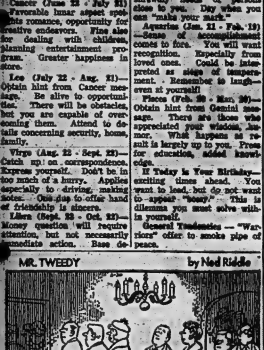
Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)—Money question will require attention, but not necessarily immediate action. Base decision on combination of factors. Don't be overly impressed by only one indication.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21)—Cycle high. You can now prove abilities. Excellent for investments, planning for future enterprises. You can stake this a banner day. Exude confidence. Stress strictest methods.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21)—Look behind the scenes. Also means don't believe what appears to be "obvious." Do a bit of detective work! Examine various angles, methods. Find out the why of recent events.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 20)—Time when your dormant talents may display themselves. Includes ability to guess shrewdly needs of persons close to you. Dig when you can make your mark.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19)—Sense of accomplishment comes to fore. You will want recognition. Especially from loved ones. Could be interpreted as sign of temperament. Remember to laugh—even at yourself!



Pisces (Feb. 20 - Mar. 20)—Obtain hint from Gemini message. There are those who appreciated your wisdom, humor. What happens as result is largely up to you. Prospects for education, added knowledge.

If Today Is Your Birthday—exciting times ahead. You want to lead, but do not want to appear "bossy." This is dilemma you must solve within yourself.

General Tendencies — "Warriors" offer to smoke pipe of peace.

"Why don't you and your wife drop over to see our new house that you own?"

"Oh, don't mind them. Dad is a building contractor and this is one of his model homes."

B. C.'s Frank Calder

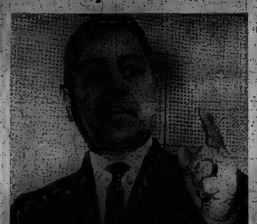
An Indian Who Speaks for His People

VICTORIA (CP)—Frank Calder was born to speak for his people.

The lone Indian member of the British Columbia legislature holds the far-north constituency of Atlin for the New Democratic Party. It's a riding of 60,700 square miles—the largest in the province—and is populated by fewer than 4,000 persons.

Many of these are Indians.

For years, Indians of B.C. have fought to establish their claim that their lands in B.C. were taken from them by whites without benefit of treaty.



Frank Calder has been in the thick of this fight.

The most recent development has been a county court ruling—expected to be appealed—that Indians have the right to hunt and fish on unoccupied land. The decision freed two Indians convicted of shooting six deer out of season.

Said Frank Calder:

"This judgment will be recognized as just by every Indian in Canada. . . . In view of the forthcoming establishment of the federal Indian claims commission which will hear the land and original claims of Indians, the . . . decision is evidence in favor of the . . . claims.

"The decision upholds the British justice which the colonial governments recognized respecting the aboriginal rights of Indians to obtain game out of season for home consumption."

SPEAKS FOR HIS PEOPLE — Frank Calder, 49, the only Indian member of the British Columbia legislature, was raised for the job from childhood. Now New Democratic Party member for Atlin, largest riding in the province, he was sent to a residential school in Chilliwack to learn the white man's ways and speak for his people. Mr. Calder currently is engaged in a fight to establish B.C. Indian claims that their lands were taken by white men without treaty. (CP Photo)

MAY AFFECT MANY

The judgment has broad implications, says Judge A. J. H. Swencisky. He referred to a royal proclamation now 200 years old that reserved such rights to Indians.

"I realize my decision not only affects Vancouver Island Indians, nor just those of Nanaimo. It is a matter of great importance and should, I believe, go to a higher court.

"No provincial or federal legislation has taken away these ancient rights."

For Frank Calder, the fight for Indian rights began a long time ago, almost at the moment of his strange birth.

It was in 1915 that the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Calder fell from a flatboat in the Nass River off the southern tip of the Alaska Panhandle. The boy was drowned.

An elderly Indian woman dreamed of the boy's reincarnation. The child should be born to Chief and Mrs. J. H. Clark, would be a boy, she said. He would be the Calder child returning to life.

Frank Clark was born Aug. 3, 1915. He rarely kept him for a couple of weeks, then turned him over to Mrs. Calder, who was Mrs. Clark's sister.

Chief Arthur Calder, hereditary Chief Long Arm of the Wishga band, was bothered by the way Indians had to hire white men to fight their land problems in the remote area north of Prince Rupert.

STUDIED THEOLOGY

"He decided to send me away to learn the white man's way, so that when my time came to speak for my people I would not need an interpreter," Calder says.

He lived for 13 years at a residential school in Chilliwack in southern B.C. Later he went to Anglican Theological College at the University of British Columbia. He won a licenciate in theology in 1945.

Although he frequently preaches in remote areas, he never formally took up the ministry.

Calder is opposed to the entire reservation system.

"The idea is not to have the (federal) Indian affairs branch on the Indians' backs forever.

"Reservations breed paternalism by the whites and dependency and lack of initiative by the Indians."

He is a controversial figure among his own people, many of whom cling to the security of the reserves.

"When they need something, they just ask the Indian agent."

Calder sees, however, a growing spirit of independence.

"The natives are moving out from the reserves to places where the work is and where they can educate their children.

"They don't feel the old inferiority complex so much any more."

Nova Scotia Wants More Consultations

By DAL WARRINGTON

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia government is expected to press for greater flexibility in shared-cost programs at the federal - provincial conference opening in Quebec March 31.

Conservative Premier Robert L. Stanfield raised this point at last November's conference. He says Nova Scotia agrees with the principle of federal aid in such fields as health, welfare and education that are constitutionally provincial responsibilities.

However, he would welcome more consultation before Ottawa launches new joint programs favouring provincial participation.

Government sources say Nova Scotia would like a more flexible application of federal assistance. It would prefer an easing of the rules limiting application of federal funds to specific projects.

For example, a province might be far advanced on a program of vocational education but badly in need of money for universities. However, a government spokesman says the province recognizes Ottawa's need to lay down broad guidelines on how its aid is to be used.

SEE NO RENEGOTIATION

The expectation here is that the Quebec conference will deal mainly with joint federal-provincial programs. Since tax-sharing arrangements were settled in November — at least for the immediate future — it is considered unlikely these will be renegotiated so soon, unless other provinces force the issue.

Should fiscal arrangements come up, however, Premier Stanfield can be expected to reiterate a position Nova Scotia governments — Conservative or Liberal — have put forward at federal - provincial conferences for almost 20 years. That is that federal equalization payments should be based on a province's revenue potential in all fields, not just income and corporation taxes, death duties and natural resource revenue.

Finance Minister G. I. Smith said recently that Nova Scotia believes there should be full equalization up to the national average, but that the federal government has no obligation to equalize above that figure. The present agreement is based on equalization of the four specific revenue sources to the level of the two highest provinces—Ontario and British Columbia.

When I graduate from High School,

I'd like to work for a large organization — but would I get individual "coaching" to help me move right ahead?

YES—that's one of the big advantages at Royal Bank

Royal Bank ranks as one of the world's largest financial institutions, with more than 1,100 branches in Canada and abroad.

Yet each Royal Bank branch operates much like a local business, with a relatively small staff.

This means that in the branch where you start, and others where you'll go for extra experience, your training and progress will be the personal concern of the manager. And he will help and encourage you in further studies, including special bank courses and training schools that give you valuable preparation for a banking career.

YOU CAN AIM FOR THE TOP AT THE ROYAL

Most of our managers came to us right from High School, were put in charge of their first branch by their mid-thirties. Senior officers, right up to the top, started the same way.

At Royal Bank, your aptitude, your desire to work and get ahead, and your talent for dealing with people are the things that count.

Staff benefits include an outstanding pension plan — group life insurance — health and hospital insurance — generous sick leave and vacation policies.

For further details, ask at any Royal branch for our booklet, "Your Future in the Royal Bank". Or have a talk with any Royal Bank manager about the interesting work and the human and financial rewards awaiting you in the challenging, growing field of modern banking.

Turks Complain Canadians Let EOKA Operate

Say Terrorists Patrol Turkish Community

NICOSIA (AP) — The United Nations peace force was publicly criticized today for the third time since it became operative on Cyprus four days ago.

Turkish-Cypriots charged in a press statement that UN Canadian troops have permitted Greek-Cypriot police to patrol in a Turkish village, something British troops never permitted.

The Turks allege the police are "armed EOKA terrorists in uniform" and threatened village women and girls. This was denied by Greek-Cypriots.

Meanwhile, the island was reported calm following two incidents Monday, in which British forces of the UN peace force fired in self-defence after coming under fire.

In one incident in the Kyrenia Mountains, Greek-Cypriots admitted they made a mistake and fired at a UN 12-man patrol thinking they were Turks.

TURKS COMPLAINT

Turkish-Cypriots in their complaint also said that most of the French-speaking Canadian soldiers — the Van Doos of the Royal 22nd Regiment—stationed in Famagusta, the region of Karaphani on the coast north of there did not speak English and therefore could not talk with Turkish complaints.

An official UN spokesman declined immediate comment on the charges, but said they would be studied.

The Greek-Cypriots say their police, as the lawful forces of the island, have the right to patrol Karaphani.

Until last Friday, British troops had the sole task of keeping peacemakers on Cyprus. About 4,000 Britons and more than 1,000 Canadians are completing the force to be joined shortly by Swedish, Finnish and perhaps Irish contingents.

The UN force commander, Lieut.-Gen. Gyani Singh Gyani, introduced contingent commanders to both the president and the commander-in-chief of Cyprus this morning.

Adams is sizing up the Cyprot situation in advance of the arrival of the Irish battalion next week to decide if Irish troops will take part in the peace force.

'Bonnie' Protected By Frogmen

By DAVE McINTOSH

FAMAGUSTA (CP)—The Canadian aircraft carrier Bonaventure put frogmen over the side on her arrival in this Cyprot port Monday to prevent any possible underwater sabotage.

The same security measures have been followed on previous occasions by Canadian warships, for instance in Belfast when the Irish Republican Army was active. The frogmen remained on watch for attachment of any sticky mines to the ship's hull.

Cyprot newspaper men who boarded the Bonventure were conducted about the ship by naval officers. When all Cyprot workmen were put aboard on the opposite side of the ship from where they were to work they were taken around the carrier by jollyboat rather than have them walk through the ship.

A Canadian Army spokesman said no chances were being taken that a bomb might be put aboard the carrier or in one of her aircraft.

COMMANDER ENTERTAINS

In contrast to these security measures, Capt. Robert Thebell, commander of the Bonventure, entertained Cyprot government officials aboard ship as well as Lt.-Gen. P. S. Gyani and Canadian Major-General Eric Snow, the Army officer who is to be joined shortly by Swedish, Finnish and perhaps Irish contingents.

The UN force commander, Indian Lt.-Gen. Gyani Singh Gyani, introduced contingent commanders to both the president and the commander-in-chief of Cyprus this morning.

Troops Aid In Clean-Up

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) Two detachments of troops joined in today with heavy equipment and began operation Clean-Up in the flooded twin cities of Alberni and Port Alberni.

They faced the task of dealing with filthy houses, spoiled cars, logs and other debris littering streets.

Perhaps 60 and 80 homes were destroyed and 350 damaged to varying degrees in the four successive tidal waves that swirled up the Alberni Canal from the open Pacific Saturday.

No drinking water has been piped on the damage list, is expected to reach into the millions. Numerous business establishments were destroyed or damaged.

As official of the Indian affairs department estimated it will cost $100,000 to rehabilitate Indian families uprooted by the tidal flood resulting from the Alaskan earthquake. The flood hit villages along Vancouver Island's west coast and 17 families had to be evacuated at the Indian settlement of Hot Springs Cove north of here.

Steps went forward meanwhile to provide financial aid.

HOPES FOR REPORT

Assistant Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace said in Victoria he hoped to have a damage report in place before the cabinet by Thursday.

The federal government has promised financial help but is awaiting a request from the B.C. government before making a commitment.

More than 100 members of the 3rd Field Squadron of army engineers moved into the stricken area early today with a 70-ton mobile crane, bulldozers, dump trucks and low - bed trailers. They had come from Chilliwack, 85 miles east of Vancouver.

Seventy members of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, stationed in Victoria, had already arrived.

Education Officials Blast Extravagances in Buildings, Warn of Teacher Shortage

TORONTO (CP) — Education officials Monday blasted extravagance in school buildings and warned delegates at the opening of the Ontario Education Association annual meeting of an acute shortage of qualified teachers.

Some 12,000 educators, including teachers, professors, trustees, home and school officials, administrators and government education officials, are attending the three-day conference in schools and hotels here.

Norman Sisco of Toronto, assistant superintendent of the Ontario department of education, told the secondary school inspectors section that educationists must insist on reasonable economies in building new schools.

Speaking on frills in a $80,000 school chemistry laboratory, he said, "I'm convinced the average person pays enough to send a Grade 9 student through a four-inch pipe."

He said there is a limit to how much the public can and will pay for education.

Mr. Sisco said part of the cost pressure came from architects, who in their desire to incorporate the best and most modern equipment, sometimes produced buildings that were exorbitantly expensive to cost.

"We must educate our staffs to the necessity of making compromises and then tell them there is a balance to be achieved."

Dr. J. R. Kidd, conference chairman, said the 1963-64 school year has been "a year of crisis."

But this, he said was little more than a running battle about the controversial shuffle of various farm responsibilities between Agriculture Minister Hays and Forestry Minister Sauva.

Conservative MPs demanded an open admission from the ministry Liberal government it had erred in taking 17 days to revoke certain responsibilities that had been transferred to Mr. Sauve from Mr. Hays, Feb. 14.

Mr. Hays denied allegations he had been stripped of his powers or that any were transferred away from him contrary to his wishes.

REPORT MOVES

Meanwhile, there were reports of moves behind the Commons scenes designed to ease some non-essential items in the supplementary spending proposals that last Thursday night.

The outbreak of recriminations across the House was ignited by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

Personal Abuse Fired

OTTAWA (CP) — Stinging barbs of personal abuse were fired in the Commons Easter Monday amid acrimonious, at times broken, accusations and betrayed confidences.

The fur-flying broke loose as MPs indulged in bitter exchanges over who was responsible for Thursday night's disorderly sitting of Parliament.

Four party leaders and many others leading figures on both sides of the chamber were involved.

At intervals the Commons discussed the only real business of the day — consideration of the $98,000 in supplementary estimates for the 1963-64 fiscal year that ends March 31.

But this, too, was little more than a running hassle about the controversial shuffle of various farm responsibilities between Agriculture Minister Hays and Forestry Minister Sauva.

Mr. Hays denied allegations he had been stripped of his powers or that any were transferred away from him contrary to his wishes.

Alaskan Quake Toll Soars As Backwater Areas Report

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) Alaska counted new dead today and reports from backwater villages indicated there may be many more victims of the great earthquake than originally feared.

The toll of dead and presumed dead mounted to 118 in a tally released by Alaska civil defence. Officials noted some of the deaths could not be confirmed although they were reported by law enforcement and military sources.

The picturesque island of Kodiak, southwest of Anchorage in the Gulf of Alaska, appeared to be the state's hardest hit area. The report showed "72 or more" dead or presumed dead as a result of Friday night's quake and giant tidal waves.

The Kodiak toll was based on reports furnished by state police after a tour of the island's torn and twisted villages.

Without the operation, Robert Bainbridge had perhaps a month to live.

For Mrs. James Ackworth, 64, that more than justified her sacrifice.

Since 1956 Robert has been treated for a kidney ailment by Dr. R. D. Ragsdale. Last September the kidneys began to deteriorate.

Robert developed Glomerulo-Nephritis — a disease, Dr. Ragsdale explained, where the small filter-like units in the kidney become inflamed and don't perform their normal function of filtering waste products from the blood.

There were consultations with Dr. Lionel Reece, an urologist, and Dr. S. E. Carroll, a vascular surgeon—the team which last September performed the transplant of a kidney from a man killed in an accident to a man dying of nephritis, in St. Joseph's Hospital.

The patient died several days later when the body's natural tendency to reject the new organ could not be overcome.

From it became obvious that a kidney transplant was Robert's only chance, preparations were launched. It was during this period that Dr. Ragsdale sat in his office discussing the case on the phone with Dr. Reese.

Conference Opens Under Tight Security

All Sessions Being Held Behind Closed Doors

QUEBEC (CP)—The federal-provincial conference opened today behind closed doors and an encircling screen of tight police security.

There were firm prospects that the conference will set the stage for a shift — perhaps a year from now — in payment jointly — financed programs including hundreds of millions of dollars.

Which ones? There was no advance indication. But senior officials from both levels of government entered the conference with detailed plans for such schemes as hospital insurance, various welfare measures, and others.

The theory: The provinces could take over full responsibility for some programs, others constitutionally — along with the means to pay for them, higher personal income tax payments.

Behind this is the theory of one of how far Ottawa will go in backing out of the direct tax fields which it has held most control — Quebec disagrees on this point—to retain its ability to influence the economy.

SITUATION DELICATE

Such weighty deliberation began in an atmosphere which was delicate, tense, but not the situation in this historic capital was delicate.

Senior politicians and officials among the 180 delegates are being careful to avoid controversy by platitudinous politeness.

Even a tight-lipped federal spokesman allowed that the security precautions are "more what unusual." There are dozens of uniformed police from the RCMP, the Quebec Provincial Police, city police, and the QPA in evidence.

The CPR's Chateau Frontenac Hotel is being watched closely. In a 16-minute walk from the Quebec legislature building where the conference is being held. Most of the 180 federal delegates are registered at the hotel.

When Prime Minister Pearson arrived Monday night, he was hustled through a huge, crowded hotel lobby and into an elevator. There were no incidents. Most of the guests in the lobby were teen agers—the majority of them English-speaking.

Mr. Pearson declined to give reporters a statement.

"I will make my statement at the conference," he said after arrival at the airport. "I hope it will be a very useful and amiable conference—I am sure it will be."

The meeting is expected to last until Thursday.

Also on the agenda are the 600,000 Canadians On Dole

QUEBEC (CP)—At this moment there are more than 600,000 Canadian men, women and children living on the dole because the family breadwinner is jobless.

Some of them are employables — federal officials estimate, the number as high as 40 per cent. Should they work for cash for their relief money?

This is one of the issues confronting the federal-provincial conference here behind closed doors.

A particular danger spot, federal officials say, embracing Halifax remains a local problem.

One of the most outspoken proponents of the "work for relief" theory is Premier Joey Smallwood of Newfoundland.

He is not alone. Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec supports the principle, as does Premier Woodrow Lloyd of Saskatchewan has indicated he favors the idea.

But the federal government is not yet committed itself.

Its position is bound by the law. Parliament has authorized the federal treasury to pay half the bills run up by the provinces and their municipalities for relief handed to the unemployed.

Ottawa's official view, therefore, is that if a man or woman puts a man to work on some part-time project he is in receipt unemployed, and so on paid. Federal money is then involved.

The federal share of cost in the program will be around $100,000,000 in the period 1963-64 fiscal year which ends today.

None of this federal money is paid directly to families on relief. This is done entirely by the provinces and municipalities.

They met Ottawa — decide how much a family will be paid. The federal government sets no limits. Nor does it spell out the conditions for relief payments in general.

The scale of unemployment assistance varies from province to province, area to area, city to city. It is fair based on need—not on some specified income level judged to be appropriate by Ottawa.

Social workers usually determine the need. Then they calculate the family income—such as is family allowances, old age forms of assistance. The difference is met by relief payments.

State Department Issues Review Claiming U. S. Winning Cold War

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state department says the United States is winning the cold war—though there is trouble ahead from Communists in some of the poor, developing areas of the world.

The conclusions of the state department are in a review of the cold war since the end of 1960. The document prepared the report for the House of Representatives foreign affairs committee, released Monday.

"Over all," the department says, "there appear to have been far more gains than losses for the free world."

The department says the U.S. has come off best in its major confrontations with the Soviet Union, particularly during the Cuban missile crisis of 1962.

In addition, the department says, the U.S. and its allies have greater unity, military strength and economic growth than the world's Communist nations.

"In the embattled Far East we have held the line and in the Near East the tide has run against the Communists," the report says.

"In Africa, however, the countries of the Communist camp are making new contacts and friends.

The report adds that Latin America "has been getting an increasing share of attention" as a source to Communist contacts, and in some cases to subversive activities. Brazil is singled out as a particular danger spot.

Another general view in the report says of South Viet Nam is that the political-military situation remains fluid, with certain provinces but at no point does the war appear to have taken an irreversible turn for the worse, and in some aspects, it shows promise of improvement.

The state department recognizes that the United States has had its differences with France and other Western allies. But it adds that despite "some divergencies within the Atlantic Alliance, Western Europe has continued to support basic U.S. positions in the cold-war."

This is contrasted to the situation in the Communist world, which the department describes as afflicted with "growing intensity of conflict and hostility" which "reached a new peak of bitterness in 1963."

Woman Gives Her Kidney to Stranger

The following story was written in the light of the London Free Press who observed a five-hour operation at a kidney transplant at St. Joseph's Hospital.

By DEL BELL

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The two surgery - bound hospital carts rolled up to each other then paused momentarily a few strides from the twin operating rooms.

The woman glanced over at the pale young man with the intent expression frown on his face.

In that moment perhaps the thought flickered through her mind that he was only 21—the same age as her eldest boy.

"Good luck," she said.

"Thank you," he replied in an emotion-torn voice.

Then he stretched his hand out toward her as if to shake his. But they never met.

It was the Saturday before Easter Sunday.

There was a little wave and the woman was wheeled into the room at the left, the man to the right.

It was the first time they had met. This boy, who needed a kidney to live, and the stranger, who volunteered hers that he might have a tomorrow.

Without the operation, Robert Bainbridge had perhaps a month to live.

For Mrs. James Ackworth, 64, that more than justified her sacrifice.

Since 1956 Robert has been treated for a kidney ailment by Dr. R. D. Ragsdale. Last September the kidneys began to deteriorate.

From it became obvious that a kidney transplant was Robert's only chance, preparations were launched. It was during this period that Dr. Ragsdale sat in his office discussing the case on the phone with Dr. Reese.

Mrs. Ackworth chanced to be there, overheard part of the conversation and prayed that a donor was needed. She offered one of her kidneys on the spot.

Dr. Ragsdale was astounded. He explained the tests and surgery required, told Mrs. Ackworth to think it over and discuss it with her husband.

On the day before Easter Sunday she said "I want to live as long as I can; I'm sure he does too. If you see someone drowning you do all you can to help. You jump in and help."

"You're going to jump quite a long way," Dr. Ragsdale replied softly.

Mediator for Cyprus Carries Best Wishes of All on Mission

By JIM PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When Sakari S. Tuomioja of Finland completes consultations with United Nations Secretary-General U Thant in New York and heads for Cyprus this week he will carry with him the world body's best wishes for a successful mission.

But his task as mediator between Greek and Turkish Cypriots on the troubled Mediterranean island is so serious that few believe he will be able to negotiate a peaceful political settlement there in the three months allotted to him by the UN Security Council.

The difference between the two factions today centre on arguments over the constitution that established when Cyprus became an independent republic in 1960.

But these differences go back hundreds of years and are rooted in bitter racial hatreds built up over years of turmoil.

GREEKS CAME FIRST

Cyprus, under British administration from 1878 until the 1960 independence agreement, was ruled by Assyrians, Persians, Egyptians and Turks—among others—before the British took over.

But the population has been predominantly Greek since the Trojan wars. The first Turks came in 1571 when Turkey sent its soldiers to occupy Cyprus and the Greeks and Turks have been fighting ever since.

They fought each other even while opposing British rule during the last 30 years, the Greek-Cypriots agitating for union with United Nations involvement, the assigning of a UN peace-keeping force, numbering 1,100 Canadian soldiers, and appointment last week of Tuomioja as UN mediator—a man with an impossible task.

Turkish - Cypriots now want some form of partition of the island. The Greek-Cypriots want a united state.

Compromise seems no nearer now than when bloodshed began anew last December, leading eventually to United Nations involvement, the assigning of a UN peace-keeping force, numbering 1,100 Canadian soldiers, and appointment last week of Tuomioja as UN mediator—a man with an impossible task.

Independence came after four years of bloody fighting that was led by EOKA, a terrorist underground group, the world body's best wishes for a successful mission.

Britain, Turkey, Greece and Cyprus participated in the treaties leading to establishment of the island republic and the treaties made up two documents which guaranteed the Turkish minority equal rights with the Greek majority.

TWO LANGUAGES

Greek and Turkish are official languages under the constitution, which also provides that the Greek majority and Greek-Cypriots outnumber the Turks about four to one in a total population of about 650,000 today—elect the president and the Turks elect the vice-president.

Education, religion, culture and other communal matters are governed separately by Greek and Turkish chambers, but the Turks have equal rights as Greeks in matters of defence and security.

Archbishop Makarios, the Greek - Cypriot president, now seeks constitutional changes to provide Turkish majorities and move the Turkish power of veto over his administration. The Turkish minority seeks to wipe out their rights.

Complicating the situation are the historical racial hatreds and the fact the population split also is a religious split between Orthodox Greeks and Moslem Turks.

The Turkish - Cypriots now want some form of partition of the island. The Greek-Cypriots want a united state.

Compromise seems no nearer now than when bloodshed began anew last December, leading eventually to United Nations involvement, the assigning of a UN peace-keeping force, numbering 1,100 Canadian soldiers, and appointment last week of Tuomioja as UN mediator—a man with an impossible task.

28 Rinks Competing in Closing Spiel

The closing spiel, a mixed one, opened at the Quinte Curling Club on Monday evening and will continue until Saturday when the finals will be played and the prizes distributed. Over 30 rinks have entered and from the results of the first three draws, the competition, for the most part, is going to be close. Most of the games, especially in the first draw were decided by one end, the result not being known until the last end and sometimes to the last stone.

The vice-president of the club, Cliff Archbold, is general chairman of the spiel and he has a lot of willing helpers. The ladies' committee, Mrs. Ross Bowe and he is the busiest person in the rink, posting the scores and arranging for the next draw. The women are serving light refreshments, especially between draws. Tea is drawn and the food counter is well patronized.

On Saturday evening a delicious full course dinner will be served and the competing rinks, the finals of which will be the prize distributed and there is a social evening that concludes the season's activities.

The curling year has been a most successful one under the direction of Everett Black, the president and Mrs. Doris Bannerman, secretary. The Women's section. A few surprises are in store for those who attend the dinner and dance when it opened dancing will predominate.

RESULTS OF DRAW

On the five o'clock draw last evening the following resulted: Cliff Neill, Hasen Stairs won. A close one from Bob Smith, Glen Bateman, Ken Wood-cock Johnson and Ron Benn, skipping for Dave Duffy beat Charlie Corby. In the seven o'clock draw Bob Bastable defeated Art Benson, Don Conway and Jim Walker having a bye. In the eight o'clock draw Dave Brown took Ben Corke and Hal Emmerson beat Ross Wood after Colcick Cook and Miller won over Stan Reston by a good margin, Oc. Kirkwood defeated Ken Wood, Jim Walker won over Lloyd Sheppard and Ernie Wilkinson defeated Bill Macpherson.

Tonight there will be two draws at seven, Jake Hess and Bob Alexander meeting Bob Bastable, Dan Cowley tangling with Ken Wood and Ken Wilkinson taking on Dr. McConnell and Jim Walker having a tussle with Hasen Stairs. In the late draw Dave Duffy will meet Hal Emmerson, both acted the prize winners. Charles Lovett will meet Harold Mott, Gil Wamboldt will take on Cec Kirkwood while Court Miller and Hazen Stairs both first-draw winners will match rocks. There should be some interesting matches played in these draws between the winners would be hard to pick.

Rural Church To Be Studied At Seminar

At Orono, Ontario, in the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada, on April 14 to 16, a regional seminar will be held on "The Church in the Country," for the five Central Conferences of the United Church: London, Hamilton, Toronto, Bay of Quinte, and Montreal and Ottawa.

These five Conferences represent 362,734 families, and 1,470,734 people.

The 60 Presbyteries of these Conferences will each send at least two delegates, who, with officials, speakers, press representatives, and delegates from the Roman Catholic, Anglican, Lutheran and Evangelical United Brethren communions should bring the attendence to well over 125.

Speakers will include: Rev. Harold M. Bailey, Associate Secretary of the Board of Home Missions, of the United Church of Canada, program chairman; Rev. A. Ross Dyer, Chaplain United Church, Chaplain, Ont., General Chairman; Dr. R. G. Fiven, Professor and Head of the Department of Geography, University of Western Ontario, a prominent Canadian authority and leading authority in Community Planning and past president of Canadian Association of Geographers; Dr. Ralph Krueger, Professor of Geography, Waterloo Lutheran University; Dr. R. L. Oaten, director of Five Oaks Christian Centre, United Church, and Rev. H. G. Lester, superintendent of Missions, Quinte Conference.

The Seminar is to be a study of modern change as it affects rural areas and the church and religion in those areas.

Shortage of Hospital Beds Blamed on Insurance Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Ralph E. Cowan, Liberal MP for York-Humber, said Monday present hospital insurance is one of the reasons for the current shortage of hospital beds.

Mr. Cowan, who said he is connected with a Toronto hospital, said "we find people with nothing to do in a hospital because it is the last draw." Hospitals are hospitals "and treatment for the slightest itch or cold.

He spoke in the Commons against a private member's motion, introduced by another Conservative, Hugh Rose, that proposed that fees for emergency ambulance services be covered by provincial-provincial hospital insurance plans.

Dr. Harry Harley, Progressive Conservative and MP for Halton, said this would help ambulance operators to employ more trained drivers and attendants and acquire more emergency equipment such as oxygen tanks.

His motion was talked out in the Commons when no private member's motion and drops to the bottom of the order paper. The sponsor may to come up again this session.

Dr. Harley said ambulance services are used by financial problems.

"Many accident and serious victims refused to pay ambulance bills because they had not the money," he said. Ambulance themselves more and more funeral directors were getting out of the ambulance business because it didn't pay.

Mr. Cowan said a problem would be created if it would be difficult to make a proper distinction between what constituted emergency and non-emergency ambulance service.

He said he was surprised Dr. Harley had taken action favorable to the time in view of this week's federal-provincial conference at Quebec City when shared-cost programs would be discussed. The federal government is trying to get approach the provinces with a proposal that would increase costs to the taxpayer.

"I can't seen how the people of Canada can be expected to pay for an emergency ambulance service without everyone demanding a ride in an ambulance to hospital," he said.

He added they soon would be getting free beds, too.

Dr. Stanley Haidasz, another doctor who is Liberal MP for Toronto-Parkdale and was parliamentary secretary to Health Minister Mrs. Fairclough until recently, said legislation on ambulance services should be enacted by the provinces and municipalities.

Ambulance services urgently needed improvement and were far too costly—for example $30 for a one-way trip to hospital in Toronto. Every ambulance should have oxygen equipment and be accompanied by attendants trained in first aid.

Fire Dept., Ambulance Services, Taxis Plagued by Phoney Calls

Anonymous telephone callers are at it again.

The fire department, ambulance service and taxi drivers were plagued with phoney telephone calls for over an hour last night.

The first 'phoney' was received by the fire department at 6.18 when Dey were sent to 240 Bridge Street East. When the department arrived they were told they had not been called.

Another call came at about 6.40, this time to 12 Brock Street. However, when the department arrived at 12 Brock Street with two trucks, they discovered there was no such number. In the meantime, La Salle Ambulance service had also been called to the same address along with Checker Cabs and Crawford Taxi had also been called to 12 Brock Street but a car was not sent. Checker Cabs and Mollwhill said he was familiar with Brock Street and knew there was no such number at 12.

At about the same time the fire department was sent to Brock Street, City Ambulance was sent to 629 East Bridge Street. Here again there was no such number.

A spokesman at Central Taxi office said this morning that between 6.30 and 7.30 p.m. his office received about 20 such calls to different parts of the city, while La Salle Ambulance also reported being plagued with numerous calls.

The firms contacted this morning agreed that it had been what sounded to be a young girl's voice on the telephone.

The city's police department reported they received no phoney calls.

Triplet Boys First Children Of Local Couple

Triplets were born at the Belleville General Hospital early this morning to Mr. and Mrs. William Bowler, R.R. 2, Belleville. The babies, all boys weighed in at 3 lbs. 14½ ounces, 3 lbs. 13¼ ounces, and 4 lbs. 2¼ ounces.

These are the first children for Mr. and Mrs. Bowler. No names had been chosen for the boys at the time of going to press. The attending physician was Dr. J. R. Empson.

Mr. Bowler is employed at Circle TV Service Ltd.

Pacific Cable, Damaged by Quake, Repaired

MONTREAL (CP)—A telegraph cable between Canada and Australia which was damaged by the Alaskan earthquake that struck the west coast of the Pacific coast of North America.

Mr. Bowie said that, until repairs are completed, traffic is being routed through Vancouver Island, Hawaii, Fanning Islands to the Commonwealth link.

The alternate route was proving adequate Monday but we expect to be a bit tight today."

CABLE LOADED

Cable was being loaded aboard the scow at Sandfield, Vancouver Island, when a terrible ship station used to be located near the mouth of the Alberni Channel.

No cable ship was operating in the area and none would be needed.

The Commonwealth Pacific cable was inaugurated only last December as part of the largest telecommunications cable project in the world. It runs from Port Alberni to Australia by way of Hawaii, the Fiji Islands and New Zealand.

It has 80 voice channels and is also used for press and commercial telegraph traffic and high-quality transmission of music, broadcasting and photos.

The London government for the British post office said communications between, Britain and Australia and New Zealand were being supplemented by radio via Singapore direct to Sydney and Melbourne.

The new Commonwealth link, Prime Ministers Diefenbaker, Menzies and Holland, and across Canada, has normally been carrying a large portion of the telecommunications with the Pacific region.

Million Profit For Studebaker In First Quarter

NEW YORK (CP)—Byers A. Burlingame, president of Studebaker Corp., forecast Monday that the firm will make a profit approaching $1,000,000 in its first-quarter operations this year.

He made the forecast at a meeting of the New York Society of Security Engineers. The figure would compare with a loss of $6,400,000 in the first quarter last year.

Mr. Burlingame said the profit would be made on net sales of about $80,000,000. That compared with net sales of $96,900,000 in the first quarter of 1960.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks for many kindnesses to our many relatives, friends and neighbors for cards, flowers and telephone calls and visits to the hospital during the illness and passing of our dear husband, father and grandfather. Special thanks to Dr. Empson for his kind attention and to the nurses of the Belleville General Hospital for their kind management of the services.
Mrs. Walter Read (Ivy) Parks and family.

IN MEMORIAM

BROWNE — Treasured memory of a dear son and brother, Charles Edward Browne, who passed away March 21, 1952.
Your memory is a keepsake
With which we will never part.
Your spirit did not break,
But God only took a rose
To bloom forever more.
Dearly loved and sadly missed by mother, brothers and sisters.

Dearly loved and lovely memories of our dear brother, Charles Edward Browne, who passed away March 21, 1952.
Dearest Charles and Eileen Helen, Sydney.

BOLDRICK — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Ethel Boldrick, who passed away March 21st, 1960.
Sadly missed by her daughter Ella.
We watched you fade away,
We heard your last sad words,
Three years ago today,
You left us for ever more.
We could not stop your dying,
We could not say good-bye,
All we could do was watch you suffer,
And wish you were not there to suffer.
—Always remembered by daughter Ella, son-in-law Ernest, grandchildren Doug and Betty, and great-grandchildren Doug and Kenny.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to my many friends and neighbors for cards, flowers and visits during my illness while a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Veterans Dept. Will Control All Hospitals

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government has backed away from part of its announced plan for the future use of veterans hospitals which drew a storm of protest from veterans' organizations.

Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Monday the veterans affairs department intends to retain operational control of the hospitals pending out arrangements to place unused space at other disposal.

Mr. Pearson in effect confirmed reports late last week that the federal government was working on a modification of the veterans hospital plan announced last year by the Veterans Minister Teillet.

Mr. Teillet told the Commons at that time that the only solution to the hospital problem was to enter into agreements with suitable agencies to take over operational control of veterans hospitals.

Former veterans minister Gordon Churchill asked Mr. Pearson in the Commons Monday whether "the government is now in full retreat from its announced intention to transfer the veterans affairs hospitals to other levels of government."

"No," replied Mr. Pearson, "Only partially," interjected Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

Police Reported on Verge Of Breaking Weapons Theft

MONTREAL (CP) — Saturday and secret activity has led to reports that police are on the verge of breaking the case of weapons thefts from Quebec armories.

Three young men were arrested and are to appear in court today on charges of possession of explosives. They were arrested in their north-central Montreal ground-floor flat Monday and police found nine sticks of dynamite and separatist literature in the raid.

Le Devoir says that 3 combined forces of Montreal and Quebec Provincial Police and the RCMP was sent to the Laurentian Mountains resort area north of Montreal to find "secret depots" where the stolen arms are believed hidden.

The newspaper says "it can be foreseen that within a few hours the security forces will have recovered part of the stolen arms."

The flourish of police activity began early Monday when raiding parties were sent out around Montreal. Late Monday four other young men still were being questioned at police headquarters.

The three facing charges, all in their 20s, were not armed and offered no resistance when arrested.

OPERATE QUIETLY

Police have been operating without fanfare since machine guns, mortars, rifles, pistols and ammunition were stolen in two armory raids earlier this year.

First theft of a variety of weapons was last Jan. 29 at the armory of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal on Cote-des-Neiges Rd. in Montreal. The second theft of 33 rifles and three pistols was a few days later at the 6th Field Artillery Regiment armory in Shawinigan, Que., 90 miles northeast of Montreal.

The army reported at the time that many of the weapons did not have essential breech mechanisms which are stored in different areas.

In other words, the federal government has been asked several times by the House of Commons to report on police progress in the thefts. Justice Minister Favreau has refused to reply.

Le Devoir says police have been following "their best lead yet" during the last two days. It says a 27-year-old member of a separatist "terrorist" organization — Independants Nationals was questioned Monday regarding the raid on the Fusiliers armory.

The Monday flurry of activity followed the weekend arrest of a group of youths for removing Red Ensigns and Union Jacks from suburban St. Lambert public buildings.

The youths were arrested when a white flag—made of empty sugar bags—was hoisted atop the St. Lambert post office.

The flag had the letters ALQ painted in red on it—the sign used by the self-styled Armee de Liberation du Quebec, a group announced its existence earlier this year.

Le Devoir says the St. Lambert youths gave police their first major leads on the armory robbers.

The armory raids were the first major incidents in several months in the succession of campaigning of several Quebec groups.

They followed a 10-week period last spring when mailboxes and federal buildings in the Montreal area were bombed by a group calling itself Le Front de Liberation Quebecois.

One man was killed and another maimed in the bombings and more than a dozen persons are serving penitentiary terms as a result.

Kinette Club Hostesses at Birthday Party

The Belleville Kinette Club were hostesses at the White Cane Club's 14th Birthday Party held recently in the Recreation Centre. Several guests were present from the Kingston Friendship Club.

Mayor Ellis brought greetings and best wishes from the city of Belleville. Mr. Jack Bews represented the Kingston Friendship Club and the Ontario Branch of the Canadian Council to the Blind. Representatives from the various Service Clubs who assist the White Cane Club throughout the year were represented by: Mr. R. W. Freestone, president of the Kiwanis Club; Mrs. Hyatt, president of the Kinettes; Mrs. R. Brain, president of the Kiwanis Kweens; Mrs. Ritchie, Senior Regent of the Moose Lodge; Mr. J. E. Dyble, Falcon Club, and Mr. F. W. Masterwick, governor of the Moose Lodge.

Mr. R. Sprague, chairman of the Hastings County Advisory Board to the CNIB, brought greetings and also read a special vote of thanks to the "White Cane Mothers," Mrs. W. E. Rollins, Mrs. H. C. Selden, Miss Myrtle Peck and Mrs. C. W. Coleman, who give so unstintingly of their time during the year.

Mr. Preston Timmins, Field Secretary, and his assistant, Mr. D. McCallum, brought greetings and also voiced their appreciation for the various service clubs.

Miss Vipond, a teacher from Kingston, was also present.

A most enjoyable program had been arranged. Mr. J. Brown sang two solos and later in the evening he and Mrs. Brown gave requested and beautiful duets. The members always look forward to hearing Mr. J. Brown of the Kingston club, who with his usual wit and ability to play the accordion is a top notch performer. Mr. Artie Scott on the harmonica and Mr. Jim McCoy on the piano entertained with several western numbers. Two "pre-war" members of the White Cane Club received silver dollars, freshly minted. These souvenirs were handwrought for the occasion by George Elliott of the local Brotherhood. Recently retired and honored were: Richard Bevin and W. J. Cosgrey of Coburg; Joseph Allaire, E. R. Steele, H. D. Sharpe, George Clapper, James Sheppard, W. H. Kingston and Leotha Alexander, all of Belleville. Each recipient was individually presented with a gift of appreciation by various honored head table guests. Acting as master of ceremonies for the presentations was Robert Ashman, local chairman of the local Brotherhood.

Guests seated at the head table with their wives were: C. W. McCarthy, general chairman, B.R.T.; G. W. Elliott, local chairman; W. E. B. Chase, general secretary and treasurer for the occasion; K. E. Hunt, Bidear, area manager CNR; G. W. McGregor, Canadian representative, B.R.T.; W. D. Newell, Bidear, area operations manager, CNR; and W. P. Kelly, Canadian vice-president, BRT.

FINS PRESENTED

Fifty-year members of the Brotherhood were presented with lapel pins denoting their long, faithful service to the Brotherhood. Their wives were presented with corsages, and Mrs. W. Jordan, wife of the most elderly member was presented with a potted arrangement of flowers. Mr. Jordan, over 80 and senior member of the BRT local lodge was given a standing ovation as he rose to respond for the members of ceremonies. Presented with emblems of fifty years' service were: C. J. Warren, Richard Carruthers, W. J. Crosgrey, Frank Ferguson, still on active duty with the railway and presented with a 45 year emblem.

Speeches from the guests at the head table were short and to the point, the highlight address of the evening by Mr. W. D. Newell, reassuring his listeners of continued and increasing employment from Belleville's continuance as an important focal point of the Canadian National Railways.

K. E. Hunt expressed his pleasure at being present and spoke of the increasing efficiency of the railway's service — which he attributed in great part on the desire of the great majority of its employees enthusiastically doing their job. Mr. Hunt stressed the necessity of operating employees' need for a safe approach to their duties, to guard against pain and hardship. The period of adjustment by railway management to the most modern methods of administration, he said, was nearing a close. A formula of no hardship to its employees was considered as most necessary and the changes in operating methods would result in man. B.R.T.; G. W. Elliott, local chairman; W. E. B. Chase, general secretary and treasurer, Grand Lodge B.R.T.; Robert Ashman, local chairman, B.R.T. and master of ceremonies for the occasion; K. E. Hunt, Bidear, area manager CNR; G. W. McGregor, Canadian representative, B.R.T.; W. D. Newell, Bidear, area operations manager, CNR; and W. P. Kelly, Canadian vice-president, BRT.

Brotherhood of Trainmen Honors, Fetes, Pensioners

It was old-timers' night out in the modern atmosphere of Belleville's Club Canara last night.

The event was the annual Pensioners' Night banquet staged by Belleville Lodge 126 of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen which yearly honors the veterans of the service.

With nearly 250 guests and their wives looking on, symbolic pins were presented the senior BRT members, marking their years of service.

Collectively they represented several centuries of railroading.

Nine recently retired employees were presented with a walnut based replica of a portion of track bearing a miniature caboose. To the sides of the rectangular base were attached ten silver dollars, freshly minted. These souvenirs were handwrought for the occasion by George Elliott of the local Brotherhood. Recently retired and honored were: Richard Bevin and W. J. Crosgrey of Coburg; Joseph Allaire, E. R. Steele, H. D. Sharpe, George Clapper, James Sheppard, W. H. Kingston and Leotha Alexander, all of Belleville. Each recipient was individually presented with a gift of appreciation by various honored head table guests. Mr. Hunt explained the relative success of the progress to assist the nationally owned railway to greater success. In closing he spoke of his certainty of a change in the existing method of establishment that has hampered the railway in the past.

CLOSE RELATIONS

The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen officials present as guests all spoke in high terms of their welcome and appreciation of the fine dinner served by the Ladies of the Canara Club. Mr. Chase, General Secretary and Treasurer of the B.R.T. remarked on the fine feeling of goodwill existing between the management of the Rideau Area and its employees as exemplified by the gathering. Joe Hunter, president of the Canadian National Pensioners Association spoke of the close relationship of pensioners and local management.

The evening ended with a dance with the Troubadours supplying their best in music. Mr. "Blue Light" Foote was over as emcee and introduced Miss Rhona Turcotte of Belleville for a solo dance. After an encore general dancing commenced, the leading couple Mr. and Mrs. Ashman.

The dinner was prepared and served by Mrs. W. Stearns, and a corps of 15 assistants were available before the dinner and during the dance.

Demand Probe Of Pill-Drugged Teen-Agers

BY COLIN FROST

LONDON (AP)—Anxious hoteliers today demanded a government inquiry into a weekend of teen-age violence that terrorized two resorts and brought 100 arrests in all.

Behind the demand lay fears of a new wave of violence at the Whitsun holiday weekend and from now—and fears that their summer livelihood will be disrupted.

Battling, teen-agers, many on their own admission drugged on pep pills, rampaged through the east coast resorts of Clacton and Margate at the weekend in a wave of violence without precedent in Britain.

Still other British youngsters went on the rampage across the North Sea in the Belgian resort of Oostende. About three thousand returned to Dover Monday night, many of them bandaged for cuts and bruises.

Clacton took the worst beating with damage running into thousands of pounds. Youngsters roamed the streets looting shops, fighting police, overturning cars and throwing chairs and street weighing machines into the sea.

DEMANDS INQUIRY

George Halnett, chairman of the resort's hotels association said he has asked his member of Parliament for a home office inquiry.

Part of the Clacton trouble resulted from clashes between rival teen-age cults of "mods" and "rockers."

Mods — short for moderns — ride souped-up motor scooters. The boys wear elegant Italian suits, their girls chic outfits sometimes with ankle - length skirts.

Rockers, male and female, wear black leather jackets, leather pants, leather boots and crash helmets. The girls wear clothes are indistinguishable. They ride powerful motorbikes and their pastime is "doing the town" — topping 100 miles an hour.

The cults clashed again Monday night in Margate on the Kent coast. Young thugs fought through the main streets and on the sea front. The climax came when an amusement park called Dreamland with a 17-year-old mod stabbed in the back and four others injured.

Museum Open On Wednesday

In order that school children and visitors to the Belleville area this week can see the special military display at the Hastings County Museum, the museum will be open this Wednesday from 10 in the morning to 5 in the afternoon.

These hours, in addition to the regular weekend hours, will make it possible for many more people to see the interesting display that outlines the military history of the Belleville area.

The material for the special display has come from several sources including the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Museum.

Last night, the Museum held its weekly workshop with a good attendance. Work on the cataloguing of pictures and books was continued and an interesting discussion examined the origins of several early legends. Several "finds" of local history were removed from the realm of fact to the limbo of hearsay.

Norwich Plan To Be Outlined At Meeting

TRENTON — Around 125 tickets have been sold for the Trenton Chamber of Commerce special dinner meeting at the Legion hall tomorrow night.

The meeting has been called to explain the facets of the Norwich Plan—an inexpensive way of "sprucing" up the down town business section of the city. Council is expected to bring down the town budget by the end of this week.

Last year's expenses were the highest yet in Chamber history. Chamber secretary-manager Roderick Savage mailed out thousands of brochures of the town to potential tourist markets in the U.S.A. and Canada and to 900 individuals. This year, postage and express rates have gone up. Mr. Sprague has been driving his own car on Chamber business but has never received a car allowance.

In 1960, the chamber's professional fees were raised. Trade was granted a $2,000 allowance from the town. Considering that Trenton spent a lot of money in those days, the directors feel, in effect, that it is nothing short of ridiculous that the grant remains the same in the face of higher costs all along the line.

One of the directors, Herbert Simcoe, has suggested that he and a committee wait upon council and explain the chamber's needs. Mr. Simcoe would also like to discuss a plan for a central information office with council, as high office rental is one of the largest items in the budget.

Meanwhile, former chamber secretaries are busy selling membership renewal cards with a new schedule of fees attached. At the moment many small firms have hired additional help since the schedule was first formulated and these come under a new bracket. Members, on renewing, are thanking Manager Sprague, fibbing in slowly this year.

Chamber Will Ask Council for Bigger Grant

TRENTON — At a directors' meeting of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, yesterday noon, it was decided to ask the town council to increase its grant to the chamber to $3,000 from last year's $2,000. The 1964 budget needs and the request for the increased grant has been mailed to the town office. Council is expected to bring down the town budget by the end of this week.

Curling Events Mark Closing For Season

TRENTON — With the advent of "spring" weather, curling events at the Trenton club are thinning out, or closing. The rounds of the mixed playoffs have been played. Final games are set for Sunday, April 5th. Trophies in play are the Central Bridge trophy and the Consolation trophy. That's not quite the end of mixed play however, as the mixed fitney will be held on April 20.

Men's playoffs start Wednesday, April 1, with semi-finals on April 2 and final games on April 6. Winners in the first division will play the Langs for the Fetter trophy; in the second division, the Elaine Footwear trophy.

Prizes won through the season will be presented at a gala night at the club, Friday, April 3rd.

Industrial curling, which has been going at top speed this year, ends on Friday, April 3rd by a club bonspiel, April 9, 10 and 11.

Meantime, plans must be laid for next year's curling season. There will be a banquet and meeting at the club on April 8 at 8 p.m. A men's general meeting will follow at 8.30 p.m. and at the club on April 15, the ladies, looking forward to summer, will hold a Golf Dessert Bridge at 8 p.m. with Mrs. Lang and on Wednesday, April 22, another of the club-sponsored fashion shows, which have proved to be popular with both sexes, will take place at the club, also at 7.30 p.m.

Space Program All Wet

We don't always agree with the pronouncements of syndicated columnist Sydney J. Harris, who appears daily on this page, but we agreed with him the other day when he called the "man on the moon" project immoral. We consider it more than immoral.

Mr. Harris talks of one-fifth of the U.S. population living in poverty and suggests the twenty billion dollars a year being spent on the space project might be used to better purpose. He suggests that an unmanned moon shot could provide about 95 percent of the information a man could send back.

We are more inclined to take the international view—that about four-fifths of the world's population is living in poverty, and that most people don't care if the moon is made of hallmarked silver or of green cheese.

Meanwhile, back on earth, about four-fifths of the planet's surface is not yet properly explored or exploited. We refer to the seas, which are probably able to feed all the peoples the earth will have to support in the next couple of centuries, and which probably contain or conceal enough mineral wealth to keep industry humming are likely to dream. Man knows virtually nothing of the sea, below the surface layer on which ships crawl.

If anyone has twenty billion dollars a year to spend on exploration, it might just as well be thrown into the sea as shot into outer space. Thrown into the sea, it just might make it possible for man to live with himself on this planet for another century or two.

Johnson's Vision Clear

President Lyndon Johnson of the U.S. says that a general war would be impossible in this nuclear age.

Impossible, unfortunately, is the wrong word. A general war could easily happen. The result, though, would be "impossible" in the sense that it is impossible to think of it without horror, that it would be impossible for countries to survive, that conditions would be impossibly terrible, that the combined efforts of mankind upon earth might be made physically impossible.

The fact that President Johnson realizes this is comforting. Some of his predecessors in the U.S.—and some of the rulers in other countries do not appear to have grasped this terrible truth.

President Johnson carries a big stick, a much bigger stick than any of the Rough Rider Roosevelt dreamed. When he walks quietly, though, it is because of a necessity which did not exist when Roosevelt gave this as the second part of his formula for proper conduct. There may have been a time when the commander-in-chief could order soldiers to march at the first sign of crisis, says Johnson, but the world has changed and so has the method of dealing with disruptions of the peace. For Johnson there will be no cavalry charge at San Juan Hill. This is no sign of cowardice, but the bravest talk out of Texas since the Alamo.

By Any Other Name

East Germany is yet another of the communist bloc countries that is discovering the hard way, that centralised planning and control imposed on industry from on high simply doesn't work.

At a recent meeting of the party's central committee, one of East Germany's chief planners, Dr. Werner Jarowinsky, offered this startling prescription for making the East German economy more productive.

"In socialist trading, we now need a new type of businessman who has in mind the community's and the individual's advantage, who can calculate shrewdly and accurately estimate prices and demand," he suggested.

What Dr. Jarowinsky is recommending sounds suspiciously like a good, old-fashioned capitalist.

Co-operation feeds on itself; the more practical work the Commonwealth countries do together, the more they will want to do and the closer they will grow. One of the greatest services any Commonwealth government could do it would be to give it tasks for common action.—S. C. Leslie, formerly head of the the Information Division of the British Treasury.

We are told there is no salvation outside the Church—nonsense. Nobody can tell me that Christ died on Calvary for any select group. As the feller says, "It is great to live with the saints in heaven, but it is hell to live with them on earth."—Richard Cardinal Cushing of Boston.

Ottawa Offbeat
Robt. Coates Rallies Round Flag, Plugs Red Ensign

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A young (36) Conservative MP from Nova Scotia's Cumberland constituency, Robert Carman Coates, is taking on Prime Minister Pearson in what could turn out to be one of the Dorchester battle that at first glance it might appear.

Seven years an MP and already a veteran of four Federal General Elections, Robert Coates has set out to change the prime minister's mind on the flag question.

He is spearheading a national campaign to keep the Canadian Red Ensign, truly a "good old flag," as he calls it.

This is not to be any ordinary campaign, but the way Robert Coates has been going about it it just might succeed. Then it looks from this distance.

The battle lines are drawn. And hard.

Having included production and delivery of "a new and distinctive national flag" as he has called it, among his election promises, Mr. Pearson prime minister particularly — as late as last December — is not to be swayed by pledges.

He is on record as saying that a particular way of making good "within two years of the election," which gives him one still to go before January into what almost guarantees to be deep trouble either with French or English Canada.

NOT THE ENSIGN

The PM has made it plain that the Red Ensign will not be required flag because, as he has put it in correspondence with the Canadian Legion, it is neither "distinctive, national, easily identified" — the above being matchbox for the emblems of any other country."

His is merely in the record, the time in the Commons, with the pointed observation, that Canada's national colours are red and white; and the national emblem, three red maple leaves on one stem on a field of white.

That might seem to decide it . . . not quite. Then is Robert Coates and his campaign for the Red Ensign.

Why, indeed, thank you. Only two days in May, the Commons heard that 93,213 Canadians had written to the PM pleading for retention of the Red Ensign.

And that, swears Robert Coates, is just the beginning.

He is getting letters, too, "Red Ensign" letters, "more than I've ever had on any issue" since he was elected for the Nova Scotia seat only by regarding it as a modest beginning."

Another, from Montreal, protested "what is this about Bill 3127 Why, my own family protested with 3,000 names on it!"

And there was an enthusiastic note from Toronto, which overjoyed that someone is doing something before it is too late to keep the Red Ensign."

Mr. Coates has the Royal Canadian Legion and its hundreds of thousands of members going for him on what is beginning to shape up as a great national "rally round the old flag."

And to keep the pressure building on the prime minister, he is pleading with every person he meets to write him and to corresponds to let Mr. Pearson know by individual letter and/or mass petition that it is the Red Ensign.

GOVERNMENT-BY-POLL

Robert Coates is determined that if he can encourage enough Canadians to write to either the prime minister or State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne, he will win his case for the Red Ensign.

And what makes that flag so special?

Canadians fought and died under it, he recalls . . . they were acclaimed by the hundreds in countries around the world and seen the saliva returned by legions of foreign statesmen and fighting men . . . it is known in ports and capitals around the globe as Canada's flag . . . and we'll still have to fly it if we want to be recognized as Canadians, even if a new and supposedly "distinctive national flag" is chosen . . .

So write, write, write and bury the PM and the State Secretary in a national avalanche of letters, begs Robert Coates, remembering as he puts it, that "any Government that bases its policies on Gallup or popularity polls can be made to understand by sheer unremitting public pressure."

Finally, Robert Coates has this one closing note . . . about the prime minister's apparent preference for the red and white be claims are the national colors, and the three red maple leaves on a single stem on a field of white be regards as the national emblem — let's remember this historical significance of white.

Through the ages a white flag has been the flag of surrender.

Favors Detention For Questioning

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

The emergency measures to check crime suspects if they refuse to answer questions may not be as bad as they seem. Perhaps that is the only thing to hide will gladly answer all questions. Sure, there is a possibility of an innocent person being detained for a few days. But if organized crime, (including many an innocent persons), can be effectively curbed by these new measures, I am one who is for them.

China Barred From Fair

Vancouver Sun

There was once an Englishman who fell in the Niagara River. He would never die falls because he wouldn't grab a rope. Then a Canadian would think: "Fatty hadn't been introduced.

It's a silly old story but is it much sillier than Minister of Trade Mitchell Sharp's explanation of why Communist China is can't be invited or take part in the 1967 Montreal World's Fair?

China can't be invited because we haven't diplomatic relations with that country. For some obscure reason this is a condition imposed by the International Bureau of Expositions.

If the world's fair had been held in Britain or France either one could invite China to take part with the full approval and the blessing of the bureau. They do have diplomatic relations with China.

Without diplomatic relations we hobnob with China on every level of government and private enterprise except the diplomatic. We sell and expect to continue to sell to China wheat, two million and $200 million worth of grain a year. We stand up and bellow like bulls for the United States makes any move to restrict our trade in any kind of goods.

Former Conservative minister of agriculture Alvin Hamilton is now on his way to China to try and expand Chinese world trade so that China can pay us for our grain. China no doubt would be delighted to expand its trade with Canada.

It quite possibly would jump at a chance to put on an impressive exhibit at the May 1 to 4 World's Fair.

By all accounts we are going to need the most impressive exhibits we can get at Montreal. The federal government alone is expecting to pay a $120 million deficit for the operation.

Just what is the International Bureau of Expositions to lay down an absurd and discriminatory condition of this sort? The current New York World's Fair, with which the Montreal fair must compete, sets its sights on Russia's eye and put on its fair with the IBE approval.

Canada might suggest the IBE relent.

Or we might establish diplomatic relations with China.

Or should we build another small island in the St. Lawrence for China, outside the world's fair of course, but within walking distance — 180 yards, say?

President Woos Ladies

Baltimore Sun

According to the woman who knows best, President Johnson was an impetuous wooer who asked the lady of his choice for a date the very day they met and married her two months later. His excellent judgment on that occasion must have encouraged him, for now he is applying something of the same Lochinvar approach to 90 million other females, a lot of whom have voted. He is trying to sweep them off their feet.

The signs were apparent when the President started dancing — especially with newspaper women and wives of congressmen. His followers, up by appearing unexpectedly at Washington functions with female sponsors in tow, have been displaying the aroused ability in the White House as representatives of the consumers and the housewife lobby, and told the world that the talents of women were underrated.

No one knows what emotions are churning in the bosoms of the female electorate, but it wouldn't be surprising if they were a bit flummoxed by all this flattery. The true feminist resents being treated as a freak of nature; she wants to be sure that she can weight the issues like a man. The bonfeminist doesn't care a fig about the many women sit on the Interstate Commerce Commission, but might like to see more women appointed. President Eisenhower, a great gatherer of female votes, only had one woman in his cabinet, a men who saw him wanted to knit him a pair of socks. Mr. Johnson doesn't waste a lot of energy on his latest wooing. It might not be worth the trouble.

Menstrual Period Continues Even After Sterilization

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I had an appendectomy two months ago and was assured at the time that my fallopian tubes were not involved in the egg is not being discharged? And what happens to the egg?

Is it possible to dislodge or hurt anything by exercise or lifting this long after such an operation? What are the chances of conceiving in the future? I am 32 years old. — Mrs. A.P.

You were sterilized, and that means you cannot have any more children. This is not a temporary condition. It is permanent, as I have pointed out before.

There are various methods of surgical sterilization (removal of the ovaries or the uterus, tying or cutting the Fallopian tubes which lead from the ovaries to the uterus). In your case it is clear that the tubes were cut or tied.

The ovum, or egg, no longer can reach the uterus, and it cannot be fertilized.

However, your endocrine system (the various glands producing hormones) remains the same. Those hormones, a couple of weeks after an ovum has been released, cause the menstrual flow to occur.

Prime purpose of this is to remove the inner lining of the uterus and provide a fresh one for the next cycle — in case an ovum is fertilized. Nature, you see, doesn't pause to consider the fact that no more ova will be able to reach a place where they can be fertilized.

If the ovaries had been removed, it would be quite different. Without the ovaries processed by the ovaries, there is no menstrual flow. (That is what happens in menopause, or the change of life; the ovaries cease functioning, and menstruation ceases, too.)

But when the tubes are cut or tied, ovarian activity continues just as before, and as they are continuing in your case, and will.

Where does the egg or ovum go? It will disintegrate and be absorbed by the body's tissues. And don't worry about it. The "egg" is so small that you would need a microscope to see it. The size is something like six one-thousandths of an inch in diameter!

You should be able to do moderate exercise and lifting, since the wound has healed by now. However, this is the sort of question which should be asked of your own surgeon, who knows whether there was anything unusual about the operation and whether any special precautions are needed.

Dear Dr. Molner: Why would a child of 9 months, of medium size, walk before and after his teeth.

He's a good eater but I never know what to give him. When he grinds his teeth he sometimes lets out a yell. My other four children did this but I don't recall them ever crying out when grinding their teeth.

—Mrs. L. S.

As you know, it's not unusual for children to go through three antics at that age, often because new teeth may be coming through and are something eases the irritation.

Why does he cry out sometimes? Perhaps because he happens to hit a tender spot on the gums. Maybe sometimes his tongue is in the way. He'll get over it. The others did.

Dear Dr. Molner: The jaw bone on both sides of my face pains me. What should I do or take — W. R.

It isn't that simple. This could mean trouble in the jaw joints, in the teeth, or in the jawbone proper. Occasionally trouble in the jawbone reflects a problem elsewhere. It is doubtful that an intelligent diagnosis can be made without an X-ray and direct examination.

Strictly Personal
People Think In Air-Tight Compartments

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

People tend to think in air-tight compartments: what they believe in one area does not vary over to another area. They do not follow up the implications of their beliefs.

One of the great concerns of many persons today is the so-called "population explosion." It is a genuine and threatening problem: in a mere matter of 40 years, if the present current growth rate persists, there will be only one quare yard of earth per person.

In another sector, we have the "attack upon poverty." There is a growing realization that the world level of poverty must be raised, if we are to enjoy any stability and progress in human affairs.

Yet the two are rarely linked in people's minds as known correlation. It is a statistical fact that the families who can support them least have the most children; the most backward nations have the highest birth-rate. Only illiterate and primitive people adopt an attitude of responsibility toward offspring.

Any birth-control method or education is ineffectual if the people who need it most can't afford it. And they use it least because they have little hope or ambition of bettering their lot.

The war on poverty is not merely a political or economic one; it can be waged on cultural or nationalistic basis; it is a demographic problem, of overwhelming concern to all mankind. We are beginning to learn that vast inequalities between the haves and have-nots are no more than morally unjust to the have-nots — they are also a threat to the security of the haves.

The answer to the population explosion does not rest on education or newer, cheaper and more reliable contraceptive devices. People must first be given a sense of responsibility toward themselves, their life in the world — and this can be given only through a general rise in the standard of living where it is most desperately needed.

If only half of the $120 billion being spent now for weaponry by the "civilized" nations of the world were diverted to the attack on poverty, enormous gains could be registered in a comparatively small time. And if the hostile powers are not sensible enough to act upon this both communism and capitalism will be buried under the sheer weight of human bodies.

Population, poverty, and the atomic race are inextricably linked together, but our concern with any one of these must extend to a rational consideration of the other two. We cannot have — and fast — to let the air leak out of our compartmentalized thinking.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Western oils eased slightly but the remainder of the stock market moved ahead with the industrial and Dominion indexes at record highs in heavy morning trading today.

Calgary and Edmonton Corp. fell ⅛ and Scurry Rainbow ¼ while Hudson Bay Oil and Gas added ¼ to senior oils.

Integrated oils comprised the strongest sector of the industrial board. Imperial rising ⅛ and BA Oil ¼. Shell Canada eased ⅛.

Banks softened, Montreal down ⅛ and Royal and Imperial Bank of Commerce ¼ each.

B.C. Forest dipped ½ and MacMillan-Bloedel advanced ¼ among papers. Distillers Interprovincial fell ¼ and Trans-Canada ¼ among pipelines.

Alberta Distillers common was unchanged to $3.80 and the voting stock gained five cents to $3.80. National Distillers of New York Monday announced it had approached Alberta Distillers with a takeover offer of $4 a share.

Hudson Bay Mining was up ¾ and Lake Dufault ⅛ in senior metals.

ZULAPA DROPS

Zulapa was the heavy trader among speculatives, down 4½ cents to 35 cents on 107,900 shares. Winchester - Larder gained two cents to 14½ cents.

On index, the Exchange index rose .94 to a record 135.75, industrials .53 to a record 144.74, golds .06 to 132.90, base metals .18 to 67.25 and western oils dipped .09 to 82.54. Volume at 11 a.m. was 2,201,000 shares compared with 1,430,000 at the same time Monday.

The bank holiday Monday dampened trading slightly. Volume was 4,480,000 shares compared with 7,304,000 last Thursday.

However, after a slow start both the industrial and exchange indexes managed to pick up steam and finish the day at record highs.

A standout on the industrial board was Alberta Distillers. National Distillers of New York has made a takeover offer to the directors of Alberta Distillers of $4 a share for the outstanding common and voting

Riot Stopped In Early Stage At Que. Prison

QUEBEC (CP) — A riot at Quebec City Prison, which police said involved Victor (Pretty Boy) Levesque of Montreal, was stopped in its early stages Sunday by 30 officers of the Quebec Provincial and municipal police Monday.

First reports said the disturbances erupted in the prison courtyard between two groups of prisoners and apparently was intended as part of an escape attempt. No one was hurt.

Levesque, suspected leader of a hooded gang that police said robbed and raped in Quebec and Ontario last year, was arrested in a jailbreak attempt at the court house jail in Montreal Feb. 6. He was later recaptured.

He was sentenced March 18 to six months imprisonment for possession of firearms, and also was ordered to pay a $500 fine or spend an additional six months behind bars.

ation in moving that the House should sit on Good Friday and then had to ask best one of those retreats to which the government has become so accustomed," he said.

Justice Minister Favreau, the government House leader, jumped to his feet. "The only reason we were called back on Good Friday was because one of the honorable members on the other side refused consent."

(Terry Nugent (PC—Edmonton-Strathcona) denied the necessary unanimous consent to suspend the Good Friday sitting.)

"I was hoping for that provision," said Mr. Diefenbaker retorted. ". . . The responsibility rests with the government."

DEFENDS FAVREAU

After the supper break, Stanley Knowles (NDP)—Winnipeg North Centre) rose to Mr. Favreau's defence. The justice minister, he said, did his best to avoid the Friday sitting.

"It is to let the minister of justice be blamed falsely as was done by the leader of the Opposition."

He said party representatives met privately last week and got Mr. Favreau of the House from Thursday to Easter Monday. In turn, they had agreed to get the necessary unanimous consent to waive the Friday sitting.

Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) said he objected to Mr. Knowles' public disclosure of what went on at a confidential meeting.

No agreement had been made, he said, though there had been a general expression of opinion it would be unlikely anyone would refuse the required consent. However, he had told Mr. Favreau that the proposed motion was like holding a gun at the Opposition's head; he doubted it much progress would be made in the House was compelled to return Monday.

Mr. Churchill charged Mr. Knowles with being an apologist for the Liberals.

SHOULD JOIN LIBERALS

"The honorable member for Winnipeg North Centre should immediately join the Liberal party instead of playing around at the game as he is doing. . . . I do not know what he is aiming at. . . . He may be he wants to become permanent speaker, I do not know."

NDP Leader Douglas shouted from his seat: "That is about as cheap as you are."

Mr. Churchill replied: "Now we are hearing from the toy soldier. . . . He bounces up and down like a little jack-in-the-box and has nothing to contribute to the debate."

The Conservative then turned his fire on Transport Minister Pickersgill. He accused him of sitting through Thursday's debate and allowing Mr. Favreau to be destroyed and sacrificed while Mr. Favreau fumbled and bumbled his way through.

Then, he singled out Prime Minister Pearson for criticism, saying Mr. Pearson had agreed to an Easter recess from last Thursday to April 5 provided an interim supply bill was approved.

What reliance could be placed on the prime minister's word? he asked.

External Affairs Minister Martin said Mr. Pearson was one member of the House whose word could be accepted.

Frank Howard (NDP — Skeena) delivered a scathing criticism of Mr. Churchill.

The Conservative's remark, he said, "confirms the reason why he was fired from the position of minister of trade and commerce" in the former government.

HITS CHURCHILL

When Mr. Churchill was House leader, "we came to appreciate then that you cannot place much faith in his integrity when it comes to making commitments," Mr. Howard added.

"It is a shame to see a former member of the cabinet come into the House and so try to twist and distort the truth and the facts as to leave a false impression of what went on with the House," Mr. Howard said.

Social Credit Leader Thompson in a sobering note warned that the commons was in danger of making a public spectacle of itself.

"I think that what happened on Friday is a precedent which we ought to be ashamed of," he said.

"If there is anything in the events of the last few days which should bring us to the conclusion that we had better pull up our socks and act a little more like responsible men, it is this very fact. . . .

"This thing is a thing which destroys the confidence of the public in Parliament. . . . my only hope is that we will face up to the realities and responsibilities which are before us, and come to grips with them, instead of beating about the bush and indulging in a lot of horse play."

Kiwanians View Scenes From Hockey School

PICTON (Staff)—Harry Watson, former National Hockey League star and presently connected with the Tom O'Shaster Hockey School, gave an interesting talk and showed a feature length film of the school to the Kiwanis Club and members of the Minor Hockey League at the regular Kiwanis Club meeting here last night.

Mr. Watson speaks with authority on the subject of hockey as he spent a total of 13 years in the N.H.L., starting with the old New York Americans and ending up through the Detroit Red Wings to the Toronto Maple Leafs team. He was a member of the Toronto team when they won the Stanley Cup four times.

In his later years he coached the Windsor Bulldogs to the only Allan Cup they have ever won.

The film depicted life at the camp, which provides three and a half hours per day on the ice, under the close scrutiny of N.H.L. players.

The boys, aged from seven to twenty, do not have much free time. Each hour of their day starting at 7 a.m., is looked after. They are playing hockey, or at least learning the fundamentals of the game, they spend a lot of time swimming in the huge pool. They also use the facilities of the ten automatic bowling lanes, and the putting greens on the golf course.

Their conduct comes under the scrutiny of members of army from Kingston, and provides something for each and every boy to do during his entire day. At night they are shown hockey films, including instructional films on hockey.

Lieut-Governor Earl Rowe Will Present 'Hasty Pees' With New Regimental Color

The Hon. W. Earl Rowe, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, will present the regimental colors to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, it was officially announced today.

The presentation will take place at the RCAF "Griffon" on Monday, May 21st, before a proud regiment on parade and visiting military, municipal and political dignitaries.

The announcement was made by Major D. D. Wilcocks, second-in-command of the regiment and chairman of the public relations committee of the Presentation Advisory Committee.

Elaborate preparations are already under way for the colorful ceremony.

Advising the regiment on procedures and protocol to be followed for the presentation is an advisory committee headed by Lieut. General Howard D. Graham, CBE, former commanding officer and now president of the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Lieut. - General's Graham's committee fairly bristles with famous names, all associated with the regiment.

Among these are Brigadiers Cassidy, W. Ross Gunn, Lieut-Colonels J. B. Black, present commanding officer; Gerald Aldous, Lorne Proctor, H. Fairman, Milton Davison, Angus B. Duffy and A. A. Keenleyside.

Others include Majors A.W. L. Sanders, J. Craig, C. Broad, S. Ketchen, W. Cassidy, R. Long, G. Dafoe, T. Naylor and E. D. Wilcocks.

Also associated with the committee are His Worship Jack Ellis, ex-mayor A. McCaw Haig and Senator G. S. White.

FREEDOM OF CITY

Following the presentation, Major Wilcocks said, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will receive the freedom of the city.

This entitles the unit to wear side-arms in the city and to march through city streets with band and drums.

It was originally planned to have His Majesty, King George, George F. Vanier, Governor-General of Canada, present the color. His former illness has prevented this.

The Governor - General, following protocol, named the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario to act on his behalf.

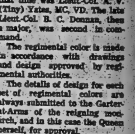
The new color replaces that which was removed from the regiment's possession some years ago—the whereabouts of which still remains a mystery.

The 178th regimental will be the second of its kind to take place in the district.

The first took place in Picton in October, 1934, when Lieut-General Sir Archibald McDonald, KCB, CMG, presented the First Battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment with the colors before a large crowd at the Fair Grounds.

The commanding officer at that time was Lieut-Col. A. V. (Tiny) Yates, MC, VD. The late Lieut-Col. B. C. Deenan, then a major, was second in command.

The regimental color is made in accordance with drawings and design approved by regimental authorities.



The details of design for each set of regimental colors are always submitted to the Garter-at-Arms of the reigning monarch, and in this case the Queen herself, for approval.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment came under the command of Lieut.-Col. Joseph Black has been training for the ceremonial. The regimental band will furnish the music.

Further details of the presentation will be published later.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIN

ON ANSWERING INVITATION

What do you do when you receive an invitation in the mail?

Judging from the letters we get, many otherwise exceedingly polite and correct people simply tuck them into drawers or let them get lost amid a clutter of bills 'till the end of the month.

The point is, they just don't get around to answering invitations, and reply only when the frantic hostess nudges them with a phone call or sends a reminder at the last minute.

It's amazing how many people are so careless about this important function in their social life.

"Don't they understand," asked one reader, "that a hostess has to know how many are coming, so she can figure out how much food and drink to order?"

Obviously, many people only think about this when they decide to give a party themselves and then, when the replies don't come in right away, they immediately have the same complaint to make. And so it becomes a round robin.

Entertaining can be so much more relaxed when those who are invited observe good manners and respond to invitations as soon as they are received.

If an invitation is marked R.S.V.P., it should be answered within a day or two of receipt. If a reply is not asked, it means that the hostess expects an invited guest to show up if he can make it. However, it's still good policy to reply anyway, especially if the recipient knows he definitely will be unable to attend.

USE SAME FORM

When responding to an invitation, the usual form is to answer the invitation in the same form in which it was sent. A formal invitation is answered on white paper in the third person. If the invitation is in the form of a personal note, then a personal note should be sent in return. An invitation to a cocktail party for instance, sent on a printed card, may be answered by note, but, in most cases, a phone call will suffice.

When accepting an invitation, it's wise to repeat the time and date, whether you "already" by note, on your personal card, or over the telephone, so the hostess will know you have the facts straight. If you must decline, it's polite to give some excuse such as a previous engagement, or that you'll be out of town — and to do so regretfully.

At no time, though, should an invited guest be so rude as to accept an invitation tentatively, giving the impression he'll show up if nothing better comes up in the meantime. This is even more inconsiderate than letting the invitation get lost in the incoming mail and not answering at all.

Mother's Helper

AN OCCASIONAL break in your child's customary routine is certainly permissible. It's not wise to be a fanatic about strict conformity to bedtime, mealtime, etc. Youngsters adapt quite easily to variations, whether in an emergency or just for fun. They're probably more capable of adjusting than you are!

Two Dollar Dinner For Six

by Mary Moore

This is a stream - lined main course, in one big baking dish, that most of you can make with one hand tied.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Upside Down Ham Loaf (from leftover baked ham) with Pineapple Slices; Cauliflower; Tomato Salad with Herb Dressing; Apple Squares (see Monday); Cheddar Cheese (optional); Tea.

I'm glad my legs weren't tied though, because the day I wanted to buy the ingredients for the ham loaf was our biggest storm of the season and I could not get my car started. I ploughed through a snowfall of eleven inches for half a mile and return through same, carrying the bag of groceries.

STREAM-LINED CHICKEN DIVAN (Best)

To serve 6, buy 1 1/2 lbs. of chicken. This could be cut up legs or breasts or one frying or roasting chicken, cut up for you by the butcher. (Mine was a whole roaster and cost $1.45).

Also buy 2 packages fresh frozen chopped broccoli which in some supermarkets is 2 for 35c. (Note: You could use the bunch of fresh broccoli which would be about the same price, but you would have to chop it yourself which would add minutes to the total time.) You need one 10-oz. can condensed cheese soup (no 75c).

In a large shallow baking dish (mine is 13 x 9 x 2½") arrange the almost thawed chopped broccoli in one layer. Dilute the cheese soup with one can of water and bring nearly to boil, stirring. Pour one cup of the diluted soup evenly over the broccoli. Now arrange chicken pieces in one layer over broccoli (overlapping a little if necessary). Pour remaining soup over chicken pieces, being sure to cover all top surfaces. Sprinkle with about ½ teaspoon salt. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 45 to 60 minutes or until legs (dark meat — if used) are tender.

NOTE: There is one disadvantage to this dish: the broccoli becomes overcooked and the bright green color turns olive green. But this disadvantage is outweighed by the speed and convenience and economy and flavor of this dish for cooks in a hurry. I claim it is a good guest casserole for career girls to make and serve in one hour flat before guests arrive.

Hearty eaters would like a hot bread or crusty rolls with this, and we had a generous salad that included an avocado because I knew my guests were fond of it.

Ann Landers

Suicide Coward's Way Out, Not a Realistic Solution

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I've seriously considered taking my life. It may be the finest thing I can do for my children.

I'm a member of your "Smart Too Late Club." Three years ago I became involved in a love affair with a married man. He asked me to divorce my husband and marry him. To get the divorce I had to accept my husband's terms — no settlement, no support, no alimony.

After I went through the mud and muck of the divorce my lover jilted me — said he couldn't part with his children. Three months later he married another woman.

ANN LANDERS

I know I was a fool and he was a rat but that doesn't help. I now work to support my children. They are wonderful and have kept me going. But sometimes I think they'd be better off without me. Their father's second wife would take good care of them and they would have my insurance money.

Do you have any words of encouragement? — DESPERATE.

DEAR DESPERATE — You can give your children something no one else can give them — your love, devotion and guidance.

It takes guts to face life and keep plugging especially after you've botched it, but you owe it to your kids. This terrible thing you are contemplating is the coward's way out. You failed your children badly once — please don't fail them again.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — In your new book, "Teen-Agers and Sex" you begin the fifth chapter "How To Help Yourself Stay Out of Trouble" with a false premise.

You said, "the word 'teen' comes from an Old English word, 'teona' meaning grief, misery, pain." The word "teen" to which you refer is archaic. The word "teen" which we use in such forms as "teen-ager" today comes from the Old English word "tan."

I am passing this information along to you in the interest of accuracy. — J.J.L., PROFESSOR OF ENGLISH (B.N.Y.)

DEAR PROFESSOR — It is obvious that I had the luxury of a choice. The word I chose may be archaic but it was not incorrect.

Choices are always nice to have. And one of the better known choices was that of Calvin Coolidge in 1928 when he said, "I do not choose to run."

I chose to refer to the Greek derivitive "teona" rather than the Old English "tan" because in terms of the point I was trying to make I considered "teona" more appropriate. More teens identify with "grief, misery and pain" than with the number ten.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — If I am being petty please tell me and I'll try to change my thinking.

I was recently engaged. My ring is beautiful and I am pleased when people ask to see it. But — I get very upset when my girl friends ask if they can try on my ring to see how it looks on them.

This has happened to me five or six times. I always say "Go ahead" but it really does burn me up. I wouldn't ask a girl if I could try on her engagement ring. To me this is such a personal thing I can't understand what in the world is wrong with them.

Will you please give me your opinion? — BRIDE-TO-BE.

DEAR B-T-B — The girls are ask to try on your ring are momentarily putting themselves in your place. This is a high compliment. You should be flattered, not annoyed.

More and More Canadians Adopt Children of Another Race Says Social Worker

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—A quiet victory for racial tolerance is being won in adoption agencies across Canada, says an Ottawa social worker.

Betty Stubbins, supervisor of the adoption department of Ottawa Children's Aid, says more and more Canadians are adopting children of a race other than their own.

"Negro and Asian children, who were once considered extremely hard to place, are sought after by an increasing number of prospective adopting parents. This trend is the most exciting development in the adoption field today."

The rewards of bringing up a child of another race are many, says Mrs. Stubbins, but it takes a special kind of parent to meet the challenge.

"I'm sure that people with university backgrounds make the best parents for adopted children of other races. Well-educated men and women with liberal ideas are better equipped to cope with the various problems which may arise in bringing up such children."

PROBLEMS DOUBLED

One of the problems may be the attitude of family and friends toward the child. It is important that both the adopting parents and circle of relatives accept the child fully, Mrs. Stubbins says, otherwise he may develop deep-rooted insecurities.

Those contemplating adopting a child of another race should remember such a child has a double battle on his hands to conquer.

When he knows he is adopted he may worry that his parents do not love him as much as they would their own children. And for the child of another racial background there is the constant realization that he is "different" because of his skin color.

"Mature men and women make better parents for adopted families — racial children than younger people," says Mrs. Stubbins. "But it is important to protect the ages of the parents and the child; to ask the question: 'How old will the parents of this child be when he reaches adolescence?'"

BEGINS DATING

Adolescence is often the most difficult period for an adopted child of different race for it is then he or she begins dating and may become aware of real or imagined prejudice.

It is also then that parents need to summon up all their patience and understanding to help the young person through the various problems he may encounter, says Mrs. Stubbins, "so it is helpful if they are not too old themselves."

Parents with children of their own, or other adopted children, often make the best parents for children of another race, she says.

"We always welcome experienced parents with open arms because they know the ropes."

Mrs. Stubbins says the whole community in which the child grows up can benefit from one relationship. For example, other children who meet a five-year-old Chinese boy at play are less likely to develop generalized race prejudices in later life.

Good Friday Services Held In United Ch.

Miss Bonnie Rowe, of Westminster College, London, was guest soloist on Good Friday evening in Frankford United Church. The choir and senior choirs, under direction of Mrs. Earl Austin, organist and choir director, contributed two selections. The altar was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies and chrysanthemums.

Easter Sunday began with a sunrise service on the hill. About 30 people worshipped God in the early sunshine, linked by cross, unveiled by C.G.I.T. girls and decorated with palms and flowers. Worship services in the church were well attended and featured vocal solos by Mrs. Connie Wallis and Miss Barbara Rowe, special anthems by the choirs and an Easter message based on the television play "The Open Grave" with the text "If Christ be not risen, then is all our preaching in vain!"

Flowers on the altar were in memory of the late Fred Munn.

A special Easter message was given by general superintendent Howard Richards during the Sunday School.

Various Churches Hold Special Easter Services

CAMPBELLFORD — The Easter cantata of Christ Church Anglican was conducted by the Rev. O. Barrow. Following communion service the Easter anthem Holy Communion was celebrated. The Epistle was read by Mr. R. Fraser, K.L., and the gospel by Dr. D. J. Hughes. Mr. Barrow chose the text for his address, "When Easter Says, 'I Told You So'."

In St. John's United Church the service began with organ prelude by Don Beronett, ATCM, organist, and son, Dwight Bennett, at the piano. The anthems were sung by the choir. For his sermon Dr. D. M. Smith chose the theme, "The Revolution That Changed the World."

In the morning service at Campbellford United Church, Miss Elsie White, a former resident of Campbellford, now of Sudbury, favored with two solos.

In the evening a special service, a pilgrimage from Jerusalem on Palm Sunday to the empty tomb on Easter Sunday was presented in song under the direction of Mrs. Barbara Richardson. Taking solo and duet parts were Mrs. Roy Ford, Miss Beryl Nicholas, Rev. W. Whitaker and Mrs. C. K. Dolby.

Two accordion duets were given by Miss Beryl Nicholas and Mrs. W. Whitaker. Rev. T. J. Riddall chose as his text "The Lord Is Risen."

In St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Rev. E. Toombs chose as his subject "Easter Day." The choir anthem, the Junior choir number, and a soprano solo by Miss Jill Macnillan comprised the special music for the service. Mr. Albert Hazell, the organist, and choirmaster, chose two compositions by Handel.

At the Pentecostal Church, the Rev. L. M. Hornby chose as his theme in the morning, "Resurrection Life." In the evening special music, a group number and a solo by Miss Ruth Ransom.

The Good Friday service in the Pentecostal Church, included Rev. E. Toombs as the speaker; special prayer by Lt. Wilson of the Salvation Army; Rev. C. K. Dolby, and Dr. D. M. Smith. The song service was conducted by Rev. L. M. Hornby. A duet was given by Mrs. Ruth Metzer and Miss Margaret Vanvolkenburg.

Severing Relationship to Test Boy's True Intentions

DEAR DORIS — There is this boy I went with for two years. We broke up over my childishness about two and a half years ago. Since then I've gone out with him occasionally and it really makes things a lot worse sometimes I think.

I'm quite sure I'm in love with him, yet he seems to be trying very hard to make me think I mean very little to him. I know he was in love with me at one time.

When I don't see him for quite some time I think I may be over him, then he asks me out and we go out just long enough to get me going again. Then he seems to disappear for another month or so. —OVER TWENTY-ONE.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR OVER TWENTY-ONE — Better get the message. A few casual dates are hardly an indication of a burning desire for you and you alone.

If the present casual relationship is only torture for you, break it off. Then if, by any chance, his coolness is still a reaction to your previous childish treatment of him, he'll have his chance to clear the air.

DEAR DORIS — My husband and I come from Europe. We attend our own church regularly.

Lately a very eager sect (which seems to us to be fanatical) has been sending callers to visit us. They want to convert us. We are not at all interested and would like to tell them in a kindly way.

How do we go about this in a friendly manner, but emphatically? — NEW CANADIAN.

DEAR NEW CANADIAN — "Freedom of Religion" means we respect each person's right to worship as he pleases. Since the visitors have imposed on your good manners, state your position. You are not called upon to enter into an argument, even if they challenge you.

• • •

Confidential to OVERWEIGHT — Write in again, this time including a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope and ten cents. Request material on how to diet and exercise to lose weight and I will be glad to send it to you.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — Who is responsible for the cost of a fiftieth wedding anniversary? We have one coming up in our family soon, and my sister-in-law says the children, of a couple stand the expense.

My husband and I are far from well off, and the couple in question could do it themselves as long as it's not too elaborate. — ONLY DAUGHTER.

DEAR ONLY — Children often carry the whole thing. But not necessarily. Could you manage the major share of arrangements if they helped with some of the food?

It's the spirit of the thing that counts. You want to honor them with a party. Discuss it with them, offering, for instance, to provide all the sandwiches. Also all the service. This is one occasion when you make sure the elderly couple is treated as king and queen for a day.

• • •

Confidential to UNDERWEIGHT — Send me ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will be glad to forward to you an article on how to gain weight. Ask for the article "Chart for Curves."

Ankle-Length Skirts Back For Teen-agers

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP)—Teen-age office girls—who spread the fad of all-fringe skirts, beatnik hair styles and dagger-sharp shoes—have suddenly brought back the ankle-length skirt.

It was the one new fashion development in London's Easter parade in the working-class suburbs.

"I just got fed up with those extra short skirts they've been wearing," explained Heather Brodie, 18. "I felt like wearing something completely different."

So, Heather dropped her hemline to her shapely ankles.

To the suggestion that the long skirts make walking extra difficult, 17-year-old Sandra Pearce said:

"We hobbled just as much in those tight short skirts."

Last Easter holiday the teenagers of London's seamy redlight district of Soho—many of whom they hiked their skirts far above their knees. Some, in fact, rose almost thigh-high.

IT CAUGHT ON

The fashion caught on in Liverpool, Sheffield, Nottingham, Manchester, Leeds and other places in Britain. It grew into a style craze.

Commenting on the long suffragette - style skirts which bloomed over the Easter weekend, fashion writer Shirley Lewis in The Daily Herald said:

"The most fascinating aspect to me is whether the ankle-length trend will catch on and mean long skirts for everyone. For the time has come for a change."

Doris Langley - Moore, who writes on the history of costume and dress, said:

"When you get rich women wearing long skirts for entertaining, and working girls wearing them out of doors, there's probably another new look on the way."

Miss Lewis said sociologists see the new hobble skirts as a return to the womanly and a sharp reaction to boots and slacks.

WINS PAROLE

BOSTON (AP) — Joseph A. Flaherty, 41, now serving sentences totalling 36 to 49 years for crimes ranging from rape and burglary to safe-cracking, was voted a parole Monday after completing five years of his sentence. The parole came as a climax to years of effort by a Canadian woman, Miss Frances McKearney, to free her friend Flaherty's release. She has indicated she would marry Flaherty.

THE MAGIC OF A HAT

Now that the Easter Parade is over for this year, let us consider the most talked about and the most controversial item of the annual fashion promenade — the Easter bonnet. Romantics and milliners, bless, occasionally one and the same, are strongly in favor of hats. The romantics argue that pretty hats make pretty women even prettier, while the milliners, baling good business people, argue that all women should wear hats to be in fashion.

As everyone, even remotely connected with the millinery trade knows, millinery sales in Canada have not been buoyant over the past few years. Towering hair styles, a trend to more casual living, a permissive attitude on the part of churches regarding the lack of decent coverings for women parishioners, have all had an adverse effect on millinery sales. The fact that it has not taken this trend passively. They have countered with a national advertising campaign to promote hats. They have persuaded fashion columnists and advertising agencies and window display people to show hats as part of the correct "fashion look".

PRETTY HATS

They have also started to design pretty hats again — this is the only way to attack the problem. Soup bowl effects are becoming more scarce. The milliners' strongest weapon is still flattering designs, so pretty that no normal woman can deny herself the pleasure of wearing them. The only thing the hatters cannot control is the fact that, sometimes, women will choose the wrong hat for the clothes they wear. But here we enter into that familiar quagmire — taste or judgment, good or bad.

The following description was sent by an interested reader who loves hats and hates:

"What is a hat? A hat is a flag, a shield, a bit of armor, the lack of fussiness. A hat is the difference between wearing clothes and wearing a costume. It is the difference between being dressed and being dressed up. It is the difference between looking adequate and looking your best. A hat is to be stylish in, to glow under, to flirt beneath, to make other women jealous and all men feel measureless about. A hat is a conversation piece, a morale booster, the most economical front of the annual fashion promenade — the Easter bonnet. Romantics and milliners, bless, occasionally one and the same, are strongly in favor of hats. ney arteries—had been completed earlier.

Two members of Robert's family and the girl friend had offered to be donors but couldn't meet the medical requirements, Mrs. Ackworth did.

The clock inched up to noon.

ROBERT READY

By 12:35 Robert had been wheeled into his room, eased off the cart onto the operating table.

In the other room Mrs. Ackworth was being prepared for anaesthetic.

Dr. Reese reported on Mrs. Ackworth: Dr. Carroll on Robert. The surgeons were kept aware of each other's progress as the minutes slipped by.

Just before 1:30, Dr. Reese was joined by Dr. Carroll and they prepared to reverse the kidney.

A basket containing a tray of ice was rolled into the operating room.

LOWERS RATE

The kidney, a doctor explained, is placed in ice to decrease its oxygen requirements and metabolic rate, the rate at which sugars are burned as energy, helping to keep the kidney alive for transplant.

At 1:42 the kidney was freed, put into the waiting ice and wheeled into the other room.

Thirty-four minutes after the kidney was removed from Mrs. Ackworth, the recipient's blood was flowing through it.

Shortly after 3 p.m.—just before they were to start sewing the kidney into its new position —there was an excited ripple in the room.

"Isn't that wonderful" said the doctor as he pointed to a stain under the ureter.

KIDNEY WORKS

The stain was urine. The kidney was functioning in the young man's body.

Around 5 p.m. the operation was over. Robert joined Mrs. Ackworth in the recovery room.

The operation, in a sense, was just the first step, explained Dr. Ragula, who assisted both doctors during the surgery.

The second is the fight against possible infection.

And the third—the most critical—is the battle to block the system's instinct to reject the kidney.

Robert gets special drugs designed to suppress rejection.

He wants these years Mrs. Ackworth hopes he'll have.

Conference

gram fiscal arrangements, now in force until 1966. They provide that this year Ottawa abates its personal income tax by 15 per cent. This rises by one point each year, to 20 per cent in 1966. The provinces also get an unchanging, 25-per-cent slice of corporation income tax.

At the November conference in Ottawa, the federal government brought in a revised equalization system giving the provinces a total $87,500,000, though Parliament has not yet passed it.

Federal officials indicated on the eve of today's meeting that further changes in the basic system this year are possible, but improbable.

Other issues the delegates must cope with include the contentious Canada Pension Plan now in the form of a bill introduced in the Commons, loans for university students, federal-provincial liaison, the 1967 world's fair, and the question of whether federal departments should pay provincial sales taxes.

WILL SEE TOUCHINESS

Quebec's touchiness on these issues especially federal loans, the pension plan, and the so-called shared - cost programs, was expected only to come to the fore quickly.

Premier Jean Lesage explained this attitude to the November conference in a lengthy brief that was partly overlooked at the time. He said in part:

". . . We must be systematically opposed to any federal move, whatever it may be, that reduces, in fact, or attacks the field of provincial jurisdiction. He absolutely cannot, even if it concerns a question which appears to be only a secondary one, remain passive in the face of federal initiative which we judge to be detrimental to the exercise of powers entrusted to the provinces. . . .

"In short, we are not defending the autonomy of the provinces simply because it is a question of principle, but rather because autonomy is to us the basic condition, not of our survival which is assured from now on, but of our assertion as a people. Our attitude is governed by the reality in which we live . . . not by theoretical con- structs."

PLAN DEMONSTRATION

In support of Quebec's stand, university students have planned to demonstrate here Wednesday. Mr. Lesage has told them in effect not to come —but he won't see them, and they may damage Quebec's cause.

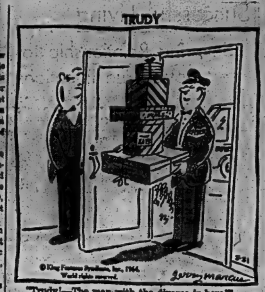
The students have indicated they will appear anyway, though some student organizers were reported shying away from a mass march for fear that it would attract extremists. Some reports envisage 5,000 demonstrators.

Few of the premiers had much to say on the eve of the conference.

Premier Roberts of Ontario said the possibility of amending the British North America Act likely will be discussed. He said that "running throughout all of the talks there will be the question of constitutionality."

Mr. Roberts would not comment on the proposed Canada Pension Plan before it was brought up at the conference.

Referring to shared costs, he said the conditional grant program "is really the major item on the agenda."



Premier Robin of Manitoba said it would be premature to comment on the pension plan. Manitoba had not asked that pensions be put on the agenda. With Quebec already out of the plan, the proposed pension scheme could not be described as a national one.

IS THIRD

The conference — only the third of its kind ever held in this ancient capital—opens in a mixed atmosphere of history and contemporary pressures of Quebec nationalism and seller-buyer tensions.

Premier Woodrow Lloyd, occupied by the campaign for the April 22 general election in Saskatchewan, is the only premier absent. The Saskatchewan government's representative is Health Minister A. E. Blakeney.

In Ottawa last November,

"Trudy"—The man with the divorce is here!"

heads of government discussed mainly the widespread provincial demands for a better financial deal in the fields of personal and corporation income tax and death duties shared by Ottawa and the provinces.

This conference marks the first time the heads of federal and provincial governments have met outside Ottawa since a 1950 conference here. That was the start of an unsuccessful effort to find a formula whereby the written-in-Britain Canadian constitution could be amended in Canada.

The only other major conference at Quebec City was the pre - Confederation conference 100 years ago next fall.

CERTAIN TO AGREE

Though not specifically on the agenda, the provincial demands for a larger share of direct taxing powers is certain to arise.

Last November Premier Lesage asked for 26 - per - cent shares of personal and corporation income taxes and 100 per cent of death duties.

The federal government budged only a fraction, agreeing only to increase the provinces' share of death duties to 75 per cent from 50. It also improved the system of equalization payments to less-wealthy provinces.

'Death on Wheels' Device Used in Cuba to Carry Firing Squad Justice

WASHINGTON (AP)—A new device known as "death on wheels" is reported being used in Cuba to carry firing squad justice to those who oppose the Fidel Castro regime.

The report was made Monday by an anti-Castro group of U.S. citizens known as the Citizens Committee for a Free Cuba. It made public a study entitled "Terror and Subservience" in communist Cuba, sketching examples of what it said were hundreds of cases where Cubans tried to show their revulsion at Communist oppression.

The report said "death on wheels" is a military vehicle which transports a traveling court, jury and executioners to the scene of uprisings.

It added that the "incessantly repressive measures employed by the Cuban regime is a measure of the degree and intensity of the opposition of Cubans with Castro and Communism."

Retired admiral Arleigh Burke, a former chief of U.S. naval operations, wrote the foreword to the study, since a 1959 conference here. That was the start of an unsuccessful effort to find a formula whereby the written-in-Britain Canadian constitution could be amended in Canada.

CPR Reports Extraordinarily Good Year

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. has had an extraordinarily good year in almost all aspects of the firm's operations, the annual report revealed today.

Gross railway revenues, investment income and net income all topped parallel gains for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1963. Steamship operations showed a net loss and hotels a drop in net profit.

Railway revenues amounted to $477,197,391 for the 52-year-old firm, an increase of more than $24,000,000 or five per cent over the 1962 figure. Railway expenses increased to $441,836,-079 compared with $434,191,511 the previous year.

Passenger revenue showed a decline, amounting to $25,000,-000, down $1,160,000 from the 1962 figure.

NET INCOME UP

Net income was $40,126,111, compared with $32,358,265.

N. R. Crump, president, said in the report that the number of passengers carried increased five per cent but added that the average journey was shorter.

Canadian Pacific steamship operations showed a net loss for the year of $2,900,000 compared with a net profit of $646,000 in 1962. Earnings dropped because of "higher operating expenses and strikes at St. Lawrence River ports in October," Mr. Crump said.

Canadian Pacific Air Lines Ltd. had net profit of $847,000 compared with a net loss of $1,200,000 in 1962.

Net income of the Soo Line Railroad Co. rose by $1,000,000 to $4,100,000, largely because of lower transportation costs and greater traffic volume.

They're Demanding a Hardtop On Last Highway to Romance!

By ALLEN SACKMANN

EDMONTON (CP)—If words were pavement, the Alaska Highway would be a 1,523-mile ribbon of hardtop all the way from Dawson Creek, B.C., to Fairbanks, Alaska.

But talk is cheap, and paving would cost in excess of $180,000,000. So after 20 years of discussion, only the 371-mile section of the highway in Alaska and 83 of the 1,252 miles in Canada have been hard-surfaced. The rest is gravel.

There are those opposed to paving the rest, notably Ma Murray, fiery former editor of the Alaska Highway News, a weekly published in Fort St. John, B.C.

"There are parts of that road where you couldn't hold down pavement if you chained it down," she says. "It would just keep breaking up."

But she's in the minority. And with the Canadian section of the road passing from military to civilian control April 1, those who want it paved feel they're a step closer to their goal.

Built with feverish haste as a Second World War supply route to the North, the Alaska Highway immediately caught the imagination of North Americans. Piercing the continent's last great frontier, it still conjures up a vision of romance and adventure more than 20 years later.

TOOK NINE MONTHS

But practical considerations—the fact that it is the only land link between the new giant among states and the rest of the U.S., and the potential wealth that tourists will bring—are the main arguments of the pro-pavement people.

Six thousand American soldiers worked over mountains, rivers and treacherous muskeg to complete the road in nine months in 1942. The road, regarded as essential to the defence of Alaska in the war with Japan, cost $139,000,000.

In 1946 the U.S. turned the Canadian section over to Canada and the army—with 300 soldiers and 600 civilians—has been maintaining it for $1,000,000 a month. But the switch to the federal public works department is no assurance that paving is to be carried out. Government officials in Ottawa say [illegible] Green, Brig. [illegible] Schmidt for United States are understandably the most anxious to get started.

Highways Minister Phil Gerlard of B.C. suggests Ottawa, Washington and Victoria split paving costs three ways with the two federal governments sharing reconstruction costs.

Alberta's highways minister, Gordon Taylor, says the highway would pay for itself in 20 years through increased revenue.

PUSHED BY SENATOR

Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana has a bill before the public works committee in Washington calling for Canada to pay reconstruction costs with paving expenses shared equally by the two federal governments.

J. O. Fisette, member of the legislature for Spirit River in northern Alberta, says the Canadian government should begin negotiations with the U.S. before the Americans lose interest.

A case for paving is made by the Battelle Institute of Columbus, Ohio, which made a research report in 1961 saying 270,000 Americans would be travelling on the highway by 1980 if it were paved. Most would be heading for Alaska and back. An additional 250,000 Canadians, mostly travelling between points in Canada, would be using it at the same time, the institute says.

It estimates the visitors would leave behind $50,200,000 in American currency and $70,000,000 Canadian.

Statistics for 1959, the most recent available, show 40,000 tourists travelled the highway in three summer months. About two-thirds were Californians, then came Texans, with Canadians running third.

The Yukon Travel Bureau at Whitehorse says about 45,000 tourists passed through Canadian customs . . . route to Alaska last year and about 75,000 are expected this year.

Aside from the benefits of increasing tourist trade, Battelle estimates Canada's gross national product would increase by $662,000,000 from development sparked and fed by the highway. Alberta and B.C. would share $240,800,000 of this amount, the rest going to the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

The institute figures the federal purse would be fattened by $132,400,000 in tax revenue, almost as much as paving would cost. An organization called the International Conference on surfacing would cost $150,000,000 but some estimates run as high as $200,000,000.

Main contributors to the increase in GNP would be the oil and pulp industries, Battelle says. Natural gas and oil already make a sizable contribution to the economy along the B.C. section of the highway.

In 1957, Brig. H. L. Mosier, commander of the Northwest highways system, said:

"The military function of the highway still exists, but it now is secondary to the opening up of the north's vast uninhabited and undeveloped sections."

This, say the pro-paving men, would be done more quickly if the highway were paved. And roads in the next five years would be 280,000,000 years old.

WITH THE HOPE

of speeding action on the project, the International Conference on Paving is planning another meeting for May.

ROAD CONSTRUCTION

Australia is expected to spend more than $2,464,000,000 on its roads in the next five years.

FIND FOOTPRINTS

BRISBANE (AP) — Australian museum authorities have found footprints of what they believe to be the world's oldest dinosaurs 700 feet below ground in a coal mine. The prints were said to be 280,000,000 years old.

Wings' Goalie Problem Tape-Wrapped

By DAVE BETTS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Terry Sawchuk pitched a nerve in Chicago, but pain is twitching through a large hunk of North America.

As the Detroit Red Wings goalie lay in traction in a Detroit hospital Monday night, officials of Hockey's two top leagues pondered the legal repercussions of his medical mishap.

When his shoulder went haywire in a Stanley Cup semi-final game Sunday against the Black Hawks, it unravelled a roll of red tape that stretched from the National Hockey League headoffice to the American League championship.

—In Toronto Ohio, where his Wings rested for their third series game tonight, manager-coach Syd Howe announced his intention of calling up AHL netminder Roger Crozier.

—In Toronto, NHL president Clarence Campbell said this could not be done, that Abel would have to stick with rookie Bob Champoux, 20, and that Pittsburgh Hornets' AHL championship chances could be forfeited if the club broke the rules and gave Crozier to Detroit.

—In Quebec City, Bus Mason, general manager of the Hornets, said all he knew was that there were two scheduled flights that could take Crozier away from the AHL playoff with Quebec Aces and get him to Detroit in time for tonight's game.

TRAVELLING TO QUEBEC

—In Hershey, Pa., it was learned that AHL president Chick Balmer, the man who could clear up the whole mess, was en route at his way to Quebec and unavailable for comment.

—In Detroit, it was announced that Sawchuk would leave hospital today and probably would be ready for action tonight.

Champoux, the Central Professional Hockey League netminder who helped the Wings even the series by beating Chicago 5-4, was standing by at his hotel.

In a telephone interview from his Toledo retreat, Abel said although he was "almost certain" Sawchuk would play tonight, he would get to the rink for Crozier with would be a uniformed backup, later ready to answer the call in case of further Sawchuk misteries.

But in Toronto, Campbell amplified his stand that no emergency existed in the Detroit netminding situation and that the AHL could conceivably take away all league points earned by Pittsburgh for using games in which Crozier was the goalie.

Campbell emphasized that any decision was entirely up to the AHL, and he was merely reminding the Wings of their "joint affiliation agreement."

'NO EMERGENCY' EXISTS

"An emergency only exists," he said, "if a team's strength drops below one goaltender, five defencemen or 11 forwards. With Champoux capable of playing, as far as I am concerned there is no emergency.

"The situation is elementary. The NHL will not challenge any player on the eligibility list, but the club must keep in mind penalties which can be imposed if a player is called up when conditions do not justify it.

"There are stringent regulations that during the final 28 days of the season and during the playoffs no player can be elevated except under emergency conditions."

Although no penalties would be imposed by the NHL, there could be "very severe sanctions" against minor league clubs.

In this case, Balmer could take away Pittsburgh's Western Division championship, but Campbell said he did not want to second-guess the AHL official. The NHL high priest said the problem would be solved if Balmer decided to waive the rules, provided the Hornets agreed to it.

ASSENT TO HORNETS

Crozier, the 150-pound middle man who has been in attendance filling in for Sawchuk, would be replaced on the Pittsburgh roster by Hank Bassen, a 30-year professional hockey nomad who has seen service in various leagues with Buffalo, Chicago, Calgary, Seattle, Springfield, Vancouver, Edmonton, Pittsburgh, Sudbury and Detroit.

While attention was focused on the Crozier question in series "B", Montreal Canadiens arrived in Toronto Monday night and hibernated in their hotel to rest up for the third game of their series against the Maple Leafs.

Coach Toe Blake would reveal no strategy changes, but had a jocular solution to the problem of tieing down Toronto's flying Frank Mahovlich . . . "we'll use five men on him."

Mahovlich played his best game in years Saturday night in Montreal scoring one goal and setting up linemate Red Kelly for the other in a 3-1 victory that tied the series.

The Canadiens arrived without left winger Gilles Tremblay who broke a bone in his leg just above the ankle. Except for a few bruises, the Leafs were in top condition.

After games tonight and Thursday in Toronto and Detroit, the action returns to Montreal Saturday and Chicago Sunday. If sixth and seventh games are necessary in either series they will alternate between the cities.

Defeats Hebert By Stroke

Besselink Wins Azalea

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)—Al Besselink survived a three-over-par seven on the 17th hole Monday to finish with 75 for a 282 total to win the $20,000 Azalea Open golf tournament by one stroke.

The husky, 39-year-old golfer from Merchantville, N.J., back on the circuit after a three-year layoff, battled high winds and 40-degree weather to win his first tour event in almost seven years with rounds of 70-65-72-75. His was six-under-par for 72 holes.

The victory was worth $2,700 to go along with $1,400 on bonus awards.

Lionel Hebert was second with 73 for 283 to $1,800, Tommy Jacobs, playing in the last threesome with Besselink and Hebert, shot 76 for third place, at 285, to win $1,200.

The lone Canadian to survive the 36-hole cut, Wilf Homemuik of Winnipeg, fired rounds of 74-70-75-80—299 to finish 14th out of the money.

Besselink's victory made it 15 tournaments in a row, dating back to last fall, in which there has been different winner every week.

Twenty-eight players in the field of 87 failed to break 80 Monday as high wind blew all day, signalling the starter's tent from its moorings.

Minor Hockey Tournaments

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Close games, with a few exceptions, featured three minor hockey tournaments in Ontario Monday.

A total of 87 teams are to take part in a Young Canada Hockey Week peewee tournament at 30 centres that end Saturday. Fifty teams have entered in the Easter Week Brampton novice hockey tournament while 41 are entered in an international bantam tournament at Georgetown.

Most of the close affairs were played in Goderich with Paisley taking the spotlight. The Paisley team, with only nine players in uniform, edged Leigh Lorgan 6-5 in their first game and Lucknow shaded Plattsville 3-2.

Other close Goderich games saw Hespeler defeat Goderich 3-1, Aylmer down Walkerton 2-1, Clinton tie Byron 2-2, Atwood dump Alderton 6-4 and Lucan turn back Zurich 4-2. Out of place in the day's action was Belmont's 14-0 thumping of Monkton and 9-2 win over Atwood.

At Brampton there were also a number of close games, including Acton's 5-4 edge over Lindsay drew 4-4, Barrie tied 2-2 with Richmond Hill and Markham and Ingersoll dueled to a scoreless deadlock. Winners by one goal were Elmvale over Cannington 1-0 and Delhi over Goderich twice, 2-1 and 5-4.

At Georgetown, Delhi 7 Aylmer 2; Exeter 6 Walkerton 2; Toronto 9 Guelph 1; Galt 7 Richmond Hill 4.

At Brampton: Galt 3 Lindsay 1; Barrie 3 Richmond Hill 0; St. Mary's 5 Ingersoll 2; Hespeler 7 Tillsonburg 0; Brampton 12 Preston 0.

At Goderich: Hespeler 5 Clinton 1; Ingersoll 6 Aylmer 1.

Vancouver Wins Hoop Opener

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver YMCA Lions opened defence of the Canadian men's junior basketball title Monday night with a 50-46 victory over Hamilton Quigleys.

The second game in the best-of-five Canadian final will be played here tonight.

The Saints, led by centre Neil Willicomb, broke the game open in the third quarter by outscoring the Lions 20-10 after the first quarter and 25-24 at the half.

Not Fronting For Hoods

'Associate' Denies Fight Fixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward Lasman, president of the World Boxing Association, appears before the U.S. Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee today as the investigation of the Clay-Liston championship fight draws to a close.

Lasman's appearance is an opportunity to solve a puzzler; what were his reasons for suspending the association after Cassius Clay of the heavyweight title and-bar Sonny Liston from another crack at it? And why did he withdraw the suggestion?

The stated reason for the inquiry is to determine if the Clay-Liston fight points to a need to place professional boxing under tight federal policing.

Chairman Philip A. Hart, (D-Mich.,) says the subcommittee has already heard enough of mysterious money deals and of possible underworld involvement in the staging of the bout so that "we've got the momentum" to pass legislation.

Sam Margolis, acknowledging a highly profitable friendship with Liston and an association with underworld figures Frank Carbo and Frank (Blinky) Palermo, swore Monday the fight "absolutely" was not fixed.

He denied heatedly that he was "fronting" for Carbo and Palermo when he secretly obtained without paying a cent, one-half of Liston's stock in Intercontinental Promotions Inc., which had also secretly paid Clay $50,000 for the right to promote his next bout.

Robert Nilon, executive vice-president of Intercontinental, whose brother Jack Nilon was Liston's unlisted manager, swore that even he didn't know that Liston had agreed to surrender half his purse for the bout to Jack Nilon, until this was disclosed in the hearings.

He insisted, he saw nothing "incongruous" in the fact that no medical consultation was involved when Liston refused to answer the bell for the seventh round of the Feb. 25 fight, thereby making Cassius Clay Heavyweight Champion of the World by losing the title to Clay.

TOO MANY AIDES

Hart and S. Jerry Cohen, subcommittee counsel, suggested Liston seemed to have a lot of "aides" not publicly listed who were putting the bite heavily on his earnings. They noted that Liston had testified in 1960 that he could not read or write.

The Nilons have testified that the secret promotional deals were violations of World Boxing Association rules. But they said the agreements of states and cities for the prestige and profits involved in playing host to a championship fight make it unlikely that the association could do much about imposing essential sanctions against violators.

Hart told a reporter "time is running out" for boxing to clean its own house or accept federal policing by an additional boxing commissioner as proposed in the pending legislation.

Hart said he did not plan to call either Liston or Clay as witnesses because he considers "the record is ample" as guide Congress.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The warring chargers of the National League playoff bouncings, their lances at the present, change battle venues tonight.

The knights of Sir Imlach's Toronto Round Table with Sir Frank Mahovlich, his armor stained with the hot ink of his writing fistiferal riding in the van, will be greeted with tumultuous acclaim when they gallop into their home tilting grounds at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Into this hostile territory rides Sir Toe Blake, commander of the eastern invaders from Montreal, leading a grimly determined troop of tri-colour-garbed knights bent on restoring themselves to the position of the favored.

From Chicago the star-studded entourage of Sir William Reay, wearing the insignia of a savage war chief, rides into Detroit where the Abel-bedecked shock troops, bearing the heraldic design of the Red Wings avoid their onslaught.

Hopes are riding high in the camps of the returning warriors. For didn't the Imlachian troops waking the crest of the first top-ranking were able in two games of their battles-belief to Frank, snatch their second heat from the eastern foemen Saturday night to create a new series.

And by the same token didn't a frustrated Black Hawk band, their arrows flying wide all night, leave to a weight for Norman Ullman, aided by a slightly soured but efficient keeper of the portcullis, an untried squire named Champoux.

The Wings will go into tonight's fray with added confidence. They proved they can defeat the Hawks in their Chicago wigwam—which they did for the first time this season—and now they're back in the home hunting grounds for the next two outings of scalp-hunting.

Even the most rabid anti-Leafs buff must admit the Imlach crew possesses a wonderful game Saturday night. The obstinent "Punch" had his knights high for this one and this TV observer believes if it hadn't been for the mighty mite, Sir Hodge, the score would have been closer.

The Red Wings, getting a bad break when the Ullman goalie was injured in the nick few minutes of the game, tightened their armor buckles and threw back the onslaughts of the later desperate Hawks.

They gave this protection in a great matched-to-matched warfare goalie rookie had in the waning of the second till, did this the Leafs, change the original picture as told down by those back-room variets, the keepers of the odds.

But while anything can happen—and the situation favors the Leafs to take at least one of the two home tilts, the situation may be reversed in Detroit.

It seemed to me the Hawks were woefully off-target Saturday night, particularly after the rookie Champoux took over the net job. Bull and Mikita blasts were away off the mark. One or two might have gone in and changed the ultimate result. But that's not the way it happened.

The split in Montreal leaves Leafs supporters with high hopes. The belated but sensational return to form of Mahovlich has livened Toronto rep interest. But Toe Blake isn't licked yet. He've've beaten them in Toronto before—and we can do it again," he says.

With Sawchuk back in the nets—if and when—the Red Wings can make it mighty tough for the Hawks, but in the long run I believe the Chicago crew will take the series.

In any event it looks like dog-eat-dog battles from here in. The sets are all even. Toronto and Detroit are in their own backyards. Hawks and Canadiens are in a fighting mood.

If I were a betting man I would not venture to lay a wager apart from a sentimental viewpoint. I'm satisfied with the office two-bit pools and the hope I extract the correct number.

Kidd Sets New U.K. Two-Mile Mark

—Had Britons On Feet

By DOUG MARSHALL

LONDON (CP) — Canada's Bruce Kidd knocked nearly nine seconds off the United Kingdom all-comers' record for the two miles in 8:27.8 while in the English Amateur Athletic Association's indoor championships.

The 21-year-old University of Toronto student had the Wembley Stadium crowd of more than 4,000 on their feet and cheering as he nearly out-paced stiff competition from the United States and Ireland.

Earlier, the Wembley track fans were dissapointed when Canadian middle-distance star Bill Crothers decided not to defend the 1,000-yard title he won here last year.

Crothers, 22-year-ol phar-macist from Markham, Ont., won the 600-yard event here and then set up an electrifying finishing sprint that pushed him through the tape in front of a second ahead of Wendell Mottley of Trinidad, the world record holder. Crothers was timed in 1:10.6, eight-tenths of a second off Mottley's world record, but Crothers was caught in 1:10.1 Saturday.

Kidd and Crothers made a flying trip to Paris during the weekend and both said they had never themselves out sightseeing. It was their first visit to the French capital.

"We followed a local itinerary given us by a friend in Toronto," Kidd told a reporter after his victory. "I don't think I've ever done so much walking in my life."

Kidd's winning time was eight minutes 30.0 seconds. Peter McArdle of the U.S. was second in 8:32.8 and Ireland's Tom O'Riordan third in 8:37.8—the old record for the event.

Kidd took the lead at the start of the 36-lap race and, setting a fast pace, held it until the 16th lap when McCardle sprinted ahead of him.

"That didn't worry me," Kidd said later with an electrifying grin. "I was watching out for and when he did I felt I knew it could win. I've often raced against McCardle and he hasn't beaten me yet."

On the 21st lap Kidd kicked his heels, streaked past the finish line and was caught by fresh air ever, went on to win by more than 10 yards.

Chisox Peters Throws One-Hitter

Lary's Comeback Raising Tigers' Hopes

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

In the camp of Detroit Tigers there is an exotic ornament that's the team's fortunes lie heavily on the comeback pitcher Frank Lary, the down-home Alabamian who finally blunted his sword against the perennial American League champions.

With every outing, Lary seems to be regaining the sharp, crisp form that made him a 23-game winner in 1961.

The veteran right-hander, who will be 33 before the season opens, pitched six strong innings Monday and lowered his earned-run average to an eye-opening 1.80 by allowing only two hits and one run as the Tigers whipped Cincinnati Reds 6-3 in an exhibition game.

Lary now has pitched nine innings in spring training than any other Tiger pitcher and the club's manager Chuck Dresser is:

"From what I can see so far there is nothing wrong with him."

STARTED IN 1953

Lary's problems began with the opening day assignment against the Yankees in 1963, when he had a sore right shoulder. He went out to the mound anyway and developed a muscle in his right shoulder.

He had a 3-6 record in 1963 and 4-9 with Detroit last season, while spending a large part of the season in the minors. Now he's back for a final fling.

The Tigers haven't had a 20-game winner since he lost his touch.

While Lary was turning in a strong performance, Gary Peters of Chicago White Sox came through with his best effort of the spring, pitching a one-hitter as the Los Angeles rookie of the year in 1963, pitched softball by his six-inning workout in the White Sox defeated St. Louis Cardinals 2-1.

Elsewhere, three games were decided in extra-innings. Ty Cline's 10th inning triple with two men on carried Milwaukee Braves to a 6-5 victory over Kansas City Athletics, Willie Davis doubled home the eleventh in the 12th as Los Angeles Dodgers edged New York Mets 7-6 and. Baltimore Orioles struck for three runs in the 10th and walloped Washington Senators 14-5.

Jim Hart hit a three-run homer in San Francisco Giants' 10-2 walloping of Cleveland Indians, rookie Tony Horton hit a ninth inning homer and Boston Red Sox edged Chicago Cubs 8-7, Jimmie Hall and Earl Battey hit two-run homers for Minnesota Twins' 7-3 triumph over Pittsburgh Pirates and the Yankees defeated Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 with Pedro Gonzalez collecting a homer.

Widow Wins $81,181.80

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—An attractive Washington, D.C., widow went to the races Monday and came out time in about 15 years and walked off with the $81,181.80 twin double, second largest payoff in U.S. racing history.

Before Monday, Mrs. Marion W. Jones "didn't even know what a twin double was." She invested $2 at Gulfstream Park and "bet hunches" in four races.

Her first and fifth tickets were still alive going forth the last half for the twin double, but when Miss Vasquez brought in Romequill, paying $13.20 for $2 in the eighth, only one ticket was good.

Mrs. Jones, vacationing with her 11-year-old daughter, said she bet Hy Jeep, $32.80, in the fifth because "I have a supervisor brother with the nickname Jeep." She picked Challenge Ship, $13.60, in the sixth because "I separated the real estate business in October and it was a real challenge."

She chose March Blow, $34.80, in the eighth because "my birthday was yesterday, March 30, and it's cold at home, and even on Romequill on the theory my daughter is studying Roman history in school."

She said she would give 20,000 of it to an unidentified male friend and the Tigers "out of the hotel swimming pool this morning to come to the races from Nassau." She said he had given her $20 "to bet as she liked—for the fun of it."

The largest payoff in history was $84,146.80 which went to two Miami Beach cooks here March 12. Only a year ago three Canadians, whose names were not released, won $777,040.40 at Saltstream and the twin double.

Patrick, Clancy Took Their Turns

Stop-Gap Goalies Nothing New In N.H.L.

By ED SIMON

TORONTO (CP) — If coach Syd Abel or one of his defencemen should wind up tending goal before Detroit Red Wings next two games, they can get through the Stanley Cup playoffs it wouldn't be anything new.

Not about everyone except fire-swapers has taken his turns at guarding the pads at some time or other during the 71 years since the cup was first put up for competition.

In the early years, they sometimes even had to do without the pads. Goalies' hands and tenders had to serve their own penalties, carrying over their duties to a teammate.

Lester Patrick, a rover with Brandon, Man., in the seven-man days of 1904, and King Clancy, an 18-year-old rookie defenceman for Ottawa Senators, were two of the more illustrious substitutes. Neither was scored upon and Clancy, now assistant general manager of Boston Bruins and New York Rangers, respectively, had a longer spell of net-minding in the 1928 finals.

Oliver halted 44, Patrick a measly seven of the Rangers when goaltender Lorne Chabot was ejected in the last game by a puck fired by Nels Stewart of Montreal Maroons.

Two goaltenders belonging to other clubs were sitting in the stands but the Maroons refused Patrick permission to use them. So Patrick took over at the four-minute mark of the second period, stopped 12 shots and followed only one goal by Stewart as the Rangers won 2-1 in overtime.

The Maroons relented and allowed the busy Pov to use Joe Miller of Ottawa for the rest of the series. He permitted seven goals in three games giving the Rangers won the cup by three games to two.

Another goal-tending rhubarb arose in 1925 when Mike Karakas of Chicago Black Hawks injured his knee during the start of the finals against Toronto. As was before the opening game, Lester Patrick, Blackhawks' ch Chicago drew Alfie Moore, subsidiaries for New York Americans, who promptly marched his Hawks to a 3-1 victory.

All that points to present-day president Frank Calder barred Moore and Chicago was stuck with Paul Goodman, an unknown minor-leaguer, for the second game. Toronto won 5 - 1. Karakas limped back into action for the third game but Goodman allowed one goal in each and the Hawks won the cup.

What was the last time the substitution of a goalender was a subject for committee-room discussion? The other stand-ins have had their hour of glory since.

In 1953 it was Gordon (Red) Henry, who came up from Hershey Bears of the American league to take over from his ailing namesake, Sugar Jim Henry, in the Boston net as the Bruins downed Detroit 5-3.

NO HAPPY ENDING

The win helped get Boston into the finals but the story had no unhappy ending. The younger Henry had to take over twice more during Montreal Canadiens had goalie trouble the same year as Gerry McNeil, suffering from nerves, gave way to Jacques Plante. The hero - faced rookie—he hadn't yet acquired his mask—helped the Habs win the last two games of their seven-game semi-final against Chicago. McNeil returned for the final series.

The following year it was McNeil, near the end of his career, who was pressed into service by Montreal Royals to ball out the shaky Habs with Canadiens trailing Detroit 3-1 in games in the final. He blanked the Wings 1-0, beat them 4-1 and finally lost the seventh game 3-1 in overtime on a fluke goal.

Plante, who needed help in 1955 and coach Dick Irwin plastered him with a youngster from the Royals who picked up only six goals in four games before departing to spend most of the next 10 years in the minors. His name was Charlie Hodge.

WINDSOR WINS

HALIFAX (CP) — Windsor Spitfires, N.S., Junior hockey won the Eastern Canada Allen Cup quarter finals with an 11-4 victory Wednesday night to complete their third straight game in the best-of-five series. Windsor now moves against the Ottawa Military representatives in the Eastern Canada semi-final.

City Teams In Many Minor Tourneys

Minor hockey tournaments are being held all across the province during this March holiday week and Belleville teams are right in there fighting for their share of the trophies.

Belleville's Bantam Odd Fellows' team begins another tourney in Georgetown this afternoon and may stay all week, if the team wins.

All series in the Georgetown tournament are two-game, total goals-to-count affairs and as long as a team wins one round, it stays for another.

Belleville men's Riverside is in the Trenton series. The first game of that set was scheduled for one o'clock this afternoon.

Odd Fellows lost out in Trenton's Bantam tournament this past weekend after winning in the first round; Belleville Midgets opened a three-day tournament also in Trenton, yesterday; Belleville MacCormack's Peewees captured the runners-up title Sunday in bowing to Ottawa in a-Kingston tournament on the weekend; and the B.M.H.E. has its own big eight-team peewee tournament scheduled here this Saturday.

Wanted! Those Minor Hockey Scores

Lack of co-operation from various team managers and coaches has resulted in very few scores of Belleville minor hockey tournaments currently being played in the district, being received by this newspaper.

Managers and coaches, etc. are requested to phone or turn in results as soon as possible.

It is important that these scores be relayed here since a number of phone calls from parents and other interested fans have been received inquiring about the various Belleville teams participating.

It is impossible to publish results without team co-operation.

Wellington Defeats Blyth 4-2

WELLINGTON — Wellington moved to within one victory of capturing the OMHA Juvenile "D" Ontario championship last night when they defeated Blythe 4-2 in Wingham.

Second game is in the two-of-three series will be played in Wellington on Saturday night. Game time is eight o'clock.

Playing before a large crowd, the Wellington boys moved in front 2-1 in the opening stanza last night, made it 3-3 in the second and fired the insurance marker in the third.

Wellington goals were shared by Bob Radley, Larry Poachman, Don McNeill and Larry McKenzie.

The Wellington boys are defending champions, having defeated Ayr two games to one in the Ontario finals last year.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort—soothes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." All with no promises and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinkage) in piles.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief was accured in cases of long standing, and most importantly, in cases of piles, we are thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and diminishes growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask for your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

Barbara Stanwyck Back On Lot to Work in Film

By DAVE SMITH

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — At 56, Barbara Stanwyck is beginning to enter into the maturity of fully-blossomed womanhood.

You enter the set of her latest picture and there she sits, loafing between takes, in a screaming-red blouse and faded blue jeans by Edith Head.

Tenderly she scratches the ears of a small, fluorescent pink stuffed animal of no particular genus, absently staring at the whirling, glittery carnival world about her.

Ah, you think. She looks so young, so innocent. Like little Margaret O'Brien. With silver hair.

Come off it. Bub.

Miss Stanwyck's no pullet any more, and she'd be the last to deny it. But she's a long way from the moulting season, too.

Somewhere in between is a woman who is 56 and doesn't hide it, who has covered plenty of mileage but doesn't show it, who has had some rough breaks and doesn't crab about it, and who's a fine score and doesn't forget it.

SURVIVES TREK

One of Hollywood's biggest names for three decades, Miss Stanwyck has survived the trek from 1930 to 1964 in fine shape. She looks like a woman in her 40s who might have had her hair silvered at a beauty parlor.

She had her hands full from 1960 to 1961 with her own television show, which netted her an Emmy award.

Before that she admits, she just stopped getting offers. Chief reason: Many of the old Hollywood big names of her heyday had died. New studio heads naturally thought in terms of newer faces.

She doesn't speak bitterly about this, but neither does she concede, for a fact that she doesn't like it. What you see when she does in her spare time she says: "I'm a housewife. That's my hobby."

Like most people wrapped up in their work, she talks about the best and how, what's being done in Hollywood, what's on television; what's in the news, how does it all relate to what really makes the world tick.

Divorced in 1951 from Robert Taylor after 11 years of marriage, she has never remarried.

Arthritic Pain?
ASK FOR DOLCIN
for fast relief—or money back!
Dolcin has thousands of friends who tell others. Mrs. H.W., Port Arthur, Ont. writes: "Whenever I hear of anyone suffering from Arthritic Pain, I make sure to tell them about DOLCIN. My relatives and friends have all got relief and thank me for introducing the news." Dolcin must help you by relieving the pain of arthritis, rheumatism, sciatica or backache—or your money back. Ask for DOLCIN Tablets, and you too will be proud to tell others how much Dolcin has helped you.

"The Cardinal"

6 Academy Award Nominations

A superb, absorbing and entertaining screen document, tracing the life and works of a single man during the period between two World Wars, can be found in Otto Preminger's "The Cardinal," which opened yesterday at the Park Theatre for a limited engagement in Panavision and Technicolor. The man is a young priest, ordained in 1917, who rises to the eminence of Prince of the Church. The story is told via a series of moving, dramatic and emotional scenes which directly involve or affect the youth and have their later repercussions on the maturing priest.

It is a picture for everyone to see, and to enjoy.

Based on the best-selling novel by Henry Morton Robinson, "The Cardinal" traces the disappointments, defeats and triumphs of Tom Tryon, in the title role of the new Columbia Pictures release. The film intimate short personal matters as his own soul-searching, as to the strength of his calling; his struggle against his temptations of leaning in love; his physical self-sacrificing.

In the romantic terms, "The Cardinal" covers many multi-lands as the young priest's love affairs have led around the world and never into a love or lewdness taught him to put trust in God, and to love Him and religious principles he always came in second place to his calling; his pleasure in the company of a sophisticated Hollywood beauty.

Throughout the "The Cardinal" Otto Preminger, his cast and crew — now England, to Austria and Rome — has given extraordinarily intelligent to entertaining motion picture. Actually, it was filming exteriors at the cast was where backgrounds were needed.

But it is to the stars, and to Preminger's flawless direction, that acclaim must go especially be given. Tryon is superb in the complex role of the priest, as are Romy Schneider as the girl he almost loses in love with, and Carol Lynley as his sister.

Space does not permit inclusion of all the other star and supporting players whose performances, in major roles or minor, contribute to the whole. Among them, though, must be listed Jill Haworth, as a beautiful French girl who devotes herself to caring for the sick; Burgess Meredith as a patient, unassuming small town priest; John Saxon, as the seven boy; Josef Meinrad as the Cardinal Innocenti; Cardinal aid, especially, screen director John Huston who turns to acting to "The Cardinal." He is brilliant as Cardinal Glennon.

John Huston will be a strong favorite to win the Academy Award Best Supporting Actor.

There will be a special matinee Wednesday, April 1st. See "The Cardinal" from the beginning. Matinee 2.00 p.m. Evening at 8.15 p.m.

King of the Hill

The weekly "King of the Hill" tournament was postponed since many of the area's top bowlers, including the "king," Bud Perican, were taking part in B.P.A.O. Eastern Canada finals at North Bay. The tourney will resume next weekend.

STOPPAGES SERIOUS

TORONTO (CP) — Illegal work stoppages were termed a serious offence Monday by Judge Eric W. Cross when he upheld a 20-day suspension imposed by Canadian Westinghouse Company Limited of Hamilton on an employee involved in a work stoppage. Judge Cross said provocation could not be successfully advanced as justification for a work stoppage.

Television's Daytime Games Increased by Two Monday

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — The swollen ranks of television's daytime game and panel shows were increased by two Monday. Get the Message, on ABC, and Jeopardy on NBC.

Get the Message is off the Goodson — Todman production line and shows close kinship to other shows packaged by the firm, particularly Password.

The object of the game is to guess familiar words and phrases from written clues. There are two teams. Each has one studio contestant who does the guessing and two "celebrities" who dream up the clues.

The show seems mildly diverting and probably will help a lot of housewives get through a big pile of their painstaking.

Jeopardy, is a quiz show in reverse. Audience contestants pick their categories and are confronted with answers to which they must propound questions.

There are 36 hours a week of games-playing on the three major networks. Next Sunday, two more will make debuts, increasing the (nearly total) to 27 hours, infinitely more time than is devoted to any other single category.

"Did you tell you-know-who about what happened to his you-know-what?"

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For April 1

Aries (Mar. 21 - April 19): Your feeling of "incompleteness" is valid. Can best be fulfilled through education. Read, attend classes, ask questions. Strive for greater understanding of those close to you.

Taurus (Apr. 20 - May 20): Your charm lies in being discreet today. Avoid impulsive actions especially where partnerships, money questions are concerned. Finish projects. Add new dimensions to thoughts, activities.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21): Time for review of past — determination to break new ground. You will hear talk of greater opportunity. Be selective. One who urges faster action could be guilty. Information.

Cancer (June 22 - July 21): Be specific. Permit member of opposite sex to know where you stand. Stop playing guessing game. Your intuition rings true. Heed inner voice. Adhere to highest principles.

Leo (July 22 - Aug. 21): Lunar position highlights romance, change, chance to display talents, flair, versatility. Make clear the fact that you are not bogged down to one subject. Make this a day which sees you impressing people.

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22): Get details out of way. Be there "in person." You can't trust others with carrying out personal tasks. Mostly handle your own responsibility. Be charming, but not special.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Cycle moving up. You will sense need for revitalizing efforts. You perceive "clearing." The path is open. Good to start charting course! Journey! Day highlights change, opportunity.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Past thoughts, ideas, efforts will begin to materialize into something worthwhile. Suggestions received at home are practical. Tie them together with your own principles.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Answer to challenging question is yes. But do expect some delay. Time will be required for ironing out "tricky" details. Be careful when legal matters enter picture. Stress independence.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 20): Memory aspects activated. Applies to details, promises, debts. You can get in motion forces that help bring success. Also magis remember those less fortunate. Do a bit of yourself.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19): Obtain hint from Taurus message. Perceive best in loved ones. Avoid petty actions. See situation as a whole. Expression of confidence wins day. "Negging" accomplishes nothing.

Pisces (Feb. 20 - Mar. 20): Surprise due . . . of pleasant variety. Could come in form of promotion, recognition, gratification. In question of whether to try something new, answer is yes. Display initiative.

If today's your birthday . . . you work best for yourself. You are original, independent, dynamic. Would make wonderful salesman or sales promotion expert.

General Tendencies: Cycle up for Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius. Special word to Gemini: Get hint from Pisces message. Don't allow self to hang on to past indefinitely.

Janean Gerow, Napanee, Plays In Tadpole Loop

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP)—Eight-year-old Janean Gerow spent a good part of the hockey season trying to [illegible] since hockey officials to let her play in the local tadpole league for boys eight to 10.

Even the fact she's the daughter of Napanee Red Wings coach Wall Gerow didn't mean automatic admission.

But with the season almost over, she got her chance. Wearing a pair of boy's skates (which she later replaced with her own figure skates) and a helmet borrowed from brother Ricky, she turned out at left wing for Wildcats.

Blonde Janean proved she belonged, too, scoring a goal as her team beat Panthers 5-3. She was on the ice for the two other goals as well but her claim to have assisted on them isn't official because records of assists aren't kept.

The electron microscope, a product of Canadian scientific endeavor, is one of the major instruments of cancer research. Costing about $32,000 apiece, they have been bought and located at various locations in Canada with public funds given to the Canadian Cancer Society. This microscope is capable of enlarging up to 200,000 times and taking photographs of components of the cell, formerly invisible to research workers. In helping to reveal the secret of the cell, it is an important weapon in the fight against cancer.

Cancer Society Unit Here Will Open Campaign Friday

"With the help of the Canadian Cancer Society, the National Cancer Institute of Canada has become one of the three largest sources of support of medical research in the country, whether voluntary or government," declared Dr. R. E. Trueman, Director of the Institute, in Toronto recently.

He said that before 1947 there was no cancer research program in Canada. Today, with the aid of the Canadian Cancer Society, which provides 80% of the monies required by the N.C.I., the country has a nationally co-ordinated research program, which is financed by the public through the 34,000 Canadians, 1,000 of whom were children under 10 years of age," said Dr. Brain.

research conferences to which all persons working in the field of cancer research are invited.

The 1962 campaign of the Ontario's Division Belleville Unit will open on Friday, April 3rd. The Unit's objective this April is $13,500, part of Ontario's total objective of $2,000,000 and a total national aim of $4,964,000.

The chief of the preparations for this year's Campaign was concentrated in more effective organization of the Unit's executive. Chairman of the Belleville Unit is doing all he can to remind those final dates of the gala dance and bridge, to be held on Friday, March 30th. — Page 12

Education

tario's secondary schools, warning of a teacher shortage and said that in schools in his area only one-third of all teachers have permanent certificates.

Ralph Frasis, assistant superintendent for Eastern Ontario, said he "had to find one teacher a husband in order to keep her."

Mr. Dalzell urged high school principals to try and interest young people in the teaching profession before they leave high school.

"Talk to your students, guide them and promise them jobs," he said, "and then visit them in their final year of university."

ARE AFRAID

In a later meeting, Douglas Fisher, New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Port Arthur, told principals that federal politicians will not discuss education because they are afraid of criticism.

"Many Canadians," he said, "believe that too much money is being spent on education. "We should laugh them right off the stage."

Mr. Fisher said the problem in some minds is distinction between investment and spending. Money can be invested in a brewery and show a return but money spent on education is somehow wasted.

Earlier in the conference, Education Minister Davies said there was an apparent lack of awareness of education problems in Ottawa, but added that difficult decisions about education in Ontario must be made by the provincial government.

Meanwhile, a panel at the Secondary School Headmasters' Association agreed that principals were lonely men, cut off from their peers and in constant danger of failing to keep abreast of developments in their professions.

SHOULD MEET

Panelists concluded that the only way principals can avoid stagnation is to get out and meet fellow principals, attend conferences and conventions and read carefully developing literature in their fields.

On another topic, headmasters were told that Ontario has a shortage of highly trained engineers but a scarcity of supporting technologists and technicians.

L. M. Johnson, Ontario department of education, said the department has opened up three trade institutes in Toronto and others are planned to remedy the situation.

In earlier session Monday, O.E.A. vice-principals were told by a professor of social work that in rehabilitating juvenile delinquents it is important they have instructors of the opposite sex.

Professor J. C. Spencer of the University of Toronto said it is important to have men around girls' reformatories, and boys' schools without women workers are "really tragic."

Harold Klinck, retiring president of the OEA, told a general session that high schools and society are robbing students of time to think.

The result, he said, is the boy who used to fish for hours and now has his time completely organized by schools, radio, television, the scout leader or the athletic coach—all telling him what to think.

Lawrence Kells, superintendent of Belleville public schools, told the Ontario School Trustees' Association the gap between elementary and secondary education is glaring in need of being bridged.

One of Ontario's greatest educational needs, he suggested, is for an "uninterrupted journey from kindergarten to Grade 13."

In another session, the OEA's Indian education section was told there is little value in teaching Indian children to read English unless they understand what they are reading.

Col R. F. Neaty, former superintendent of Indian schools in Canada, said Indian children are confused by a multiplicity of meanings in Indian language and Indian children must be taught idiomatic English if they are to understand what they read.

Operation Underdog

He's Fighting for 'Little Guys' Everywhere!

By JOHN LOELAND

TORONTO (CP) — An unusual young man who still insists on remaining anonymous is the leader of the most unusual organized protest movement against the "little guy" being pushed around.

Rich and well-connected, Ted Cowlishaw has set up his own bureau to investigate complaints of corporations or individuals who, in his judgment, are taking unfair advantage of people who are being pushed around.

He and 500 associates in 13 countries around the world make up Underdog, an organization all armed with broomsticks to the rescue of such unfortunates as a Mexican frequently arrested on a daily drunk or Mexican firing squad or a Kentucky belle whose botched fall teeth have her ostracized at the rallo.

Since he conceived and launched personal Underdog in Ontario as a charitable institution in 1961, the 29-year-old former newspaperman says, the informal civil rights organization has received 2,000 letters, almost a third of them asking for help.

"Some cases from recent reports of Underdog's head to his field agents:

"In Durban, South Africa, we spent $400 to win $150 for a businessman not paid for three weeks because he resisted his boss's homosexual advances.

"In a newspaper's club in Washington, N.Z., reinstated a cashier after we proved he had stolen the club's $1 initiation cups. . . . In Georgetown, British Guiana, we freed a youth from jail on a charge he resisted the regime in a school essay.

"The man who has taken the most impossible case of clients Robin Hood is an insurance and stockbrokers from Fort Hampton with an acute awareness of man's injustice to man. Dressing adored around by more muscular tip - chasers at London's King's Cross railway station a few years ago, he says, planted a slow burn that hasn't cooled now that he's got bright red tassels of his own.

"Injustice is everywhere," he says. "Every country has its own detailed lists of basic rights, switched, discriminated against, and sometimes killed in pursuing them. Sometimes held in prison, frequently, deceived and wronged in the courts, there are always loopholes for the slick, and for error, in today's social fabric."

BAIT FOR AFRICAN

A first-hand example of the fact that justice can be beyond the immediate power of the wronged led to the formation of Underdog. Cowlishaw was working a help-the-needy column for the Toronto Telegram in 1961 when he got a frantic "I am innocent" letter from a man convicted of receiving stolen property but lacking the price of an appeal.

Cowlishaw became convinced of his innocence, put up $250 of his own money to win an acquittal on appeal and then threw up his job to see what one man could do about reducing the total of the world's downtrodden.

"I realized that justice is a man's birthright," he said. "It's not something you can put up for sale."

So Underdog—the name came out of a headline in the news of the day Cowlishaw quit—charge no fees and accepts no donations from people it helps. The founder tossed in about $3,000 of a family legacy the first year and meets the current expenses of around $10,000 a year through contributions from well-wishers plus what he can get free - lance writing, broadcast appearances and lecture tours.

What's in it for him?

"It gives me a big kick to pull my chestnuts who's been trampled on by some other human being to gain a cheap advantage."

He is abetted enthusiastically by his 26-year-old wife Toni, a dark-haired and necessarily impeccable girl from Vancouver, who does what Underdog chores she can spare time for while bringing up six daughters ranging from the age of seven years and five months.

"It's a front - row seat at something marvellous," says Toni, the daughter of a lively West Coast newspaper man, Everett (Red) Greene, now in California.

Toni says the brood doesn't interfere unduly with the wheels of Underdog-type justice and, in fact, she and David bundled the five that were born in last summer into a delivery truck converted into a caravan for a 17,000-mile wrong-rectifying tour of Canada and the United States that included an appearance on the NBC - TV show Today and some model work in a couple of southern muscles cars.

Currently, the firm's major business is an attempt to revise the course of Mexican justice in the case of Dykes A. Simmons, Jr., a crude operator of Fort Worth, Texas, who has been under death sentence off and on since 1957 for murder of a Mexican policeman. A tough but impressionable old cronies Robin Hood is an intimate and Underdog Canadian from Hampton with an acute awareness of man's injustice to man.

Overland Dash To North Pole Is Under Way

OTTAWA (CP)—Bjorn Staib and his group of explorers are nearing the end of the first 10 miles of their 600-mile overland dash to the North Pole, the northern affairs department reported today.

The department said the Staib party, consisting of eight men and 40 dogs, set off around midday Sunday from their base near Alert on the northern tip of Ellesmere Island, Canada's most northerly land mass.

After reaching the pole, the group plans to go across the top of the world to Spitsbergen, the Norwegian archipelago north of the Scandinavian mainland, or Russia's several Zemlya islands off the Siberian coast between the Kara and Laptev seas.

It's the second time Staib and his men have set out. Drought ice forced the party to return to Alert for sled repairs about a week ago.
